

LESSONS FROM THE BOOM TOWNS.

The purchase of a whole village at Safe Harbor, Pa., which had been abandoned on account of loss of business is a novel idea. Those who bought the property intend to establish factories and revive business. The plan appears to be feasible. The purchasers get houses of various kinds adapted to the purposes in view, and a fine water-power, at a figure, it is presumed, much less than it would cost to provide buildings for their factories. There are not a few "boom towns," so-called, the investors in which would doubtless be willing to sell at a reasonable price. Some of these places in Alabama, Tennessee, and in the West, were built up hurriedly, largely by means of capital procured from a distance, the leaders of which had never seen the property, which could be profitably used if practical men were to be put in charge. Some of the Alabama villages are not far from coal and iron deposits.

The boom towns have furnished valuable lessons. People are not now so anxious to build faster than the steady growth of business will warrant. They prefer to add as their earnings increase. The case is different in the gold regions, where, when a valuable find has been made, the assay shows almost exactly how much can be realized from every ton of earth dug out, wherever rich gold deposits are found, a town is the natural accretion. People must go there to supply the needs of the miners. Works, apart from those connected with mines, are not thought of. Prospectors and experimenters can soon estimate the value of the average mining center. In localities where ordinary manufacturing is to be done the case is altogether different. Competition from many sources has to be met, and the forecast for an increase of business cannot be made with safety. The days of boom towns have passed, and that is also the case with the land boomers. Many of the tales told by interested parties of the value of certain Western land have been found to be untrue. The consequence has been that farmers in those states are coming back East. Maryland is receiving not a few. Here the conditions are more favorable. The land yields well, the markets are closer, and the advantages are numerous.—American.

Whenever there is a stoppage of the bowel-action, help should be given immediately. Usually a mild, gentle laxative is all that is necessary. A violent, wrenching, gripping cathartic is never needed. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the most pleasant and successful remedy for occasional or chronic constipation, or costiveness. They are tiny, sugar-coated, anti-bilious granules, that even the smallest child can easily take. They act in perfect accord with Nature and produce no gripping or other disagreeable feeling. They should be taken at the first indication of digestive trouble. They stop sour stomach, belching, "heart-burn," flatulence and sick headache. They cure constipation permanently. You can stop taken them after the bowels are thoroughly regulated. Their help lasts. You do not become a slave to their use, as with other pills.

Eight persons were rescued by firemen from an early morning fire on Pennsylvania avenue, Baltimore.

Deafness Cannot be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out of this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c.

MR. STEVENSON HONORED.

In Washington on last Saturday evening, the Senate, through a committee consisting of Senator Hoar, Cullom, Blackburn, Carter, Hill, McMillan, Gorman, Faulkner, Brice, Bacon, Jones of Arkansas, Murphy, Elkins and Chandler, presented to Vice-President Stevenson, in his apartments in the Normandie, a handsome and valuable silver service. It consisted of a centerpiece, soup tureen, vegetable dishes, meat platter, large pitchers, waiters, etc., entirely covered with repousse work of the most elegant character. It is inscribed as follows:

"To Adlai E. Stevenson, Vice-President of the United States and President of the Senate, 1893-1897, from members of the Senate in token of the strict impartiality, unflinching courtesy and unsurpassed wisdom and discretion which, in the discharge of his high office, have endeared him to the Senate and earned for him the gratitude of the American people."

With the service an address was presented, carrying the signatures of eighty-five of the ninety senators, including all the members of the Senate in the city. The address was written on parchment paper, and is itself a valuable souvenir. The address is as follows:

"Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson: The discharge of the important duties incident to your great office, as President of the United States Senate, has for the last four years brought us into an association with you very close and constant. During this long period we have observed the signal ability, as well as the uniform courtesy and kindness toward every member of this body, which have characterized your official action. Your prompt decision, dignified bearing, just interpretation and enforcement of the rules of this chamber have very much aided us in our deliberations, and have won from us an acknowledgment of that high respect and warm personal esteem always due to the conscientious performance of a public duty."

