"I generally do," I said, sapiently. A few days after our memorable conversation Charley bade me goodby, and full of courage and hope, and with many promises and assurances for the future, set out on the long journey to his distant field of labor and enterprise. Silence fell between us, for my parents objected to any correspondence between us. I danced and flirted; the mise en scene of my life called for such diversion, in fact; but on the 31st of the following October I declined the most seductive Halloween parties, in order that, alone, at midnight, in front of the old mirror, I might keep my tryst.

Had he forgotten me, amid strangers and in the ardor of money-getting? Had some other woman already led astray the heart too young to have anchored all its hopes upon one woman, albeit myself?

What did I expect? It was a piece of folly; and yet, on the night of the 31st of October, the mystic night when strange things used to be thought possible, and weird influences were supposed to rise in their might to weave their puzzling manifestations about wondering, flest -incumbered mortals-A MIDNIGHT TRYST. on that night I slipped from my bedroom a few minutes before 12 o'clock, "The age of miracles is past," re- and with a fast-beating heart I felt marked Charley Ingram, giving a my way down the stairs, through the meditative glance to his long legs, as hall to the long parlor which opened

How a Gold Field Was Discovered.

A novel way of discovering a gold field was recounted by the agent general for western Australia. In 18.3 the Mallina gold field was discovered by a lad in this wise: The boy, in picking up a stone to throw at a crow, observed a speck of gold in it, and reported it to the nearest resident magistrate. The magistrate was so excited at the news that he telegraphed to the then governor, and stated that a lad during that narration; I was a statue, picked up a stone to throw at a crow, but a statue that would wake to life, in his excitement omitting to say "and saw gold in it." So the governor wirest back these words, "What happened to the crow?"

Opportunity is now presented to the people of Gettysburg and the surrounding country, to visit our elegant new store, (Centre Square,) and examine the wonderful bargains being offered in Clothing, Hats, Shoes, and Gents Furnishing Goods. We are after the trade of all who need anything in our line, and are offering "Sledge Hammer" arguments in the way of low prices, in order that you may deal with us. We will not misrepresent any of our goods, all we ask of any person is a right to a share of their custom. Expenses are sure in a large establishment like ours, but profits can only be counted on goods sold. A quick profit is the best, be it ever so small. We know this and always make the "Almighty dollar" act as our agent when purchasing stock from the manufacturer, and spot cash is the watchword that guided us through ten years of almost unparalled business success. Our customers wants are always in view when we buy stock, and we always nark goods with Rock Bottom Figures, thus making a bargain of every article in our stock. If you come from a distance by rail to examine our stock the money you save in purchases will be more than equivalent to a

We do not wish to brag, but certainly our great success is the very best evidence that Square dealing, and business like methods, have been shown in all our transactions with the public. Now, when we are asking for an increased share of patronage, it would be snicidal for us to misrepresent our stock.

We have a large and most complete line of Clothing, Gents Furnishing Goods, Hats, Shoes, and we have also added a large and most complete line of Ladies Wraps, etc., and in spite of the advance in the prices in various grades of goods, we have decided to increase our popularity by offering everything at figures that will compel all to acknowledge us as the "Leaders in Low Prices" If you need anything in our line come to see us. We are always glad to show goods. The prices marked on them will do the rest. If you trade with us, there will be no use to go

THE RUSSIAN THISTLE.

A New Light Upon the Curse Which May Become a Blessing.

The State Agricultural Department is recently in receipt of some interest-ing data relating to the use of the Russian thistle in Nebraska as food for all kinds of live-stock and as fuel for heating purposes. Thousands of tons of this extraordinary vegetable plant are now being consumed annually in that State for these purposes.
The Agricultural Department will shortly issue a lengthy report on the subject, treating it in all its details.
According to the information the department has secured, the Russian thistle, which but a few years ago was considered a dangerous menace to the agricultural interests of the entire Missouri Valley, has proved to be one of the best grazing plants known to this section. For the past two years the various farmers' organizations have been experimenting with the plant, but the progress of the experiments has not been fully reported un-til now, when there is no longer any doubt as to the utility of the weed.
For practical purposes, the Russian thistle is now generally regarded in Nebraska as more valuable than al-

Colorado. Wyoming and Nebraska which offer a premium for the extermination of the thistle. Of course these laws are now dead letters, as the commercial value of the plant is well established. Five years ago the Russian thistle first made its appearance. The floor of gutter, stall and manger is cement. Partitions of two-inch agricultural prosperity of the whole country was threatened by the weed. The live-stock range was shortly alive with the new growth and the whole State became a vast seed-bed for the thistle. There was much genuine alarm among stockmen and farmers. The fall winds carried the seeds to the four parts of the compass, and the ex-traordinary vitality of the plant was evidenced by vast beds of thistles appearing in spots so barren as to refuse to yield other forms of vegetation. The rapidity with which the growth over-spread the whole country be-tween the Missouri River and the mountains caused many students of agriculture and stock-raising to de clare this vast domain would again revert to the savage and the wild things of the prairie. They went so far as to insist that cattle eating the Russian thistle would not only perish but per haps poison any one eating their fiesh.

