ONE AT A TIME.

One step at a time and that well placed, We reach the grand old height; One stroke at a time, earth's hidden stores Will slowly come to light; One seed at a time and the forest grows; One drop at a time, and the river flows Into the boundless sea.
One word at a time and the greatest book Is written and is read; One stone at a time, and the palace rears Aloft its stately head; One blow at a time, the tree's cleft through, And a city will stand where a forest grew A few short years before.
One foe at a time and he subdued, And the conflict will be won; One grain at a time and the sand of life Will slowly all be run; One minute, another, the hours fly; One day at a time and our lives speed by Into eternity.
One grain of knowledge and that well stored, Another and more on them; And as time rolls on your mind will shine With n many a garnered gem Of thought and wisdom. And time will tell; "One thing at a time, and that done well," Is wisdom's proven rule.

THE OLD MAGICIAN.

By FANNIE W. MARSHALL.

The magician was a very old man and he told Johnny, who was fond of talking with him, that he distinctly remembered the sailing of Columbus and the great going-on when he came back; although, he said, men capable of doing much more remarkable things were walking about the country unnoticed. He modestly refrained from saying that he had been one of the neglected great ones, but Johnny surmised by the way in which he elevated his nose and drew down the corners of his mouth, that this had been the case. When Johnny diffidently suggested that he had attained a very ripe age, the magician replied: "Great is the art of Magic, and and great the rewards given to those who master its secrets!" Then he waved his wand in cabalistic circles in the air and fell into so deep an abstraction that Johnny modestly withdrew and pondered upon what the rewards of magic could be besides length of days; for the magician seemed to have very little to brag of; not beauty, for his personal appearance was not alluring, to say the least; not worldly possessions, for his cottage was extremely small and poor; but he certainly told very entertaining tales, which constituted his charm for Johnny, who thirsted for information, especially when outside of school books and conveyed in the form of thrilling narratives. Upon consideration Johnny concluded that Magic might be a very handy accomplishment, and he thought he could readily pick it up in his odd moments if he would put himself under the old man's instruction. So he asked the magician to receive him as a pupil, saying he should be happy to run errands for him as a return for his kindness. Johnny stammered as he made this offer, feeling it to be so ridiculously inadequate, but to his surprise the magician rather eagerly accepted it, remarking that while, of course, he could have all his errands done by magic, it was sometimes exhausting to be magical for long at a time, and one had to go through just the same performance to get a pound of coffee from the grocer in the village as to get a roe's egg from Arabia. The lessons began at once, but, as I am not writing this to give you gratuitous instruction in the Black Art, I will describe only the first step. This consisted in Johnny's standing upright against the wall, with his head bent, his eyes closed and his mind given up to the intent contemplation of emptiness. "Think," said the magician, "of absolute emptiness; the emptiness of a cake-box with nothing in it, for example or a jam jar with the jam all gone, or the inside of the head of the boy that sits next to you at school; in short, of the empty part of anything containing nothing. But do not, by any possibility, think of the box itself, or the jar, or the boy's head. I will rouse you at the end of two hours and that will be enough for the first lesson. The object of this is, of course, to prepare and discipline your mind for properly receiving the great truths of Magic." Saying this, the magician left the boy to contemplation. Johnny kept the required position for what seemed to him an hour at least and then ventured to lift his head a little and open one eye, to find, by the clock that ticked on the shelf, that only seven minutes had passed. He dropped his head and resumed his study and, with a brief intermission every three to five minutes when he looked at the clock, managed to hold out for half an hour. Then he sought the magician, who was at work in the back garden, and asked him if two hours wasn't rather a long lesson to begin with. "Well," said the magician, as he leaned on his hoe and rubbed his nose abstractedly, "I was going to ask you to run down to the village to get me a little sugar and some flour and bacon, and as it's getting late, we'll let a half-hour do for today."

Johnny sped away to the village, finding much more pleasure in exercising his young muscles by running and leaping along the road than in wearying them with inaction while he tried to contemplate nothing. Johnny was a determined little chap, and being cheered by the magician's assurance that the first week's lessons were the most trying part of the course, he stuck to it manfully, and earnestly endeavored to contemplate in the required manner. His study, however, never seemed to extend much over half an hour, as his old friend always seemed to have some little commissions for him to attend to, or something for him to do in the garden. He told Johnny that he did this garden work for exercise, and confessed that the practice of Magic rather encouraged laziness by having everything done for one as it were, and laziness brought on dyspepsia, and dyspepsia was the one thing the magic art could not reach. In spite of the magician's desire for exercise, however, Johnny noticed that he seemed to think it the same thing if he watched some one else exercising, and that he sat quite contentedly on the wheel rather while Johnny struggled with the weeds. At the end of the first week Johnny asked his teacher how long it would be before he could do things.

