

GEN. SCHOFIELD RETIRED.

On Monday President Cleveland issued an order retiring Lieutenant General John M. Schofield from active service in the United States Army, and placed him "upon the retired list of the army, to date September 29, 1895, with all the pay and allowances belonging to his rank upon such retirement."

"It is with much regret that the President makes the announcement that the country is thus to lose from the command of its army this distinguished general, who has done so much for its honor and efficiency. His gallantry in war challenges the admiration of all his countrymen, while they will not fail to gratefully remember and appreciate how faithfully he has served his country in times of peace by his splendid and successful performance of civil, as well as military, duty."

Gen. Schofield's successor has not yet been named.

AS TO THE PRICE OF WHEAT.

Because of the low price of wheat very little is being sold. An advance is being anticipated with some reason. The Phila. Times says: "The price of wheat has fallen from $3 to 60 cents a bushel, but this is no argument that the low valuation of last year will succeed the rise of six months ago or that wheat growers will suffer by holding back their harvests. In the nature of things a reaction was inevitable and the reaction came, but the short crops in Argentine and lack of Russian supplies in European markets means a demand before long upon American reserves which must restore the figures to quite near the dollar mark. This year's crop in the Northwest is below the average and there is a good market in sight for every bushel the farmers may have to sell."

FOUND DEAD IN A LONELY CABIN.

By the squealing of a half-starved pig near the cabin of John Holliday, colored, Mr. Frank Starkey, who lives near Ridgely, Md., was led to walk into the woods to the cabin of John Holliday, colored, Tuesday morning. The little house was fastened up, and looking through the window he saw Holliday on a bed, dead. Foulplay was suspected and Magistrate Knotts summoned a jury of inquest and Dr. Conway made an examination of the body. It was found that Holliday had been dead apparently about forty-eight hours. No bruises or evidence of murder could be seen and there was no poison in the stomach. The doctor said that the heart was badly diseased, and this was evidently the cause of death. The jury returned a verdict of death from natural causes, but a writ has been issued for the woman with whom Holliday had lived. She quarreled with him several days ago, it is said, and no one could find her when the jury met. If found she will be lodged in jail to await investigation.

TOP OF HIS HEAD BLOWN OFF.

Point Kidwell, about twenty years old, was found dead near Greenspring, W. Va., Saturday evening. The top of his head was blown off. His gun was lying across him. He was a farmer's son living at South Branch bridge, and had a good home. It is thought his death was accidental as no reason can be advanced why he should kill himself.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The financial situation, like the poor, is always with us these days in one shape or another. Just now the friends of the administration are jubilantly discussing the September Treasury statement, which shows an excess of receipts over expenditures of about $2,000,000. But the opponents of the administration say there is nothing in it to jubilate over. They go to the official figures and point out that in June, the last month of the last quarter, the excess over expenditures was $4,000,000, and say that it is merely because the expenditures were smaller in September than in the two preceding months of the quarter, and not because the revenues have increased, that there is a balance in favor of the government for the month.

It is admitted by government officials, privately if not publicly, that the coming Congress will have to provide the government with additional revenue, but they differ widely as to how it shall be raised. The Republicans, of course, propose that it shall be raised through the tariff, but they are not entering into particulars of how. Many contend that raising tariff rates, unless it be upon articles of necessity not produced in this country, will not increase the revenue, and it is quite certain that the Republicans will try to raise them upon a large number of articles, but not probable that they will include necessities, next year will be presidential, year, you know. One of the things that will conspicuously figure in Congressional discussions of the government's finances is the rather unpleasant fact that the proceeds of the three bond issues, while in the first place used to obtain gold for the reserve fund, were eventually used to meet current expenses of the government, the revenues not being sufficient. The silver men tried hard to bring that to the front at the last session of Congress, but it was not an accomplished fact then as it is now. They only thought the money was to be so used. Now everybody knows that it has actually been so used.

According to the politicians, Senator Hill is not placed in an enviable position by the open split in the ranks of the New York democrats. Said one of them, who is a democrat himself and a great admirer of Senator Hill: "It may have been meant for the good of the party, but it has turned out to be good neither for the party nor Hill. The democrats had about forty of a possible one hundred chances to carry New York before the split at Syracuse; now—well, new the democratic party hasn't got chances enough to be mentioned. And yet, upon those chances slim as they are, largely depend the political future of David B. Hill. If he can snatch victory out of what now looks like certain defeat, he will be a bigger man than ever, and will wield enormous power in the National Convention, even if he doesn't capture the nomination for himself. But on the other hand, if the Republicans carry the state, Hill will be blamed by all factions of the party, in as well as out of the state, and his influence in national politics will drop to mighty near zero. Senator Gorman is in the same sort of a predicament in Maryland, but he is lots better off than Hill, because he has more chances to carry his state, although he is very far from having what the boys would call a good thing."