The Department of agriculture at Washington sent out its best men to investigate the situation and many government bulletins were issued on this—"the greatest of evils to agriculture." This prolific weed received a genuine attack from the government in Farmers' Bulletin No. 10 of 1893, in which the government experts solemnly asserted that in Nebraska, South-Dalvota and Iowa 50,000 acres of fine land had been survendered to the ravages of the weed, and that the damage at that time exceeded five million dollars to crops and live-stock. As further evidence of the alarm spread by the government take the following of the government of the government of the government of the situation and many government out its best men to the from manger to gut the following of from manger to gut the following at the back, and with a short slope to the front, leaving 2ft. The little commune of Attinghausen, in Cant that that the exceeded the fallowing three ropes and live-stock. As further evidence of the alarm spread by the government, take the following quotation, from the Agricultural Department Report of 1893: "There is no doubt that the plant will spread three reports and the rope of the stock of the specific plant. throughout the whole great plains and still further east, destroying a large portion of the wheat-producing region of the United States. In spite of this prediction of awful calamity from the highest scources of agricultural information, this same Russian thistle is filling a long felt want in northwestern Nebraska, and if it did not grow in a wild state so prolifically, it would undoubtedly be cultivated by the farmers and stock-men of the State. By hundreds who have used the plant as food for horses cattle, sheep and hogs it is pronounced the equal in a nutritious way of alfal-fa. In fact the thistle in a dry state very much resembles alfalfa, and the experience of farmers and stockmen is that it is more sought by cattle than any other form of wild hay.

The thistle is easily harvested, the wind collecting the plant in vast piles the moment it becomes ripe, the stalk breaking at the ground and the plant being rolled like a great ball until stopped by some draw, ravine or fence. -Country Gentleman.

Why Do Forses Shy?

The vice of shying is one of the most annoying and daugerous, and many farmers cannot understand why horses shy in the first place, and why it is so difficult to break them of this ga regular inspection of the cyll and dangerous habit. They do not stop to reflect that shying is simply a revital of an old habit essential to the very existence of the horse when it ran wild on desert or plain. Every horse from colthood up was obliged to be on the lookout for an enemy. Were it not for its speed that one of the employees of lamb in a solution intended to pickle the meat are nemy. Were it not for its speed that one of the employees of the clay to look after the meat supply of the restaurants, it being his duty under the ordinances of the city to look after the meat supply of the restaurants, as well as that sold by the butchers. In the found seventeen pieces of lamb in a solution intended to pickle the meat and in making his report on the matter at the health office he asserted that one of the employees of the place had told him that the purpose of pickling it was to change the flavor of its oas to make it resemble venison.

horse, breed the lest you can of the class you decide upon. Avoid violent crosses. Don't imagine that you can, as a general rule, succeed in breeding a cross-bred animal wih the size and weight of a draft horse and the speed and activity of a race horse, nor that by cross-breeding you can, ordinarily, get a happy combination of many of the good qualities of both. It may be acknowledged that, occasionally, an individual horse will be found that is an excellent animal, a good generalpurpose horse. And such a horse may have been the result of cross-breeding. But such instances are rare. They are exceptions to the rule. Such crosses usually result in a "weedy," ill-proportioned animal, that is fit for neither the one purpose nor the other Such individuals are , when used for breeding purposes, detrimental to breeders. They are not of a fixed type. They are composed of say 50 per cent. of each of two incongruous elements, and their progeny in the next genera-tion will generally be disappointing.— E. F. STRANGE FREAK OF NATURE

How a Caterpillar's Body Becomes the

they are laughed at, but once in a while they turn out to be the truth. It is this way with the strange freak of nature called the bulrush caterpillar, which is indigenous to New Zealand. This report, which stated that at certain seasons a large black caterpillar would bury itself in the ground, and be converted into the root of a bulrush, was laughed at, like the rest, but now an English scientist, who recently gave an exhaustive investigation of the strange phenomenon, stated that in many respects the statements are strictly true. From this report it has been learned that the caterassume the chrysalis state buries it-self in the ground, and in doing so it larvae is unable to expel, and the vegetation thus set up rapidly extends throughout the entire body, replacing each animal cell thus destroyed by vegetable matter, and finally convertmake sheep profitable, they should be kept both for wool and mutton. In doing this, care should be taken not to cull out the best and sell to the butcher, and this should apply to the lambs as well as to the mature sheep. Under average conditions the sheep that will make the best mutton will also grow the best fieece of wool. If the quality of the flock is to be improved, not only should a well bred proved, not only should a well bred has no leaves, and if the first stem be ram be used, but make a careful selection of ewes, and one of the best though two stems never grow simul-

The Wetternsee, in Sweden, like so many other lakes, has long enjoyed the local reputation of being a bottomless pit. The Swedish scientists have now destroyed the venerable legend, for in the measurements taken a few days ago they have successfully demor strated that the greatest depth of the lake is only 119 meters. There stil remains, however, a series of mysteries which science must be content to leave unsolved—at least, for a time. It is not only a legendary belief, but there is a quasi-scientific ground for the queer supposition that living creatures, animal and vegetable, can and do make fixed." journeys to and fro between the high northern lake of Wetten and the South German lake of Constance. This bold conclusion has been partly justified by the appearance of exactly the same fauna and even the same animal life in the Swedish and the Swabian inland seas. It is even asserted that whenever there is a storm on the Lake of Constance the Lake of Wettern begins sympathetically to roll and swell, an that the southern lake in a hurry now."-Chicago, Post, is similarly moved by any agitation in the distant northern lake. The new issue of the Ecicetic Magazine will be increased in size to 160 pages monthly, a change which will give to the subscribers 192 more pages of reading matter annually than hitherto. While the Magazine will contain practically the same kind of material as formerly, some changes and additions will be made, which it is believed will largely enhance the value of the publication. To the selection from British periodicals will be added original translations of some of the most noteworthy articles in French, German, Spanish, and Italian reviews. A monthly supplement will give keadings from New Books, and an editorial department of Books and Authors will give the latest news in the Frency world.

The magazine will bear the imprint of the Living Age Company, Boston, and E. R. Pelton, New York, and subscriptions may be sent to either address Articles from the Articles from the