"What should you like to do, to begin with?" asked the magician. Johnny thought that he would begin with something small and suggested the first thing that occurred to him (and rather a foolish thing, too, when you consider that he had a whole world of things to choose from), which was, that, as he very much disliked early rising and as his mother was always too busy to pay him any special attention in the morning, he might so exercise his occult powers as to bring a hot breakfast to his bedside. The magician wagged his head rather doubtfully at this. "You see," he said, "that's rather a difficult thing to begin with. There's the tray, you know, and the tray-cloth and the china and the silver, the coffee, cream, sugar, rolls and whatever else you may want besides, and, if in your incantations, you forget the salt or the pepper for example, you have to incant all over again, of course, and things get cold while you're waiting. Still, if you want to try, I will give you the formula, but you mustn't be disappointed if you don't succeed the first time, for practice is necessary before you can do it easily."

Johnny noted down the formula as it fell from the lips of his venerable friend, and after carefully copying it all his spare time until he went to bed, he wakened at the first jingle of the rising-bell and began his incantation, lying snugly back among the pillows.

Just here, let me tell any one who wishes to incant, that a very comfortable recumbent position is not favorable for the pursuit, for the long repetition of the necessary words has a tendency to drift one away from realities into the land of Nod. This proved to be the case with Johnny, for in a very few minutes his chest rose and fell regularly, and he was, as he thought, watching the gradual approach of a breakfast-tray, which seemed to be floating toward the bed, borne up by billows of air, just as he had seen a piece of drift-wood borne ashore by the waves, when his pleasant fancies were dissipated by hearing his father's voice from the foot of the stairs, calling: "John, are you up?" With a wild scramble out of bed he answered, "Yes, sir," and the magic breakfast was postponed for a more favorable opportunity. When he related his experience to the magician, the old man looked grave and suggested, that as it required great skill before a boy was able to practice Magic where his father was concerned, he had better defer his experiment until some time when his father was absent. Meanwhile he practiced the formula faithfully and became quite expert in repeating it, so that when his father did finally go away on a short business trip he put it in practice and was quite delighted to find a nice hot breakfast on the table by his bedside when he opened his eyes after repeating the formula very earnestly for about forty minutes. By the time he had dispatched the breakfast, with an appetite that seemed magical, and despatched the tray afterwards by repeating the formula backwards with his eyes shut for another forty minutes, it was ten o'clock. He felt decidedly dull from lying in bed so long after his usual hour and as he languidly dressed himself, his head still buzzing from his long incantations, he reflected that if he had breakfasted with the family as usual, he might by that time have been out of doors and off with some of the boys for an hour or more.

"I guess I'll be magic in some other direction after this," he said to himself; and so he told the magician that, having successfully carried out one formula, he was ready for another. "And what shall it be this time?" the magician inquired. Johnny hinted, thinking of the approach of the Fourth, that a fortunate purse would be a very useful addition to his present resources. "Difficult, very," said the magician, frowning, and far beyond your present powers. It requires, in fact, so long preparation for the feat that even with my experience I rarely undertake it. Try something easier."

Johnny asked if firecrackers were to be hoped for. "Firecrackers," said the magician, "are, as you know, Chinese inventions, and sometimes our usual incantations don't seem to work in such cases. Still, if you care to try memorizing a Chinese incantation that I happen to have, it may fetch them. You could probably learn it in about two weeks, if you would devote five or six hours a day to it."

Johnny's face fell at this and he concluded that it would be easier to earn the money for the firecrackers, as usual, by weeding the front garden. He felt quite discouraged about his studies in Magic, and after doing the usual errands in the village for the magician and fetching him two pails of water from the spring, he walked slowly homeward, considering the doubtful advantages of getting things by Magic over procuring them in the ordinary way. The next afternoon, when he walked down to the magician's cottage, he was surprised to find it closed. A piece of brown paper bag was pinned to the front door and on it was written in a very cramped and cabalistic handwriting: JOHNNY: I have at last obtained the famous wishing-carpet that I have been incanting for twenty years, and I have started on it for a trip around the world. When I return we will resume the lessons.