Advertising always pays. The Herreshoff's, who were so widely advertised as the designers and builders of the yacht Defender, have been awarded contracts for building two out of the three torpedo boats authorized by the last Congress, and the firm may eventually get the contract for the third boat. In authorizing the construction of these boats Congress stipulated that, if satisfactory bids were received from those sections, one should be built on the Atlantic coast, one on the Pacific, and one on the Mississippi river. No bid was received from the Mississippi river, and only one from the Pacific coast that was within the amount allowed for each boat—$150,000 and that has not yet been accepted, but it will be if the bidder satisfies the Navy Department that he has the facilities to build the boat.

There were no ceremonies attendant upon the retirement from the command of the army of Lieut. Gen. Schofield, which became an official act at noon yesterday. The

THE EXPEDITION A FAILURE.

Lieut. Peary's colored servant, Matt Henson, and Prof. L. L. Dyche, of the Kansas State University, arrived in New York, from the Arctic regions Tuesday morning on the steamship Sylvia.

Lieut. Peary and the other members of his party, who left Halifax Monday by rail, are expected to arrive in New York Tuesday evening. Prof. Dyche, while reticent as to the details of the expedition, admitted that it had been a failure.

He declared that Lieut. Peary had not managed to forge much further north than on his previous expedition. He would not give any reason for the failure other than lack of food in Lieut. Peary's camp. When driven back on his first attempt to reach the North Pole, Lieut. Peary decided to press forward again in 1894. He had buried food in the ice, but when he came to look for it, he could not locate the cache. He was obliged to kill his dogs one by one, and feed them to the others, Dyche says, and his party lived on walrus meat when they could get it.

The Professor states emphatically that the party would never have reached America had it not been that when just on the verge of starvation Peary and Henson found some musk oxen, and this saved their lives.—American.

PREDICTS HIGH PRICES FOR COTTONS.

Hector D. Lane, president of the Cottons Growers' Protective Association, has issued another circular to the cotton growers calling attention to his predictions of a 6,500,000 bale crop, which, he says, is now certain owing to unfavorable weather and damage from other causes. High cotton, he says, has come to stay and the price must go higher. The supply is not equal to the world's demands. He reiterates his warning to growers to market their product slowly, create active competition among buyers and share in the benefit to which the higher prices entitle them.

Reports as to the cause of the disaster are conflicting, but the authorities state she was driven upon a reef in a cyclone. A Storm at Sea.

Increases the discomfort of the voyager. But even when the weather is not tempestuous he is liable to sea sickness. They who traverse the "gigantic wetness" should be provided with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which quiet disordered stomachs with gratifying speed and certainty. To the hurtful influence of a tropic, malarious or low rigorous or damp climate, as well as to the baneful effects of unwholesome diet and bad water, it is a reliable antidote. Commercial travelers by sea or land, mariners, sailors, western pioneers, and all who have to encounter vicissitudes of climate and temperature, concur in pronouncing it the best safeguard. It prevents rheumatism and pulmonary attacks in consequence of damp and cold, and it is an efficient defense against all forms of malaria. It can be depended upon in dyspepsia, liver and kidney trouble.

A Novel Wedding Fee.

A young couple having the appearance of being from Wayback, called on a minister in Frederick the other day and requested him to unite them in the bonds of matrimony. The man carried an old straw hat and a pair of trousers which he had displaced for modern wearing apparel, having evidently made himself ready for the happy event a few moments before calling at the parsonage. The marriage was performed with all due ceremony, after which the groom stated to the minister that he would leave his old clothing at the parsonage for a short time until he could transact some business at the bank in the neighborhood. His smiling bride went along to keep him company, but neither has returned since and the only fee the minister has in sight is the old clothing, which has been consigned to the back yard.—News.

Bean Soup and Camp-Fire.

The Annual Bean Soup and Camp-Fire held by Arthur Post, No. 41, G. A. R., at McNair's Grove, near Fairplay, last Saturday, proved to be quite a success. The weather was delightful and quite a number of veterans were present from the various Posts in the Department of Pennsylvania, as well as a large attendance of ladies and gentlemen from the surrounding country. The Emmitt Cornet Band enlivened the occasion with music.

In the afternoon a Camp-fire was organized. H. G. Winter, Commander of Arthur Post, acted as toastmaster and short addresses were made by Theo. McAllister; Mr. Kitzmiller, of the 15th, Pennsylvania Cavalry; Mr. Roop; Joseph Davidson, Samuel Gamble, and others.

Closing with a few remarks in the evening from Major O. A. Horner, Commander Department of Maryland who gave a brief sketch of his trip to the National Encampment at Louisville, the royal welcome and unbounded hospitalities of the citizens of that city of the southwest, as well as the hearty greetings of those who wore the gray, after which all joined in singing "America," and then adjourned. The members of Arthur Post feel greatly indebted to the ladies of the neighborhood who were so industrious in their efforts to make it pleasant and agreeable for the old veterans, as well as making the coffee and bean soup—a reminder of the days of camp life. It was quite a success financially and all went home feeling that it was good to be there.

