"BURNING STICKS."

Columbus' Impressions on His First Introduction to Smoking Tobacco. It was on the island of Cuba, in the autumn of 1492, that the use of tobacco was learned by Europeans. Columbus makes the first mention of the weed in his diary under date of Oct. 15. When he and his men landed on Cuban shores, the kindly natives, who mistook them for messengers from heaven, brought them numerous offerings. Among these, as stated by the admiral in his diary, were some "dry leaves, which must be something much prized by them (the natives), for they had already brought me some in San Salvador as a present."

Little heed was paid to these leaves in the beginning by the Spaniards. They were in search of gold and saw no possibility of converting miserable weeds into that precious commodity. In the course of time they began to notice that as the natives went to and from their all the qualities which enter into the villages and the shore smoke escaped from their mouths, "in a truly diabolical manner." Soon they discovered that these unclad children of the wilds carried in their hands a "burning stick," which every now and then they would put into their mouths and blow out a cloud of smoke. This had a most heathenish look, as it is recorded, to the a well located near Bradford. The well Spaniards, and they inquired, as well as they could by signs, into the custom.

They learned that the burning sticks were composed of the dried leaves so treasured by the natives, and that the was supposed to lessen fatigue on long journeys. They tried it for themselves and found this actually to be the case. On many a troublesome jaunt thereafter they were refreshed as the pleasant perfume curled upward from their own "burning sticks."—Detroit Journal.

Well, I was detailed to keep an eye on these with most of the 'big ones,' who were generally exceedingly bright men. One in particular, who was known as 'Slick Pete,' I took a great liking to, for he had an inexhaustible fund of humor and was a good hearted chap. Toward the end of the Centennial exhibition one day I dropped into a down town auction room where some fake jewelry was being sold. A lot of watches were offered, the works were good, and the cases were quiror. made to look like solid gold. They were finally knocked down for $2.15 apiece, and I saw that the buyer was 'Slick Pete.' Jewelry was out of his line, but I knew he had some scheme in view. A Funny Mistake.

A servant lass at an inn once made a funny mistake. Opening the door of one of the rooms, she saw, as she thought, the handle of a warming pan sticking out near the foot of the bed. "Bless me," she said, "that stupid Martha has left the warming pan in the bed! She might have set the place on fire.' Taking hold of the handle, she gave it a violent jerk, when up jumped an awakened traveler, shouting lustily: "Hello, there! Leave my wooden leg alone, will you?"-London Fun.

The Philippines are to be maintained as an "open door" for the commercial privileges there as weather is prevailing. America maintains.

There is to be a mutual relinguishment of all claims to indemnity subsequent to the outbreak of the last Cuban insurrection.

The United States commissioners express the hope that they may receive from the Spanish commissioners on or before next Monday, Nov. 28, a definite answer to the above proposals.

Notice is also given that the United States desires to treat as to the following subjects:

Religious freedom of the Caroline Islands.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, New York,  FASHION IN POULTRY.

At Certain Times a Certain Breed Will Take the I recedence.

One of the curious things connected with the poultry industry is this: At certain periods certain breeds are in vogue and all others suffer a temporary eclipse. Teople rush into fancy poultry, not as fanciers, not from a genuine love of fowls, not to improve a breedsimply to make money. They buy the breed in fashion, pay the price of the fashion and in turn take a hand at the bellows and puff the breed. Not only the poultry papers, but the agricultural journals yield to the pressure, and before all eyes the favorite breed is liaced. All possible adjectives describe its perfection, and the public is led to believe that total excellence is found in it alone, and that other breeds not only lack both excellence and beauty but are possessed of positive faults. Yet in fact the vaunted breed may be actually inferior in beauty and in utility to many others.

Poultry Notes.

-Sunflower seed improves the gloss of the plumage. -Introduce new blood among the poultry once a year. -Buckwheat, oatmeal and milk are good for laying hens.

-Give lime for growth of bone and for eggshell material. -A little cayenne pepper in the food often stimulates laying. -Good leghorn hens may be kept until they are 5 years old.

-The usual causes of roup are cold, dampness and exposure.

-A laying hen should have her food and drink at regular intervals. -If the hens show an inclination to pull feathers, feed them salt pork. -Do not winter late pullets that have failed to make a good growth. -It is essential that confined fowls be supplied with plenty of gravel. -It is not too late yet to hatch out guineas, if they are properly cared for. -Corn is a fattening food, but can nearly always be given at night to good advantage.

Eggs for Hatching.

The selecting of the eggs is the first and most important matter in the hatching of chicks. Very large eggs, small eggs, eggs sharp at both ends, eggs that have protuberances, thinshelled eggs, and such, should be discarded, as it is a waste of time using them. Eggs should be of normal size, perfect in shape, smooth and fresh. When the chicks are hatched out, do not feed them much wet foods, but keep them at work scratching for seeds, and you will have fewer cases of leg weakness and bowel diseases. The matter of raising chicks, however, depends on the eggs from which they are hatched.

Nest boxes should be cleaned out every week and the hay or other material in them burned. Kerosene or whitewash should be freely used in nest boxes and around roosts, winter and summer, to destroy vermin.

Eggs of Pigeons. The two eggs laid by a pigeon almost invariably produce male and female. Some curious experiments as to which of the eggs produces the male and which the female, have resulted in showing that the first egg laid is the lemale and the second the male.

Besides this, nothing is more every week in winding it up.

The atmospheric clock, which is a sort of perpetual hour glass, is one of the inventions that goes of itself. In appearance it is like a long thermometer with the bulb of mercury at the bottom. The glass tube is about threeeighths of an inch in diameter and secured to the frame by two bands through which it passes easily. The divisions of time are marked on each side of the tube. Inside the glass tube putting these necessary articles on and is a smaller tube shaped very much as an hour glass. Some mercury and a firmly across the instep and ankle and scrap of blotting paper for the purpose of taking up any moisture that might gather in the tube are placed at each end. The mercury in the top end of the tube is placed opposite the mark of the proper time and it falls to the bottom of the tube exactly as the time passes. When it has run out from the top the frame can be turned and the

The helpfulness of a good man, when it comes to assistance in domestic affairs, is apt to be very much like that of Mr. Barker,, whose ex-

A Good Definition. To confuse a witness is generally an easy task and lawyers know no easier way than to make a witness explain the meaning of his words, knowing that very few people can do so without getting excited. Occasionally, a victim resents nagging and answers in a spirited and unexpected manner. A lawyer was cross examining a young girl of rather haughty temper. She had testified that she had seen the defendant 'shy" a book at the plaintiff, and the lawyer had seized on the word. "Shy-shy a book? What do you mean by that? Will you explain to the court what the word 'shy'

The girl leaned over the desk beneath the witness box, picked up a law book and threw it at the lawyer's head, who dodged just in time.

"I think the court now understands the meaning of the word 'shy,'" said the judge, gravely, and the girl was allowed to finish her testimony without further interruption.-Tit-Bits.