ABRACADABRA
Johnny trudged back home, rather glad, on the whole, that the lessons had come to an end. They had cost him a good deal of labor, for which a breakfast had been his only tangible reward. As time went on he forgot the formula that he had learned, and now, when he breakfasts in his room, the meal has to be brought to him in the ordinary way. He scarcely ever thinks of his lessons in Magic, except when he feels inclined to grumble over some troublesome Latin verb or a particularly long history lesson, and like the sensible boy that he really is, he comforts himself by the reflection that the verb is not half so hard to learn as the formula and that studying history is a much more entertaining pursuit than standing against the wall contemplating abstract emptiness.—Phila. Times.

He Wanted a Job.

It was midnight the other night when some one rang the bell of a residence on First street, and after a couple of minutes a chamber window was raised and a man's voice called out: "Well, who is it?" "It's me—Daniel Webster Smith," replied the ringer. "What do you want?" "I called to see if you had any work I could do."

"Work! Work! What on earth do you mean by ringing me up at midnight to ask for work?" "Didn't know but what I might strike auther." Sorry if I've disturbed you." "I'd strike something if I was down there!" exclaimed the indignant citizen as he shook his fist at the figure below. "The idea of you ringing me up at this hour!" "Got any chickens in the back yard?" asked the bell-ringer as the window was about to go down. "Yes."

"How many?" "About thirty, but what is that to you?" "Well, the two fellers I met in the alley had at least five apiece, and said they were comin' back for the rest. Didn't know but you might give me a job of watchin' the balance of the chickens. Sorry—very sorry—to have disturbed you, but you have no job for me—and maybe you don't care about the chickens—and good night, old fellow—good-night!"—Detroit Free Press.

A Merciful Robber.

The citizen struggled. "Let me alone or I will call the police," he cried. "The highway robber wavered. "Do you mean it?" "Yes." "You will really call the police?" "Most assuredly." The outlaw turned on his heel and walked away. "I don't want to be the cause of his getting clubbed," he said.—Detroit Tribune.

Origin of Embalming.

It has been computed that since the practice of embalming began in 4000 B. C. down to 700 A. C., when it practically ceased, probably as many as 7,500,000,000 bodies were embalmed in Egypt, of which the greater part are yet concealed, though important finds are made from time to time.

It Looked That Way.

"Who is that long-haired fellow at the other table? A corn doctor?" "Goodness, no! That is Bzzyzyskocitz, the pianist. He has made a great name for himself." "Must have made it out of barbed wire, didn't he?" "Jinks. I understand that you were pretty well off before you were married." "Blinks. Yes; but I didn't know it."—Illustrated Monthly.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The thirty-third congress reassembled at Washington, on Monday, President Cleveland submitted his annual message, in which he makes a general review of our relations with foreign powers and South American republics and of the work of the several departments of the government, approving many of the recommendations offered by their heads for the betterment of the public service. He approves the recommendation of Postmaster-General Bissel that as soon as practicable free postage for newspapers and magazines be established. He reaffirms his belief in free coal and iron and favors the total abolition of the differential on refined sugar. He deprecates the drainage upon the gold reserve. As a substitute for the present banking system he suggests the plan favored by Secretary Carlisle. The opening of both Senate and House was uneventful. After the message had been read both houses adjourned. Messrs. Henry and Coffin of Maryland, were sworn in as members of the House. The Secretary of the Treasury estimates appropriations necessary for public service for the year ending June 30, 1895, at $410,435,068, as against $411,879,041 for present year. A bill has been introduced in Congress that gross instead of net tonnage shall be the basis of computing tonnage taxes. It is also proposed to change the measurement law to make it conform to those of Great Britain.

DR. TRUITT, clerk to Insurance Commissioner Rasin, left the annual report of the insurance commissioner at the Comptroller's office at Annapolis, Tuesday. The receipts during the year ended December 1 showed that over $120,000 was turned in, an increase of $5,000 compared with last year. Dr. Truitt considers this a good showing. Several years ago the receipts of the office, he says, did not exceed $45,000. Last year they aggregated $116,000.

Important to Commercial Travellers.

The marriage of Nicholas II., the Czar of Russia, and Princess Alix Hesse-Darmstadt, took place in the Temple of the Relics in the Winter Palace in St. Petersburg, Monday and was a gorgeous affair. Before and after the ceremony the Czar and his bride rode in procession through the streets and were cheered by the crowds. At the Czars' expense, dinners were given forty thousand poor people in St. Petersburg.

