THE JUDGE'S VERSE.

"Good!" said the Tramp, But He Got Thirty Days.

Frank Lewis, an alleged cripple, was before Justice J. W. Holman at Macon recently, charged with vagrancy and soliciting money by a trick. The officer said Lewis had his arm arranged under his coat as if he were injured and was shoving passersby a book with some "poetry" in it. Judge Holman became interested. "Let's see the poetry," he said. The policeman produced the soiled notebook. In it was this brilliant stanza:

Through misfortune and strife
I've had an awful sort of life.
While trying to earn a fair living,
The motto that they give
Is to live and let us live.
And this poor cripple will remember the giving.

"Did you do that, Lewis?" asked his Honor.

"I did that," said Lewis proudly. "Why, you don't know the first thing about poetry. It's the awfulest rot I ever saw," said the Judge.

"Of course I haven't been to school much," said the prisoner.

"I should say not," said Judge Holman. "Let me have a whack at that stuff."

The Court got out a sheet of foolscap and scratched viciously with a stub pen, occasionally varying the task by scratching his head. When he got through he held the paper up and read this:

Through misfortune and strife
I've led the devil's own life.
Tryin' to steal from the world what's a-comin'
But whenever I go
Not a ghost of a show
Will the cops let me have to do bumm'n'.

"Good!" exclaimed Lewis.

"Think so?" asked the Judge, as he critically surveyed it.

"You bet; it beats mine all to pieces. Let me off an' I'll use yours."

"I can't let you go, Lewis, but I'll tell you what: You can use mine when you get out if you want to. Come around in 30 days and I'll have it written out plain for you."

And the officer led the poetical wanderer where the wicked roll cigarettes and play cinch the living day.—Kansas City Star.

"I see," said the stranger, stirring something in a glass, "that on the strength of the names in the new city directory you claim a population here of over 2,300,000."

"I guess that's about right," observed the man in the battered Panama hat, who was leaning against the bar and smoking a cigar.

"What multiple do you use?" "Well," replied the other, throwing away his cigar and wiping his mouth with the back of his hand. "I generally take it straight—if it's all the same to you."—Chicago Tribune.

But in a short time after I began using Victor Liver Syrup my headache left me, my appetite came back, and my languidness passed away. I became lively and strong, even to the surprise of my friends. An increasing weight and enjoy better health than for years. I owe this great change to Victor Liver Syrup and heartily recommend it to my suffering sisterhood."

Statistics show that in 50 years the average height of British men has risen an inch. The present average height for a man of 30 is 5 feet 8½ inches.

The pressure of sap rising from a grapevine root has been found equal to sustaining a column of mercury three and a half feet high.

TROUBLES OF THE TRAVELING MAN.

Many Disappointments Beset His Path—Practically No Home Life For Him.

The troubles of the traveling salesman are many and varied. The idea of the drummer is that he has a jolly good time, traveling on Pullman cars, sailing on first-class steamers, putting up at first-class hotels and enjoying himself with customers, whose business it is to be jollied by the jovial drummer into buying a large order.

Perhaps this impression has been aided by the invariable rule of the commercial traveler to always appear good natured and come up smiling each time. Perhaps a trip with one of the drummers will dispel the illusion.

The commercial traveler has to arise before the sun to make connections with an early boat. Perhaps after a hard day's work, maybe driving 40 or 50 miles in a carriage over a sandy and hot road, and when he would like to have a good night's rest, he must arise at 4 o'clock in the morning to make connection with a train.

"Having made our early start," said a traveler yesterday, "we catch the boat and arrive at a little town. Here the drummer has a good merchant who is usually worth a large order. He finds that he has gone away, and will not be at home for a week. After waiting a day for a train he goes to another town, and arrives there about midnight, and after much trouble, arouses the hotelkeeper, only to find that the place is 'full up,' and that he will have to sleep on a blanket placed on the floor.

"He gets up the next morning feeling like he had been sleeping on the easy side of a plank and sallies forth. This is a good town, and he takes a good bunch of orders. This puts him in a very pleasant humor, and is a balm for the bad luck of the day before. The next morning he rises early, and, taking a team (for in the majority of places the trains run too far apart and do not make connections), he makes a circuit of many miles, and returns in the evening with a good appetite and some orders.

"But someone says that the drummer has a great time either playing cards, seeing the girls or playing billiards. Not at all. He is either busy sending his orders in, or is making out a schedule for the next day, or slips out to see Merchant Jones, whom he missed during the day. And this sample of the drummer's life is not all. He has practically no home life like the average man. Perhaps he gets home for a few days every week or month."—Baltimore American.

WHAT TO TEACH THE BOYS.

A philosopher has said that true education of boys is to "teach them what they ought to know when they become men."

1. To be true and to be genuine. No education is worth anything that does not include this. A man had better not know how to read, and be true and genuine in action, rather than be learned in all sciences and in all languages, and be at the same time false in heart and counterfeit in life. Above all things, teach the boys that truth is more than riches, power or possessions.
2. To be pure in thought, language and life—pure in mind and body.
3. To be unselfish. To care for the feelings and comfort of others. To be generous, noble and manly. This will include a genuine reverence for the aged and for things sacred.
4. To be self-reliant and self-helpful, even from childhood. To be industrious always, and self-supporting at the earliest possible age. Teach them that all honest work is honorable; that an idle life of dependence on others is disgraceful.

When a boy has learned these things, when he has made these ideas part of him—however poor or however rich—he has learned the most important things he ought to know.

SING ON, OH CHILDREN!

"We learnt a new song this morning, mummy!" she announced.

Mummy expressed her exceeding joy at the news and thinking that probably Muriel's dainty little fingers would be kept out of the domestic jampan if she were employed she asked to hear it.

"This is it, mummy!" she said, and the little voice was upraised in song:

"I am a little greenhorn
Among a half of cheese,
And

"Oh, I don't know any more, mummy; but isn't it a funny song?" Mummy agreed that it was certainly a funny song—so funny, indeed, that she considered further investigation necessary. But she felt somewhat relieved to find that Muriel had mistaken the words of the melody, which was really a highly moral ditty, commencing:

"I am a little greenhorn
Among the harvest sheaves."

