HOW TO TALK WELL.

You Can Acquire the Art by Study, Care and Practice.

The art of talking well-that is, with ease and intelligently-interesting those who listen and, rarest gift of all, leading them to talk their best in reply, is a natural gift. There is no doubt of this. The gift goes with what we call "personal magnetism." Yet one who has not this can learn to talk pleasantly, fluently and agreeably. First let him talk much to himself, not audibly, but forcing himself to formulate his ideas. What a man thinks clearly he should be able to put into words.

Next let him study what will please those with whom he talks rather than what interests himself. Please note that I say "talks with" and not "to." There is a great-an essential-difference, all the difference between conversing and lecturing.

"You never heard me preach, I believe?" said Coleridge to Charles Lamb. "I never heard you d-do anything clse!" stammered the wit. .

When you meet a man for the first time say something you think would draw him out. A fool can babble at length. Wisdom and courtesy are required to tempt others to speak with ease to themselves.

There is no royal road to becoming a good talker. Practice of the few simple rules I have indicated will help you on step by step.-Chicago News.

ORIGIN OF PLUM DUFE

How a Famous Dish of English Sailors Got Its Name.

There are many traditions respecting the origin of the name "plum duff," the great holiday dish of sailors. No feast on shipboard is considered perfect without it. According to the story given in the history of the British navy, an English brig in the south Pacific was caught in a series of awful hurricanes. All on board were anxious. to reach a port in time for Christmas, but the holiday found them still off the-Navigator islands. Worst of all, they had shipped, a sea that carried away the hencoop containing a few chickens.

When the cook saw the Christmas dinner floating in the lee scuppers and, in danger of going overboard he made a gallant charge down the slippery, sloping deck to recover it, but at that: moment a great wave rose high over the bulwarks, broke with resistless fury on the very spot where he stood, and when it subsided cook and chickens had both disappeared.

This, unfortunate accident left the crew not only without a Christmas dinner, but without, any one to prepare an ordinary meal. The sailors were heartily sick of "hard tack" and . remembered with longing the famous plum pudding of merry England. They determined that somehow they must have a Christmas pudding and drew lots as to who should be the cook.

The choice fell on the boatswain's mate, a brawny son of the Emerald Isle. In the galley he found an old cookbook. This he selemnly pored over in search of something promising, but for lack of skill or materials found nothing he dared venture upon-At last he settled upon a recipe which began, "Make a stiff dough." When himself, "If r-o-u-g-h spells ruff, the crossed kernels and planted. The d-o-u-g-h spells duff."

So he made the pudding, putting in some fine Malaga raisins, and served ing of the white, black and the pink or it out with a generous quantity of rich rose colored grains. The pink grains sauce. The sailors hailed it with demake a considerable part of the whole light and appreciation. "What d'ye and, taken with the darker grains, out-call it?" they asked: "Plum duff," number the white ones. The ears, as said the proud cook. And plum duff to the number of grains, are near an it has remained from that day to this. -Manchester Times.
