"Excuse me," continued the wily tempter. "Of course, I didn't mean this here as a personal affair. We will call it retaining you professionally."

Siamese Matchmaking.
Every Siamese girl who reaches a certain age without marrying is ticketed and labelled and placed in a privileged class, under the special care of the king, who binds himself to find a husband for them all. His method is delightfully simple. A prisoner in one of the Siamese jails may gain his pardon and release by marrying one of the ineligible class. If he is already married or not is not of great consequence, for in Siam it is not necessary to draw the line at one wife. This method of matchmaking can hardly result in domestic bliss.

Siamese Love Bathing.
The Siamese are more devoted to the water than any other nation in the world. They are nearly always bathing, generally with their clothes on, and they never go anywhere by land if they can possibly go by water. The streets of Bangkok are like those of Venice, and the inhabitants say that their idea of paradise would be a town with canals, where there were currents in both directions, so that they might be spared the effort of rowing.

You get up in the morning tired, a bad taste in the mouth and a headache. Know what's the matter? Biliousness! Take DeWitt's Little Early Risers. They regulate the liver and cure constipation pleasantly and promptly. Never gripe. T. E. Zimmerman & Co.

Ships' Anchors.
Ships' anchors cost from 5 to 7 cents a pound, so that a 6,000-pound anchor, which would be a very large one, would cost at the lowest price, about $300, and a big ship that required an anchor of that size would carry two of them. The two big anchors carried by a ship of, say, 2,000 tons, would weigh from 4,800 to 5,000 pounds each.

FATE OF JOHN DRIFT.

time in reaching Seattle; that his man was waiting for him. And by the end of a fortnight the prisoner had been brought to Denver for arraignment. And Dick was there, as were also the Indian trailers and the old cattleman. Any number of good citizens identified the prisoner as the showman who had given an open air exhibition on July 2.

The shopkeeper solemnly swore that "Dot was just de same man wat done puy one leedle red silk cap from my store on de second day of July."
And the president of the smelter company, when handed the $50,000 check, testified to its being the one he had given to John Drift in payment for certain lots of ore. That there might be no room for doubt, he produced a checkbook and showed the stub. The number, date and amount were the same.

The prisoner had stood defiant from the first; but when confronted with the question: "How did you come in possession of this check?" he broke completely down, and finally made the following confession:

"I had fixed up to make a balloon ascension on the afternoon of July 2. I advertised that I would attempt the trip from Denver to San Francisco. But this was only to get a bigger collection. I had no idea of such a thing. Just before all was ready, Mr. Drift came up to me and asked some questions about my sensations when knocking about in the clouds. Now, I happened to know by accident that he had the check in his pocket, and a cussed idea struck me all in a heap. I saw that he had the cloud fever pretty bad; so I answered his questions by telling him to come along and see for himself. He said he wouldn't mind if I wasn't going on such a long trip. With that I whispered in his ear that I had no intention of it; to come along if he wanted to, and I would set him down on hard ground again by night. 'All right,' he whispers, 'just wait a little; I'll be ready.' So presently back comes a chap all rigged out in blue overalls and an old hat. It was Mr. Drift; but I didn't know it until he told me. 'You see,' he says, 'I don't want my friends to know anything about it; so I put on this disguise.' With that, we stepped into the car and they let her go. 'Well, we got up pretty high and began to drift briskly to the southwest. My man took a sudden notion to come down; got scared I guess. I put him on a white. But he began to get funny; and I just out with a gun and told him to get out, and that $50,000 check and indorse it. He cut up about it, and then turned in and begged like a dog. But I held him to it; and he hadn't more than got his name down before I let him have it—yes, sir, killed him right there.

"Well, there isn't much more to tell, except that after drifting around all night, first in one direction and then in another, I found myself at daybreak about a thousand feet above a range of mountains. I looked through my glass, but couldn't see any ranches about. So I just pulled the valve string and let her come down pretty close to the ground. Then I threw the body out. About that time a sudden squall came up and caught the balloon. It pitched about at a terrible rate, and once I got out, and $50,000 check, I managed to hold on for some eight or ten miles, when the balloon struck a mountain top and went to pieces. I stayed long enough to gather up the wreck and burn it. Then I made my way to the nearest settlement and on to the railroad, striking it at Winslow."

After this remarkable confession, bringing out so vividly the leading facts which Flora had worked out one at a time with such patient labor, there was little else for the court to do than sentence the showman to suffer the full penalty of the law.
As for Flora, she was the heroine of the hour. The old cattleman came up with two big tears rolling down his withered cheeks: "My child, I couldn't thank you enough if I was to keep at it the rest of my life. You have set me right before the public, so that nobody can be pointing a finger at me and saying as how I was the one that killed your father!"

The cashier of the First National congratulated her warmly; while, at the same time, the shopkeeper was telling her excitedly: "You jost de smartest leedle womans I never did see. It was remarkable, remarkable!"
And the two Indian trailers came up with extended hands. "How, how, Yellow Hair!" said Bloodhound; "me tell Barkling Wolf you biggest trailer in whole country. Indian see nothing no more."

Dick felt a keener pride at Flora's achievement. But the San Francisco expert felt something more—an unbounded admiration for the 18-year-old girl that had taught him so many valuable hints in regard to his own profession.
And he is at work now on a case of far different character, which may develop into the most important one of his whole life. But he says he shall not be able to accomplish a thing unless Flora helps him out.

A Minister's Eulogy.

DR. GLADDEN'S BEAUTIFUL TRIBUTE TO BISHOP WATTERSON.

The Celebrated Congregational Minister of Columbus, Ohio, the Famous Prelate Well And Had a High Appreciation of His Sterling Qualities.