MIGHTY ARMY OF ALIENS.

Total Immigration For The Year Just Closed, 857,046.

One million immigrants to the shores to the United States in 1904. These are the figures absolutely without exaggeration—alarming as they may be—that are indicated by the statistics for the fiscal year of 1903, just made public by Frank P. Sargent, Commissioner General of Immigration.

In 1902 the number of immigrants was 648,475. For the fiscal year of 1903, ended June 30, the number had leaped to 857,046. This is an increase in 12 months of 208,571, or 32 per cent. That rate of increase is keeping up, for the figures for June, 1903, over those for June, 1902, still shows an excess of 32 per cent.

If this rate be maintained the total for the next fiscal year will be above 1,000,000. Even should the rate fall to an increase of 25 per cent the 1,000,000 in the flood of foreign aliens to these shores will be passed. This is absolutely demonstrated by the percentage of increase worked out. It is also sustained by the opinion of Commissioner Sargent.

Referring to past records the only other year in American history which approached the figures of 1903 was 1882. Then this country had very lax immigration laws and the foreign flood was encouraged. The figures went to 786,992. That remained the high-water mark until the last fiscal year.

The figures fell as low in recent years as 229,299 in 1898. Commissioner Sargent said:

"Immigration under present conditions present a most serious problem. No one can sit at his desk and absorb the facts that comes to us in reports without appreciating the peril that threatens should hard times come to this country. I am not an alarmist, but when I see hundreds of thousands of ignorant foreigners coming into our great cities every year, I think I can realize in some degree the danger that will come from their discontent and dissatisfaction when there are no wages to be earned."

The full returns for the fiscal year 1903 show the increase in the number of Italians and Sicilians to be 52,000 over last year's arrivals, with a total from that section of 230,622 immigrants. The total number of immigrants bebarred was 8,769, of whom 1,086 were contract laborers.

Only one country in Europe, not specified, furnished a decrease and this was 32. Mexico also furnished a decrease, amounting to 81.

Potent Pill Pleasure.

The pills that are potent in their action and pleasant in effect are Dr. Witt's Little Early Risers. W. S. Philpot of Albany, Ga., says, "During a bilious attack I took one. Small as it was it did me more good than calomel blue-mass, or any other pills I ever took and at the same time it effected me pleasantly. Little Early Risers are certainly an ideal pill." Sold by T. LAY OF THE LAZY MAN.

When the breeze blows in my window, ah! it tells me many tales

Of wind-flecked waves with caps of white that vie with glistening sails
That here and there between the line dividing sea and sky
Go hobbling lazily enough my heart to satisfy—
For I'm lazy, lazy, lazy.

When the breeze blows in my window I have dreams of meadows sweet
When the clover's ripe and ruddy and the cows have lots to eat.
With them I chew the cud a while—I could, I think, could you?—
For the reason 'tis most excellent I have nothing else to do—
And I'm lazy, lazy, lazy.

When the breeze blows through my window in my mind's eye I can see
Myself a-sittin' fishin' with some bait upon my knee.
The scene's so very peaceful that it fills me with delight,
And I rather think I would prefer to never have a bite—
For I'm lazy, lazy, lazy.

ANIMAL SWIMMERS.

The Squirrel Is Very Swift and the Rabbit Is Oddly Awkward.

Almost all animals know how to swim without having to learn it. As soon as they fall into the water or are driven into it they instinctively make the proper motions and not only manage to keep afloat, but propel themselves without trouble.

Exceptions are the monkey, the camel, giraffe and llama, which cannot swim without assistance. Camels and llamas have to be helped across water, and giraffes and monkeys drown if they enter it. Now and then both of the latter species manage to cross waterways when they are driven to extremities, just as human beings occasionally can keep themselves above water through sheer fright.

A funny though able swimmer is the rabbit. He submerges his body with the exception of head and tail. The latter sticks away up into the air, and his hind legs make "soap suds" as he churns the water madly to get away. But with all his awkwardness he is a swift swimmer and is only beaten by the squirrel among the land animals.

The squirrel swims with his heavy tail sunk away down in the water and his head held high. He cleaves the waves like a duck, and a man in a row-boat has all he can do to keep abreast of the swimming squirrel.

One thing that none of the land living animals does is to dive. No matter how hard pressed a swimming deer, rabbit, squirrel or other purely terrestrial animal may be it will remain above water. But the muskrat, beaver, ice bear and other dive immediately.

The Lawyer's Rule.

"Ever since beginning the practice of law," said a Detroit lawyer, who begged that his name be suppressed, "I have made it a rule not to take cases in which I could not promise my client a percentage of gain over my fees. One day not long ago a business man came to me with a request to sue a debtor. I found it would cost far more than he could be recovered and told him so. He was indignant and left vowing to get a lawyer to press the case regardless of expenses.

"A few weeks later he came to me again. 'Well,' said he, 'I took your advice and saved $250 by it. Now I want you to take charge of all legal matters affecting the Blank corporation. Your retainer will be $2,000 per year.' I took it, it is needless to say."—Detroit News.

Toad and Not a Toad.

One of the queerest reptiles in the world is the horned toad of Arizona. In the first place, though it looks like a toad and is so called, it isn't a toad at all, but a lizard. It lives nowhere save in the desert and feeds on hard-shelled beetles and other insects.

One of the oddest things about the creature is its way of fighting. Two horned toads will meet and fight like bulls by butting, not apparently with any notion of killing each other, but each trying to turn its adversary over. The toad that is finally upset goes away humiliated and hides himself.

Breeding Trouble.

Bertie—I don't want to go to bed yet, sis. I want to see you and Mr. Shepherd play cards.
Lucie—You wicked boy to think we should do such a thing! We never do it.
Bertie—But I heard mamma tell you to mind how you played your cards when Mr. Shepherd came!

