GOT THE JOB.

An Office Boy Who Didn't Smoke Cigarettes Was Wanted, and Every Applibe? cant's Fingers Were Closely Examined.

A prosperous man of affairs who has his offices in a down town skyscraping structure entered the building the other day with a disturbed look on his face. Although a man with full confidence in himself and one whose judgment was considered second to no one else's in the street, he was extremely doubtful of the result of the task before him. He was in trouble because his office boy had left him and he was forced to engage another. The boy who had gone had been a pretty good one as boys go. He had bossed the boss and zun the office for about a year and was all right when he had his own way, but one unfortunate afternoon he told the boss that he wanted to get off, as his brother-in-law had died and he desired to go to the funeral.

"I want to go to the ball game myself," said the "old man," chuckling, as he recalled how many times that old funeral excuse had been sprung on him by office boys, "so I guess, James, you will have to mind shop today."

James didn't appear at the office next morning, but an irate woman who said she was his mother did, and she soundly berated the employer for his inhumanity in keeping James away from his brother-in-law's funeral.

The boss tried to explain matters by saying that he thought James only wanted an excuse to go to the ball game and that he did not know there had been a death in the family, but it was no good. The whole family branded the old man as a brute of the deepest dye, and James did not return to his duties. In consequence of this the employer inserted an advertisement in one of the newspapers for an office boy, and he had got down to the office half an hour earlier than usual to receive the applicants for the place.

There was a long line of them in the hallway in front of his office, and he heard much criticism, some favorable and some otherwise, on his general appearance as he pushed his way through the throng. He called the boys into his office one by one and subjected each of them to a searching examination as to his experience, fitness, etc. He invariably finished up with the question, "Do you smoke cigarettes?" The boys as invariably declared that they did not. "Never smoked one o' ther dope sticks in me life," declared the first boy

"Didn't, eh?" replied the "old man." "Let me see your fingers." The youngster's fingers were stained a deep dirty yellow color, and he was told he was not wanted.

The excuse wouldn't work, however, and he was ushered out, as were several more young aspirants for office honors. Finally a bright eyed, redheaded youngster entered the office and answered all the questions propounded to him in a satisfactory way. "Now, my boy," came the final test,

"tell me truthfully, do you smoke cigarettes?" "What's them? Those little paper cigars?" answered the youth.

"Yes, exactly." "Nope. Never drew one uf them inter me lungs in me life," continued the rades in the hallway. "Youse fellers can all go home," he "What's yer given us? Did yer get from the crowd, and finally one of the youngsters exclaimed: "How'd yer do it, Chimmy? De old man said dat he didn't want no dope

A German Story of an American Attempt to Boom a Sewing Machine. The following story, which was published in German in connection with which the bicycle has been responsible the death of Marie Seebach, the noted the following is rather a masterpiece in German actress, shows very well the conception of American affairs which still prevails in Germany to a certain extent. Seebach was here more than 20 years ago, and it is scarcely possible that such an incident as is described would have taken place then, but many such stories are told in Germany today as illustrative of American enterprise.

According to this reminiscence Marie Seebach one day received a message that a gentleman wished to see her. She told the servant to send him to her drawing room in the hotel, and when he arrived he introduced himself as a certain Colonel Smith. Then he plunged voice, at the object of his visit and said that O'More' first came out. I have never he represented a certain well known make of sewing machines.

Many singers fail to realize the importance of distinct enunciation, and the charm of a beautiful voice is often lost by the listener who is vainly struggling to catch the meaning of the song. A young woman who considers herself an admirable ballad singer one day received a severe shock from the criticism of an old lady who had formed one of her audience. Among other ballads the singer had rendered "Rory O'More" in her best style and had received much applause.

The old lady, who sat in the front seat in the little hall where the entertainment was given, looked at first puzzled and then distressed as the familiar song proceeded, and at the close of the concert she waited to speak to the young woman.

"My dear," she said in a quivering "I remember when 'Rory oeen a singer myself, but have always been interested in music, and I am sure "I have already heard," he said, I never heard the words as you sang "that you are a great artist.