[The following eulogy on the death of Bishop Watterson, who died in Columbus, Ohio, April 17, last, was handed to the CHRONICLE for publication. Bishop Watterson was president of Mt. St. Mary's College, near this place, from 1877 to 1880.—Ed.]
Many tributes have been written and spoken of our dead Bishop, says the Catholic Columbian, referring to the late Bishop Watterson, of Columbus, but none more touching than that offered to his memory by the eloquent Dr. Gladden, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Columbus, at his regular service last Sunday evening, April 23. Great souls have a kinship of their own and Dr. Gladden's words have a value therefore apart from their common acceptance. That the speaker had with him the sympathy of the audience was manifest from the beginning by the intense earnestness with which every word of the discourse was followed to its close. Dr. Gladden spoke as follows:

"The vital connection between religion and conduct was emphasized in all the songs of the old Hebrew poets. Prophets and psalmists never suffered their priests to forget that the only test of piety is the upright life. One has just fallen among us who found it not difficult to bring into harmony precept and practice. The spontaneous and well-nigh unanimous testimony of men of all classes and creeds to the exemplary life and christian character of the late Bishop Watterson must surely make a deep impression upon every thoughtful mind. Several of the local Protestant churches, through their representatives, unite in their recognition of him as a gifted and noble citizen, a faithful minister of Christ, and bear witness that 'our Christianity' has lost, in him, a leader. I am sure that these words could not have been uttered unless they had been well weighed, and their utterance, I trust, marks an epoch in the religious life of the community.

"The change of sentiment which such words indicate is one of the most remarkable I have ever witnessed, for none of you can ever forget that it is only four or five years ago that this country was under the domination of organized forces whose teaching it was that all Roman Catholics are the enemies of Christ and of their country. What an amazing eruption it was, of distempered and reasonless suspicion and terror. And it was very largely the Christian patience and gentleness of Bishop Watterson that averted trouble in those trying times. I am sure that this outburst of generous appreciation of him, and these words of sympathy for his people are in part, inspired by the wish to repair a grievous wrong, and to renounce an unworthy suspicion. And I cannot but hope that the good Bishop, in his death, may thus render to our common christianity a service even greater than he ever rendered in his lifetime. If we could all get rid, utterly, of the notion that the two great divisions of the church are natural enemies and could accept all who acknowledge Jesus Christ as Master and Lord as our fellow Christians, what a tremendous gain it would be to truth and righteousness in the earth!"

"What were the elements of the character that gave Bishop Watterson so strong a hold upon the respect and affections of all classes. First of all, he was a manly man—courageous, frank, outspoken, unaffected in manners. In proper times and places he performed his ecclesiastical functions and asserted his ecclesiastical character, but he never intruded them upon you. In speech he was simple, direct and unostentatious. He was a man of fine culture; he enjoyed literature, and for one whose hands were so full of administrative cares, kept well up with the notable issues in the field of belleslettres. It was this that gave him intellectual breadth. You always felt in talking with him that his mind had travelled widely; that he knew much of the best that has been thought and said by the world's greatest teachers; that he had put himself in the places of a great many people, and had seen the world with their eyes.

"Bishop Watterson was also a man to whom the privileges and joys of friendship were very precious. He was a good talker and a good listener; he delighted in the interchange of thought and sentiment. It was not only the members of his flock who found him a sympathetic friend and a delightful companion—many with whom he had little theological friendship were glad to number him among their friends.

"He was a good citizen. In all that concerned the thrift, the morality, the general welfare, of the community he was deeply interested. Especially notable was the position which he took upon the subject of temperance. Not only by his personal example but by all his public actions he set himself against the business of drunkard-making. Armed with the authority of his church, he determined that its creed should be used steadily and unflinchingly to discontinue the traffic in intoxicating liquor.

"He was a true American. He loved his native land with a pure and strong affection; he bore her sorrows upon his heart, he sought her welfare and prosperity in season and out of season. You can doubtless prove by logic that a man who confesses allegiance to the Pope cannot be a loyal citizen. You can prove almost anything by logic. But when you find Catholics just as quick to enlist in the armies of their country and shed their blood in her defense as Protestants are, even where, as lately happened, the nation is at war with a Catholic country, then your logic falls to the ground. When Bishop Watterson began that noble address on 'Christian Citizenship,' a few years ago, before the Young Men's Christian Association, there were not a few among his hearers who believed him to be disloyal to his country; but there were few such in his audience when he closed, so clear and strong and full of vital earnestness were his words.

"Finally, let me most cordially adopt the language of my Presbyterian and Methodist brethren, and testify that Bishop Watterson was a faithful minister of Jesus Christ." This was, indeed, in my opinion, the central and dominant note of his life. He was skilled in that divine ministry, the cure and care of souls. He loved his people and took a deep and intelligent interest in their welfare. The Bishop in the Roman Catholic Church is the chief pastor of the diocese, and his pastoral care was exercised with great fidelity by Bishop Watterson.

"He was a consistent and thorough-going Catholic. He received the whole body of doctrine, the entire deposit of tradition, with out hesitation or questioning. He was not a liberal Catholic, if by that is meant one who holds loosely or seeks to explain away the most difficult dogmas. And many men who regard reason as the only lamp by which they may safely walk, are unable to understand how a man so intellectual and cultivated could profess to believe many things to which he gave credence, things which to them seem essentially irrational. There must be an explanation of this which will remove all suspicion of insincerity. We may not agree with Bishop Watterson in some very important things, but it is well for those who differ to understand one another; thus they may be able to respect one another, even if they cannot agree.

"All Christians believe that God has a kingdom in the world. Where and what is that kingdom? Bishop Watterson, and all good Catholics believe that this kingdom is the church; that the kingdom of God must be a religious, an ecclesiastical organization, that if the church represents God there can be but one true Church, which must be universal and continuous, since it is incredible that God should organize a church in the world and permit it to be broken in pieces and rebuilt after a new pattern; that if the church is organized by God to teach His truth, what it teaches must be His truth, no matter how irrational it may seem. This is, in substance, the reasoning by which a great many clear-headed and conscientious men have been convinced that the Roman Catholic Church is the organized kingdom of God in the world; that it respects him; that it speaks for him, and that what it speaks men have nothing to do but listen and obey.

"I state this view that you may understand the ground on which intelligent Catholics accept what may seem to you incredible. I state it, neither to indorse or refute it, for my object tonight is not controversy; but I should not be quite just to myself if I omitted to say that my difficulty with all this argument is in the primary assumption that the kingdom of God must be an ecclesiastical organization. I believe it is larger than any church or all churches; and that all truth, and not merely the truth of the creeds, is truth of the kingdom of God, that all good lives and not merely those on the rolls of the churches belong to it. The church, in its best estate, is an important factor of it; at its worst estate, it is an impediment to it.

"Intellectual differences, at some points, between Bishop Watterson and myself must have been deep and radical, but they do not hide from me his essential maleness, his essential Christianity; and I shall always treasure as a token of his friendship, the last word I heard from him, as I bade him good-bye, the other day, on leaving the train that was carrying him to Philadelphia: 'I shall be lonesome the rest of the way!'