LYNCH LAW.

It May Have Taken Its Name From a Mayor of Galway.

About the year 1500 one James Fitzstephens Lynch was mayor of the town of Galway, in Ireland. He had sent his son on a trading expedition to Spain with a good cargo and a large sum of money. The young man returned with a ship load of valuable commodities, which he reported as having been purchased with the money and with the proceeds of the outgoing cargo. After some time a Spaniard came along, demanding payment from the mayor for the goods he alleged had been bought on credit by his son. The mayor declined payment, as his son averred he had paid in cash for the goods. Unfortunately for the latter, a sailor who had been one of the crew on examination by Mayor Lynch declared that his unworthy son had spent in reckless debauchery not only the money intrusted to him, but the proceeds of the cargo as well; that he had then bought goods from a large firm on credit, and that when one of the partners of the firm came down to the ship before sailing to receive the money young Lynch murdered the man and had him thrown overboard to conceal the facts from his father.

The young man was immediately arrested and brought before his father, who, notwithstanding the fearful entreaties of his wife and daughters, sentenced him to death. He took him upstairs in his warehouse, adjusted a rope around his neck, having first secured it inside, and then pushed the young man out of the window, where his dying struggles were witnessed by the inhabitants of the town of Galway. In the town records this entry is yet to be seen:

"James Lynch, mayor of Galway, hanged his own son out of the window for defrauding and killing strangers, without martial or common law, to show a good example to posterity."

It may be from that incident that lynch law took its name. It is not a peculiar American institution, as is commonly supposed, but has been practiced in other countries. The English had a walled town in Devonshire of the name of Lydford, which became noted for the summary punishments inflicted on notorious offenders. They became proverbial in England as Lydford law, and it is not impossible that lynch may be a corruption of Lydford. In Scotland it was known as "Jedburgh justice."

James Lynch, a justice of the peace in one of the Piedmont counties in Virginia, whose methods were both summary and severe, is also credited with having given his name to this offhand and expeditious mode of dealing with criminals now generally known as lynch law.—Pittsburg Gazette.

General Grant's Supreme Courage.

General Grant's courage was supreme. No man could face danger with greater composure. He did not seem to know the meaning of peril when duty called him to risk his life. At one time I saw the general escape death by a very slight margin. We were breaking camp at Spottsylvania Court House and under the fire of a Confederate battery. All of the headquarters equipment had been removed except a camp stool, and on this the general was sitting, while the shells of the enemy's guns shrieked over our heads. A shell passed just over the general, not missing him apparently by more than a few inches, and struck the ground about thirty feet away. Without showing the slightest nervousness he called to me to get the shell, saying, "Let's see what kind of ammunition that battery is using." I went and picked up the shell, which was a six pound spherical case, and the general examined it as coolly as if there was not an enemy's gun within 100 miles of him.—National Magazine.

The Point of View.

Two window washers were at work on the ledges of the sixteenth story windows of a downtown office building about ten feet from each other. As they hung to their straps and washed and polished the glass they could look into the offices, where a number of clerks were bending over ledgers and books.

For a half hour they worked and watched the clerks, who did not move from their confined position over their books. Finally one big window washer leaned back as far as his strap would permit and called to his fellow:

Electrical Oscillations.

Hertz years ago first produced rapid electrical oscillations and showed that they traveled through space with the speed of light and reappeared as electrical oscillations and sparks in suitably arranged conductors at a distance. Starting with waves twenty feet long in air and oscillating 50,000,000 times a second, he worked down to waves one-tenth as long and ten times as rapid.

SOME COSTLY SAWS.

Some Use of Pennsylvania Slate Quarries Have Disappeared in Them

Probably the most expensive saws in use anywhere in the world are those in the factories of Pennsylvania where various articles are manufactured of slate. In one of these factories there are 300 horizontal saws, 12 feet in length, each of which is furnished with 75 cutting diamonds, each saw being worth $5,000. The slate which furnishes the material for these costly saws is worked upon in a little valley that the tract upon which the famous Chapman quarry in Pennsylvania is situated was sold for a pint of whiskey. Its subsequent owners have taken millions from the land. The most valuable slate deposits in the world are found in the central and eastern parts of Pennsylvania. In the neighborhood of the Pennsylvania quarries there are houses whose walls are entirely of slate. The blocks of which they are made are smoothly sawed, and are certainly most substantial. When slate is blasted in the quarries the rough slabs are taken to the shanties of the "splitters." The stone forms naturally the layers, and the "splitter," following the grain or "rib" with his large chisel, separates the blocks into strips. Then these strips are passed through a trimming machine, where by the blows of a heavy knife they are cut into rectangular "shingles." Then they are piled up into "squares," ready to be used for roofing purposes. When slate is cut up for use in other ways the procedure differs. The huge horizontal saw, with its scores of diamonds, in the factory, is called into play; it is lowered upon one of the rocks of slate by a ratchet at the rate of a quarter of an inch a minute. The saw would cut through iron or steel at the same rate. The workmen play a stream of water upon the slate to keep it cool, and wash the dust from the cut. After the sawing the block is planed by being moved back and forth by machinery under a firmly fixed chisel. It is afterwards polished, much as marble and granite are. The value of the slate quarries runs into the millions.

Water Power Of The World

An estimate of water powers developed in the several countries was given by A. Gardenvitz in a paper before the Frankfort Congress of German Naturalists and Doctors. His figures were as follows: Germany and Austria, 180,000 horse-power; Switzerland, 160,000; Sweden, 200,000; United States, 400,000. He estimates the total available water power to be: Sweden 2,000,000 horse-power; France, 10,000,000; Germany, Austria, Switzerland and Italy, 10,000,000; while in the United States, Niagara Falls alone could furnish 10,000,000 horse-power.

SARTO ELECTED POPE.

Cardinal Giuseppe Sarto, Patriarch of Venice, was elected Pope by the conclave of cardinals in Rome Tuesday morning and took the name of Pius X.

