

CORRECT POSITION FOR EGGS.

If Placed Properly the Chicks Are Not so Likely to Perish.

The correct position for eggs during incubation is on their sides, with the large end slightly higher.

White Plymouth Rocks. There has always been a considerable controversy over the relative merits of the different colors of Plymouth Rocks.

White Plymouth Rocks. The White Plymouth Rock is of the same general structure as the Barred, and quite as good in respect to laying, breeding and quality of flesh.

Watering Poultry. One point that should never be neglected in the care of poultry, either old or young, especially in hot weather, is to see that they have an abundant supply of fresh water.

The Gain by Fattening. A fowl weighing six pounds, if of large frame, can be made to weigh eight pounds if made very fat.

Remedy for Croup. A "stare remedy" for croup is to paint a box well inside with kerosene oil and house the affected chickens with their mother hen in it for a night or two.

For Quick Killing. Poultry and small animals are quickly slaughtered for market by a new device consisting of a curved bar fitted with two adjustable prongs.

Brahmins Easily Handled. Brahmins need but little range. While they like the open air they are contented in a small space.

Young and Old Geese. Young geese are best to fatten for market. Old geese are best to keep for laying and for feathers.

Not So Feckle. "What a delicate looking child Mrs. Rickard's third is!" "Delicate? That's the child that busses the whole family!"

MAY WE INQUIRE WHY.

The humorist who makes jokes out of the trials of the suburban resident lives out of town? The individual who pokes fun at the Harlem goat keeps one of those useful but homely animals? Why the gossip on things about town is never seen at any of the haunts he writes about?

Why the polished writer on dramatic art goes by way of choice to the flimsiest burlesques in town? Why the editor who writes so learnedly on political reform goes as a delegate in the interest of the machine?

Why the man who writes comic ditties about the woes of a man with a mother-in-law lives with his wife's mother? Why the philosopher who tells the world how to be happy though married never entered the matrimonial state?

Why the newspaper man who writes articles on "How to live on fifty cents a week" goes in debt trying to manage on $25 per? Why the authority on social etiquette receives visitors in his shirt sleeves and goes out to lunch with a disreputable-looking corncob pipe?

Why the chap who evolves funny paragraphs on the pushing of a lawnmower hurries home to trim the lawn with that instrument of torture? Why the person who collects queer advertisements from the papers; here are a few specimens:

"Wanted—An organist and a boy to blow the same." "Bulldog for sale; will eat anything; very fond of children."

"Wanted—A room by two gentlemen about 30 feet long and 20 feet broad." "A lady wants to sell her piano, as she is going abroad in a strong iron frame."

"Wanted—For the summer, a cottage for a small family with good drainage." "Wanted—By a respectable girl, her passage to New York; willing to take care of children and a good sailor."

HOUSEHOLD TALKS

The latest development of the barrel chair is a particularly pretty one, as is shown in the sketch. It is made out of a hoghead, and is not unlike the tall grandmother's chairs of the last century.

THE BARREL CHAIR.

The round, low seat is upholstered with springs and a tufted cushion, and the sides and back are covered with chintz.

Good House Points. Don't put borders on the carpets of hall rooms. Don't buy anything merely because it is fashionable. See that it is good and suitable.

Did You Ever Try? Mixing a little baking soda with brick-dust for scouring knives? Sweet oil for removing finger marks from oiled furniture?

Clothespin Apron. A clothespin apron is a great convenience in putting clothes on the line as well as taking them off.

Time Spoon. Something valuable has appeared in the way of a new time spoon. There is convenience attached to it.

To Blacken Stoves. Stove blacking mixed with soap and water will produce a finer polish and stick better than when mixed with clear water.

Protecting Boiled Ham. After a ham has been boiled, and before getting entirely cold, it will be found a good plan to wrap around it a long strip of thin, old muslin, tying it with a string.

When Cleaning Meat. Meat should never be washed. It can be cleaned by wiping it with a wet cloth better than any other way.

Pomatum. Take a pound of mutton suet, melt it over a gentle heat, skim, strain and melt again with three pounds of lard.

BIRDS OF THE SEA.

THEIR INACCESSIBILITY HINDERS ANY CLOSE OBSERVATION.

Habits of the Albatross—Comes on Motionless Pinions Out of the Blue—The True Children of the Air—Beautiful Mother Carey's Chickens.

A writer in the London Spectator says of sea birds: In obedience to the growing demand for more intimate knowledge of birds and their habits whole libraries have been written.

Easily first in point of interest, as well as size, comes the lordly albatross, whose home is far south of the line, and whose empire is that illimitable area of turbulent waves which sweep resistless round the world.

Despite his incomparable grace of flight, when gliding through mid-air with his mighty wings outspread, when ashore or on deck he is clumsy and ill-at-ease.

At the bottom of the size scale, but in point of affectionate interest second to none, comes the stormy petrel, or Mother Carey's chicken, a darling we wanderer common to both hemispheres, and beloved by all sailors.

"Laura," said the husband of two months, "I am going to the lodge to-night and I may not be home till late."

"Very well, John; I'll have breakfast ready when you come in," interrupted the wife.

Bismarck's Bell.

When Bismarck was Prussian Ambassador at Frankfort, an interesting incident occurred to him. At that moment he lodged in the house of a merchant who detested the Prussians.