"Well, he has gone now, I believe, on a journey on which he will not be lonesome. He was going over the sea to rest—that was his intention; his passage was engaged; he was thinking of sunny Italy, and dreaming of returning health among the beautiful lakes and under the shadow of the snow-capped mountains. But he was not to sail that sea, nor to land upon that shore. He has crossed a deeper sea to a sunnier shore. From the tardy coming of our vernal joys, he has gone quickly to the land.

"Where everlasting spring abides And never withering flowers"
"I am sure that he will find there the rest that he had earned and that he sadly needed. And while I know nothing of the scenery of that country, I cannot but hope that a loveliness and a glory fairer than the blue waters of Lugano or the shining heights of Monte Rosa may even now have burst upon his sight. There will be much, I am sure, in that country to delight an eye that so eagerly harvested the beauty of the landscape, and much to learn for a mind that had such a thirst for knowledge. And there will be no lonesomeness. He has left many friends behind, but how many have gone before—how many to whom he has been a kind friend and a wise counsellor; how many whom his uplifting words have inspired with better hopes; how many whose feet he has guided into the way of life; how many whose eyes he has gently closed in death. He to whom friendship was worth so much has found friends—some that he had longed for, some, no doubt, that he had never seen. Forget us not, we pray you, for to some of us, also, "The golden evening brightens in the west; Soon, soon, to faithful warriors cometh rest." Sweet is the calm of Paradise the best."

In the benediction which followed the sermon, Dr. Gladden prayed for "the great Church" which has been so bereft and for its "great head, the Pope, so soon to follow."

BE A PHILOSOPHER.

The average man fusses continually about the heat. He is always wiping his face with his handkerchief, energetically fanning a fan or mopping assiduously at the back of his neck says the American. He drinks ice-water in unlimited quantities. He looks at the thermometer every other minute to see exactly how warm he is, and his feelings keep pace with the mercury. He frets over every little mishap; he is irritable as to temper and raw as to nerves. He allows every little thing to worry him, and he cannot refrain from commenting on the heat to everyone with whom he comes in contact. In short, he does everything possible to increase his discomfort and add to the suffering caused by the high temperature. He is to be met with everywhere on every hot day.

The philosopher does none of these foolish things. He resolutely takes his mind off the heat, and busies his brain with pleasant thoughts. He never so much as glances at the thermometer. He uses a fan sparingly, and his face is not worn rough by the continued friction of a handkerchief. He is quiet, calm and cool. He worries over nothing, and dismisses every disquieting thought. He is careful about exciting himself or letting others do so. He controls his temper perfectly, sips cool water, but never iced. He is exceedingly careful about his diet, selecting only those articles which are cooling to the blood. Consequently, he is always composed, cheerful, and suffers comparatively little from the heat. He is to be met with in essays and in articles giving good advice. In real life such weather as this he could not be located with an X-ray.

28 DEAD FROM THE HEAT.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Although the temperature was several degrees lower during the latter part of the day and a stiff, cooling breeze from the northeast started up tonight, the record of fatalities today exceeded by far those of yesterday in this city and vicinity. There were 28 deaths from the heat in this vicinity, and 10 of these victims were women. In addition there were 40 prostrations, the victims of which are still in the city hospitals in a more or less serious condition. Seven persons were prostrated after midnight.

In New York city alone 22 deaths were recorded up to midnight, while Hackensack, Newark, Plainfield, Passaic and Morristown each reported one death. One of the victims today was a suicide, who took his own life because of his sufferings from the heat.

At the beginning of the day the thermometer registered 2° or 3° above that of yesterday. As the day passed the mercury slowly went down and the afternoon was slightly cooler than yesterday. The wind, which had been shifting during the day from the south to the northwest, changed and blew from the northeast. Then the temperature rapidly fell. Between 8 p. m., and 8.30 p. m., a drop of 13° was recorded.

THE WORLD'S BEST NEIGHBOR.

One of the flattering and, perhaps, most worthy tributes ever paid to this country, says the Baltimore American, is the one expressed in the appeal which comes ever anon from the distressed people of other parts who are in need of help. Whenever any section of the world is stricken with famine or any other keen affliction it turns with natural instinct toward the United States for succor. This very tendency is illustrated by the cries now coming from Russia, where millions of people are on the verge of starvation. Despite the nearness of other more contiguous nations, the people of America are looked upon as the good Samaritans in the time of trouble.

If this land of ours is what we boast that it is, then the supplications which come to our doors prove that the world takes us at our word. We claim to be a haven of refuge to the oppressed and a dispenser of assistance to the suffering. Our proffered aid in the past has assumed a practical form, and has been an incalculable benefaction to those who received it. Hence, the appeals which are made to us—a hard-working, commercial, hustling nation, but one with a generous heart and a liberal hand. Despite our credited love for the dollar, we have shown our willingness to part with it readily, especially when it promises to assuage other people's distress. America, after all, is the whole world's best neighbor.

AUGUSTIN DALY'S DEATH.

Mr. Augustin Daly, who died Wednesday, in Paris, after a short illness, was the most successful American theatrical manager of the present generation. His best work was in the higher field of Shakespearean productions, and in this he displayed a wonderful industry, coupled with a discriminating dramatic taste. Mr. Daly gave to the American people the best plays by the best players, and always with the most elaborate and even luxurious scenic adornments. Not all his productions were successes, but his failures were very few, and his death will be a very serious loss to the American stage.

Mr. Daly's career as a manager extended over a period of thirty years, and in that time he put upon the stage not less than a dozen of Shakespeare's plays. When he began, Mrs. Scott-Siddons was in her prime. He brought forward Miss Rehan, and helped to make her one of the best American actresses of the present day. It London, as in his own country, he won distinction as a manager who offered the public the best, and asked only fair judgment of his work. He will be sincerely mourned on both sides of the water.—American.

TRAIN ROBBERS KILL SHERIFF.

Sheriff Joseph Hazen, of Converse county, Wyoming, and the posse in pursuit of the Union Pacific train robbers had another fight with the bandits late Monday.

The robbers were surrounded in a gulch, when they were forced to abandon their horses, which were captured. The robbers hid behind rocks and made a desperate fight. Sheriff Hazen was shot through the body, and afterward died.