According to one account the election was unanimous, it being clearly evident after Monday evening's ballot that he would be chosen. Another account states that on the final ballot he received 42 votes, just the necessary two-thirds majority. On the first ballot of the conclave last Saturday it is said he was given only one vote, Cardinal Rampolla receiving 24 and Serafino Vannutelli 15; Gotti and Oreglia also getting considerable support. The election is reported to have been brought about by Rampolla throwing his influence to Sarto.

The conclave was "opened," or dissolved Tuesday evening.

The new Pope blessed the people from a window of St. Peter's and was received with wild acclaim.

Dispatches state that his selection gives satisfaction in Washington and practically in every European capital. He is the only cardinal who is on friendly terms with the King of Italy and he is considered a liberal and a moderate in his policy. It is believed that there will be a truce between the Papacy and the Italian Government.

The numerals marking the various hours will be fifteen feet in length. In a broad circle surrounding the dial will be twelve flower beds, one opposite each hour, and each two feet wide and fifteen feet long. At night the time piece will be illuminated with incandescent lights.

NEW RIFLES KILLS AT FIVE MILES.

A five-mile range is claimed for the new model Springfield army rifle, which will be the deadliest small arm yet designed in the United States or Europe. The demonstrated advantages of the new rifle as compared with the Krug-Jorgenson, which many experts consider equal or superior to the small arm in use in any European army, are decreased weight, greater velocity, greater penetration and an improved sight. A special cartridge, which has been designed for use in riots, has a comparatively small range, so as to obviate danger to innocent persons who may be a mile or two from the disturbance.

Tools for the new rifle are now being made at the Armory at Springfield. It is expected that the equipment of the regulars with the new model will begin in about a year.

CUT-OFF ARM IN HIS HAND.

Cassino had fallen beneath a freight train two miles west and a wheel had passed over his arm and cut it off. He picked up the lost arm and carried it with him to Welch, that point being the residence of the nearest physician. His body was covered with blood, but he refused a stimulant when he reached the doctor's office and received medical attention.

Mrs. Laura S. Webb, Vice-President of the Woman's Democratic Club of Northern Ohio.

"I dreaded the change of life which was fast approaching. I noticed Wine of Cardui, and decided to try a bottle. I experienced some relief the first month, so I kept on taking it for three months and now I menstruate with no pain and I shall take it off and on now until I have passed the climax."

Female weakness, disordered menses, falling of the womb and ovarian troubles do not wear off. They follow a woman to the grave if life. Do not wait but take Wine of Cardui now and avoid the trouble. Wine of Cardui never fails to benefit a suffering woman of any age. Wine of Cardui relieved Mrs. Webb when she was in danger. When you come to the change of life Mrs. Webb's letter will mean more to you than it does now. But you may now avoid the suffering she endured. Druggists sell 61 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

Important Change in Train Service on W. M. R. R.

Commencing August 3, the Western Maryland will quicken up very materially the time of their No. 15 train, so as to arrive Hiltien Station, Baltimore, at 5:40 p. m., instead of 6:00 p. m., as heretofore. This train will leave Hagerstown at 2:10 p. m., as in the past, and run on same time as heretofore, except Sunday, when it will leave the latter point at 4:25 p. m., and arriving Baltimore at 5:40 p. m. This means passengers will not only have a quick run to Baltimore, but arrive in time to connect with the 5:30 p. m. train from Baltimore, and will also be enabled to make connection with the steamboat lines for Old Point Comfort, Norfolk and other Southern points. Chair Car on Western Md. Trains

The Passenger Department of the Western Maryland R. R. announces that "taking effect Monday July 27, chair car "Gettysburg" will be added to their regular train leaving Hiltien Station daily, except Sunday, at 5:40 p. m. for Hagerstown, and this car attached to Fast Mail train leaving Hagerstown, except Sunday, at 4:10 p. m., for Baltimore. This is quite an innovation, and should be a popular move on the part of the Railroad Company. July 31-4t

CHARGED WITH FORGERY.

John J. Eyler and David G. Trite Have a Hearing at Westminster.

John J. Eyler, near Frizellburg, and David G. Eyler, of Westminster, two young men charged with forgery had a hearing before Justice S. T. Rinker in Westminster Tuesday afternoon and were required to give bail in the sum of $250 each for the action of the grand jury. Eyler complied; his father, John Eyler, and Benjamin F. Crouse becoming his sureties, and he was released. Trite was unable to obtain surety and was committed.

The specific charge in the case is the forgery of the name of Jas. A. Clark, of Lawndale, to a note for $75, payable to the order of John E. Eckenrode, a carriage builder of Westminster, from whom Eyler proposed to purchase a buggy. Mr. Eckenrode obtained possession of the note, but being suspicious of its genuineness, made inquiry of Mr. Clark's son, from whom he learned that his father had been absent from home for several weeks and that his signature was a forgery. Eyler was attending a fete on the ground of St. John's Catholic Church, Westminster, on Saturday night, to which he had taken a young lady from the country, and was arrested while in her company and committed for the hearing which took place Tuesday.

At the hearing Tuesday afternoon Trite acknowledged that he had signed the name of Jas. A. Clark to the note, while it transpired that Eyler had signed it with a fictitious name—John C. Herveyant.—Herald.

BROKE INTO LAUNDRY.

Negro Burglarizes Shop of Charley Long Yon.

An unknown negro broke into the laundry shop owned by Charley Long Yon, corner of East Fourth and Market streets, Frederick, Wednesday morning about 1 o'clock and succeeded in getting away with about $2 that was in the money drawer.

Long Mind, who was conducting the shop during the absence of Long Yon, heard a noise about 12:45 a. m., but thought nothing more about it until about 1 o'clock, when he was awakened and, looking around the room, saw a negro standing in a corner. Long Mind picked up a piece of wood that was lying near his hand and threw it at the negro, who then ran down the stairs and out on the street with the Chinaman close on his heels. The Chinaman, before giving up the chase, fired a shot at the fleeing negro.