The following pupils are entitled to have their names on the Roll of Honor for the month of September, having given satisfaction in attendance, deportment and scholarship:

Senior Grade.—Charles Mullen, John Stouter, Clarence McCarren, Morris Nusser, Edward Barker, Gertrude Lawrence, Alice Baker, Lena Ott, Mary Stouter, Sarah McGrath, Mary McCarren, Fannie Hoke, Gertrude Lingg, Stella Long, Addie Mullen.

The Sisters are pleased to state that the attendance has been very satisfactory for the first month of school and the children generally are in excellent dispositions. The pupils up to the 1st of Oct. number about one hundred and fifty. Parents are requested to make every effort to send the children regularly, as even a few days of absence will interfere with the pupils advancement and effect his or her standing at the close of the scholastic year. A monthly report card will be given to each pupil. This parents are required to sign and return to the teacher. The Sisters return thanks to those who have co-operated with them in making this first month of school so successful.

Did You Ever Think

That you cannot be well unless you have pure, rich blood? If you are weak, tired, languid and all run down, it is because your blood is impoverished and lacks vitality. These troubles may be overcome by Hood's Sarsaparilla because Hood's Sarsaparilla makes pure, rich blood. It is, in truth, the great blood purifier.

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, constipation, biliousness, jaundice, sick headache, indigestion.

W. M. R. R. Earnings.

President Hood, of the Western Maryland railroad Wednesday submitted and forwarded to Mayor Latrobe, of Baltimore, the following approximate statement of the earnings and expenses for August, with comparison for the same month of the previous year: Gross earnings, 1895, $140,855.79; 1894, $143,580.00; decrease, $2,724.21. Expenses, 1895, $76,874.59; 1894, $72,499.21; increase, $4,375.38. Net earnings, 1895, $63,981.20; 1894, $71,080.79; decrease, $7,099.29.

For the eleven months ended August 31, 1894, compared with the same months of previous fiscal year (August approximated): Gross earnings, 1895, $1,132,464.00; 1894, $1,069,651.95; increase, $62,807.14. Expenses, 1895, $743,979.40; 1894, $714,200.22; increase, $29,779.18. Net earnings, 1895, $388,485.60; 1894, $355,451.73; increase, $33,023.87.

A large papermill and the whole of the real estate belonging to the late Daniel Beckley, at Beckleysville, was resold last week. The whole of the property was purchased by the widow for the sum of $7,400, including 180 acres of land. This property was sold some months ago by the executors and brought $22,500, but the terms of the sale not having been complied with it was resold with the above result.

"Her Face was Her Fortune."

This has been truly said of many a woman. Yet no face can long retain its beauty unless health is behind it. Woman is subject to so many distressing complaints that health and beauty are often prematurely impaired or lost. Fortunately it is that she has at hand so invaluable a friend as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Multitudes of women throughout the land can personally testify that it affords the only positive cure for the dire legion of "female weakness." Suffer and fade away no longer, when this remedy will bring you sure relief. It is the great restorer of health and therefore the best possible restorer of beauty. All druggists.

Creation, Iowa.

Dr. R. V. Pierce. Sir—My wife improved in health gradually from the time she commenced taking "Favorite Prescription" until now. She has been doing her own house work for the past four months. When she began taking it, she was scarcely able to be on her feet, she suffered so from uterine debility. I can heartily recommend it for such cases. H. H. SNYDER.

OUR LETTER FROM FREDERICK.

The Weather.—Appeals Taken.—The City Hotel Changes Proprietors.—The Fair.—$250 Offered for the Capture of Wilson, the Negro Outlaw.—Hygiene.

FREDERICK, Oct. 2.—The heated term of September, 1895, came to a sudden end on Friday last, Sept. 27th. A slight rain fell on Thursday and on Friday morning, the weather was cool and delightful. From September, 18th to 25th the heat was intense; the thermometer ranging during the middle of the day from 98° to 102° in the shade. Since Friday, however, the thermometer has ranged from 50° to 70° in the shade, making overcoats and fires necessary for comfort.

In the case of J. W. C. Stewart and wife vs. Ezekiel Moxley and wife, decided at the last term of the Circuit court, in which the jury rendered a verdict of $361.00 for plaintiff, the court has, upon motion set the verdict aside and awarded a new trial.

An appeal has been taken to the Court of Appeals in the case of Neill and Motter, trustees of Anna M. Darby vs. Wm. Phillips and Sons, and Wenner, Swank & Co. The question being the validity, et non, of certain mechanics liens heretofore filed against the property of said Anna M. Darby. Mauseley for trustees; Worthington for Wenner, Swank & Co.; Urner, Keedy and Urner for Wm. Phillips & Sons.

