The Fire of 1863 in Emmitsburg,

Eleven o'clock Tuesday night, June 15th, 1863, the citizens of the town were startled by the cry of fire. The livery stable of Guthrie & Beam had been by the hands of the incendiary fired. The flames spread to adjoining stables making a great conflagration, then spreading, it consumed the houses of Lawrence Dwen, Wm. Waters, Dr. J. W. Eichelberger, J. F. and D. G. Year after year the subject is discussed, experiences compared, statistics, inquiries and observations analyzed. And year after year the convictions deepens that the disease is a thing of the imagination. At the annual meeting of the American Neurological Association, held recently in Philadelphia, the controversy was taken up again and an essay read by Dr. Irving C. Rosse, of Washington, the title thereof being "Newspaper Rabbies." In this essay Dr. Rosse renewed his dissent from the popular belief in hydrophobia, and neither his proposition nor the mass of evidence upon which he based it was challenged by a single one of the eminent neurologists who composed the audience. It seems that investigation and research have only confirmed students in their skepticism, while the failure to claim the large rewards offered by kennel clubs, physicians and others for an authentic and conclusive case of hydrophobia goes to show that the layman fares no better than the FACTORY SYSTEMS IN SWITZERLAND. Skilled Watchmakers Will Not Work by American Methods.

It is most interesting to compare the different methods by means of which the highest grade of mechanical perfection is attained in various countries. Notwithstanding the high character of American watches, for example, the finest Swiss watches will retain their great reputation. The Swiss workman receives the parts from the manufacturer in the rough, takes them to his home, completed watches to his employer. The latter inspects the work, and out of a batch of, say, 50 watches he selects The selected watches he readjusts, workhave the money to buy, but also the patience to wait.

A prominent firm of American jewelers, chafing under the inconveniences of this old world method of doing things, sought to introduce American methods and see if the highest grade of Swiss watches could not be made more methodically. A factory was built, enticing rates of wages were offered to the most skillful workmen, and the experiment was tried. But, alas, the Swiss workman soon found that no regular wages could pay him for his loss of liberty. To be on hand when the whistle blew in the morning, to have his stated hour for dinner and his fixed hour for quitting at night—these restrictions he could not long stand. Formerly he had worked when he felt like it and stopped when it pleased him, and when he was paid for one job he took his own time to begin the next, generally waiting until his funds ran low. The factory plan did not work for long, and the idle with his soldiers. ling now bears silent testimony to the Swiss love for independence, which has been in past history.—Cassier's Magazine.

The Last of the Falstaffs. A correspondent writes: "Apropos of the latest Falstaff, I well remember a memorable performance of 'Henry IV' on Dec. 18, 1852, at the Princess' theater, when George Bartley-called then the last of the Falstaffs-made his farewell bow to the public after 50 years' service. 'On this very night of the week, the very date of the month 50 years ago,' he said, he had made his first appearance on the boards. I remember, too, his saying he had played Orlando to Mrs. Jordan's Rosalind. As a boy I was much struck by the transformation from the burly knight to the aristocratic looking old gentleman in evening dress as he tearfully bade his audience farewell. Charles Kean was the Hotspur, Ryder the King, Lacy the Prince, while Harley, Meadows, J. Vining, H. Saker, Miss Murray and Mrs. Daly were in the cast. Poor Bartley died within six years afterward and was laid in St. Mary's churchyard, Oxford, when I was an undergraduate in that university." - Westminster Gazette.