The money drawer in the shop was broken open and a trunk belonging to Long Yon was also broken open, but the number of missing articles can not be ascertained as Long Mind does not know what the trunk contained.

The negro gained an entrance into the shop by climbing over a fence that leads into the yard in the rear of the shop. He evidently knew the location very well and Long Mind says he has seen the negro around the shop before. The authorities are making an investigation and a negro is suspected by them as he answers the description of the Chinaman very well.—News.

While ascending the stairs at her home she fell and her chest struck against the last step. Immediately the pains from which she had suffered for many years left, and after being taken to a couch and lying there for a while she got up and, to the surprise of everyone, walked about without the aid of crutches. Many physicians treated the case unsuccessfully for years.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Child's Life Lost In Fire in Montgomery County.

The explosion of a coal-oil stove in the home of Mr. David Bissett, at Garrett Park, Montgomery county, four miles east of Rockville, about 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, caused the destruction by fire of two of the town's hand-somest residences and the death of Mr. Bissett's 3-year-old daughter.

While a young woman in the Bissett home was in the kitchen preparing luncheon the stove exploded. She attempted to smother the flames, but after a brave effort found herself unable to do so and sounded an alarm. Mrs. Bissett, who had been ill, and her husband were upstairs at the time and their little daughter was on the same floor. It is supposed the flames burned fiercely from the start, and in the excitement attending the exodus from the burning building it is thought that the child was overlooked.

When it was found that she was missing it was suggested that she might have failed to leave the burning house, and an effort was made to search the second floor, but the flames had gained such headway that this was impossible. After the fire was over the fears of the parents in regard to their little one were realized when her charred body was found in the debris.

The flames spread to the home of Mr. Byron C. Tiffany, adjoining, and in a short time it was in ashes. Mr. Tiffany was fortunate enough to save all his household goods, while Mr. Bissett lost everything.

The total loss is placed at $20,000—Mr. Bissett's at $15,000 and Mr. Tiffany's at $5,000. The former carried no insurance, while the loss of the latter was fully covered.

JEWELL ARRESTED.

Jervis Maxwell Jewell was arrested and lodged in jail at Chestertown, Md., Wednesday afternoon on a charge of swindling pensioners and the widows of pensioners. For more than five months Jewell, it is said, has been working successfully in Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Delaware.

He has represented himself as a special medical examiner of the Pension Bureau at Washington, using the names of some of its most prominent officials, and his victims have been largely among the colored people. In many instances, it is charged, he has procured the original government checks held by pensioners, forged the name of some prominent official of the Pension Bureau and obtained the money.

George D. Sidman, special examiner of the Pension Bureau, first learned of Jewell's work in February and since then has been making an effort to capture him. He followed him through several of the States, but not until Wednesday was he able to trap him. Jewell was at work in Cecil county, whither Mr. Sidman traced him, and when he arrived in the location where Jewell was at work, found him gone. He traced him to the outskirts of Still Pond, a village nine miles north of Chestertown and had a warrant issued for his arrest. The constable took Jewell to Chestertown Wednesday afternoon and placed him in jail.

Mr. Sidman stated that it is impossible to say to what extent Jewell had practiced his game, but that his forgeries would amount to a very large sum. Jewell is a resident of Baltimore, but formerly lived in Kent county.—American.

Barn Destroyed By Lightning.

The barn on Mr. J. W. Lawson's farm near Kempton, Frederick county, was struck by lightning between 3 and 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon of last week and completely destroyed. The barn was an old frame building formerly used as a tobacco house. Its contents included Mr. Lawson's entire hay crop, which was destroyed. The crop of wheat harvested this season from the farm was stacked near the barn. It also caught fire and was destroyed. It is estimated that the wheat when thrashed would have yielded between 400 and 500 bushels of grain. All of Mr. Lawson's live stock was saved.

All of the bodies were recovered, that of Spielman being taken out about three hours after the boat was upset. Masters' body was taken out about two hours after the accident. He showed signs of life when taken on shore, and the men worked on him for about an hour, but failed to resuscitate him.

The Italian's body was found soon after Masters' corpse was dragged ashore.

The scow had just been loaded with clay for the purpose of filling a leak in the natural bank of the reservoir. Seven men—three Americans and four Italians—were on the boat. When it left the shore one and struck an obstruction which caused the other end to dip violently. The boat shipped a quantity of water, which was quickly absorbed by the clay. As the boat went out from the bank Mr. John Masters, superintendent of the reservoir, noticed it was about to sink and called to the men to quickly shovel off the earth. This frightened the Italians, who ran to one end of the boat, and caused it to dip. Almost immediately the boat sank when very close to the shore. Several of the Italians jumped and succeeded in getting to the shore safely. The boat carried down with it the Italian Tony and Spielman, who did not come to the surface at all.

Joseph Masters, was sinking the third time, when his uncle, Superintendent Masters, jumped into a skiff and went to the rescue, reaching him, but not in time to save him, for when the skiff reached the spot he sank for the last time and did not again come to the surface.

Superintendent Masters then directed his attention to saving Guy Weddle, aged 18 years, single son of Daniel Weddle, of near Edgemont. Weddle had gone under twice, but was pulled into the skiff just as he was about to sink again. He was rowed to the shore and resuscitated.

Help was sent for and a gang of men were soon on the scene dragging for the bodies. Spielman's body was found in about 25 feet of water. Masters' body was taken from where the water was 20 feet deep.

A WOMAN'S COMPLEXION.

It is rank foolishness to attempt to remove sallowness or greyness of the skin by the use of cosmetics, or "local" treatment, as advocated by the "beauty doctors." The only safe and sure way that a woman can improve her complexion is by purifying and enriching the blood, which can only be accomplished by keeping the liver healthy and active. The liver is the seat of the disease and blood pollution. Green's August Flower acts directly on the liver, cleanses and enriches the blood, purifies the complexion. It also cures constipation, biliousness, nervousness, and induces refreshing sleep. A single bottle of August Flower has been known to cure the most pronounced and distressing cases of dyspepsia and indigestion. New trial size bottle, 25 cents; regular size, 75 cents. At all druggists.

