Gents Furnishing Goods. We are after the trade of all who need anything in our line, and are offering "Sledge Hammer" arguments in the way of low prices, in order that you mudel with us. We will not misrepresent any of our goods, all we ask of any person is a right to a share of their custom. Expenses are sure in a large establishment like ours, but profits can only be counted on goods sold. A quick profit is the best, be it ever so small. We know this and always make the "Almighty dollar" act as our agent when purchasing stock from the manufacturer, and spot cash is the watchword that guided us through ten years of almost unparalled business success. Our enstomers wants are always in view when we buy stock, and we always mark goods with Rock Bottom Figures, thus making a bargain of every article in our stock. A MINER'S EXPERIENCE.

Railroad men of the Pittsburg Division, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Tuesday morning took to Comberland an interesting story of the escape from death of Urias Roebuck, aged 21 years, employed by the Continental Coal Company, of Baltimore, at their mines in miles above Cumberland. The coal is sent down to the railroad cars through a chute nearly 400 feet long, lined with steel. So steep is the incline that gates are provided at short intervals to check the coal's rapid descent. Monday the chute became clogged, and Roebuck volunteered to open it. He entered at an upper gate and began kicking loose some lumps of coal, and before he knew extended above his head he managed head. The slide was made at a terrific rate, and his fellowworkmen expected at the bottom and he asked that it be examined for injuries. It was unhurt, but he sustained a bruised arm, but not Mr. Eyler served four years in the sufficiently bad to incapacitate him for impure or impoverished blood.

MOTHS IN HIVES Dall Sign to Find Wax Cuttings in

· the Summer or Fall. It is a bad sign to find wax cuttings about the entrance in summer or fall, but in the spring it is no indication of worms. As soon as this trouble is found out prompt action must be taken Worms do their work very quickly, especially in weak colonies. Worms are the worst enemies beekeepers have to contend with, especially if black bees are kept. Italians seem to have the power to overcome them to a certain extent, but no kind is absolutely worm proof, that I know of. Had you pushed your investigation far enough, and applied the proper means, you could have saved the bees and comb but not the colony. You would have had to unite them with some strong colony, and of course that would have made one less, which is much better than to lose

After worms once get a hold in a colony it is of no use whatever to try to doctor it, within itself. In the first once break up their home, or give them a new queen and more bees. When I find a colony in my apiary that is infested with worms, I invariably find a weak colony, and one that is of no account whatever, within itself. I always unite them with some strong colony, not fearing in the least about the worms getting the better of the strong colony, unless they are very badly infested, in which case I unite the bees and subject the combs to the fumes of burning sulphur, or immerse them in water for a few days.

If I desire increase rather than honey, and the colony is not badly infestd. I first kill all the worms I can find, then give them a new queen and some bees, and watch them closely, and even then it is risky, especially if I have to buy the queen; and the probabilities are that it will not be a success after all my expense and care. A poor queen all my expense and care. A poor queen is the foundation of worms among bees. So to be successful in keeping them out of your bees, you must begin with the queens, by keeping the poor and infertile ones weeded out. Then your colonies will be strong and there will be no danger whatever so far as will be no danger whatever so far as worms or anything else is concerned.

If you see signs of worms in your bees this summer the best and cheapest plan will be to unite them, by first killing the queen (if there is one) in the infested colony, and giving the bees or bees and comb both (if the comb is not badly infested) to some strong colony. If the colony is a good one and the queen all right, and you find a few worms in places in the hives where the bees can't reach them, kill what you can and let them alone, and they will be all right. I pay no attention what-ever to worms under the quilt or in the creveies where the bees can't get at them, if the colony is a strong one. But if it is weak and the worms have borax water sprinkled on the shelves. gained a foothold in one or two combs, then look out.—E. S. Mead.

In training young trees, all crotches should be avoided. If bad crotches should be found to exist in trees 10 or more years old, they should be braced by means of an iron bolt. Much damage may be avoided if bolts are used in season.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Overfeeding.

Don't overfeed. Calves are very greedy at feeding time and there is often a great temptation to give more milk than the calves can properly handle, thus causing them to scour. Over-feeding is undoubtedly the main reason why so many farmers are unable to raise good thrifty calves on skimmilk. At the college we find that alves from three to four months old will not stand more than 18 to 20 pounds daily per head; from seven to eight weeks old, 14 to 16 pounds, and from three to five weeks, 10 to 12 (One quart equals two pounds.)

Kaffir corn meal is proving an excellent food for young calves at the Agri-cultural College. It is constipating and aids materially in keping calves from scouring. They commence to eat the meal when ten days to two weeks

Under the Summer Moon.

She was a summer girl, dainty in dress, pink cheeked and golden haired, and there was a business line running about the corners of her cherry lips that any man might have seen with half an eye if he had only looked for it.

The man talking to her that night in the mellow moonlight hadn't so much as half an eye for business, and she knew it. But he was marvelously soft of voice and winning of manner he had seen many moons and talked beneath their magic light. "Do you know," he said to her, "that Hamilton's letters attacking Burr were the cause of the duel in which Hamilton lost his life.

Jefferson's letter to his old neighbor, Mazzel, in 1796, in which, by pretty plain implication, he traduced Washington and other men whom the American people honored, kept Jefferson denying and explaining for many years, his historic letter to Van Buren on this subject having been written shortly before his death and twenty-eight years after the Mazzel epistic was pen-ned. The reservation and publication of Jefferson's "Anas," or dairy, which ts really a sort of letter to posterity, with its spiteful assaults on the memory of Hamilton and other eminent men, showed an amazing lack of discernment on Jefferson's part, and has called out from all his creditors and biagraphers excuses which accuse most picturesque episodes.

An interesting and usually level headed personage, Biddle, had what Juvenal called an "incurable itch for writing," and this led him and his institution to their doom, defeated Clay and the national Republican party in 1832, and, as one of the consequences of the bank's overthrow, brought on the panic of 1837. The "Rhea letter" precipitated the contest of 1830 between Jackson and Calhoun out of the line of succession to Jackson's poli-tical heir, dwarfted Calhoun from a national to a local figure, and turned him to the partisan metaphysics out of which were evolved nullification and that morbid and wire drawn political philosophy in defense of slavery that brought on the war which destroyed