REMEMBRANCES OF LONG AGO.

Shortly before his death, David Kerschner presented his daughter-in-law, Mrs. J. I. Kerschner, with some very interesting relics of the Kerschner family. They consist of a coverlet made in 1814 with date worked by Jos. I. Kerschner's grandmother; a quilt and table cloth made in 1769 by his great-grandmother; a cream pitcher 135 years old and a silk handkerchief, extra large, 109 years old. The handkerchief, the story runs, was laid on the floor at the wedding of J. I. Kerschner's great grandmother which Thaddeus Steyens attended and all danced around it.—Hagerstown Herald.

Caught in a Coil of Red Hot Wire.

Will Daniels, one of the pit boys in the American Wire Nail Works, at Anderson, Ind., was caught by a coil of red-hot wire while at work and was almost cut to pieces. His duty was to tend the wire as it came from the rolls. Down the long slanting way to the smaller rolls one of the coils began to twist and caught his legs. It coiled around him in a second like a great snake and dragged him toward the rolls. He was within two feet of the great wheels when James Padmore, a fellow workman, grabbed an ax and cut the wire. The red hot coils were taken from around him and he was taken to the hospital. It was found that the wire had burned its way so deep into his body that he is not expected to live.

USE IT IN TIME.

Catarrh starts in the nasal passages, affecting eyes, ears and throat, and is in fact, the great enemy of the mucous membrane. Neglected colds almost invariably precede catarrh, causing an excessive flow of mucus, and if the mucus discharge becomes interrupted the disagreeable results of catarrh will follow, such as bad breath, severe pain across forehead and about the eyes, a roaring and buzzing sound in the ears and oftentimes a very offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles.

Jack Phineas, alias "Three-Fingered Jack," one of the most noted outlaws in Oklahoma, was killed while in bed with his wife, near Kildare, Tuesday night, by some person who crept into the room and cut his throat from ear to ear, without awakening his wife.

A train on the South Carolina and Georgia Railroad was derailed by train wreckers twenty-five miles from Columbia late Thursday night. The cars took fire and the whole train was destroyed. The loss is $85,000. Nobody was hurt.

Blood Poison

After Approach of Death, Now Life by Taking Hood's.

For four years I was in intense suffering with an abscess on my thigh. It discharged freely and several times.

Pieces of Bone Came Out. Last February I had to take my bed for four weeks, and then it was I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I soon got on my feet, but was very weak and went to the Maryland University hospital, where they said my trouble was chronic bone poisoning and gave me little hope. I returned home and continued taking Hood's. I have used six bottles and the abscess has entirely disappeared, and I have been in fine health ever since.

I know it had not been from Hood's Sarsaparilla I should be in my grave. I have gained in weight from 147 a year ago to 170 pounds to-day.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

I praise Hood's Sarsaparilla for it all. Wm. E. GREENHOLTS, 1312 Hanover St., Baltimore, Md. Hood's Pills cure liver ills, constipation, biliousness, jaundice, sick headache, indigestion.

Catarrh Is Common.

Few realize just how common it is. Very many people have Catarrh, or at least Catarrhal symptoms, who would laugh at the idea. It is an unpleasant disease—one of those which make others uncomfortable as well as the one who has it. The first symptoms are: A heavy feeling between the eyes, profuse and offensive mucous discharge from the nostrils, headache and foul breath.

is recommended for both slight and aggravated cases. It will cure the worst case of CATARRH, and is good for a mere Cold—an inflamed condition of the nasal passages is the cause of both. It is also good for HAY FEVER. It is a sure cure. There is nothing marvelous about it. It is not an accidental, magical discovery, but a perfectly sensible, scientific preparation, intended to do just exactly the thing it does, and nothing else.

It costs 50 cents—druggists.

The Newest Stock in The County.

Certain conditions for which different minds find a variety of causes for, have produced this effect—a lowness of price in almost everything made out of that is unparalleled in the history of the country. By large and steady sales, double that of any store in the county, we are constantly in the market, we get the newest and freshest and the newest and lowest prices. The fact that many manufactured goods have been at a steady decline for sometime, it is impossible for the consumer to get the lowest prices from a slow store, it is only by dealing with bright, reliable, up to date merchants, where stocks and ofttimes prices are changing daily can you be sure you are right. New

Resignation of Pastor. Rev. John G. Nost has tendered his resignation as pastor of St. Mary's Reformed Congregation, at Silver Run, to take effect on December 15. He has served the congregation for eighteen years, and his pastorate has been a most successful one. Under his leadership the congregation erected a new church edifice, probably the handsomest in Carroll county, at a cost of $20,000, all of which has been paid. His new field of labor will be in the New Holland charge, Lancaster county, Pa.