Mr. Charles H. Utermohle, the owner of the City Hotel, it is reported, will personally assume the management of that well known hotel on October 21st inst. Mr. Charles D. Doll, the former proprietor, will open a cafe at the southeast corner of West Patrick street and Kline's Alley, near the old Central Hotel. Mr. Doll has been proprietor of the City Hotel ever since Mr. Frank Carlin died in 1882, except a short time that Mr. J. Alfred Ritter was in charge thereof, and to the public, generally, the change has been made unexpectedly.

Great preparations are being made by the managers of the Agricultural Society for the annual Fair, which will be held next week from October 8th to 11th inclusive. This exhibition promises to be of unusual merit. There will be balloon ascensions, horse racing and many other features of interest, besides the display of fine stock, poultry, agricultural products and ladies' handiwork. The Governor's Guard, a military organization from Annapolis, is expected to attend on Wednesday and will be the guests of the society.

Charles Wilson, the negro assailant of Miss Jessie James, is an outlaw with a price set on his head. A reward of $250.00 has been offered for his arrest. During the past week the Sheriff has had a posse looking for him in this city, where he is supposed to be hid, but so far he has escaped. A citizen of Frederick going to Baltimore a day or two ago, thinks he saw the man get on the train near Ellicott City and ride into Baltimore. So Wilson is either ubiquitous or else his whereabouts is still unknown.

An interesting event in this city today, (Oct. 2) was the marriage at the Reformed Church of Mr. John S. Newman, son of ex-Senator Newman, of Woodsboro, to Miss Annie Parsons, daughter of W. Irving Parsons, formerly clerk of our Court. Mr. Newman is a promising young lawyer, and his bride a pretty and attractive brunette, who is quite as much admired for her estimable qualities of mind and heart, as for her beauty of face. The best wishes of a large circle of friends attend the young couple in their new state of life.

Just Like Winter.

This section of the country had its first taste of wintery weather this week. On Monday morning the mercury stood at 44 degrees. Felt hats were substituted for straw ones and over coats were in demand. The doors of the public houses that have stood wide open for several months past, were tightly closed. Stoves were brought out of their hiding places and put to work. A few flakes of snow were seen flying in the air on Monday evening.

Tried to Take Her Life.

Mrs. Joshua Delander, a widow, aged about sixty years, residing with her son, Charles, near Wolfsville, this county, made an attempt to commit suicide last Sunday morning. She was discovered by her son hanging from a rope in the stable, and was cut down just in time to save her life. This was her second attempt recently. Her husband died a year ago, leaving a large family. Domestic trouble, it is said, led to the act.

Church Consecrated.

On Tuesday last week St. Stephen's Episcopal church, Thurmont was consecrated. Bishop Paret presiding over the beautiful and impressive ceremonial. Rev. Jesse Higgins, rector of Ascension Episcopal church, Westminster, preached the sermon and Revs. Ernest McGill and R. Whittingham assisted in the ceremonial. Bishop Paret received into the church by confirmation, William McCully James, Roger Joseph Weddle and Julia Lucretia Cassell.—Clarion.

AN ILLUSTRATED LECTURE.

On the Life and Works of St. Vincent de Paul.

On Monday last, the noon train brought to St. Joseph's Station, Rev. J. T. Slattery, assistant at St. John's, Albany, N. Y., who had accepted the cordial invitation of Very Rev. R. A. Lennon, to preside at that evening's entertainment in honor of the incomparable Founder of the Congregation of the Mission, and the Daughters of Charity.

The household gathering included pupils, faculty, novices, sisters, hired help, both male and female; Professors Mitchell and Lagarde, of Mt. St. Mary's College; Mr. Jacob Hoke, of Emmitsburg; Rev. T. Landry, C. M., pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Emmitsburg; Rev. E. L. Lefevre, C. M.; Rev. S. Lavezzi, C. M. chaplain at St. Joseph's, and Very Rev. R. A. Lennon, C. M., Director of the Province.

Almost with the rapidity of moments, two delightful hours glided by in the grand Distribution Hall of the Academy, while with remarkable ease and graceful enthusiasm, the Reverend lecturer explained each stereoscopic view to the fullest satisfaction of his appreciative audience.

In the excellent arrangement of the program, choice musical selections were rendered by St. Joseph's choir. The hymns, "Salve Regina," and "O Salutaris" being specially appropriate to the occasion. Thus had a delicious feast been provided, alike for mind and heart, of the privileged members of the family. These favored sons and daughters had eagerly assembled around the fireside to be thrilled anew with joy, as for the hundredth time they listened to the familiar recital of the deathless deeds that shall never cease to glorify the memory of their illustrious sire, the most popular Saint of the nineteenth century.

Besides scenes of historic interest associated with incidents from the life of St. Vincent, the world-renowned Apostle of Charity, there were exhibited several local pictures, the present Academy, in contrast with that of 1899, portrait of Mother Seton, etc.