"Desiring to give some expression to those sentiments, and to testify our appreciation of your valuable services to the Senate and the country, we take pleasure in tendering you the accompanying set of silver as a memento of our continued friendship and regard."

Chicago's Cigarette Law. CHICAGO, March 2.—The City Council by a unanimous vote has passed an ordinance requiring every dealer in cigarettes in Chicago to pay an annual license of $100 to the City Treasury.

The law passed says that cigarettes cannot be sold within 200 feet of a school house. All sold by licensed dealers must have been inspected by the Commissioner of Health and received his approval as to their purity. No cigarette can be sold which contains opium, morphine, gypsum or other poisonous matter. Any violations of these provisions of an ordinance passed by the Council subjects the dealer to a fine of $50 to $200 for each offense and $25 for each day of the violation of the law. Mayor Swift will sign the ordinance, which goes into effect immediately.

If the system is fortified by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which makes rich, red blood, there is little danger of sickness.

ON Tuesday the United States Senate passed the bill for an international monetary conference, with the House amendments. The debate on the bill brought out earnest speeches from the silver republican Senators, and Mr. Dubois warned his former republican associates that the silver republicans had thrown off their old connections for good. The fortification appropriation bill was passed early in the day. The deficiency appropriation bill led to an animated controversy over adding a number of claims, aggregating $587,900, under the Bowman act. An amendment covering the claims was finally adopted.

MR. JOHN O. MOTTER FOR JUDGE.

The following appeared in the Frederick Daily News of February 25: "And the very announcement of his name is but a prelude to a still more triumphant elevation to the Judgeship. And there is no formidable foe, where the perfidious arts of pretended friendships have been displayed to betray public opinion, that can affect him. He is remarkable for the superb imagery in which he presents the mystic chain that links together the different opinions and preserves unbroken the confidence and respect of all parties. He therefore comes with a well earned title from his party, because it has long since been decided in the minds of hundreds of Mr. Motter's fond admirers, of all parties, that he is to be the standard bearer, wave aloft the flag of victory. And the very mention of his name excites no ordinary interest among a host of friends of all parties, here and elsewhere. We will not attempt to trace his brilliant career to high rank as a lawyer. This fact gives unerring proof that he is not only the brilliant advocate, but his intellectual activity being one of the characteristic features in the general make-up of his whole career, and with his full knowledge of the law, makes him the shining light, the brightness of which already reflects his elevation to that lofty position. His versatility of mind and knowledge of his profession in delineating character and deciding questions of law fit him in a pre-eminent degree to decide points involving interests that are to tell upon the future of his fellows."

"Mr. Motter comes before the people for the judgeship with a long and varied experience in the questions of law, with ample capacity, with a mind well stored in all the peculiar problems that are to be weighed in the balance of justice, which gives him irresistible strength as a candidate before the people, and the judgement of his party points to him as the man of all others for the nomination, when considering how he has identified himself with the success and the triumph of its principles, the prestige of which has already heralded his name both here and in old Montgomery."

Becoming Smiles

Are the countenances of people who have found speedy and thorough relief from malarial, kidney, bilious, dyspeptic or nervous troubles through the aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.
Such countenances are very numerous. So are letters from their owners attesting the efficacy of the great family medicine. Among the signs of disease thrown out by the stomach, bowels and liver in a state of disorder, are sick headache, heartburn, nausea, loss of appetite, sallowness of the skin and eyeballs, and an uncertain state of the bowels. They should be erected at once. If the Bitters are resorted to, the woe become look way to cheerful looks produced by renewed health. If you are suffering on the coast of disease, throw an anchor to windward by summoning the Bitters to your assistance.
It will keep you in safety.