Reinforcements for the posse were sent out from Caspar as fast as the men could be mounted and armed. The entire country is aroused, and the prospects are good not only for capturing the train robbers, but the entire band of outlaws which has infested the Hole-in-the-Wall country.

The posse first overtook the robbers about 30 miles from Caspar, and were given a severe set back in the fight which followed, the robbers shooting three of their horses and stampeding two others. Making their way to the head of Teapot creek, the robbers got among rocks and stood the posse off.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS.

Leading supporters of Representative Henderson say that if he is elected Speaker he will preserve the organization of the House as far as practicable, as it stood at the last session of Congress. He will have the appointment of a considerable number of chairmen of committees.

Criticisms by Mr. Proctor, of the Civil Service Commission, of President McKinley's order removing 4,000 offices from the classified service are said to have given offense to the administration and may lead to Mr. Proctor's retirement.

Naval officers object to double turrets and 13-inch guns for the new battleships Kentucky and Kearsarge. Admiral Sampson while chief of the Ordnance Bureau proposed the system to which objection is now made.

SITUATION AT MANILA.

General Otis cabled last Thursday from Manila, in response to the inquiry from the Secretary of War, that he "is still of the opinion that 30,000 troops will be necessary for the effective control of the Philippines." This will involve the sending of 5,000 or 6,000 men to Manila, in addition to the force now there, on the way and under orders to go. Secretary Alger said it had not been determined yet whether the additional troops asked for shall be taken from the regulars now in this country, Cuba and Porto Rico, or whether volunteers shall be mustered in. If the latter is decided upon, the call probably will be for 10,000 men.

General Smith has reported from Negros to General Otis that he has severely punished the insurgents who murdered Captain Tilley, of the Signal Corps. The eastern coast of the island is now under the American flag and the inhabitants ask protection against robber bands.

A Manila dispatch says that General Lawton has been given command of the defenses of the city and the troops forming the line around Manila. Gen. MacArthur commands the outlying garrisons and the troops holding the railroad and river.

TRAIN No. 32 from Atlanta, Ga., to Boston, Mass., over the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad, made a remarkable run from Washington to Chester, Pa., on Saturday afternoon. The train was 50 minutes late when it arrived at Washington, and from Washington to Perryville, Cecil county, it traveled at the rate of 60 miles an hour. From Perryville to Chester, it was running at the rate of 80 miles an hour, the star run being between North East, Cecil county, and Newark, Del., a distance of about 12 miles, which was covered in eight minutes. Engineer Waterman was in charge of the train.

"BAREFOOT KING'S" BODY.

News has been received from Honolulu that when the tomb of Lunailo, the "barefoot king of Hawaii," was recently opened, it was found that the body had been removed and that the metal casket contained only parts of the grave clothes.

It is surmised that the body was taken by natives to a "heathen grave" in the mountains, as a thunderstorm on the day of Lunailo's burial greatly affected his superstitious subjects.

Lunailo was elected king in 1873, but 13 months afterward he died of consumption. Although he had a large fortune he insisted on going about the streets barefoot at all times. By his will, he left his entire fortune to found a home for aged Hawaiians.

LOCKJAW FROM STRAW BERRIES.

Mrs. Benjamin McGrew of Gregory avenue, Passaic, N. J., has been suffering from an extraordinary ailment during the last week. The pain was thought at first to be due to neuralgia, but it increased to such an extent that Mrs. McGrew was unable to open her mouth. Dr. Wallace, a dentist, was called in, and after a careful examination he said the pain was caused by eating strawberries, which, he said, have a peculiar effect on the jaws of some persons. Dr. Wilson says there have been numerous similar cases.

LACE CURTAINS.

Housekeepers with thoughts of home decorations will be interested in this short talk on Lace Curtains. This is cleaning up time on Spring patterns by the manufacturer's agents. We being rather large operators in the disposing of quantities our notice was called to such a clean up, with the result that we put on sale this Tuesday, June 6th, until sold, over at a very considerable reduction on the former price. We will mark them with both the selling price at the regular cost, and the quick moving price at the "clearing up" cost—so that you can more fully see just how much you save on this purchase. As some of the lots are small, the sooner you avail yourself of this buying opportunity the better the choice will be.

G. W. WEAVER & SON.

A GRAND

Opportunity is now presented to the people of Gettysburg and the surrounding country, to visit our elegant new store, (Centre Square,) and examine the wonderful bargains being offered in Clothing, Hats, Shoes, and Gents Furnishing Goods.

We are after the trade of all who need anything in our line, and are offering "Sledge Hammer" arguments in the way of low prices, in order that you may deal with us. We will not misrepresent any of our goods, all we ask of any person is a right to a share of their custom. Expenses are sure in a large establishment like ours, but profits can only be counted on goods sold. A quick profit is the best, be it ever so small. We know this and always make the "Almighty dollar" act as our agent when purchasing stock from the manufacturer, and spot cash is the watchword that guided us through ten years of almost unparalleled business success. Our customers want are always in view when we buy stock, and we always mark goods with Rock Bottom Figures, thus making a bargain of every article in our stock. If you come from a distance by rail to examine our stock the money you save in purchases will be more than equivalent to a

FREE RIDE

We do not wish to brag, but certainly our great success is the very best evidence that Square dealing, and business-like methods, have been shown in all our transactions with the public.

Now, when we are asking for an increased share of patronage, it would be suicidal for us to misrepresent our stock. We have a large and most complete line of Clothing, Gents Furnishing Goods, Hats, Shoes, and we have also added a large and most complete line of Ladies Wraps, etc., and in spite of the advance in the prices in various grades of goods, we have decided to increase our popularity by offering everything at figures that will compel all to acknowledge us as the "Leaders in Low Prices." If you need anything in our line come to see us. We are always glad to show goods. The prices marked on them will do the rest. If you trade with us, there will be no use to go for bargains, as we guarantee every article in our establishment to be a genuine "Money Saver," and hope by uniform, courteous treatment to merit an ever increasing patronage. Very Respectfully,

MILK FEVER IN COWS.

The milk fever has been destructive among cattle in Washington county for some time. A valuable cow owned by Dr. T. W. Simmonds died and two more had the disease. Veterinary Surgeon Dr. C. P. Smith says the disease is induced by poison originating in the udder, when a change is taking place in the milk, and, impregnating the animal's system, caused a loss of sensation, blindness and death. Injections of iodine of potassium into the udders of the fever-inflicted cows, he says, destroyed the poisons and in every instance where this remedy was tried the cow was saved.