A DAY OF SPORT.

For The Chronicle.

A most agreeable crowd spent the afternoon at Maxell's dam, on Thursday last. Mr. Edgar Pennell, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Mr. Joseph Kreitz, Misses Addie and Lottie Mullen, May Long, Rose, Euphemia and Beatrice Tyson. Playing ball shooting and fishing was our sport, but the boat was the main attraction. Owing to the heat none of us objected to the shower that overtook us between two and three o'clock, as the water was our best friend that day. Thanks are due to Mr. Maxwell for allowing us on his place and also to the gentleman for the apples, as our lunch was almost a thing of the past at four o'clock.

End Of Bitter Fight.

"Two physicians had a long and stubborn fight with an abscess on my right lung" writes J. F. Hughes of DuPont, Ga., "and gave me up. Everybody thought my time had come. As a last resort I tried Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. The benefit I received was striking and I was on my feet in a few days. Now I've entirely regained my health." It conquers all Coughs, Colds and Throat and Lung troubles. Guaranteed by T. E. Zimmerman, Drug Store. Price 50c, and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

OVERDOSES OF LAUDANUM.

Mrs. Theodore Newcomer, a well-known lady of Waynesboro, took an ounce and a half of laudanum at her home Sunday. Physicians were summoned and succeeded in saving her after working with her for hours.

Mrs. Charles S. Needy, of Pen-Mar, narrowly escaped death through an overdose of laudanum last Monday. She had been ill with a violent headache and is said to have taken the laudanum, nearly two ounces, to relieve her agony.

FAIRFIELD ITEMS.

FAIRFIELD, Aug. 4.—The farmers in this section are nearly all done with their harvest and are plowing the ground for seeding.

Fairfield has a Dentist and at this time the place is large enough to afford one.

Rev. Mackley is building a large house on the corner of his lot along Main Street. The house is nearly completed.

Mr. Wm. Fowler, who was injured in an accident, is about again. He is able to walk without crutches.

James Dixon Post 83 G. A. R., of Fairfield, will hold their annual Banquet on Saturday, August 29. All old soldiers and G. A. R. men are cordially invited to turn out and help to eat the army bean.

The Fairfield Band will furnish the music. Speakers from a distant are expected to assist in the campfire. Everybody is welcome. The G. A. R. boys are growing less every day. They should turn out and spend a day together once a year.

Misses Mamie Moyer and Meta R. Shuley, of Womelsdorf, who were spending a few weeks among friends at this place left on last Saturday for their homes at Womelsdorf, Pa.

Mrs. Grant Bigham and family, of the West, have been spending some time among friends in Fairfield.

Mrs. Mary Keifer, of Lancaster, and her sister, Mrs. D. B. Martin, of Fountaineau were recent guests of F. Shuley and family, of Fairfield.

Your Correspondent received a letter from Emporia, Kansas, from a friend, stating that the wheat crop was good, but corn would be half a crop unless it should rain soon. Potato crop, poor. The hot winds dried up everything. Vegetation is ruined.

Mrs. Glenn, Dr. J. E. Glenn's mother, an aged citizen of Fairfield, died last week. She was buried near Baltimore.

Dr. Hudson, hotel keeper at Fairfield, has put up a large lively stable nearly taking up the whole length of the lot. He is prepared to accommodate any person with horse and team at any time.

The creamery building was torn down and a new building erected on John M. Musselman's lot, near the alley, which is more suitable than along the front street.

Miss Alice Hoke and sisters, Lottie and Lillie, of Emmitsburg, and Mrs. H. F. Shuley and son Freddy, of Reading, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Krise, of this place. They also called on the family of F. Shuley, in Fairfield.

Mr. J. L. Hill on last Friday night came to Fairfield with his 4 horse team and hay wagon, took the Fairfield land and others to Knox Lynn, where a lot of Campers are tenting and fishing. They had a good time with the boys. They reached their homes

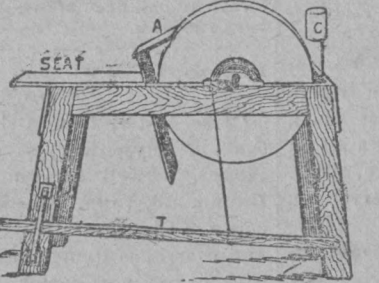

AT THE GRINDSTONE.

T. Greiner mentions a neat little wrinkle in tool grinding in Farm and Field. It is that a little sand put on the wet stone when grinding will make quick work of sharpening a tool. That is a very simple matter, and probably there are lots of people who know it, but there are few who do not. Mr. Greiner also says:

"I give a sketch of my grindstone frame. I have always had to do my own turning and grinding, and I used to stand on one foot and pump away with the other until I ached at every joint. Finally I set my brain going on the matter and evolved the frame shown herewith. Since it was finished I have sat down and rested while grinding. The sketch shows plainly how it is built. It is all wood except the rod connecting the treadle and crank, which is No. 8 wire. The frame is fifty inches long, thirty inches high and nine inches wide. The seat is shown in the sketch. The splashers, A, is a strip of board fastened close to the stone to prevent water being thrown on the operator's legs. The treadle, T, is a strip one by two inches square, and is attached to the leg of the frame with a half inch bolt. The connecting rod is bent around the treadle loosely, so that it can be moved forward or backward to suit the operator. A piece of lath, with bits of wood under each end, nailed to the leg forms a slot for the treadle to move up and down in. C is the water can at the back of the grindstone. There are what are called bicycle mounted grindstones on the market, but when one has a stone he dislikes to throw it away to get one that is easier to work. Such a stone mounted in a frame as here described will prove as satisfactory as a bicycle mounted one. Put a little sand on the wet stone every minute or two, letting only enough water drip on it to keep it damp, and you can put an edge on any tool in a very short time. In order to make a smooth edge, finish with-out sand and with a good flow of water."