The probable withdrawal by the Western Maryland Railroad of the early morning fast mail train which leaves Hillen Station at 4:30 o'clock for Hagerstown, has caused much anxiety to a large number of firms and individuals in Baltimore and Hagerstown, to whom the early mail is a great convenience.

A COMPANY has been organized to build a hotel at Braddock's Heights, on Catoctin Mountain, which will be completed in July. It will cost $30,000, and will be located to the right of the electric road at the summit, from which point the view of the Frederick and Middletown valleys will be unsurpassed.

popular priest who recently bid adieu of the Lenten services at the mountain

A Good Entertainment.

"Imogene, or the Witch's Secret," a realistic drama in four acts, was rendered in the Opera House last Saturday evening, by the Forset Rose Concert and Dramatic Company, of this place, before an appreciative audience. Although the attendance was not quite as large as had been anticipated—attributed possibly to the cold and disagreeable weather—the entertainment was a success financially.

The performers exhibited considerable histrionic ability, and with a little more practice would be able to produce some of the more difficult dramas in a successful manner. Their rendition of "Imogene" was very creditable in every way, reflecting much credit upon themselves. The general opinion being that they acquitted themselves in a worthy manner. The play was interspersed with vocal and instrumental music.

The cast of characters was as follows:
Mrs. Mansfield, Imogene, Miss Grace Lansinger; Mother Munday, the Witch of Dismal Hollow, Miss Estella Lansin-ger; Susie, Mrs. Mansfield's Maid, Helen Tyson; Snooks, a newsboy, Beatrice Tyson; Charles Mansfield, Wm. Tyson;

Austin, Mrs. Mansfield's Uncle, Thomas Lansinger; James Reed, an attorney, field's valet, Wm. Bushman; Waiter, Company; Guests, etc.

to in the beginning of the year, several doubtless prove a great stimulus to the handsome prizes at the end of the term.

Mr. David Miller Dead.

David Miller died near Carrollton Carroll county, Sunday evening, aged 88 years. He was an eccentric man.
Years ago he made investments in the West and in Galveston, Texas, and became rich. In recent years he has deeded much of his real property away.
He has issued pamphlets on religious and political topics, and 10 or 12 years ago was a candidate for Congress, at which time he walked all over the district. About 15 years ago he had his grave dug in his yard and a tombstone erected with his name, age and epitaph on it.

Suicide of a Young Man.

William E. Lohr, a well-known young man, residing with his grandparents, about one mile north of Thurmont, this county, committed suicide on Friday by hanging himself. The discovery was made by a member of the family at 11 o'clock at night. His lifeless body was found hanging in the pantry. The rope was fastened to a joist overhead.
A sack was drawn over his head. He was last seen at 7 o'clock in the evening.
He was an orphan, 20 years old. No explanation is assigned for the suicide.
He was buried last Monday.

March Ladies' Home Journal.

The first article of a notable series describing the official, social and domestic sides of life in "The White House" is one of a score or more admirable features which make up the March Ladies' Home Journal. It is by ex-President Harrison, and presents a vivid, interesting picture of "A Day with the President at His Desk." It details the wearisome routine of our Chief Executive's daily life. Another article recalls "When Lincoln was First Inaugurated." Conspicuous in the same issue is the article "The 'Honeymoon' in song without words—the first instrumental composition by this world-famous song-writer, and Alice Barber Stephens' drawing, "The Woman in Regiment," the second of her "American Woman" sketches. "The Day After the Service Got in," a delightful short story, records the romantic adventure of a Princess, and "The Colonel and Me," the first of a series of chats by Isabel A. Mallon, gives some charming glimpses of Southern life. Edward W.
Bok speaks with directness and to the point regarding the "fast" young man; discusses the rewards of literature, and the uses of adversity; to teach us to see the bright side of things. Evangelist Moody addresses his Bible Class on "Regeneration," and "Droch" discusses "English Social Life in English Fiction" in his delightful vein. William George Jordan tells about "These Wonderful Bodies of Ours," and ex-President Harrison, with an article on "Congress," includes his admirable series on "This Country of Ours." Mrs. Rose's departments are, of course, rich in interest for women. "This Easter's New Hata and Bonnets," illustrated from the most recent Paris models; "The New Costumes," "Planting the Lawn," "A Model $2000 House," are among the numerous practical articles of timely value. By The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. Ten cents per copy; one dollar per year.