MISS RINEHART'S SCULPTURE WORK.

One of the most interesting events scheduled for commencement week at Western Maryland College, Westminster, will be the presentation of a bust of President T. H. Lewis, made and presented by Miss Grace Lee Rinehart. Miss Rinehart is a niece of the famous sculptor, W. H. Rinehart, and a graduate of the college in 1895. Since her graduation she has been a student at the Maryland Institute, and the bust of President Lewis is a part of her work for this year. The bust is to be presented to the Alumni Association of the college, and will occupy a prominent place in the banquet room of the new alumni hall.

A GREAT WALKER.

Mr. Edward Moore, brother of Messrs. Raoul and Frank Moore, of Brunswick, who is a level walker on the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, has completed twenty-five years, in his present position. For nine months in each year he walks from Harper's Ferry to Catoctin each day, going down on the top-path and back on the berm side, a distance of twenty miles. His home is one mile from Harper's ferry, making his total walk each day 22 miles, each month 600 miles, each year 5,940 miles and in the twenty-five years a total of 148,500 miles.

THE TAYLOR CASE.

Judge McSherry's Announcement in Court at Rockville.

At the opening of the June term of court in Rockville Monday Chief Justice McSherry said, in reference to the trial of Taylor and Brown for the murder of Louis and Dora Rosenstein, at Sidell:

"We have concluded that the ends of justice require that a special term of court be convened under the provisions of section 21, Article 4, of the Constitution of Maryland that the parties recently indicted by the grand jury of this county (Taylor and Brown) may be placed on trial. It has been intimated that these cases will be removed. Should the accused apply for a removal to some other court the cases will be sent to the Circuit Court for Frederick County for trial, and the jury of that county will be convened at once and the prisoners will be placed upon trial there without delay. There is not the slightest reason for a removal of these cases. The accused can and would have as fair and impartial a trial in Montgomery county as anywhere in or out of the State. If they are guilty, the ends of public justice require that they be speedily tried, and if convicted speedily punished. If they are innocent they are no less entitled to an early trial and vindication. Tactics for delay, if resorted to, will not be tolerated; they serve no useful purpose, and often tend to bring reproach upon the administration of the law. It may as well be understood now that a removal of these cases will secure no delay in their trial."

Senator W. V. Bonie and G. M. Anderson, attorneys for John Brown, stated to the Court that they were perfectly satisfied with their chances of receiving a fair and impartial trial in that court, and expressed themselves as being willing to submit the case to the court and do away with the jury.

FAIRFIELD ITEMS.

FAIRFIELD, June 6.—P. H. Riley, of Liberty township, came very nearly being burned out on last Thursday night. His summer house, wash house, work shop, wood house, all together, were burned to the ground, with about ten cords of wood. These buildings were between the house and the barn. Fortunately there was no wind, or all the buildings would have burned down. The house caught but was extinguished with water by hard work. Mr. Riley was very lucky in saving the house and barn.

MYSTERY ABOUT A DEATH.

The sudden and mysterious death Monday morning of the wife of Jacob H. Parr, living in Hoke's alley, in Hanover, Pa., has caused much excitement. Parr says the family retired at 8 o'clock Sunday night, and that he awoke at four o'clock Monday morning to find his wife dying. She was unable to speak and died in a few minutes. A near neighbor was awakened very early in the morning by a noise in Parr's bedroom, as if one person was striking another, and then heard Parr call to his wife and children. Mrs. Parr's body had ugly bruises on the back, shoulder and right arm that look as if they were sustained shortly before death. When questioned Tuesday Parr could not be induced to make any statement different from that of Monday, except to add that he rushed out of the house to chase some frightened dogs away, and upon his return found his wife dying. The family is extremely poor. They went to Hanover from Silver Run, Md., about six weeks ago, since when, it is said, Mrs. Parr usually supported the family. Despite the circumstances surrounding the death, no official investigation has yet been made.—Baltimore American.

VOLUNTEER FIREMEN.

From 10,000 to 12,000 people were in Westminster for the opening of the seventh annual convention of the Maryland State Firemen's Association on Wednesday. From midnight until noon Wednesday trainloads of people arrived. By every one it is conceded to have been the greatest day in the history of Westminster, and the most successful meeting ever held by the State Firemen's Association.

The five departments of Waynesboro, Chambersburg and McSherrystown, Pa., arrived early Wednesday morning, the Western Maryland departments having arrived late Tuesday night. Among the firemen from Hagerstown, Cambridge and Annapolis were many prominent citizens.

The chief attraction of the day was the parade of the firemen, with their glittering apparatus and accompanying music. Twenty-six companies and forty organizations were in line, making a total of 1,200 to 1,500 men, extending nearly a mile in length. The parade formed on Liberty street, in charge of Chief Marshal Joseph D. Brooks and Assistant Marshal Robert Grist. Following the marshal and staff were the Westminster band and fire department, carriages in which were the State officers of the association, ex-officers, including ex-President W. Irving Mace, of Cambridge, secretary of the Pennsylvania Firemen's Association, E. J. Sylvan, State Fire Marshal, and Mayor Fred D. Miller, of Westminster, and City Council. Cavalry Troop A, Maryland National Guard, made a fine showing and was cheered along the entire route, as was also the Cavalry Troop from New Windsor district, Carroll county, of 50 men, under Sheriff Ephraim B. Haines.

During the parade the heat was intolerable, the thermometer registering between 95 and 98 degrees in the shade. Many firemen succumbed to the heat, and in some instances whole companies were compelled to drop out of line before the parade was finished.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon an exhibition of fire fighting and life saving was given by No. 13 Engine Company, under Captain Todd, and No. 6 Truck Company, under Captain O'Keefe, of the Baltimore Fire Department. The exhibition was witnessed by hundreds of people.

The Firemen's Convention began in the Westminster High School Building Wednesday evening. An important question was ruled upon by the convention. A colored fire company of Montgomery county applied for membership in the association. The application had been made in due form, but the committee on credentials unanimously declined to accept it. Four colored delegates were present, but were not recognized as such, after which they quietly departed.

