ORIGIN OF SURNAMES.
Batches of People Took Same Name At Baptisms.
There is no very clear record of the time when surnames first came into regular use. No doubt the process was a very gradual one, and its epoch varied in different countries, but that they were general at a comparatively early period of the civilization of each nation needs no insisting on. To give but a single instance, in the year 1387 Christianity first became widespread in Poland, and great numbers of men and women were baptized at one time. To simplify and expedite matters with so large a concourse it became the custom of the officiating clergy to bestow the same name upon whole batches of people who came to be admitted to the church. At one baptism, for example, the name Peter was conferred upon all the men and Catherine upon all the women. "On another occasion they would all be Pauls and Margarets and so on.
Great confusion must inevitably have been the result, and the rapid adoption of a system of patronymics was the only escape from the difficulty. The origin of our word surname, formerly occasionally spelt "syrname," is often supposed to be "sirename," and it was, indeed, only in the nature of things that the earliest kind of distinguishing second name should have reference to the parent. Our English Robinsons, Johnsons, Wilsons and so forth are as common, ancient and characteristic as the Scotch Macs and the Irish O's, which mean the same thing. The Mac, it need scarcely be said, though often considered essentially Scotch, is common to the two nations, as witness the well-known doggerel:
By Mac and O' you'll always know
True Irishmen, they say;
But if they lack both O' and Mac,
No Irishmen are they.
While "Mac" may be translated son, "O" is more properly grandson. The Norman equivalent is "Fitz," a corruption of "fili." The Russian termination "witz" signifies the same word, as also the Polish "sky." With regard to the Welsh "ap," which also means son, matters stand rather difficultly; for in this case "ap" is a separate word and is not incorporated in the whole name except as a corruption; also it may be introduced an indefinite number of times in the same appellation, so that a Welsh surname can convey a complete genealogy and be, moreover, one of the longest words in civilization. It is a common joke to laugh at a Welshman for his long list of ancestors with the connecting "ap."
There is an old story of an Englishman, foreign to the principality and its ways, riding near a ravine from which issued a cry for assistance from one who had fallen in.
"Who's there?" shouted the Englishman. "Jenkins-ap-Griffith-ap-William-ap-Rees-ap-Evan-ap-Irbin," came the reply.
"Lazy fellows, half a dozen of you, why can't you help each other out?" exclaimed the Englishman, ignorant of the fact that he was addressing but one man.
The corruption of the "ap" has led to a number of common modifications of old Welsh names, as Price for ap-Rhys, Pritchard for ap-Richard, Powell for ap-Howell, and many others, Probert, Probyn, Pugh, Penny, as also—the "b" being similar to the "p"—Beran, Barry, and the like. Another Welsh form of family name—that which simply puts the Christian name into the genitive case—has contributed many of our commonest surnames, as Jones, i. e., Johns, Harry's-Harris, Williams, Hughes, etc.
The roots of our family names, as of our families themselves, have sprung from among many nations and many tongues. There are well nigh innumerable cases in England of surnames which point unmistakably to the foreign country, and frequently, too, actual neighborhood or town name, from which the family originally migrated, though no other kind of record may exist to prove that, in far off time, they came from over seas. Of the original Anglo-Saxon there are some few survivals. Some can be traced in the termination "ing," which, among Teutonic people, signified "offspring." Browning and Whiting in this way would mean the dark or fair children.