CONSUMPTION is a disease caused by impurity of the blood, and the first thing to be done in its treatment is to purify the blood, and the blood and whole system. That is half the battle. The other half is the impregnation of the blood with cleansing, healing, invigorating medicines. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery does both. It first purifies the blood, and the whole system into perfect order, rids it of all impurities, and from the vantage ground so gained, reaches out to every fiber of the body and restores all to perfect vigor. It cures many diseases, simply because many diseases spring from a set of causes. The same disorder may lead to different symptoms in different people. What might be only a little indigestion in one person, may combine with a slight cold in another and result in consumption. A treatment that tones up the whole system is always the safest. A medicine that is good for the general health is pretty sure to cure ordinary diseases.

If you have ever seen a child in the agony of a cough, you can appreciate the gratitude of the mothers who know that One Minute Cough Cure relieves their little ones as quickly as it is administered. Many homes in this city are never without it. Geo. W. Ogle & Son.

Among the more important of the score of articles contained in the March number of the Eclectic Magazine, we would mention "The Political New Year," twenty years of Reviewing "The Blight on the Dream," which has already attracted controversy in the pages of the Fortnightly Review—"The French in Madagascar," "Chinese Humbug," and M. Kropotkin's summary of "Recent Science." A most delightful article is that on "Thomas Hood," as is also an essay concerning "Hampton Court in Bygone Years." To most people the true facts of the rise and fall of that band of outlaws, "The Molly Maguires," will appear surprisingly impossible, and far less in keeping with the facts than the account with the times of "Edward the Confessor," Charles the First, or "The Parson of Last Century."

It is surprising what a "wee bit of a thing" can accomplish. Sick headache, constipation, dyspepsia, sour stomach, dizziness, are quickly banished by DeWitt's Little Blue Pills. Small pill. Safe pill. Best pill. Geo. W.

BISHOP OF MOBILE.

PROMULGATION OF FATHER ALLEN'S APPOINTMENT.

A Sketch of the Life of the Fifth Bishop of this Diocese.

(From the Mobile, Ala., Register.)

NEW ORLEANS, LA., February 25.— (Special.)—Monsignor Martinelli arrived at 9:30 this morning and brought with him the papal bull appointing Father E. P. Allen, of Mt. St. Mary's College, Maryland, to the vacant bishopric of Mobile.

Archbishop Janssen at once telegraphed the fact to Bishop Allen. He also mailed the documents to Bishop Allen.

SKETCH OF THE NEW BISHOP.

Very Rev. Edward Patrick Allen, D.
D., president of Mount St. Mary's College, was born in Lowell, Massachusetts, March 17, 1853, of Irish parents. His father, John Allen, came to this country in 1839, settling at first in Brooklyn, N.
Y., but soon removing to the Old Bay State. It would have required "a prophet or the son of a prophet" to foresee, in those days of ignorance and bigotry, when a Catholic, and especially an Irish Catholic, was looked upon with contempt and hatred, that within fifty years one of their race and creed would hold the chair of chief magistrate in the capital city of that commonwealth, and that the majority of its inhabitants, yielding nowise in intellect, culture and patriotism to the descendants of the puritan and surpassing them in Christian knowledge and morality, would be children of the imperishable church of Christ. That this result has been arrived at is due under God, to the honesty and purity of such pioneers as John Allen and his admirable wife, John Egan, and the "quiver-full" of children whom they and such as they raised in the fear and love of God.

Familial such as these are the hope and the strength of a nation, and they build in vain, no matter how much gold and silver they use in the construction, who seek another foundation than this for the enduring social or political edifice.