Arrested in Hagerstown. Police Officers J. B. Stener, of Harrisburg, Pa., and John Saylor, of Hagerstown, arrested Thomas Swenk, a brakeman on the Northern Central Railroad, Saturday at the mansion House, in Hagerstown. He was to have been married on Thanksgiving night to a young lady in Harrisburg. All preparations had been made, but when the hour came for the ceremony the groom failed to put in an appearance. The woman then preferred a charge against him. He was taken to Sunbury for a hearing.

"The Midnight Charge." At Mt. St. Mary's College on Wednesday evening of last week, a company of the students, under the auspices of the senior class, gave a production of Stedman's play "The Midnight Charge." The performance was everything that could be desired. Messrs. Rice, McTighe and O'Brien, as Major-General Geary, Capt. Danvers and Dick Ryan, played their respective parts faultlessly. Dennis Murphy and Edward F. Jenkins as O'Hara and Jumbo, were typical comedians, while Messrs. Perault and Guilfoile personated Miss and Mrs. Wood to perfection. The music under the direction of Prof. Reitz, was up to the usual standard of excellence.

"Jimmy, the Scissors Grinder," Dead. Gusto Degroff, more familiarly known in this section of the country as "Jimmy the Scissors Grinder," died Monday evening, November 27, at Blue Ridge Summit. Jimmy was possessed with a roving disposition, and made regular visits to this place for a number of years, making the blacksmithshop of the Messrs. Fraley Brothers his headquarters when in town. He had no home, but was formerly from Gettysburg. His mental faculties were weak, although he kept well versed in the general topics of the day, and spoke with much intelligence. His remains were interred at Amsterdam, Franklin county, Pa., by the county authorities.

Mr. Geo. M. Steckman and wife, and Dr. Neff and daughter, Miss Daisy Neff, returned to their respective homes, at Mt. Holly, and Carlisle, Pa., on Tuesday afternoon.

Misses Emma Shorb and Anna Myers, of Littlestown, made a visit to Mr. Jno. Weaver's.

Dr. J. Kay Wrigley returned home from Clearfield, Pa., Tuesday.

Messrs. Harry K. Sutton and George T. Keeler, of Baltimore spent some time in town this week.

Mr. Frank Lawrence and wife were in Baltimore this week.

Miss Amanda Gilson, of Baltimore, is visiting at Mr. Basil Gilson's, near town.

A Thrilling Accident. While five horses drawing a wagon load of baled hay belonging to Robert Delander were about to descend the Washington county side of South mountain Tuesday on the way to Gapland Station, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, the rubbers broke, the heavily loaded wagon pushed on the horses and started them to running. They dashed down the long incline at a furious rate, and near the bottom four of the animals fell. Wm. Hawkins, colored, aged about twenty-five years, who was on the saddle horse, was thrown violently to the ground, and it is thought he will die from his injuries. The saddle horse, had one of its legs broken. The accident occurred only a few hundred yards west of George Alfred Townsend's summer home.

G. A. R. Officers. Arthur Post, No. 41, G. A. R., had a full meeting last Tuesday evening, and elected the following officers for 1895: Commander, O. A. Horner, re-elected for the ninth term; Senior Vice-Commander, A. Herring; Junior Vice-Commander, John Shank; Chaplain, Samuel Gamble; Officer of the Day, Wm. H. Weaver; Quartermaster, Geo. T. Gelwicks; Surgeon, Charles S. Zeck; Council of Administration, H. G. Winter, Jno. Glass, Albert Dutterer; Delegates to the Department Encampment in February, 1895, Geo. T. Gelwicks and Charles S. Zeck; alternates, Geo. L. Gillelan and Samuel Gamble. The newly elected officers will be installed at the first regular meeting in January, which will be on Tuesday, the 8th.

J. B. Lewis Co., Boston, are now making extensive alterations in their factory at Avon, Mass., so that they can take care of their largely increased business. Last season they were obliged to decline some orders in justice to their customers. This speaks very loudly the praises of this concern, and while other manufacturers were closed, they were running overtime. The Boot and Shoe Reporting Co.'s statistics show this firm to be doing the largest volume of business of any manufacturer selling to the retail trade from Boston, which is the heart of the boot and shoe industry of the country. This means in these days of competition, that up to date styles, courteous treatment, and prices lower than others care to offer, makes success.