Place names from Normandy and Brittany are very common, as might be supposed. D'Arey, Neyrill, Ferrers, Deyereux, Warran, Percy, Marmion, Tankerville, St. Aubin, Lascelle, Morley—all these and many others can readily be referred to their original birthplaces. In others, through corruption of the word, the locality is not so easy to trace, though still there—as, for example, the name St. Maure, which, by process of time, has come to stand as Seymour; Valouis, which we now know only in its English surname as Vallance, etc. Some of our names, again have a Netherland birthplace, as Gaunt, which was originally Ghent; St. Leger and Brydges, which last is a corruption in all probability, of Bruges.
It needs no pointing out how easily place names can become family names. To distinguish an individual by the name of his home, birthplace or residence was a ready means of securing his identity. In rural districts and among a population that continued for generations in the same homesteads, place names would be given from trivial features of locality, as Wood and Hill and Lane and Dale. In this connection we can find a number of ancient words for country objects which have long ago become obsolete and forgotten. "Cowdray" for instance, in olden days signified a grove of hazel; "Garth" is old English for a yard; "Hiltie" for a haven; "Garnett" for a granary; "Shaw" for a small wood. The common surname Head is really a place name, "Head" being a frequent term for a promontory or cape, as Beachy Head. The suffix "Bee," as in Ashbee, Holmbee, is a survival of the Danish "By," a habitation.
The name Dean is not from the chieftain dignitary, but signifies a hollow or dell, whence we get Dean Forest and Arden. Another word still in common use in certain parts of England for the same thing is "bottom." Higginbottom thus means the dell where the "hicken" or mountain ash flourished. "Becket" is a little brook, still called a beck in the North; "bois" is the English corruption of "bois," a wood. "Donne" means a down, "Holt" a grove and "Horst" a copse. "Stead," of course, is a farmhouse and its surroundings. "Lynne" is a pool, "Law" once meant a hill and "Horner" a corner. "Townsend" would signify "the town's end," "Brook" was the old term for a badger—hence Broxborne and other similar titles; while "gos," as in Gosford and other examples, merely referred to a goose.
It is needless to say that a vast majority of English surnames, among which are to be numbered our very commonest, are derived from trades and callings—Smith, and Baker, and Turner, and Taylor and others past enumerating. Here, too, we may trace ancient words which have since completely dropped out. "Chaucer" and "Simor" are to us now perfectly meaningless, but long ago they both signified a shoemaker. A "Pitche" formerly made greatcoats, a "Reader" thatched buildings with reeds or straw. A "Latimer" was a writer of Latin for legal and such like purposes.
An "Arkwright" was the maker of the great meal chests or "arks," which were formerly essential pieces of household furniture. "Tucker" was a fuller. "Lorimer" a saddler, "Lauder" or "Lavender" a washerman, "Topper" made tubs, "Jenner" was a joiner, "Barker" a tanner, "Dexter" a charwoman, "Banister" kept a bath, "Sanger" is but a corruption of singer or minstrel, "Boweber" of butcher, "Milner" of miller, "Forster" of forester. A Chapman was a merchant; the ancestor of the Colemans and the Woodys sold these indispensable commodities in former generations.
Wagners were wagoners and Naylor's made nails. A "Kemp" was once a term for a soldier; a "Varassour" held rank between a knight and a baron. Certain old-fashioned Christian names, or quaint corruptions of them, have given rise to patronymics which at first sight might appear hard to interpret. Everyone is aware that Austin is identical with Augustus, but the name Austice is not so generally known to be but a shortening of Anastasius. Ellis, too, was originally derived from Elias. Hood, in like manner, is but a modern corruption of the ancient Danish Odo. Everett is not far removed from the once not uncommon name Everard; while even Stiggins can be quite safely referred to the Northern "Stigand." — London Standard.