Addresses of welcome on behalf of Westminster were delivered by Mayor Fred D. Miller and Senator Joshua W. Hering on behalf of the Westminster Fire Department. Responses were made by President John J. Stump, of Cumberland, and ex-President W. Irving Mace. Chief W. C. McAfee, of Baltimore, also spoke.

Baltimore was selected as the place for holding the eighth annual meeting.

THE WOMAN'S FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH. Twenty-five years in the life of societies, as well as in communities, bring about great changes, and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has been no exception to the rule. During the past twenty five years twenty-two members have passed to their reward.

The contributions have always been voluntary, and always came up to the pledges of the society, and sometimes beyond it.

On May 7, 1875 the society decided to change the plan of its original work, and take a scholarship in Mrs. Wilder's School at Kolapur, India, obligating themselves to raise not less than $30 annually, and such was the object of the society until the last year, when it was decided to send all money to the general fund for distribution.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of this place was organized ten years before the Baltimore Presbyterian Society, and four years after the original society of Philadelphia in 1870.

The total amount of money raised in the twenty-five years for Foreign Missionary work alone was $1,002.95.

CUMBERLAND ROBBERIES.

Early Sunday morning robbers entered seven houses and secured four watches, some jewelry and a sum of money. The crime is charged to three colored men, one of whom the authorities believe to be Lewis Curtley, who was caught in Cumberland some weeks ago with a satchel filled with silverware, watches and jewelry. Curtley was kept in jail on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, and in the meantime the police tried to ascertain where he had secured the valuables, which were dug up on the line of the canal where he had ordered them buried, but he could be connected with the robbery. A few days ago he was released and the valuables turned over to him. On Saturday he was seen with another colored man who had been arrested with Curtley as a suspicious character. Nothing could be discovered upon which he could be held and the fellow was released. He disappeared to return when Curtley was discharged from jail. Curtley expressed the satchel of valuables turned over to him to Bradlock, Pa.

The present robbers are known to have been colored men and two were seen early Sunday morning to board an outgoing freight train in the Narrows. The police have telegraphed the authorities at Bradlock, Pa., to arrest Curtley. The city is much wrought up over the robberies. The thieves were very bold and entered bedrooms with drawn revolvers. A. E. Gilliam lost two watches, pocketbooks and papers; George W. Cox, pocketbook containing about $5. James B. Smith small sum of about $5; Joseph Shaffer $40 gold watch; Charles Pitman, watch and ring; Shaffer struck at the thief and nearly broke his hand against the door jam.

Ex-Constable Philip Clark reports that his family was chloroformed and a number of articles stolen from his home. When arrested two bottles which had contained chloroform had been found in Curtley's possession.

TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

Of The Organization of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.—Contributed Over $1,000 For Mission Work.

The ladies of the Auxiliary Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church, of this place, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of that society on Wednesday afternoon of last week. The services were held in the Presbyterian church.

The work accomplished by the society during the first quarter of a century of its existence, should be highly gratifying not only to those who are directly connected with the society, but also to the entire membership of that church. The grand work accomplished by this small band of ladies for the cause of missions, is a pleasing example of what can be done by a few persons who are thoroughly in accord with the objects to be attained, and who work diligently for the accomplishment of the desired end. This is what the ladies of the Auxiliary Woman's Foreign Missionary Society did, and the success of the work speaks for itself.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Emmitsburg, auxiliary to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Presbyterian church, was organized on the evening of May 6, 1874. The officers of the society chosen that evening were: Mrs. Anna E. Simonton, president; Mrs. Rosa J. Annan treasurer; Mrs. Mary Gamble, secretary.

A constitution was drafted, which declared the objects of the society to be to aid the general society in sending money to foreign fields, to sustain female missionaries, Bible readers and teachers who should labor among the heathen women and children.

Mrs. Simonton, the first president of the society, occupied that position until two years ago, when she removed to another field of work. Mrs. Hattie Annan succeeded her as president. The society has had only one treasurer in twenty-five years, who has proved faithful, efficient and able to keep things straight. There has been two secretaries. Mrs. Mary Gamble, after serving four years, was called to a higher work "beyond the river." On Nov. 12, 1878 Mrs. Anna E. Horner was elected secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mrs. Gamble, and has remained in office ever since.

On May 7, 1875 the society decided to change the plan of its original work, and take a scholarship in Mrs. Wilder's School at Kolapur, India, obligating themselves to raise not less than $30 annually, and such was the object of the society until the last year, when it was decided to send all money to the general fund for distribution.

The contributions have always been voluntary, and always came up to the pledges of the society, and sometimes beyond it.

Twenty-five years in the life of societies, as well as in communities, bring about great changes, and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has been no exception to the rule. During the past twenty five years twenty-two members have passed to their reward.

PLANTING NUT TREES

Wm. Saunders of the United States Department of Agriculture Gives Some Good Advice.

There is no doubt that by a careful selection of hardy sorts, saving and sowing the nuts from the most northerly trees, little by little the hardiness would increase, carrying the northern limit further and further along. This has occurred in the case of the evergreen magnolia and the sweet gum of the South, also of other Southern trees. It has been found that when a tree is doubtfully hardy the Northern planter should get his seedlings as near home as possible. The peach from the far South if raised from trees native to the locality for years, will not do as well in the far North as those from nearer home. And this holds good with the English walnut. This is proved in this way: There are in Germantown, Philadelphia, trees of the English walnut, perhaps fifty feet high, which were planted by those who first settled the town. These trees besides that they are entirely hardy produce nuts which give a race of hardy seedlings, hardy from the start, which is not the case with imported seed. The nuts imported from abroad produce seedlings which are liable to have their terminal buds killed in winter. This will occur for two, three or four years, making the trees have a crooked main stem. After these first years have passed, the trees are not injured. This proves that in time trees adapt themselves to conditions surrounding them, as these old Germantown trees were probably brought direct from Germany or raised from nuts brought from there. The farmer of to-day thinks he cannot wait for such a slow tree as the walnut. He wants something like the apple and the pear, which will give him fruit in quicker time. Those old-going German settlers could wait longer than their children can. As you have seen in Pennsylvania, there are but few of the trees planted to-day. There is many an acre of land bringing no revenue to-day which could be planted with profit with these trees. When they commence to bear which is in the case of about ten years old, they rarely miss a crop, and keep on thriving and bearing for 100 years or more. The planting distance for these trees should be about fifty feet, utilizing the space between them with corn or peach trees until the walnuts require the space. But besides the orchard culture, there is room for single trees about the farm, which may as well be of something profitable as the English walnut certainly was by Wm. Saunders, United States Department of Agriculture.