Indeed the entertainment might be termed an illustrated panegyric of the humblest saint in the calendar. Father Slattery had also brought with him his graphophone which greatly amused all present by the amazingly perfect reproduction of "The Laughing Song," "Exposition March," "Robin Adair," closing with a message of greeting and good-night, from friends in Albany.

Very Rev. Father Lennon tendered heartfelt thanks in the name of all to our noble, generous lecturer. We trust the first visit of this true admirer of St. Vincent, may be the herald of many in the future, freighted with as deep an interest to the grateful inmates of St. Joseph's Valley, where a cordial welcome will ever greet Father Slattery of Albany.

Christian Endeavor Convention.

Contrary to the established precedent of holding their conventions in Baltimore, the Christian Endeavors of Maryland will this year meet in Hagerstown Oct. 29-31 being the dates on which it will be held.

The meetings will be held in the Opera House, and overflow meetings in the adjacent churches. A splendid program has been arranged by the State Executive Committee. Among the distinguished speakers will be Revs. Drs. Behngens, McCarty and Ludloff. These gentlemen are exceptionally fine speakers and a rich treat is in store for them that are fortunate enough to hear them.

Following the custom in vogue at the International Conventions, delegates are expected to pay for their entertainment. The rates are very reasonable, 75 cents a day, for lodging, breakfast and supper in private families and boarding houses and from 75 cents to $2 per day for the same accommodations in the hotels.

A noonday lunch will be served gratis by the Hagerstown Union.

The railroad companies are lending their aid to make this convention a success by reducing the rates to two (2) cents a mile each way.

The great object of the Convention will be Thursday, the 31st, when it is proposed to run a special excursion from Baltimore via Western Maryland Railroad.

The Endeavors of Hagerstown, as well as the State Executive Committee, delegates, who will do their part in making the convention the best yet held.

Charged With Murder.

A man who calls himself Otto Frank was taken to Westminster, Monday, by Detective John Lloyd, of the Baltimore and Annapolis Police, and was committed by Justice William Moore, for a hearing on the charge of murder. Frank was arrested by Detective Norris, of the Baltimore and Ohio force, while working in the Belt Line tunnel, Baltimore. He is supposed to be identical with Otto Frank, sometimes called "Hanover" Otto, who with another tramp, is charged with having murdered Jacob Miller, at a tramp rendezvous, near Melrose, about the middle of August, and who, though closely pursued by detectives, managed to evade arrest until he was found by Detective Norris.

Accidentally Killed.

While crossing the B. and O. track at Germantown Station Friday night Wm. G. Every was struck and killed by an east-bound train. His body was not found until Saturday morning by the crew of a freight train, who discovered him lying beside the track. His death is supposed to have been accidental. His residence was East Elkport, Dayton county, Iowa, aged 32 years. He went to Germantown, Montgomery county, a few months ago looking for work and succeeded in getting employment. He was in the employ of Bowman Bros., millers, at Boyd's Station.

Severe Accident to a Boy.

A little seven-year-old son of Mr. Wise, near Lineboro, had the scalp torn from the left side of his head in a singular manner a few days ago. He was riding with his father, and, in descending a steep hill, lost his balance and fell under one of the wheels, which struck him just back of the left eye, and tore off the flesh and scalp in a terrible manner, the wheel scraping the bone.

A VISIT TO DEVIL'S LAKE, N. D.

DEVIL'S LAKE, N. D., Sept. 3, 1895.—This place is a peculiar one. It is a little prairie town, on extended plain, rather desolate looking at first, but as you scan it closer, fields appear here and there dotted with shocks of wheat reaching to the far horizon. The town was intended to be on the shore of the lake, from which it takes its name, but this body of water (brackish in taste and 50 miles in extent), has retreated some three miles from here in the twelve years past.

Our party took a trip by steamer across the lake to the Indian Reservation opposite, and visited Fort Totten and the Indian school established there. We saw the Indians at work (no school now) and were very favorably impressed with the progress they are making. As we came near the great barn at the Fort, the order was given to start the horses, ten in number, fastened to the arms of a great threshing machine. A shout from the Indian boys and young men showed their excitement as each one of a dozen or more took his place at the great machine. It began to buzz and devour the sheaves with a vengeance. Clean oats were seen running into a sack in a half minute, in two minutes the sack was removed and a second one filled, and thus it went on, two bushels of cleaned oats per minute by the watch while we remained. I could not help thinking how much better and happier the Indian boys must be to have the activities and the simple cheery joys of rural life and work, than to grow up in ignorance and idleness. The manager told us the reason they do not use steam power for their threshing is the fear lest the fine barn and other buildings about the farm might be accidentally burned—and a reason for making these buildings so good at first is that they may be an object lesson to the Indians who have farms of their own allotted to them upon the reservation. We were much pleased with the spirit and sympathy of the superintendent toward his wards. He says the government farm, wholly worked by Indian labor, will this year produce 40,000 bushels of wheat, 24,000 of oats and 10,000 of potatoes, with other small products in proportion.