HEARTBURN.
When the quantity of food taken is too large or the quality too rich, heartburn is likely to follow, and especially so if the digestion has been weakened by constipation. Eat slowly and not too freely of easily digested food. Masticate the food thoroughly. Let six hours elapse between meals and when you feel a fullness and weight in the region of the stomach after eating, indicating that you have eaten too much, take one of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and the heartburn may be avoided. For sale by T. E. Zimmerman & Co., Druggists.

DREAM OF A THIRSTY TRAMP.
It was so delightful that he was inspired to embody it in verse.
A somewhat somnolent loiterer who said he was John Smith, was found by a policeman early yesterday morning reposing in the gutter before the borough hall in Long Island City, says the New York Tribune. When arraigned before Magistrate Conorton in the Police Court he declared he was a jack of all trades, but as he did not belong to the union he was unable to get work. As an avocation he had turned to poetry. As a poet, he averred, he was able to cut figure eights and grapevines all around Rudyard Kipling, while Ella Wheeler Wilcox had once said that his verse was enough to bring tears to the eyes of the hardest hearted. To prove his right to wear the bays he produced a manuscript which, he said, contained a poetical account of a dream he had while sleeping peacefully in the pellucid stream which sometimes flows through the gutter before the borough hall of Queens. Here it is:
Last night I dreamed of a land so fair,
Where the rivers were Pilsner beer,
Where fountains of rickies shot up in the air,
And everything else was queer.
Wide brooks of gin fizzed on every hand
Great lakes of cold Rhine wine,
And pumps spouting cocktails to beat the band,
For the thirsty ones standing in line.
Creme de menthe swamps of a beautiful green,
Whole islands of fine cracked ice,
Such a sight was never before seen,
Ah! but that dream was nice.
Mini juleps in paddles filled the streets
The gutters were flowing with booze,
In which tired hoboes soaked their feet
While enjoying a heavenly snooze.
Champagne flowed from fire plugs
In bubbling streams with a hiss,
And street cleaners drank it from deep stone jugs,
Ah! such was a dream of bliss.
Highballs galore rolled about on the ground
And were chased by a thirsty crowd,
While the paralyzed grafters hanging around
In drunken glee shouted aloud.
Oh! this bibulous dream was a happy dream,
The result of an all-night bat,
Where the wet things flowed in a bountiful stream,
When they carried me home on a rat.
When he finished reading the magistrate looked at the prisoner a moment and said:
"Hot weather."
"Yes, your honor," was the response.
"Discharged," said the Court.

SALT WORKERS OF CADIZ.
Curious Ways of a Strange Class in That City.
A considerable part of the province of Cadiz, in Spain, is low, marshy ground, unfit for cultivation. Nevertheless, it is turned to good account by being utilized for the production of salt by evaporation. This is one of the most extensive industries and sources of revenue in the province. It gives employment to thousands of workmen and makes Cadiz an important seaport, as two-thirds of the 400,000 tons annually produced is exported to foreign lands.
The pans are dug out in the maddy soil. They vary in size, but are of a uniform depth of 10 inches. All the salt-producing land is intersected with innumerable small canals. From June to September is the season for salt production. During this period from three to four harvests are gathered.
The salt-workers form a distinct class of workmen. One generation follows another. They are born and bred to it, and form one huge family. No outsider need dream of getting work there.
It is a curious sight to see the men at work and the way they get about. The business requires considerable skill. The soil is muddy and is almost a quicksand. Any person unacquainted with the work setting foot on a salt pan would be drawn down and swallowed up in a very few minutes. The way the salt-workers get about this dangerous ground, one leg at a time, barely resting the toes and knee on the mud, is an art in itself.
All the work is done in the most primitive fashion, and it is useless to attempt to introduce innovation. The men will not tolerate new methods. In making sluices for the passage of water from pan to pan and from the larger canals they cannot be induced to use any other implement.
The salt as it is collected is piled up into pyramids about thirty feet square at the base and rising to a height of about fifty feet, and for at least twenty miles before reaching Cadiz and traveling by rail the traveler is struck by the sight of hundreds and hundreds of these pyramids wherever the eye can reach. At night the glistening pyramids form a scene at once fantastical and imposing.
The whole of the salt business is in the hands of the salt-workers, from the gathering of the salt to the putting of it into the hold of the ships. Dock laborers and harbor men who do all other kinds of loading or unloading are excluded. The salt-workers have their own special craft for carrying the salt from the pans to the harbor.
The process of salt loading is curious. The ships' holds are lined with matting, and as soon as a ship is ready to take in salt the craft come alongside laden down to the gunwale. A sheet of canvas is then put down from the ship's hold to the small craft alongside, and the men, with their special wooden shovels, start throwing up salt. Naturally, a ship of 300 to 400 tons in ballast is very high out of the water, and to see the men at work would give one the impression that as much salt falls back as is being thrown up. Nevertheless, the ship is laden in an incredibly short time and ready for sea, notwithstanding this primitive and apparently absurd process of loading.— Boston Journal.