While his own ability and virtue, aided by his wife's fortitude and prudence, gained considerable wealth for John Allen, he, recognizing the duty of brotherly love, was untiring in his efforts to aid those unhappy countrymen of theirs, who, driven forth by famine from their native land, or less able to bear the financial crisis of their adopted country, were cast upon the charity of a people as yet strange and not congenial. John Allen was kind "to a fault," so much so that thinking more of the "treasures in Heaven," he was less careful of the goods that perish, and with the sharp Yankee competition around and against him he had to retire from business in 1867 and confine himself to his farm. This lay on the city borders, and as it rapidly increased in value he sold a portion of it in the early seventies, in order to provide for the ecclesiastical training of Edward, his fourth child, whom he sent to Mount St.
Mary's College, then as now known as one of the grandest, most home-like and most successful of our Catholic institutions of learning.

Edward had early attended the public schools at his own home, and also the Lowell Commercial College. His great ambition, however, was to get a thorough education, and if it pleased God, to fit himself for the priesthood; so, accepting with delight his father's offer, he entered on his college career with intense earnestness and devotion, and the annual catalogues tell with what result. One needs but glance through these or listen to the reminis-cences of the elder professors to understand that Edward P. Allen, the "earnest, untiring worker," usually carried off the honors, let his competitors be who they might, and several of them to the writer's knowledge were clever, persevering students themselves.

At Mount St. Mary's, chosen men of ecclesiastical department, act as deans, monitors, or, as they are called, there, prefects of discipline, then taking immediate charge of their fellow students, sharing with the faculty the task and responsibility of government, and qualifying themselves for the highest positions in the church by early practice of the "art of arts," the ruling of men. This admirable feature is the chief cause, perhaps, why so many clerical graduates of the mountain have been clothed with the mitre.
From the very outset of their priestly career, they show themselves already developed leaders of men. "I have four assistants," said the venerable pastor of a Metropolitan church to me once, "yet if I were going off to-morrow for three months, 'tis Father Blank (a mountaineer) the youngest, that would take my place," and gave as his reason what I have just set down. Edward P. Allen filled the office of prefect in the theological department, being graduated from the college June 26, 1878, and entering the seminary in September following.

He passed with his usual care and success through the four years' course of theology, always customary at the "Old Mount," receiving the various "orders" of the holy ministry in due succession. Dr

rude manner. That left the Captain, the "Quiet Man," and myself to enjoy our dinner alone. In fact, we had that privilege until the following Tuesday morning, when Mr. and Mrs. "Ikey Inesteln" again joined us, and having had but little to eat since Sunday morning they needed no appetizer.