Grand Jury Suggestions. The grand jury of Washington county recommends that the next legislature provide that no petty cases hereafter come before a jury that can be disposed of before a magistrate, and that the law requiring the examination by the jury of the tax collector's books be repealed, as the law is inoperative because no jury has the time to ascertain if the accounts are strictly and legally kept. The jury also recommends that a workhouse be provided at Bellevue Asylum for tramps. The inmates of the asylum last summer raised on the farm 270 bushels of wheat, 207 bushels of rye, 740 barrels of corn, 250 bushels of potatoes, 4,000 heads of cabbage, 50 bushels of turnips, 50 bushels of beans, 25 tons of hay, 65 hogs.—Times.

THE store of Mr. M. W. Babylon, on Main street near the railroad in Westminster, narrowly escaped a serious fire on Thursday evening. The heat from a large electric oil lamp, swung from the ceiling, ignited the joist and laths above it and the fire gradually eat its way into the timber in which the hook on which the lamp hung was driven, until it could no longer bear the weight and lamp and fixtures fell to the floor. There was no explosion, but the fire in the timber of the ceiling was at once discovered and promptly suppressed by a stream of water turned on it with the hose from the pave-wash. Fire had probably been working its way into the joists and among the laths for several days, and if the lamp had fallen after business hours or in the dead of night the whole place would soon have been in a blaze.—Sentinel.

Death of Henry Monohan. Henry Monohan, a well known citizen of Westminster, who was recently taken to the Alms House where he could get care and attention, died on Thursday night, aged 83 years. Henry Monohan was a native of Franklin county, Pa., where he was born October 15, 1811. At the age of eleven years he was apprenticed to Henry Nikirk, who was to teach him the art of weaving, also to read, write and cipher, and to give him proper food and clothing. The apprenticeship was to last until Henry was of age—10 years—and Nikirk was to give him a freedom suit worth not less than $20 or the money, just as Henry might choose. He came to Westminster on July 8, 1839, and resided here ever since. For eight years he was janitor of the Court House and for some years was janitor of the M. P. Church. He was a bachelor, and so far as known he has no relatives living.—Advocate.

MONTEVEUE HOSPITAL NEWS.

FREDERICK, Nov. 29.—Darius Horseman, Jr., an insane patient from Dorchester county, this state, was brought to Montevue Hospital last Saturday by the sheriff of that county.

Horseman is quite a young man, and is considered by his friends as very dangerous. Before his arrest, he fired a straw stack on his father's farm.

Mr. David Magaha is busy with a force of tramps making improvements at the hospital. The tramps embrace among them fine workmen. The majority of them are often employed in railroad filling or grading. A fine specimen of their work can be seen on the Montevue Pike, which when finished, will be one of the finest drives in the state.

These men mostly spend the winter at the Lodging Houses in the cities. They are generally very willing workers, occasionally a "veteran bum" makes his appearance among them. Several times an Italian has sought shelter at the hospital.

Mr. Charles Mehring, the butcher at Montevue, killed twenty-one hogs at that place, last Monday, that averaged 229 pounds apiece.

[The above letter was received too late for publication in last week's issue of the CHRONICLE.—Ed.]

FREDERICK, Dec. 4.—The inmates of Montevue Hospital, last Thursday, Thanksgiving day, were given the annual treat, consisting of about 150 pounds of pudding in the morning for breakfast and cakes at noon. Between 2 and 3 P. M., they were served a menu consisting of roast turkey, dressing, sauer kraut and baked beans, of which they partook very heartily.

About 100 visitors were taken through the hospital during the afternoon.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Charities and Correction was held at Montevue Hospital last Tuesday. Business of a routine character was transacted. Superintendent F. T. Main submitted his monthly report which showed the number of inmates to be 246, among this number is included 48 tramps. The number of insane patients in the hospital at present is 131.

The board made a tour of inspection of the building and the hospital was found to be enjoying a very cleanly condition.

Ex-Governor Bowie Dead. Ex-Governor Bowie died at his home, "Fairview," in Prince George's county, Md., Tuesday morning at 2:30 o'clock. The cause of his death was paralysis, with which he was stricken on Tuesday morning, Nov. 27. The Ex-Governor was buried at "Fairview," Thursday, in the family burying ground.

