VOL. XIX.

EMMITSBURG, MARYLAND, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1898

BY AND BY.

We will see a mighty change, By and by,

See some revelations strange, By and by, All the customs of today In the past will fade away, Life will be as sunny May,

By and by. Men whom we elect to power By and by, Of the land will be the flower

By and by, They will seek the people's weal, Will not look with tireless zeal For a chance to make a steal,

By and by. Politicians will be pure, By and by,

Doctors never fail to cure, By and by, Our officials all will be Clear of sin and infamy, From dishonesty be free, By and by.

Not a tattling tongue we'll hear,

By and by, Not a scandal wound the ear,

By and by, Ministers will cease to teach Doctrines out of common reach; Pure religion they will preach, By and by.

Girls will never wed for fame, By and by, Will not seek a titled name,

By and by, No divorces will be given,

Not a marriage tie be riven, Every home will be a heaven, By and by.

Lawyers to the truth will stick, By and by Nor attempt a legal trick,

By and by. In the courts the men of fame And the men of humble name Will be treated just the same, By and by.

By and by,

It is coming, sure as fate,

Though your lips and mine be dumb In the grave, 'tis sure to come With the great millenium, By and by.

Poet's Gentle Life That Was Terminated All Too Soon.

In the days of Keats, Hampstead and Highgate were still capable of having an individuality of their own and of teeming with interesting associations. visiting those scenes before his death, would point to the wooden seat where he and Keats or he and Shelley sat when such a poem was recited or to the path through the fields where Coleridge look leave of him and Charles Lamb, who would stutter some witticism at his youth he showed a passion for music and poetry and spent all his leisure moments in poring over books. After reading "The Faerie Queene" he would talk of nothing but Spenser. He learned whole passages by heart, which he would repeat and dwell upon with ecstasics of delight. His first poetical composition, written at the age of 17, was entitled "In Imitation of Spenser." From that time it seemed that Keats lived only to read poetry and to write it. He luxuriated in the thoughts of

Before Keats' apprenticeship was over it was evident that he would not persevere in becoming a surgeon. At 20 he entered a hospital as a student, but soon gave it up and found more congenial society with Leigh Hunt, Shelley, Gocdwin, Haydon and others. Keats signalized his accession to this literary group by publishing in 1817 a small volume of poems. Hunt describes him at this time as being under medium height, with shoulders very broad for his size. His face, strongly cut, yet delicately mobile, denoted determination and sensitiveness. His entire expression was of eager power, and he plainly showed his emotions. Wordsworth alone he seemed to look upon as a sublimity among contemporary poets.

In 1817 he left London to lead a quiet, thoughtful and busy life on the isle of Wight, returning a year later with four books of his "Endymion" completed. In 1820 he was seized with the fatal malady, the knowledge of which had been his fearful secret for some years. After a few months, during which he seemed partly to fight with death as one to whom life was precious and partly to long to die as one who had nothing to live for, he was taken to Italy and there breathed his last at Rome, February, 1821, at the age of 25. He had wished for "ten years of poetic life," but not half that term had been allowed him. Crowded into his short life was much of interest with his ambitions, his high ideals and his talents, and had he lived the ordinary age of man many think that he would have been one of the greatest poets. - Ex-