How to Get Rid of 'Jan'ain in Lawns.

A correspondent desires to know the best method of exterminating plantain from her lawn of about an acre. This troublesome weed is liable to appear in great numbers on new lawns and can only be kept from entering by frequent mowing and the stimulation of the grass by the use of fertilizers—preferably those prepared for commerce. If barley manure is used, many weeds seeds will be introduced among the grass roots. It should be used, therefore, only in the liquid form. On small lawns the plantain may be removed with a sharp 'spud,' by which it is easily cut off below the surface of the ground. During the season in which there are frequent showers, grass will not be injured by cutting every two weeks, and this will suffice to kill out most weeds in the course of a couple of months.

The same lady inquires about the formation of bed in canals. And that the latter requiring is rich, deep soil and liberal watering during dry weather. The garden or lawn soil should be dug out to a depth of 14 inches and replaced with rich compost. In this plant the roots about two feet apart, placing the tall, or standard, varieties, which grow to a height of 6 to 8 feet. In the center, and the dwarf sorts toward the edge of the bed. The Cozy cannaes are extremely varied and fine and seldom attain a height of more than three feet. It is scarcely worth while to attempt to grow cannaes from seed, as the roots can be obtained at a very low price from $1 to $1.50 per dozen, except the latest varieties and with good care they multiply with exceeding rapidity, so that a few plants one year will produce more than one would care to set out the succeeding spring.

Beauty in Farm Homes. There is actual value in the beauty of farm homes as well as in the beauty of other property. In the beauty of the farm is a source of pleasure and there is value in the beauty of a flower, shrub or tree. Handsome fruits always sell for the most money when the quality is equal and in some cases where the quality is inferior.

A beautiful farm home not only adds to the value of its own farm but to the value of all the farms in the immediate neighborhood. Farm buildings kept in good repair and neatly painted add much to the beauty and actual value of the farm. A few evergreen and ornamental trees and shrubs add not only to the beauty of the place, but also to the comfort of the family. Walks made to the front and back doors of the house add to the convenience and good looks of the premises. The yard around the house should not be used as a pasture. For stock nor as a runway for pigs and calves. A small orchard of large and small fruits will add greatly to the beauty and comfort of the home. The expense in adding these things to the home need not be great and they will increase the actual value of the farm much more than their cost, besides happiness of the family.—Advocate and News.

The extra pound in a cow is the one not necessary and the one that does not increase the yield, as every extra pound in a dairy cow costs something to keep and returns nothing, and when every item in the cost of production is to be considered the cost of maintenance must be looked after.

COLLEGE GRADUATES.

Some Statistics Concerning the Life They Take Up.

One hundred years ago more graduates adopted the ministry of the Gospel as a career than any other calling. The proportion was a little more than one-third of the total number of graduates. The law followed next in order, but taking a considerably smaller number of men. Gradually the law gained on the church, until it took first place, about 33 1-3 per cent. of the graduates becoming lawyers.

The standing of these two professions remained about the same until within the last ten or fifteen years, when the law slightly increased its lead. From ten years ago up to the present time, however, commerce has been forced to the front, and at the present time it appears that more graduates engage in commercial pursuits than in either the law or the ministry. One-third of the men who now come from college go into business, a considerably smaller number go into law, and a very much smaller number become preachers. The conditions have been reversed in 100 years. Then the law and the church were regarded as being pretty nearly the only learned professions. Now the formerly despised "trade" is taking more highly educated men than either the law or the church.

The marvelous growth and expansion of commercial enterprises during the hundred years is responsible for the changed conditions. It requires men of brains and education to plan, organize and erect the monster enterprises which are to be seen on every hand at the present time. Commerce has not only become "respectable," but it offers inducements to young men such as are not duplicated by the learned professions. As a matter of fact, should not commerce, since its higher branches now require the services of so many highly educated men, be included among the learned professions? The commercial development is destined to undergo still greater expansion and the probabilities are that the demand for college men in its service will go on growing for many years to come.

He Kept the Seat. A man who had not been to church for a very long time finally harkened to the persuasions of his wife, and decided to go. He got the family all together and they started early. Arriving at the church there were very few people in it, and no pew-keepers at hand, so the man led his family well up the aisle and took possession of a nice pew.

Just as the service was about to begin a pompous-looking old man came in, walked up to the door of the pew and stood there, exhibiting evident surprise that it was occupied. The occupants moved over and offered him room to sit down, but he declined to be seated. Finally the old man produced a card and wrote upon it with a pencil:

"I pay for this pew." He gave the card to the strange occupant, who, had he been like most people would have at once got up and left. But the intruder adjusted his glasses and with a smile read the card. Then he calmly wrote beneath it:

"How much do you pay a year?" To this inquiry the pompous old gentleman, still standing, wrote abruptly:

"Ten pounds." The stranger smiled as though he were pleased, looked around to compare the pew with others, admired its nice cushions and furnishings and wrote back:

"I don't blame you. It is well worth it." The pompous old gentleman at that stage collapsed into his seat.

Character in Smoking. If a man smokes a cigar only enough to keep it lighted, and relishes taking it from his mouth to cast a look at the curl of smoke in the air, set him down as an easy-going man. Beware of the man who never releases the grip on his cigar and is indifferent whether it burns or not; he is cool, calculating and exacting.

The man that smokes a bit, rests a head and fumbles the cigar more or less is easily affected by circumstances. If the cigar goes out frequently, the smoker has a whole-souled disposition, it is a "hall fellow, well met," with a lively brain, a glib tongue and generally a fine fund of anecdotes.

A nervous man who fumbles his cigar a great deal is a sort of popinjay among men. Holding the cigar constantly between the teeth, chewing it occasionally and not caring if it is lighted at all are the characteristics of men who have the tenacity of bulldogs. The top stands his cigar on end, and an experienced smoker points it straight ahead, or almost at right angles with his course.

Smoking Under Fire. A Saco, Me., smoker named Frank Dargin while filling his pipe lately inadvertently put in a revolver cartridge which he kept in a pocket with his tobacco, and started from home with his dinner pail unconscious of the extra danger which lurked in the pipe bowl. It didn't result so disastrously as might have been feared, however. When about half way to his place of work there was an explosion, the pipe disappeared and the bullet whizzed past the man's ear, nipping off an edge as it passed.