On The Wrong Scent.
First Little Girl (at a fashionable seaside resort)—I'm glad to get acquainted with you, 'cause you're nice.
Second Little Girl—So'm I with you. That's what we come for. Mamma says so herself.
"To get 'quainted?'"
"Yes, with nice people—people in society, you know."
"Why, that's just what mamma wants. We're to get 'quainted with people in society."
"Ain't you in society at home?"
"No. You are, aren't you?"
"No. We've been rakin' and scrapin' the whole winter to come here and get 'quainted with people in society, you know."
"So've we."
"Then your folks ain't anybody at home?"
"No."
"Neither are we."
"Then there ain't much use in us gettin' 'quainted, is there?"
"S'pose not."
"Good-by." — Baltimore Sun.

DR. GEO. EWING, a practicing physician of Smith's Grove, Ky., for over thirty years, writes his personal experience with Foley's Kidney Cure. "For years I have been greatly bothered with kidney trouble and enlarged prostate gland. I used everything known to the profession without relief, until I was induced to use FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE. After using three bottles I was entirely relieved and cured. I prescribe it now daily in my practice and heartily recommend its use to all physicians for such troubles, for I can honestly state I have prescribed it in hundreds of cases with perfect success." Couldn't Move Him.
It was late and getting later. However, that did not stop the sound of muffled voices in the parlor.
Meanwhile the gas meter worked steadily.
The pater endured it as long as he could and then resorted on heroic measures.
"Phyllis," he called from the head of the stairs, "has the morning paper come yet?"
"No sir," replied the fanny man on the Daily Bugle, "we are holding the form for an important decision."
And the pater went back to bed wondering if they would keep house or live with him.— Colorado Springs Gazette.

You can never cure dyspepsia by dieting. What your body needs is plenty of food properly digested. Then if your stomach will not digest it, Kodol Dyspepsia Cure will. It contains all of the natural digestants hence must digest every kind of food and so prepare it that nature can use it in nourishing the body and replacing the wasted tissues, thus giving life, health, strength, ambition, pure blood and good, healthy appetite. AN AGED "GREENBACK."

The Bankers' Magazine recently printed a facsimile of a Chinese Treasury note of the year 1367, probably the oldest piece of paper money in existence.

Besides being the oldest known piece of paper money this treasury note makes it clear that Gutenberg was not the first user of movable type.

FROG PEST FOLLOWS RAIN.

ITHACA, N. Y., July 7.—All Ithaca is suffering from a frog pest after the recent heavy rains.

A train which left for Auburn late last night had difficulty in working its way through the myriad which appeared on the track.

An explanation is that the frogs have come from the swamps south of Renwick.

IT HAS BEEN FULLY demonstrated that Ely's Cream Balm is a specific for Nasal Catarrh and cold in the head.

CLOUDBURST DESTROYS TOWN.

HELENA, MONT., July 10.—A cloudburst is reported to have almost destroyed the town of Corbin, 20 miles south of Helena.

No loss no life has yet been reported, but it is thought certain that escape for all the inhabitants was impossible.

Corbin is situated close to a line of foothills of the Rockies. During the night a terrific storm prevailed.

Traffic in the Northern Pacific and Great Northern was stopped by washouts and communication was cut off.

BURGLAR BLOWN TO PIECES.

BENTON, Wis., July 9.—A bank burglar was blown to pieces last night by the explosion of nitroglycerin which he carried in his hip pocket.

He was entering a creamery to get tools with which to force an entrance into the bank.

Three strangers, whose actions were such as to cause suspicion, were seen yesterday in the streets.

FIRE IN HOWARD COUNTY.

The barn, stables, wagon sheds, cornhouse and several smaller out-buildings belonging to Mr. James N. Miller at Clarksville, Fifth district of Howard county, were destroyed by fire early Wednesday morning.