But of all good practical jokes, the best was on the Doctor. Soon after leaving Savannah he very kindly informed us that should any of our party become sea-sick he would willingly administer relief from his case of medicines. But said to relate, he was the first person sick and took to his stateroom on Sunday morning. I fear that his knowledge of the complaint is not as thorough as he had imagined. On Monday he ventured out for a few minutes, looking somewhat the worse for wear, and remarked that he was feeling very badly. He remained for a short time only, when suddenly he jumped to his feet and made for his room, and the noise that followed was evidence sufficient to tell that he was not a well man. Then, there was the "Traveling Man." A trip would not be complete without one. He knew it all and had advice to give to every one. He was so generous that he insisted upon my accepting it, even though he was the worst frightened and about the sickest person on the boat. Our remaining passenger, the "Silent Lady," had my sincere sympathy. She was sick during the entire trip and confined herself to her stateroom. When not ill, she was pleasant and very agreeable, and we were all sorry that we could not have more of her company. It was bad, in fact, very bad. We had sunshine on Sunday morning, and that was the last until Tuesday, and even then but for a short time. From Sunday morning until Monday night, the sea grew rougher and rougher. It was about midnight Monday when it reached its height, and we were then off Cape Hatteras. Dark, heavy clouds hung low over us all afternoon, and the wind blew a perfect gale. As darkness closed around us the situation looked anything but pleasant. We all retired early hoping to sleep off the danger. I had been sleeping soundly when by a fearful lurch of the ship and the noise of chairs, grips, life preservers &c., playing hide and seek about the room, brought me back to life again quite suddenly. Upon retiring earlier in the night, I placed my glasses, among other things, on my upper berth. No sooner was I awake than I thought of them, and immediately turned on the electric light, which I could reach from my berth. What a sight! There among the rest of the debris lay my glasses, and liable to be mashed into atoms in another second, I immediately jumped for them, but as I did so the ship gave another lurch and sent me back into a corner with several chairs on top. I was slightly hurt and inclined to be cross and made up my mind to have those glasses, cost what it may, then got down on my knees and crawled to where I could reach them. During all that racket and commotion, they had escaped with merely a bent frame. I was truly thankful, and again thankful, when I got back safely to my berth. Our good and competent Captain Kirwan, who remained on duty with but little sleep and little to eat, for almost two days, and who brought us safely into port, said that of the many times he had rounded Cape Hatteras, the sea during this trip was the highest he had ever seen it. Owing to our rough passage we did not arrive in Baltimore until Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock—being just one day late. Upon making inquiry I was informed that a boat for Port Antonio, Jamaica would leave Baltimore at 12 o'clock noon. True, it was a short notice, but I decided at once to take passage if I could make necessary arrangements. A few minutes before the boat for leaving, found me standing on deck the S. S. Bowden, waiting to be headed toward the land of sunshine and bananas. Kindly invite me on board the little "trailer" of the above name, between Baltimore and Port Antonio, and I will try and give you a brief account of our voyage in diary form.

Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 3.—This afternoon was beautiful, and but for the brisk north wind, we might have imagined it an afternoon in May. The harbor seemed unusually lively with its various boats steaming back and forth, and its decks crowded with curious people. As we steamed down the Bay between the long line of docks and warehouses on either side of us, many with tall masted ships lying by their side, loading and unloading their cargo, I could not but enjoy the busy scene. But vastly different was my interest in these same scenes, which I so much enjoyed, and commented upon, from that of a few hours before. Circumstances had changed, that which interested me in the morning, merely attracted my attention this afternoon. My mind was not at rest, it was wandering in a foreign land and speculating upon my reception there; and again it would turn backward and review the past, but I will go to bed early to-night, and dream, and dream until the visions of this earth and all things dear to me are buried in oblivion.

Thursday, Feb. 4th.—This morning was cloudy and the sea quite rough. Breakfast was not nearly as enjoyable as it would have been on land. I felt very uncomfortable, and it was almost noon before I had become accustomed to the rolling of the boat. Mrs. Butman, wife of the captain, and myself are the only passengers. The prospects for a long tiresome voyage seems quite flattering. The Captain, however, is a kind, jovial good hearted man, and has extended me an invitation to make myself perfectly at home anywhere on the boat, and to use his room as my lounging place. Mrs. Butman was confined to her room sick most of the day. From the pilot house I enjoyed watching the big waves chasing one another for some distance and eventually bursting into "white caps." At just 2:20, p. m. we entered the Gulf-stream, and soon afterward the temperature became much warmer and an overcoat was uncomfortable. The sea was still running very high, when at 7:30 I retired for the night.

Friday, Feb. 5th.—This morning found us across the Gulf stream, out of the beautiful dark blue water and back into the sea-green. The water is not as rough as it has been. The morning was cloudy but toward noon the clouds broke and we had bright sunshine the balance of the day, but the wind increased until by night it had reached a perfect gale. It is with difficulty that I disrobe for the night, and also difficult to remain in my berth after reaching it.