The Ex-Governor was president of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company, and the City Passenger Railway Company. He was born in Prince George's county November 10, 1826, and was educated at St. John's College, Annapolis, and St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore. In the Mexican war he was a gallant soldier. He was elected Governor of Maryland in 1867 by over 40,000 majority. A number of important questions were settled during his administration. The ex-Governor was a great lover of horses, and at one time owned a noted racing stable. He retired from the turf in 1890. He was made president of the Maryland Jockey Club in 1870, and was largely instrumental in securing the course at Pimlico.

On December 3, 1851, he was married to Miss Alice Carter, a sister of Mr. Bernard Carter. She with seven children, survive him. His eldest son, Wm. Duckett Bowie, is the present State Senator from Prince George's county. His other children are Oden Bowie Jr., a stock broker in New York; Carter Bowie, Washington Booth Bowie, Mrs. Owen Roberts, Mrs. Eugene Roberts and Mrs. Thomas Whitridge.

CANDY from 10 cts. to 60 cts. a pound at King's.

James Dunlop Can Ride. James R. Dunlop has won the 1894 championship medal of the Century Cycling Club of Maryland. He made thirty-one centuries, to his nearest competitors' twenty-five. The latter was John A. Graham, who made centuries last Thursday and Friday. This is twice that Graham has ridden centuries on two successive days. This time he started to make four centuries in four successive days, but the rain Saturday and Sunday thwarted his plans. These two men have this year made proud records. Each has ridden more centuries than anyone else south of Mason and Dixon's Line. The winner, Mr. Dunlop, is twenty-one years old. During the past year he also captured the fastest century made south of Mason and Dixon's Line, time six hours forty-three minutes. He is an old rider, but only sprung into cycle prominence this season. He will be awarded the medal at the club's annual banquet, which will be held at the Opera Hotel Baltimore, Wednesday evening, December 12. The question now is whether the winner of the 1895 championship medal will make more than thirty-one centuries. Howard Harvey, who won the medal last year, made only eight; but as he and Dunlop will ride tandem together next year, it is predicted that the winner of the much coveted medal will have to cover over fifty centuries.—American.

The Modern Mother Has found that her little ones are improved more by the pleasant laxative, Syrup of Figs, when in need of the laxative effect of a gentle remedy than by any other, and that it is more acceptable to them. Children enjoy it and it benefits them. The true remedy, Syrup of Figs, is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

Any person wanting a good liniment for horse flesh should call on Mr. John Welty, of Liberty township.

Constantinople. Dr. McSweeney opened the lecture season at Mt. St. Mary's College, on Wednesday evening. His subject was Constantinople, and the historical celebrity, the greatness and beauty of the great "metropolis of three continents," its wonderful variety of races, languages, costumes and religious beliefs, as well as its unrivaled situation and political importance, made the lecture very interesting to the students, especially to lovers of history and readers of "Ben Hur" and the "Prince of India." The Doctor narrated his personal adventures in the Turkish capital, and was aided by Mr. Hill of the Seminary, who displayed with the lantern sixty-eight splendid views of buildings, scholars, workmen, soldiers, women and last, but not least, the famous dogs of Constantinople.

A Negro on the Rampage. The excitement caused by the brutal assaults committed on Thursday night last on a number of residents of Frederick city by the negro George Willard, alias George Williams, has nearly subsided. Willard was committed for thirty days on the charge of a corporation offense as soon as arrested, thus preventing the necessity of a hearing on the State charge of assault until the excitement over his act had quieted. Many of the statements which have been published have been very much magnified accounts of the affair and have surprised residents there. Mrs. Batson, who was one of those to receive a blow from the negro, is much improved. It was at first thought there were two negroes that committed the assaults on Thursday night, but now it is believed Willard committed all three assaults.—Sun.

Narrow Escapes From Death. Monday afternoon while Jacob Hulse was putting material in position to run the elevator in George P. Spessard's new three story building, at Chewsville, a piece of steel shaft weighing about forty pounds was jarred from the place it had been left lying on the third floor, fell down the elevator shaft to the first floor, striking Mr. Spessard on the left arm and shoulder. The top fell over as it struck him, tearing his collar from his neck. His arm was badly cut and bruised. Had it struck him on the head it would have produced instant death. His escape was miraculous. The injuries and nervous prostration compelled Mr. Spessard to go to bed for several hours.