The fire was discovered about 4 o'clock, and had then gained such headway that it was impossible to arrest the flames.

It is supposed that the fire was the work of an incendiary, as Mr. Miller on Tuesday discharged five hands, one of whom was seen lurking in the vicinity after night.

A RARE VOLUME BY PENN.

Only Known Copy is Owned by Quakers in Philadelphia.

That tired feeling is a burden you need not carry. Hood's Sarsaparilla will rid you of it and renew your courage.

THE Indian reservations in Oklahoma territory were opened to the homesteaders Wednesday by registration at El Reno and Lawton.

ELEVEN persons were killed, two probably fatally injured and a large number seriously hurt in a collision between a passenger and a fast live stock train on the Chicago and Alton Railroad, near Norton, Mo.

AN OLD ADAGE SAYS "A light purse is a heavy curse" Sickness makes a light purse.

THE greatest healer of modern times is BANNER SALVE for cuts, wounds, sores, piles and all skin diseases.

THE peculiar significance of this book is that a half dozen years after Penn founded his colony he wished to have the colonists keenly realize that they would have to stand for their rights in the new country as well as the old.

Curiously enough the only proof there is that this work was William Penn's is the statement made by Chief Justice David Lloyd in 1728, a great Quaker leader who was Penn's attorney general at the time the book was issued.

After a struggle, "George," said a fond mother to a little 4-year-old, "you must take the umbrella to school with you, or you will get wet. It rains hard."

After school hours it had stopped raining, and George trudged home with the remnants of the umbrella under his arm.

"Oh, George, what have you been doing with my umbrella?" said his mother when she saw the state it was in.

One morning our washwoman, a lady of color—very dark color—came hastily in and, without any preliminaries, exclaimed: "Spartanulism! What is spartanulism, Miss Cora?"

My sister explained as well as she could and asked why she wished to know.

"Well, you see," she went on excitedly, "Sarah—she's my daughter, you know, and she went last week to live with a lady what says she is a spartanulist, and she says if Sarah takes anything she'll know if Sarah's going to leave!"—Harper's Magazine.

A Choice of Vowels. He—You women have such a ridiculous habit of screaming "Oh!" on every occasion.

She—And you men have such a ridiculous habit of saying "I!" on every occasion.—Indianapolis Press.

Lost Opportunity. "And you didn't hear of it?" inquired Mrs. Gabbie.

"Not one word." "Why, I've known it for a week, so I supposed everybody heard of it."—Philadelphia Times.

An Order Could Be Filled. Customer (in Boston restaurant)—Waiter, have you any fried eels?

Waiter—We have eels, sir, and they are susceptible of being fried.—Leslie's Weekly.

The first mention of stamps is in the letters of the old Bishop Synesius of Cyrene, on the Greek coast of Africa, 400 years after the Christian era.

The refining of sugar was invented in Antwerp in the sixteenth century.

MILLIONS IN PRECIOUS STONES.

George W. Mindil, the Government expert on precious stones at the New York Custom house, reports that during the fiscal year ended June 30 last the aggregate value of precious stones and pearls passed through his office was $21,919,053.

This amount largely exceeds the total any other year in the history of the country and exceeds by over $3,000,000 the entire importations of the four years ended March, 1896.

Cuts and bruises are healed by Chamberlain's Pain Balm in about one third the time any other treatment would require because of its antiseptic qualities which cause the parts to heal without maturation.

TO CONTROL OILCLOTH OUTPUT.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO, July 10.—The combine of light oilcloth companies of the country, to be known as the standard Table Oilcloth Company, was effected to day under the laws of New Jersey.

Short Shrift to Balance of our Tailor Made Suits.

Our Suit Department has left us with about Thirty-Five Suits, which we could probably sell in the course of business without a cut price, as there is a constant demand from prospective travellers, but there is only one or two of a kind left, and we want them out at once, so down goes the price to One-Fourth Off.

We'll fit them free of charge.