The place no longer contains U. S. troops; is retained as a centre of civilization. The situation is fine, with an outlook over the broad lake and some prominent elevations to the east, one of them called "Sully's Height," after our former Gen. Sully. There are abundant evidences of alkali in the soil here, but the phenomenal crops of even these prairies this year, show that nothing but sufficient moisture is needed to make this far north state a great one agriculturally. T. D. S.

FAIRFIELD ITEMS.

FAIRFIELD, Oct. 1.—Mr. John Tanney, of Johnston, is a visitor at this place. Mr. Tanney was born and raised near Fairfield.

Miss Susie Pearce, of Singonier, Ind., and Miss Lizzie Sullivan, of Monrovia, Ind., are the guests of Miss Sue Sullivan of Fairfield.

Dr. E. Glenn, of Fairfield, has erected a large stable on his lot in this place. The Doctor is also making lot improvements. He is having everything convenient, and everything about him in the right place.

Mr. Andrew Marshall, of Fairfield, is having a new roof put on his stable. Everybody is preparing for the winter weather.

All the city boarders have left Monterey and have gone to their homes in the city.

Mr. John Sefton, son of C. J. Sefton, of Fairfield, died at his home in New Mexico, last Tuesday. His wife and her sister accompanied him to Chicago, where they were met by his father, Mr. C. J. Sefton. The party then accompanied the remains to Fairfield, where the funeral services were held on Sunday last. Rev. W. J.

MY CALLERS.

As I was in my hammock one midsummer day, Carelessly dreaming the long hour away...

BETTER THAN A NOVEL.

Because it is shorter, and it may be just as true. In the year 1822 the land that now comprises Delaware county, O., was the hunting grounds of the Delaware Indians.

In the fall of 1872 she adopted a white girl baby that the tribe had stolen from a wealthy family in Illinois. The baby never knew her parents and believed herself to be a true Indian until the fall of 1893.

After hearing the remarkable story of Wild Flower, Miss Nellie made up her mind she would in the spring seek out the cave on the banks of the Scioto and with the money try and find her parents among her own people.

Nellie had a good education, having attended the Indian school for many years, and was besides very pretty. She had a friend, an Indian about 65 years old, who had been her companion from childhood.

After resting in Delaware for a day or two Miss Nellie and her old friend, the Indian, went to the country in the vicinity of Bellepoint and procured board and lodging at a farmhouse close to where the supposed hidden treasure was to be found.

Dave's acquaintance with Nellie ripened into love. Nellie reciprocated. They took up the hunt for the cave together, but the high waters had washed away all traces of the cave, and to this day the treasure is unknown.

There are few birds whose plumage is so variable as the phalarope. Three times in the year its plumage changes. It has separate coats for spring, autumn and winter.

COLLEGE TRAINING.

Practical Value to a Young Man as Stated by Mr. Chauncey Dewey.

"As to the advantage of a college training in actual everyday business and professional life," says Chauncey Dewey in the Boston Herald.

"If the 'sweeper out' gets ahead of the college boy in business, in his profession or in public affairs, depend upon it, it is because of superior native ability, harder work or great endurance.

"As a matter of fact," continued the speaker, "almost any young man who really wishes to do so can go to college. It is as easy to work your way through now as it ever was.

"I was the worst frightened person in the party. If I had followed my original impulse I should have killed that fellow, and no jury in the world, when my previous utterances had been given as testimony, would have believed that it was an accident.

In the days past before the beginning of the land speculation in the building of this city Charles B. Sevier was the fortunate possessor of as fine a specimen of the Angora goat as could be asked. In fact, its pedigree was longer than that of a blue grass racer.

So it was in everything. The goat would be sent to feed the horses and to let them eat just ten stalks of green corn in the field.

In time the goat became so valuable that Mr. Sevier used to sit on his porch and direct the goat to keep the wheels turning. At last the goat could not digest an empty whiskey bottle, and it died.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

Why One Man Has No Faith in the Most Convincing Kind.

In the party were several lawyers and two business men. The discussion turned upon circumstantial evidence. One of the party said:

"I would never convict a man upon circumstantial evidence if I were in the jury box. Even if it were of the most convincing kind I could never bring myself to convict, for there is an experience in my own life which I can never look back to without a shudder, and only the hand of Providence, I believe, saved me from the gallows, although I would have been entirely innocent."

"The other members of the party saw a story in sight and waited expectantly. The speaker said: "When I was a boy about 19 years old, I was employed as clerk in a hotel in a town up on the Canadian border.

"Adjoining the office of the hotel was the barroom, and the entrance was through a swinging screen door. When the bartender went out for dinner, I used to go in and tend bar. One day the proprietor's son and I had been having it pretty hard, and I was mad. The bartender called to me to come in as he was going out.

"I intended to snap the trigger just for fun, but just then a canary bird hanging over the bar began to sing. I said testily, 'We don't want any music at this funeral,' and leveled the revolver at the bird and pulled the trigger.