Saturday, Feb. 6th.—The sea was still running fearfully high this morning. Last night was a terrible one, and I was truly glad when morning dawned. The ship seemed undecided whether to go to the sky or to China. It tried to go to both places, and while so doing it rolled and pitched and tossed as though it wished to throw everything and everybody off its back. Even today, the waves must be twenty feet high. It is more than I had bargained for, and while I wanted rough weather, this is beyond my wish, and I had to succumb to the weakness of the uninitiated. Yes, I was sick; truly sick, but it was my first offense and I trust it will be my last. Mrs. Butman, although quite a good sailor, having been around the "Horn" twice and on other long voyages without being sick, was compelled to acknowledge this trip was too much for her comfort. Am happy to record, however, that to date I have missed but one meal on account of sickness. As I retire, at my usual early hour this evening, the prospects are more encouraging for a better day, tomorrow. Last night, as I lay in my berth, being tossed from side to side, and then backward and forward, listening to the waves tapping like hungry beasts against the sides of our restless abode, I could not but picture in my mind the peaceful little village by the mountain side, which I am happy to call home, and I doubt not, but I may have entertained just a little wish that I were there.

Sunday, Feb. 7th.—This morning, as it should be, was the finest and most enjoyable of any during the trip. The sun came up in a cloudless sky. The water was tinted with beautiful colors, and almost as smooth as flat iron. The air was balmy and invigorating, and the sailors were in shirt sleeves and many in bare feet. Everybody seemed happy, and life once more seemed worth the living. Large masses of gulf weed are now to be seen. This gulf weed has not, as I supposed, anything to do with the Gulf Stream. To the south of this great ocean river, and north of the equatorial current, it lies in great quantities. It is ocean born and grows on the surface of the water. It was this weed, so I am informed, that caused Columbus no little trouble with his sailors, who thought it an indication of hidden shoals, and they were ready to mutiny. During the afternoon land was sighted, and in a short time we were passing Bird Rock with its picturesque light house, after which we entered what is known as Bohama Sea. The low island south of Bird Rock and to our left is Fortune Island. We were almost four hours in passing this island, and just as the sun retired below the horizon, we passed Castle Island, with its light house and cocoa nut plantation. But for the high wind and rough sea, we would have passed close by the Island of San Salvador, but under the circumstances we were too far east to get even a sight of it.

Monday, Feb. 8th.—The sea and weather this morning were not the same as yesterday. It is, however, much warmer, and we were all glad to seek the shady side of the ship. The sailors put up an awning over the forward part of the boat for protection from the hot sun. We passed by the eastern end of Cuba during the forenoon, and what we could see of it is very mountainous. Toward the middle of the afternoon we could see just a little speck on the horizon, which was my first sight of Jamaica. The Captain promised us to be in port by eight o'clock, and while he is doing his best to make good his word, let us take a glance at our ship and crew. The steamship Bowden is 200 feet long and 22 feet wide, and carries a crew of 22 men. She has a net capacity of 300 tons. When loaded with bananas, she stores away between thirteen and fourteen thousand bunches, and runs regularly every two weeks the year through, between Baltimore and Port Antonio. The Captain is genial, sociable and kind, and did all in his power to make my voyage a pleasant one. The other officers were also kind and considerate, and did their share toward my enjoyment.

Old to relate, we have not seen a vessel of any kind since leaving Cape Henry. As we near Jamaica we can see the clear cut outlines of the lofty summits of the Blue Mountains, the highest range on the island. It was just seven o'clock when Port Antonio light house was sighted, and soon after, we could see the lights of the city. A pilot boat came out to meet us, and sent a pilot up the side of the ship and he took us into port. The Health Officer had a few questions to ask, after which we were permitted to go ashore. There I met the Custom House Officer, who made a few inquiries in regard to dutiable goods, and without examining my luggage, I was permitted to pass, and continue my journey about the island without further annoyance. The ship no sooner touched the dock, before the banana loaders took possession of it, and then began the march of the many banana carriers, and soon every foot of room about the place seemed alive with negroes. I secured the services of a negro lad to assist me through this army of workers, and carry my luggage to the hotel—no carriage being in sight. The lad's method of carrying my large and heavy grip, particularly attracted my attention—he simply balanced it on his head, took it under his arm, and without again touching the grip on his head until we reached the hotel, walked along with the greatest ease. Almost everything here that I see is quite a contrast to what we use for a like purpose in the States. In my next letter I will try and tell you about what I see while in Jamaica. Very truly,
M. H.