A Destructive Midsummer Pest.

Usually during July, August and September fruit as well as many shade and forest trees are badly infested with caterpillars of various kinds. One of these, called the yellow necked caterpillar, is thus described by American Agriculturist: It is about two inches long when full grown, with a black head, just back of which is a dull yellow band. The worms are usually found clustered together on a limb, where they feed upon the foliage, gradually devouring everything within their reach, leaving only bare branches. When disturbed these insects assume a very peculiar attitude by throwing up the head and fore part of the body, turning it backward and at the same time raising the hinder portion also. When full grown they usually leave the trees at night, practically all at the same time. They burrow in the ground two or three inches, where they transform and remain until the moths emerge the following June and July. The adult insect, or moth, has a wing expanse of about two inches and is of a light brown in general color. The female deposits from 70 to 100 white eggs upon the surface of the leaf, where they hatch usually during July, the young worms feeding for five or six weeks upon the foliage and young shoots. The presence of this pest is usually noticed by the entire defoliation of the limb, commencing at its terminal. Inasmuch as the caterpillars feed in colonies, they can be destroyed by hand picking. Infested trees thoroughly sprayed with paris green or arsenate of lead, either in water or kerosene mixture, will prevent injury by this pest. Frequently colonies can be destroyed by burning with a torch or ball of cotton waste saturated with kerosene, care being taken not to injure the trees.

Corn Fodder.

The cornstalks in the United States would be of immense value for stock fodder if they were secured in the best condition, but generally they have not been well taken care of in the east and have been almost totally wasted in the west. Every traveler there has observed thousands of acres of stalks standing in the fields untouched by cattle and an impediment to the plow, which must be got rid of before the ground can be plowed. To make the best fodder corn should be cut up just as soon as the ears are glazed and put in shocks so well bound that they will not blow down except by a hurricane. When a shock blows down the grain is greatly injured and the stalks made rotten and worthless by rain and mold. As soon as the corn is husked the stalks, if dry enough to keep, should be drawn immediately to the barn. If left in the field to dry more they should be stood up so well that they will not blow down and not kept out to be bleached by sun and rain any longer than necessary.—Ohio Farmer.

ABBEY'S GLASS OF MILK.

An Amusing Story of the Famous Artist's Boyhood Days.

In the days when Edwin A. Abbey, the distinguished illustrator and painter, was a small boy he had the habit of critically scrutinizing every dish that was set before him at the table, much to the embarrassment of his family. His frequent disquisitions from the table were not ineffectual reproaches, and something had to be done to work a cure.

"Eddie," said his mother one day, "I heard thee speak about going to Cousin Martha's for dinner next Sunday, and I am afraid we will have to make thee stay at home until thee learns politeness at the table. Thy picking at food would mortify me."

This threatened deprivation reduced the boy to tears, and after a long solemn promise not to look at everything according to his habit he was told that he might go.

The day came, and a large and merry family gathered to do justice to a tempting meal. Each of the little folks had a glass of delicious rich country milk at his place.

Noticing that Edwin was surreptitiously glancing at his glass, Mrs. Abbey observed, with a well understood meaning, "Edwin, why art thou not drinking thy milk?"

With a determined air the boy hastily picked up the glass and, shutting his eyes as tight as possible, gulped its contents down.

This sudden procedure attracted the attention of all the guests, and, fearing at least a severe scolding, the boy exclaimed, "I did it, mother; I—I swallowed it!"

"Swallowed what?" hurriedly asked Mrs. Abbey, now more alarmed than amused.

"Those two flies that got in my milk. But I swallowed them, mother; I swallowed them!"—Isadore Hedges in Ladies' Home Companion.

POULTRY POINTERS.

Laying hens must have meat or milk. Always feed some whole grain at night.

Early hatched chickens usually make the best breeding fowls.

Feeding a little at a time and often is better than overfeeding at any time.

A liberal use of ground bone will correct the tendency to laying soft shelled eggs.

Keeping fowls on hard floors will frequently cause swollen feet and legs. They must have some loose ground to scratch over.

Turkeys must have a good range to be profitable. They are insect eaters by nature and need a good range in order to thrive well and grow economically.

After the ducks and geese are through laying the feathers should be picked regularly. The time to pick them is when the feathers are ripe and before the fowls begin to lose them.

What a True Scholar Is.

The scholar in the true sense is the man or woman for whom the schools have done their best. The scholar knows some one thing thoroughly and can carry his knowledge into action. With this he must have such knowledge of related subjects and of human life as will throw this special knowledge into proper perspective. Anything less than this is not scholarship. The man with knowledge and no perspective is a crank, a disturber of the peace, who needs a guardian to make his knowledge useful. The man who has common sense, but no special training, may be a fair citizen, but he can exert little influence that makes for progress. There may be a wisdom not of books, but it can be won by no easy process. To gain wisdom or skill, in school or out, is education. To do anything well requires special knowledge, and this is scholarship, whether attained in the university or in the school of life. It is the man who knows that has the right to speak.—President David Starr Jordan in Atlantic.

Epitaph Too Suggestive.

A man whose cheerful occupation is that of making tombstones is telling his friends about a woman who visited his place last week and said she wanted a nice tombstone put over her husband's grave, with some short, simple inscription on it.

He asked how she would like the word "Resurgam." She inquired as to its meaning, and when he translated it as "I shall rise again," she said, in a panic, "No, no, mister; make it 'Rest in Peace'!"—New York Press.

A Hard Road.

"It is unquestionably," answered Senator Sorghum. "The way people have to employ lawyers and stand investigations is calculated to cut down profits terribly."—Washington Star.

That Was All.

"Maria," demanded Mr. Billus in a loud voice, "what have you been doing to my razor?"

"Nothing," said Mrs. Billus, "except sharpening it again after shaving. It does all right. It's all right, isn't it?"—Chicago Tribune.

Beginning to Realize It.

