All the native teachers and some of the pupils were to take part in the ceremonies, and an elaborate programme was prepared. Aguinaldo simply forbade any Filipino to have anything to do with the raising of the American flag, and all obeyed him. Nevertheless the flag was raised on the day and at the time appointed. The schools have closed now for the long summer vacation, and there will be no effort to select a new superintendent until it is certain that Father McKinnon is not coming back. Naturally he desires to go home with his regiment and be mustered out with the boys with whom he started from San Francisco last summer. But he has become so much interested in his work out here and in the people with whom that work has thrown him in contact that he is more than willing to come back. and go on with the work. The Philippine Language.

William R. Walters, who is serving in the Philippines, tells this story: Some very amusing affairs take piace between our soldiers and the Chinese merchants, owing to the inability of the Americans to "sabee" the Oriental language. During that part of the fighting which is known in our ranks as "the loot of Tondon," I saw a corporal of the Twenty-third regulars rake a small safe out of some ruins after a fire. Finding it to be empty, he started away with it under his arm. Before he had gone very far he met a Chinese merchant, to whom he undertook to sell the purloined safe.

"Lookee here, John, how muchee you give for safee? Bellee nicee. Mucho wano safee?" says the corporal with much gesticulation and contortion "I really don't need a safe," quietly replied the benighted Chinaman,

AN EDITOR'S LITERARY CHASE. How the Author of "In His Steps" Was Finally Run Down.

Three months ago the editor of The Ladies' Home Journal concluded that his readers would doubtless be glad to read a fresh article by the author of "In His Steps," and he wrote to the Rev. Charles M. Sheldon soliciting a contribution. But editors innumera ble had sought the now famous Tomost wonderful children in the world peka minister, and to Mr. Bok's rebut having once heard a remark to quest he sent the same reply as to the other editors. But the Philadelphia other editors. But the Philadelphia greatest bore in existence, because editor wrote again, a stronger and forever singing the praises of her chil more urgent letter. Again the clergyman declined. He had written nothing since "In His Steps," and did not wish to write anything. Meanwhile Mr. Bok had gone to Europe, and M: Sheldon's second refusal was cabled to him. Back came the response to Philadelphia: "Spare no effort nor time to secure Mr. Sheldon, but get him." The editor's private secretary then tried his hand on the Kansas minister, but again he refused. Bok returned from abroad, and calling one of his editors directed him to see Mr. Sheldon, at Topeka if he there, or wherever he might be. Uson reaching St. Louis the editor located Mr. Sheldon at Buffalo, and later learned that he had gone to Detroit. Starting at once for that place the editor learned at Chicago the minister had just left Detroit to rejoin his family at a summer resort in Upper Michigan. By more telegraphing, Mr. Sheldon's family was finally located at Old Mission, a most inacessible summer resort on Travers Bay, and by the first northbound steamer the editor hurried on his journey. A voyage of a day and a night brought him to the place where he had hoped to intercept the minister, but failing to do so he embarked in a small boat for a day's sail toward his destination. At the nearest landing he pressed a farmer's team into service and drove through an almost blinding sandstorm along the bay shore—seemingly half-way across the peninsular-reaching Old Mission a few minutes before the arrival of the minister. This was too much for Mr. Sheldon. The fight was won, and in the November issue of The Ladies' Home Journal the article appears. It occupies barely a page, and the venture cost the magazine several hundreds of dollars for traveling expenses alone. But the article contains gleefully, and sped home to my neg. EFFECTS OF STARVATION. It Stimulates the Mind, but With Bad Re-

Lassignardie has just made known the results of his researches on the subject of how hunger affects the working of the mind. He wanted to discover what the mental state is under different degrees of starvation. There are different causes of hanger-valuntary abstinince, resorted to by certain factors such as Succi; forced starvation in certain causes of sickness, like acute fevers, bysteria and acute brain disorders; langer, the result of poverty, shipwreck, advance in prices or such accidents as the nainers stand in danger of; the rare causes of suicide by starvation, and fasting for religious reasons. A colleague of the author, Dr. Maire, was among the shipwrecked of the French steamer Ville de St. Nazaire, and he gives an account of his own hunger deliriums and he ravings of those about him. When the period of fasting is not of a long duration, particularly when it is voluntary and entered into gradually, the result is increased mental activity, and an especially lively imagination. When the period is increased there is a change in the character and deportment of the person, which expresses itself in the excitability of his temperament, great selfishness and even cruelty. At the same time there appear strong mental disturbances, a partial loss of memory, will power, self control and an inclination to sudden, uncontrollable impulses that arise instinctivey. In scrious cases the mental lisordors are most intense in the night, taking the form of insomnia, nightmare, bad dreams, hallucinations and dangerous impulses. Lassignardie draws a parallel between mental states produced by by honger and those produced by

GOEBEL THE VICTIM OF AN ASSASSIN. William Goebel, the Democrat contestant for Governor of Kentucky, was shot down, while walking in the Capitol grounds, on his way to the Senate Chamber, at Frankfort, Ky., at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. Goebel's condition as serious, and little hope is entertained for his recovery.