Lavish With Telegrams.
"Sending a telegram," says a Philadelphia telegraph man, "is a serious business for the ordinary man or woman. They think it's expensive and only use the wires when they have to. There's one exception, however, and a kind of complimentary business that most people would never suspect. Whenever there's a Hoboken wedding—that is, one of any importance—we handle scores of congratulations, hundreds sometimes, from all parts of the country. They are sent with directions to deliver at a certain hour, and we generally send them all to the house or the place where the reception is held in one bunch. It's a good thing for the company, for the senders don't count the words and file their telegrams without any revision. Sometimes they run up to 100 or 150 words."

A FAMOUS RECIPE.

How the Hoboken Turtle Club Cooks Its Time Honored Turtle Soup.

Good livers will be interested in this recipe.

By it 150 pounds of turtle will produce 30 gallons of soup. It is the recipe used by the Hoboken Turtle club for many generations, and the original recipe is now in the hands of the stewards of the club.

Take a kettle of 30 gallons capacity and fill nearly full of water. Put in 8 sets of calves' feet (32), well cleaned, and 80 necks of beef. To this add 12 dozen parsley, 1 dozen leeks, a half peck of small onions and salt and pepper to suit. Boil the whole for about 20 hours.

Kill the turtle, scald off the thin outside galled portion and take off fins. Put the shell, cut up into small pieces, into boiling water until the citron comes off. Then add the turtle meat, also cut in small pieces. To this add the meat of 8 calves' heads which have been sufficiently boiled to remove the skin.

Strain off the stock through a fine sieve. Strain twice out of pot and back again. Now add citron and boil three hours. Then add turtle meat and calves' heads and boil the whole until the citron is wholly done.

Add these spices: Quarter pound each of ground allspice, ground cloves, ground mace and ground nutmegs, a pound of sweet marjoram and the same of thyme and summer savory, with black and cayenne pepper to taste.

Put the spices into two small salt bags and drop into the pot until satisfactorily seasoned, taking out and putting in again from time to time and occasionally squeezing the bags into the pot.

After adding the turtle meat and calves' heads boil five hours until all the sour taste is gone. Boil over a slow fire and be sure to keep well stirred to avoid burning.

When cooked and poured into vessels, let it get perfectly cool before covering up or touching with a spoon. It should assume a gelatinous consistency. Keep at same temperature. Use 2 gallons each of claret, sherry and brandy.

Original recipe in possession of M. P. Phillips, steward Hoboken Turtle club. —New York Herald.

How a Letter May Be Recalled.
The public is not as familiar with its privileges about postal matters as might be supposed, says the Boston Transcript.

Many times people would like to recall a letter after it has been mailed. This can be done, even if the letter has reached the postoffice of its destination. At every postoffice there are what are called "withdrawing blanks." On application they will be furnished, and when a deposit is made to cover the expense, the postmaster will telegraph to the postmaster at the letter's destination asking that it be promptly returned. The applicant first signs this agreement: "It is hereby agreed that, if the letter is returned to me, I will protect you from any and all claims made against you for such return and will fully indemnify you for any loss you may sustain by reason of such action." And I herewith deposit $— to cover all expenses incurred and will deliver to you the envelope of the letter returned." In many cases persons have made remittances to fraudulent parties or irresponsible firms, not learning their true character until after the letter had gone, and have succeeded in recalling them.

The romanticism of Vicksburg, Atlanta and other points in the south were of earthworks, hastily constructed, though the positions chosen were generally of great natural strength.