Death of an Aged Lady. Mrs. Annie Cool, relict of the late Peter Cool, died at her home in Freedom township, Pa., on Friday, the 30th inst., aged 86 years 11 months and 13 days. Her death was due to a general wearing out of the system. Mrs. Cool's maiden name was Annie Lawver, and she resided all her life in Adams county. She married Peter Cool in 1826, by which union there were eleven children. Four of whom survive her. At the time of her death she had forty-nine grand children; seventy-five great grand children, and two great great grand children, making a total of one hundred and thirty-seven descendants.

The funeral took place on Monday morning from St. Joseph's Catholic church, in this place. The services being conducted by Rev. P. V. Kavanaugh.

Death From the Effects of Being Burned. Arthur Krise, the three year old child of D. L. Morris Krise, No. 2234 Eutaw Place, Baltimore, had a narrow escape from being burned to death. The child was left alone for a few moments and securing matches set his clothes on fire, Mrs. Krise who was on the second floor saw the child coming down the stairs, his clothing all ablaze and managed to smother the flames. Since writing the above little Arthur died at 1 p. m., Wednesday. Funeral in Boston, Mass.

Death of an Octogenarian. Mr. A. Hanson Senseney, of Union Bridge, died last week, in the eighty-third year of his age. Mr. Senseney was an elder in the German Baptist Church. Some years ago he dissented from the introduction of what he deemed innovations upon sacred and practice of the church, and since that time he was not actively identified with it. He leaves an aged widow, one son, Mr. Silas D. Senseney, of Union Bridge, and two daughters, Mrs. Dutterer, near Uniontown, and Mrs. Rolfs, of near Westminster.

A Rat Darkens a City.

A rat—just one ordinary rat—extinguished every incandescent electric light in a large number of buildings in the central part of Baltimore Thanksgiving night, set fire to the switchboard in the Brush Electric Light Works, on Monument street, mashed up the switchboard, ruined a lot of wire, and caused a damage that will cost many dollars to repair. The mischievous rodent probably had no idea of doing the damage, and was severely punished for his work. Had he remained in the cellar or the sewer whence he came, the mishap would not have occurred, and he would not now be lying dead, a piece of charred "ratnity," a subject of curiosity and abuse, in the electric works. This rat, not content with the cellar, the sewer, the gutter, or wherever he may have lived, left home Thanksgiving night, doubtless against the remonstrances of his family, and started out to explore the great outside world. True he was wet and cold, and the cheerful lights and whirring machinery of the great electric works looked warm and tempting. So this misguided rodent entered behind the switchboard and started toward the machinery in front. Just as he got under the switchboard there was a bright flash of light, a heavy ironstone piece of insulation was smashed, the network of wires blazed up, setting fire to the wooden frame of the switchboard, and hundreds of rooms and offices downtown, including the American building were plunged in darkness until the gas could be lit.—American.

This December Eclectic Magazine opens with one of W. S. Lilly's broad and well-timed articles, "Christianity and Communism." A report on "The Drift of Psychological Research" from a member of the well-known Society—Mr. Myers—follows; then a brief essay on "Popular and Injurious Class and Labor Misrepresentations," from the Westminster Review. The first part of Sir Evelyn Wood's "Crimea in 1854 and 1864," gives some glimpses of the heroes of that famous stage, their work and warfare in those exciting days. Science is ably represented by Sir Robert Ball's debate on "Possibilities of Life in Other Worlds," and Madame Caillard's treatise on "Metion" in her series of popular articles on Physics. A most diverting description of "The Streets of Paris Forty Years ago," is selected from Blackwood's Magazine, and among literary contributions, we may note essays on "The Trees and Flowers of Tennesson," "Poets of Provence," "Richard Jeffries as a Descriptive Writer," with selections from his most charming books, "What Eugene Aram's Pupil read," an account of a quaint, long-forgotten old story book, and "The First Edition Mania." In a poetic strain is Alfred Amateus' "Haunts of Ancient Peace," his thoughts on a ramble in out-of-the-way corners of rural England. "Ravenna and her Ghosts," is a half descriptive, half historical sketch in light vein, and "Curiosities of a Country Practice" prove to be most picturesque and amusing. Of pure fiction there are several examples in this liberally varied number, which closes with the usual miscellany of brief extracts, scientific chat, and foreign literary gossip.

DIED.

COOL.—On Nov. 30, 1894, at her residence in Freedom township, Pa., of old age, Mrs. Annie Cool, relict of the late Peter Cool, aged 86 years, 11 months and 13 days.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative, effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions of professional men, because it acts on the kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.