Wordsworth was present at a public dinner one night when he was informed that Stephenson, the celebrated engineer, was present. While the latter was building the Skerrievore lighthouse he had been in the habit of swinging in a hammock during the evenings reading "The Excursion."

Finger Nail Growth of a Lifetime. The statistical man who can tell you how many pounds of leather you will wear from your shoes in a lifetime and how many tons of food you will eat, providing you live to the Biblical limit of "threescore and ten," has just finished some odd statistics on finger nail growth.

An Electograph. An electograph for marking linen indelibly was shown to the Royal society lately. The fabric is dampened and a current passed for two seconds from a silver die, carrying silver into the fabric wherever it touches.

"The" in front of a royal or princely title denotes that the person is a sovereign, or at least the head of his family. In England it is employed in addressing a peer—for instance, "The right honorable."

JOSEPH TIMBLER.

An Incident in the Life of a Man of Punctilious Habits.

"Speaking of punctiliousness," said Colonel Calliper, "you remember my telling you some time ago about a man who was so particular about his dress that at a watering place where he was staying, the tide happening to serve after 6 o'clock, he went clanking in evening dress?

"Mr. Timbler always wore evening dress wherever he might be—at home or abroad—after 6 o'clock. There was indeed a period of a month or two in summer, after the Fourth of July and until the latter part of August, when, punctilious as he was, he considered it all right to wear an informal costume at home, but he never did this abroad at any season, and at home, as August waned and September drew near, he put on evening dress again.

"In the course of time Mr. Timbler's health failed somewhat, and the doctors prescribed for him a long sea voyage. He sailed from New York for a trip around the Horn to San Francisco. Aboard ship, as everywhere else, he wore evening dress after 6 o'clock. There was no other passenger, but he always appeared at the evening meal in evening attire. Down through the tropics, into the low latitudes and round into the Pacific day after day and week after week it was always the same in all sorts of weather, and after supper, if the weather permitted, Mr. Timbler sat on deck in his swallowtail coat and broad expanse of shirt front and smoked his evening cigar, an object of great interest to the silent sailor at the wheel.

"In the Pacific the ship that Mr. Timbler sailed on was wrecked. For days she was waterlogged and unmanageable, but the captain clung to her till the last with the hope that he might yet save her or that help would come. But the time came when they had to leave her. The longboat, equipped and provisioned, had been kept ready, and when at last longer delay was impossible the captain gave the order to leave the ship. It was after 6 o'clock, and Mr. Timbler stepped over the rail into his place in the longboat in evening dress.

"For days they floated on the ocean, and at last their provisions gave out. Then for days they starved, and then they drew lots to see who should die. The lot fell to Mr. Timbler. It was noon when the lots were drawn. The killing was set for 6 o'clock. Lots had been drawn for this task, too, and at 6 o'clock the sailor upon whom the lot had fallen came aft, knife in hand, to where Mr. Timbler sat. For once Mr. Timbler was not in evening dress at the hour, though when he saw the sailor approach he knew that the hour had come when he ought to be. He asked for time to dress. He had accepted the lot without a murmur, but he didn't like to be killed in morning costume.

The sailor carried his request forward, and after a brief conversation it was decided to give Mr. Timbler time. As a matter of fact, Mr. Timbler had been liked aboard the ship both forward and aft. Notwithstanding his punctiliousness in the matter of dress, he could look a gale in the eye, and he was not afraid of salt water. So it was felt that this courtesy was due him, and the sailor went back and told him he would have time to dress. Mr. Timbler was as deliberate as he was precise, and it does not seem altogether improbable that on this occasion he was perhaps rather more deliberate than usual. He came to the end at last, but while he was arranging his tie and the man who was waiting for him was sharpening his knife on the gunwale a shout was heard from forward: "A sail! A sail!"—New York Sun.

Distances at Sea. That man was laughed at who, on his first voyage, said that the ocean did not look so large as he supposed it would, but he was not alone in experiencing disappointment. The horizon at sea gives no idea of the limitless water beyond. A sea captain declares that the average landsman cannot see more than ten miles from the ship in any direction, and it would have to be a mountain or some stationary object for him to be able to distinguish it. The masts of a ship are said to be visible to the naked eye not more than five miles.—Brooklyn Eagle.

He Was Mistaken. "All is over between us," said the young man who had found a richer girl and was trying to take leave of his old love.

"You are mistaken," replied she. "All is not over. In fact, my breach of promise suit has not yet begun."

He postponed the transfer of his affections.—London Tit-Bits.

No Extension. "Is the wind due east or due west today?" asked an evasive creditor by way of changing the subject of his debt.

"It's due now, and you'd better hustle to raise it," was the unfeeling reply.—Detroit Free Press.

ANIMAL VISION.

Only One Bird Whose Sight is Better Than That of Man.