"I never heard Dinmore acknowledge that he was growing old before today."

"How did he acknowledge it?"

"He announced that he felt just as young as he ever did."—Detroit Free Press.

Discovered Baked Snuff.

A Limerick tobaccoist of the name of Lundyfoot, doing a comparatively small trade, was unfortunate enough to have his establishment destroyed by fire. On visiting the ruins next day he saw some of his poor neighbors among the debris gathering the half baked snuff from the canisters which had not been entirely destroyed by the fire. He tasted what he considered the worthless article and to his surprise found that the heat from the fire had added pungency and aroma to the snuff. Profiting by the discovery, the shrewd Irishman at once set about baking his snuff in ovens, and the fame of the "Blackyard snuff" was established and an immense fortune soon made by Lundyfoot, founded upon a mere accident and growing out of a misfortune.

QUAINT BATAVIA.

Java's Picturesque Town and the People One Meets There.

Imagine a town of giant dolls' houses built in Javanese and Japanese styles, trim avenues of beautiful trees, broad, clean streets and thousands of grown up dolls masquerading in oriental fancy dress, the picture book of one's childhood animated—that is Batavia.

The streets are paraded listlessly by gangs of blue garbed convicts, who pick up cigar ends, bits of paper and fruit peel. The cleanliness of the streets is astonishing.

A man in Batavia once threw a piece of banana peel on the ground, and, looking back a moment afterward, he felt reproached by the sight of that wretched piece of peel, the only blot on the immaculate cleanliness of the streets. For awhile his dignity fought with his sense of decency. Then he returned, picked up the offending peel, and—feeling very foolish—carried it until he saw a convenient opportunity for disposing of it.

Representatives of many nations congregate in Batavia, blue gowned Javanese, wearing white pith helmets shaped like inverted saucers; portly Chinese merchants, dressed in a grotesque combination of yellow silk clothes and billycock hats of Hampstead Heath, their pigtail interwoven with blue silk; lean, tawny Malays, Hindoos, Javanese and effeminate looking Chinese jostle each other on the sidewalks.

It is impossible for a casual observer to distinguish the sex of a Cingalese, as the men have delicate, refined features, are clean shaven, fasten their long hair behind their heads in woman fashion and wear skirts that sweep the ground.

The dress of the Javanese women merits a detailed description, as the Batavian Dutch ladies have adopted the native dress for morning wear.

A long strip of native cloth, called a sarong, is wound round and round the body beneath the armpits and reaches almost to the ankles. An abbreviated Blon jacket, called a kopyah, covers the shoulders, and out of doors ladies' slippers are worn on stockinged feet, and a paper parasol is carried.

The Batavian Dutch do not make their toilets, unless they go out of doors, until the afternoon, so that one may see men in pyjamas and women in the native dress loitering on the verandas or sitting down to meals at the hotels. The custom is a lazy but sensible one, considering the climate.—Chambers' Journal.

When Dinner is Over.

As a rule an hour or an hour and a half is spent in conversation after a dinner when neither host nor guests have any other engagement for the evening. When a lady and gentleman are dining together the lady makes the first motion at departure, the gentleman promptly following her lead. No matter how numerous the company, no guest should depart without bidding adieu to the hostess with thanks for her hospitality. These need be neither stiff nor effusive. Just some little words of appreciation of the pleasure you have enjoyed in her home. Goodbyes may be said to other friends present before you bid adieu to the hostess or to any standing near the door as you pass out, but do not stop for any lengthy conversation after having said good night to your entertainers.

Suicide by Smoking.

One of the most extraordinary suicides on record was enacted in Pesth, Baron Bela Ojlt, a wealthy citizen, deliberately poisoned himself by smoking cigars and tobacco to excess. The baron had lost a large fortune in speculation. Having a wife and six children, he insured himself very heavily in their behalf in five companies and then proceeded to put into operation his unique plan for self destruction. He hired a small room in a mean portion of the city and in ten months died of what the doctors called "galloping consumption." He had consumed 3,500 cigars and about a hundred pounds of tobacco.

The Helping Wives.

There was a certain old woman who was a constant and devoted attendant at church. Her husband died, and her pastor called upon her to comfort her in her sad bereavement.

"Well, my good woman," the pastor remarked, "in your bitter trial I hope you have found some ray of comfort from the Scriptures."

"Indeed I have, dominie," was the confident though tearful reply.

"That's grand, sister," exclaimed the parson sympathetically, "but tell me what passage of the word helped you most."

"Grin and bear it."

"Omit the Third Stanza."

Mabelle had been unusually quiet at church one Sunday. She was generally a very restless listener. Her mother, noticing it, asked her:

"What made you so good during service this morning, daughter?"

"I was thinking," answered the child, "why the people who write hymns always put something bad in them that the minister can't let the people sing. He always says 'omit the third' or some other stanza, and he says it over twice, so they'll be sure not to sing it, so it must be something wicked."—New York Times.

A Way the Baby Has.

"Has the baby had the measles yet, Mr. Poppes?"

"Sh-sh! Don't speak so loud. Whenever he hears anything mentioned that he hasn't got the cries for it."

Ruskin's favorite adverb was "entirely."

Over the grave of his father he put a memorial stone describing the elder Ruskin as "an entirely honest merchant."

"Tess says she's ready to make up if you will," said the peacemaker.

"Tell her," replied the obstinate Jess. "If I had a complexion as muddy as hers I'd be ready to make up too."—Philadelphia Press.

A Merchant Cured After Having Given Up Hope.
Gentlemen—I was afflicted with Kidney and Bladder trouble for six years and had tried numerous preparations without getting any relief and had given up hope of ever being cured when FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE was recommended to me. After using one bottle I could feel the effect of it, and after taking six fifty-cent bottles, I was cured of Kidney and Bladder trouble and have not felt so well for the past twenty years and I owe it to FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE. I consulted the best medical skill available, but got no relief until FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE was recommended to me. I am grateful to be able to say that it entirely cured me."