The legislative committees to which Goebel's contest for the Governorship was referred met Tuesday night and decided in favor of seating him. It is expected that the legislature will make this action final if Goebel survives.

Five shots were fired, but only the first one struck the target. The .concealed marksman quit firing and men with pistols in their hands rushed out of the State House door and down the steps, asking "who is it?" They crowded around the victim, all eager to help him and all horrified when they learned that Goebel himself had been shot.

One arrest was made. The arrested man is not considered the assassin. He had three big Colt's revolvers and 60 cartridges. His pistols were fully loaded.

Evils of Profanity.

Clergymen and ethical writers have had a great deal to say about the evils of profanity. The field against this petty vice has now been taken by another class of men altogether, one also which has a great deal more influence with most young men than clergymen usually have—physical trainers, coaches and team captains. This information will undoubtedly startle many young aspirants for athletic honors, who consider a sweater, a pair of lurching shoulders, a mincing gait, a cigar and a loud and profane manner very "manly," and the proper outward characteristics of an athlete. But it is a fact, nevertheless that the leading trainers and lovers of athletics, both here and in England. have started a crusade against profanity, the former considering it a great drawback and hindrance to getting in condition quickly and easily or to putting on weight, and the latter fearing an unenviable reputation and the setting of a bad example.

FARM ICE HOUSES.

A Prize Article On Building and Storing.

Thousands of farmer's during the sultry summer days-when their milk is too warm to be palatable, their butter always comes upon the table looking like a platter of yellow oil and fresh meats become stale in a single day—resolve that by another season they will be abundantly supplied with ice and a good refrigerator. But their fall work pushes them and before they are aware of it, the ice crop is "ripe," and no suitable building has been pre-pare for its reception. As a result, abandon the idea altogether, white others put up a limited amount in a rail pen with straw, or stack up a small amount in one corner of the barn. The result of this hasty preparation is very unsatisfactory. As soon as the warm days come it begins to melt badly and before the sultry "dog days" arrive the ice is all consumed or melted away. Josh Billings once said that the time to set a hen is when she is ready. Exactly so with the ice harvest. The proper time to put up ice is when it is ready; and wise is the farmer who has his house ready to receive it when it is ready to harvest. The ice cannot be put up in the pleasant autumn days, but the building can be erected and the sawdust drawn and piled ready for use. With this preparation and expense met very few will neglect the

The building .- An expensive building is needless, and an extravagant waste of means. Many "fall down" when they build too small. No iceouse should be less than 12x12, and 16x16 with 10-foot studding is better. The latter size is ample for two families where they live sufficiently close and need it only for domestic use. Far less ice will supply two families from a 16x16 house, than from a two 10x12 houses. The larger the body of ice the less, proportionately, is the waste from melang.

The pond.—When a spring or brook is available, it is better and cheaper to have your own ice pond. A few day's work with team and scoop will make an excavation and dam sufficient for the purpose. Then you can build your ice house on the banks, where it can be very rapidly filled. And when your own house is filled you can often sell the second and third cutting to neighbors for a sufficient sum to make a good return for your investment in the pond. Ice from a pond prepared for the purpose, where the flow of water can be cut off when the freezing process is going on, is much more uniform in thickness than when taken from streams or lakes fed by springs.

Harvesting and housing.—Cut the ice in squares about eighteen inches each way, using great care to have all the blocks cut true. Close attention to this feature will save much time in packing and be a safe guard against the admission of air and melting. Put a layer all over the bottom, leaving a space about 15 inches all around the wall to be filled with well-cured and rotted sawdust, tamped in closely. Before the second layer of ice is placed, fill in all the interstices with crushed ice, and if the day is very cold, slush with ice water. Follow this up until the house is filled, and you will have practically one vast cake of ice, with no space for air to start the melting. There is just one advantage in a double wall filled with sawdust; you do not have to remove all Is not, in my opinion, sufficient to warrant the extra expense in construc-tion. Care should be exercised to get aust that is sufficiently rotted not to heat. Hauling early in the summer and stacking in a close heap, allows it and stacking in a close heap, allows it time to go through a sweat and cool down ready for use. One cannot travel through the big wheat farms of the northwest without being wonderfully impressed with their show of industry and enterprise. They give the farmer his most favorable background. But it is necessary to resort to duil statistics to know the part played by the agriculturists of the United States in guarding the world from a perpetual hunger, to say nothing of the American cattlemen.