Birds are commonly credited with an extraordinary range of vision. Circumstances lend aid to the development of the mental factors in their case. The usual distance at which terrestrial species use their eyes is limited by the ground horizon. But in the case of the soaring birds, such as vultures and eagles, the horizon, the natural limit of sight, is enormously extended. Macgillivray early noted that, though birds of prey have orbits of great size—the eyeball of the common buzzard being 1-1/8 inches in diameter—they do not, as a rule, soar when seeking their prey. The eagle when hunting flies low, just as do the sparrowhawk and the hen harrier.

Yet the vultures and condors, birds which admittedly do soar when seeking food, have been proved to find carrion by sight. A carcass was covered with canvas and some oil placed upon it. The vultures saw this, descended and ate it and then sat on the covered portion within a few inches of a putrid carcass. When a hole was made in the covering, they saw and attacked the food below. But the rapid congregation of vultures from a distance to a carcass is probably due to their watching their neighbors, each of which is surveying a limited area. Charles Darwin pointed out that in a level country the height of sky commonly noticed by a mounted man is not more than 15 degrees above the horizon, and a vulture on the wing at the height of between 3,000 feet and 4,000 feet would probably be two miles distant and invisible. Those which descend rapidly and appear to have come from beyond the range of human sight were perhaps hovering vertically over the hunter when he killed his game.

There remains one undoubted instance in which bird vision is far keener than that of man. The great gray shrike, Lanius excubitor, is habitually used by the men who catch falcons at Vallenward to give notice of the approach of a hawk. The bird sees it far sooner than the man, and at once gives notice of its approach. This is a single instance in which the specialized acuteness of sight may be due to the fact that the bird in question much resembles in color the pigeons which are the falcon's favorite food. But long sight does not seem common property of bird vision. The gannets, which catch fish at sea, descend from a considerable height, but they kill their prey on the surface of the water or near it. Nocturnal birds and animals, though able to see with little light, have no enhanced powers when the light is more powerful, and those animals which, like deer, feed by night or day indifferently have only developed a keenness of vision from constant fear and vigilance. Horses and cattle, which have the same power of sight by night, have never increased their visual range. Dogs habitually rely on another sense, that of scent, in preference to their eyes and will walk over a dead bird while their brain is intent on discovering its place by scent alone. Weasels when hunting will run up to a human being who imitates the squeak of a rabbit and peer up at him to discover where the sound comes from. The smallness of the eye limits its powers. Just as the best telescope has usually the largest object glass, so the largest eye will probably be the best organ of sight, and in the absence of any extraordinary developments in the size of the organ itself in animals their power of vision must, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, be supposed to be proportionately limited.—London Spectator.

Neglect of English. I asked Professor L. A. Sherman of the University of Nebraska if he found the students entering college better prepared in English now than they were in former years. "No," said he, "they are not so well prepared as they used to be. The reason, I suppose, is that the preparation for college now is much easier, so far as facilities are concerned, than it was years ago. In New England 25 years ago there were the two preparatory schools, Phillips Andover and Phillips Exeter, but the majority of those who went to college were obliged to get their preparation through high schools and academies in their own towns, and that meant they must do a great deal of the work by themselves. In those days fewer boys were sent to college. Those who went generally made their own way, and the work that they did was more apt to be thorough and individual work."

"Do you blame newspapers for the poor quality of English used by the people?"

"No, I think newspaper English, poor as much of it is, is an important stepping stone to the reading of the best literature. It forms a connecting link between the settled book language of old and the oral language of every day. Its practical features will be incorporated in the literature of the future and will make it more than it has ever been the literature of the whole people."—Chautauqua Assembly Herald.

An Envelope For Her Telegram. Aunt Miranda went up to the telegraph office at the hotel, and after laboriously writing out a telegram asked the operator for an envelope.

"We're not allowed to give out the company's envelopes. What do you want it for?"

"Why, to put the message in of course. Mine came in an envelope."—Chautauqua Assembly Herald.

Oyster Shell Houses. "Houses built of oyster shells can be seen in a large number of Texas towns," said G. A. Holland, a well known newspaper man of Dallas recently.

"The state was at one time undoubtedly a part of the bed of the gulf of Mexico. How many years ago geologists do not know, and natural historians are puzzled at the forps of life, so different are they from any to be found elsewhere."

Mr. Holland then proceeded to unfold a remarkable story. Running across the state from north to south, he said, is an immense ledge or sheet of rock formed of oyster shells. "This ledge averages about 20 feet in thickness and is used for building purposes in some places, while in others it is ground up and placed upon the ground as a fertilizer. There is a large quarry near Henrietta, in the northern part of the state, and a number of handsome blocks have been constructed from it. When first taken out of the earth, it is white and soft, but when exposed to the air it becomes hard and turns to a beautiful buff color. It was formerly used for foundations only, but during the past few years a great many handsome blocks and residences have been built of it."—New York Telegram.
