burg, Pa. The lad is the only son of a farmer. His sister attends Wilson College. He left the barn, after feeding the live stock, and went into the peach orchard not far away and sat on the fence eating peaches.

A stranger apparently 25 years old, of heavy build and pleasing address, came along and asked Seibert if he was Mr. Smith's son. The lad had scarcely replied that he was when the man hit him over the head with a blunt instrument and then threw a bag over his head. The boy was knocked unconscious and when he revived found himself being dragged through a cornfield. A cloverfield had already been crossed. The boy began to fight for his life, and, being well developed, nearly succeeded in getting the bag off his head. The man then struck him with what the boy thinks was a loaded revolver. second time, and the man thinking he had probably killed him, left him and ran. IN BED FORTY YEARS

Miss Annie Poole, of Cumberland, sister of Prof. Cyrus Poole, has been confined to her bed for 40 years, or since just before the battle of Antietam. At that time Miss Poole lived with her parents near Sharpsburg, and a day or two before the famous engagement at Antietam some stragglers from Gen. Jubal A. Early's army appeared at the Poole residence and asked for something to eat. While the soldiers were at the door Miss Poole happened to look out of a window on the third floor. One of the soldiers presuming that the woman was signaling to the Union forces stepped out into the street and He was knocked unconscious for the shot at her, so badly frightening Miss Poole that she imagined that she had been wounded and could not be made to believe otherwise and later went into convulsions and was compelled to take to her bed, where she has remained ever since, with the exception of brief parents grew alarmed, and, organizing intervals when she gets up and walks