Papa's Humor. "Why were you sitting in the dark when I came in?" inquired her father. "The electric light went out," replied Mabel. "George said he thought it was something about the matter with the apparatus." "Well, it did seem a little out of place," said the father thoughtfully. "What seemed out of place, papa?" "The arm-at-your-waist." And the pleased old man went down to tell his new pup at the club.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ABOUT CHOCOLATE.

AN EXPERT TELLS HOW TO MAKE AND DRINK THE BEVERAGE.

A Great Variety of Ways in Which the Best Results Can be Obtained—Valuable as a Dietary Especially For Children and Invalids.

These form delicious and nutritious beverages, which, while lacking the sugar and one-half cupful of hot water, would find them impossible, dyspeptic would find them impossible, so they may be counted valuable in the ordinary dietary, especially for children, or, indeed, for all who need to be generously nourished. Both cocoa and chocolate are capable of many varieties.

Plain Chocolate.—Scrape two ounces (or squares) of good chocolate in a saucepan, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one-half cupful of hot water. Stir until the chocolate is entirely dissolved and looks glossy, then add one quart of hot milk. Bring fully to the boiling point, beat for three or four minutes with a whisk egg beater and serve immediately. Two tablespoonfuls of unsweetened or sweetened, whipped cream makes a pleasant addition. Many persons like a very rich chocolate—a matter regulated by the amount in proportion to the milk used.

First Variation.—Make as above, adding a small stick of cinnamon to the milk when first put on the heat. Second Variation.—Add one tablespoonful of sherry just before serving. Third Variation.—Add one strong cupful of coffee just before serving.

Fourth Variation.—Beat three egg yolks and add them to the milk before it is put on to heat, otherwise make as above. When the chocolate has boiled pour it over the beaten whites of the eggs, blend with a whisk beater, return to the stove to boil up once (the beating continuing), then serve.

Plain Cocoa.—Use four teaspoonfuls of any fine prepared cocoa (that is, of some reliable make), four teaspoonfuls of sugar and one-half cupful of boiling water. Proceed exactly as in making plain chocolate, consults the Woman's Home Companion.

Cocoa may be used instead of chocolate in any of the variations of the latter given above.

Shells.—These are the husks of the cocoa bean, and make a very delicate drink. Boil gently one cupful of shells in three pints of water for four hours; strain, and serve with cream and sugar.

Broma.—Broma may be made as plain cocoa.

The yoke is bordered with a shirring of mull and the lace epaulettes are finished with a twist of mull 2 1/2 in place with small apple green.

A VERY PRETTY EFFECT.

A Bicycle Instructor. A wheelwoman tells of something she discovered at a summer residence last year, which offers an excellent suggestion for city riders. It was an informal and amateur school for cyclists, in which they were taught a few fundamental facts about the construction of a bicycle and the care it requires. The school grew up from the habit of a few riders to cluster about the well-informed, wife of a dealer and "talk wheel" with her. There are only a few women acquainted with the mechanical character of a bicycle and its requirements, but the great majority are ignorant of such subjects. There are not many essential things to be learned about the materials used, why it is used, why certain parts are made one way and not another, what their duties are and what not to do as well as what to get the greatest amount of satisfaction out of a wheel. While the women who know these things are comparatively few in the great mass of riders, there are enough of them probably for one to be discovered in every neighborhood and every social set, and for truly enthusiastic cyclists no nearer idea could be suggested than to select such a person as a mentor and have sociable gatherings on rainy days at which to talk wheel and exchange experiences. Such informal sessions of instruction at the country place referred to were simply preliminary to afternoon teas, but all who attended are said to have profited handsomely.

An Account of Corporal Hardtack's Large Order and How He Awakened.

CHAPTER I. Corporal Hardtack entered Delmonico's the moment he arrived in New York City. He had his month's pay, which amounted to several thousand dollars and 15 cents.

Carefully he looked over the gold-plated menu. "Bring me turtle soup," he said to the garcon. "Baked salmon trout." "And a bottle of Sauterne." "Oul, monsieur." "And when that is out of the way, bring me Little Neck clams on the half shell, chicken salad and sweet breads."

"Oul, monsieur," murmured the perspiring waiter. "Then bring me venison steak." "Oul." "Fried potatoes, baked potatoes, hashed potatoes and baked potatoes." The waiter nodded. "Rare roast beef, tongue, chops, beefsteak, orange ice, turkey, with cranberry sauce, quail."

The waiter fell down in a faint, and another took his place. "Oul, on toast," went on Corporal Hardtack, "ortolans, terrapin stew, ham and eggs." "Oul, monsieur," trembled the new garcon, panting.

"A bottle of champagne, absinthe frappe, a gin cocktail, and apple punch, mince and praline pies, Rochefort cheese, Fromage de Brie, Dutch cheese, cream cheese." "Just then a terrible thing happened." CHAPTER II. Corporal Hardtack woke up.

The Exchange He Made. "Miss Williston," he pleaded, "I am going away. I shall travel thousands of miles before I return. May I ask you to write your paragraph before I go?" Jeannette Williston looked at space and sighed gently.

"I don't know," she replied, "why you should ask me for my picture." "Our friendship," he said, "surely that is something."

"Yes," she answered, "that is something. But it doesn't seem to me that you have the right to carry my portrait near your heart—y'."

"Jeannette!" he cried, "will you be mine?" "Ah, Percy," she said, after he had arranged that they should be married a week from the following Thursday, "how did you dare to ask me? What reason had you for not fearing that I would bid you go away and never show yourself in my presence?"

"I don't know," he humbly replied; "perhaps it was intuition."—Chicago News.

No Intention for Him. "What you really wanted?" "Intarch's Lives" dad. "Say it again!" "Intarch's Lives." "You put dat book right downson. A Curious Collection.

One of the most remarkable collections of souvenirs ever made is a collection of male opera hats by one of the actresses of a London company.

She owns no fewer than 216 of these articles. For it was her whim to make every young man who came to her to give her his opera hat as a souvenir. She not only keeps them in their pristine condition, but converts them into all sorts of other things, such as photograph frames, work baskets, and some are even used for the purpose of holding flower pots.

The Chinese are said to remove the pulp from oranges and substitute various jellies. The closest examination fails to reveal any opening or incision in the skin of the fruit.