To begin at once on facts, the American farmer is responsible for annual exports aggregating in value $300,000. 000 for cereal alone. This, be it remembered, is after catering to a very heavy home demand. The largest single item is furnish by wheat. Corn, cornmeal and flour contribute the oth er parts. Last fiscal year was a record one for flour, when 18,485,620 barrels were shipped. The number of bushels of wheat was 139,432,815. In 1891 the amount of wheat was 16! total of which any account is to be total of which any account is to be can see easily enough when any account of to 208.744.090, which is separate names are scratched, but can see easily enough when any scratching is being done, and which is standard and goes straight. 000,000 bushels, which is the greatest corn amounted to 208,744,000, which was the record in that cereal up to

If one wishes to show the stupendous results of agrarian labor one should turn to the figures given in the last annual report of the New York Produce Exchange, which contains export figures since 1831, when records were first available. Since that year the work of the general report always from the shadow, and I jot town in my little book, with possibly the name of the voter—just for future reference. There's no chance of a mistake. It's a sure thing.' I glued my eye on the window the next time a man went into the booth, and presently I saw a movement, in the shadow and a flack of deficiencies in the food products of crat.

There has been a gradual development in these sixty-eight years, with several periods of very rapid expension. For instance, in the five years in the Summer holidays, having been By 1865 the wheat exports had risen to a total of 138,306,000 bushels; ten left furnished, but without apparently years later they were 224,019,376 a caretaker. It suddenly struck Stevbushels, doubling in the fiveyear period following. The best prices that the farmer has received for his wheat came between 1865 and 1870, when he averaged on the five years $1.43 a bushel. The average between 1890 and 1895 was 82 cents. In 1895 he only received 65 cents for what wheat he sent abroad, and shipped out 40,000,000 hushels less than one-third of last. oushels, less than one-third of last year's export total.

An interesting study from the figures given in the report has been made of the proportion of wheat shipped as flour to the total since 1831. In that year it reached 97.2 per cent. The ratio fell rapidly until 1889, when the percentage was only 18.84, Last year it was 40.68 per cent.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

Mr. Rider Haggard, in "A Farmer's Year," tells a sad story about a York-

A number of these gentry attached themselves to him so hard that he grew nervous and began to miss freely. At length the last and great stand of the day was reached, when, just before the beat began, a ferocious and peculiarly powerful miner advanced and whispered hoarsely in his ear: "Look 'ere, gov'nor, you're shooting horful, and I've los' three bob on yer. But I've backed yer double or quits, and, by gosh! If I don't win this time I'll knock yer bloomin' 'ead off."

A Friendly Suggestion. "I'm afraid I'll have to move again," said Smith the other morning as he boarded a downtown car.

"What's the trouble now?" inquired what's the trouble how? Inquired his friend Jones.

"The kitchen chimney smokes dreadfully," replied Smith, "and I'm unable to stop it."

Statistics of the Way This Country The Politician's Way of Finding Out How the Vote Stood.

"I was greatly puzzled Election farmer is not revealed in its fullest day," said an amateur politician, "at extent until his relation to the world's the confidence with which a certain old-time leader, who is a particular friend of mine, gave out the exact character of the vote polled up to that hour at one of the down-town precincts, where he was stationed. 'It stands at present - for Flower, for Capdevielle, and — tickets scratched,' he said, in reply to my question, giving the precise number of votes, which I have forgotten. Oh, come, now! I protested laughingly, 'you may have a general idea of the lay of the land, but I can't believe you know exactly how many ballots each candidate has received.' (It's just like I tell you,' he replied solemnly. 'Well how do you do it?' I asked. 'You are certainly not basing your figures on what the voters say, are you?" 'Not on your shirt studs,' he answered, grinning. I'm too old for such foolishness as that. But I don't mind putting you on, in strict confidence. Do you see that window with the blinds half drawn over there?' he added, pointing to the fourth story of the house opposite. 'Yer, what of it?'

'Well, there's a man in the shadow with a pair of strong field glasses. from where he stands he can see right down into the open top of the voter's box, and field glasses make it exactly like looking over the fellow's shoulder inside. I don't say he can tell what ticket is stamped and goes straight Then he gives me a signal from the window, and I jot it down in my little
