FOR GOOD ROADS.

veral Counties Have Already Made Application For Aid Under the New Law

The estimation in which the peole of the counties of Maryland hold fully demonstrated, and the efforts the projectors of the new law for State aid to road building is receiving its reward in the earnestness with which five or six counties of the State, led by Prince George's couny, are already taking steps to avail hemselves of the State fund approriated for model road building. Montgomery, Allegany, Harford and Caroline counties have all indicated heir interest in the building of one or more pieces of model road within their boundaries, and of these counties Allegany and Harford are rranging for the preparation of lans, specifications and estimates opon certain roads, in order to obtain the State aid and go forward with the road building as soon as the necessary funds become avail-

Prince George's county, through its Board of Road Commissioners, has the honor of being the first county to petition to have plans, specifications and estimates made for the survey and building of scientifically-constructed roads under the provisions of the new road law, but the interest shown by the people of this section has been closely rivaled by the people of Allegany county in the neighborhood of Cumberland, Frostburg and Lonaconing, and by the residents of Pylesville and of Forest Hill, Harford county. Two recognized qualities of Abyssinian coffee are cultivated and exand the other as Harrar-Mocha. The last named is of first-class quality, being cultivated with care, and brings six cents more per kilogram (2.2 pounds) than the first in the road from Pylesville toward Belair, country of production. The area part of which is to be defrayed by devoted to the cultivation of this coffee is increasing constantly, and Highway Engineer of the Maryland the greater part of the crop is sorted and either mixed or sold in its natural state to the ultimate conthe new State aid road law, and the sumer as Mocha. There is, of course, founders of the new organization, no reason why Abyssinian coffee should not stand upon its own mer-Wilson, are determined to take ad- its and even obtain recognition as vantage of the law by beginning to the best in the world, as the country is the original habitat of the plant, which, in the Valley of Kaffa, still grows in a wild state.

The differences in quality of the Abyssinian coffees result from two causes-the method of cultivation and the method of packing. In the Station, and upon the long discussed provinces which produce the lower macadam road from Churchville to grades the production is immense, Havre de Grace. The residents of but the crop is gathered with very Forest Hill have been very energetic little care, the berries being frein pushing the road in their vicinity | quently gathered from the earth and loosing by this contact a portion of their flavor. Having been gathered, the berries are then packed in green hides, and, thus packed, are exposed to the weather during a journey of caravan of from 45 days to 2 months, thus constantly depreciating in value. In spite of these primitive methods, the exportation at the present time amounts to 2000 muleloads per annum, or 440,925 pounds, much of which is shipped by way of Harrar and the rest by Massowah and the Sudan. The value of exports of Abyssinian coffee amounts annually to $135,100.

The Harrar-Mocha of first quality, all of which is cultivated within easy distance of the city of Harrar, is almost entirely exported to Aden, where, as explained before, it is mixed with Arabian Mocha and forwarded under this name to Europe, and particularly to the United States. It is altogether probable that if large American coffee buyers would study the situation in the countries of production they might find it advantageous to enter into direct relations. The price of Harrar-Mocha coffee at Djibouti is from $17.37 to $19.30 per 200 pounds. The export of this grade amounts to $714,100 per annum. Upon the completion of the railroad to Addis-Ababa the exports of coffee will certainly increase enormously. At the present time the How long does a dream last? An American farmer will naturally wonder how the Japanese farthe question of good roads is being and the Legislative road between ported—one known as Abyssinian mer can support his family from the produce of so small a farm, and how he employs his time on it. The Japanese standard of living is far below the American, and the income of the Japanese farmer is usually increased by his engaging in some subsidiary industry, such as rearing silkworms, reeling silk, or spinning, and by working for wages in the intervals of farm work. In his work on the farm he seldom uses a horse or other draft animal, and his tools are of a very primitive character. He fertilizes and cultivates very thoroughly and is thus enabled to secure a more abundant harvest, besides often raising two or more crops a year on the same field. In the warmer latitudes of Japan barley, indigo, beans and rape are grown successively on one plat of ground within the space of a year.

There are no reliable data respecting the proportion of independent and tenant farmers, the latest published estimates being based on returns made 15 years ago. According to these estimates a little more than half the cultivated land was leased by tenant farmers, the remainder being worked by the owners. The lot of the tenant farmer is far from easy, the high price of land forcing him to lease on terms which leave him a very small return for his labor after he has paid for the necessary fertilizers. These conditions tend to retard the advancement of agriculture by preventing the purchase of new tools and hindering any effort the farmer may make to adopt improved methods.

The government has attempted to aid the progress of agriculture by laws respecting irrigation, the protection of forests so as to control the flow of rivers in the interest of the farmer, the formation of farm boundaries, and the improvement of drainage systems. Small as the farms are, their parts are usually separated so that a farm of two acres may consist of several nonadjacent lots, the average size of a lot being about one-eighth of an acre. A law which went into force in 1900 proboundaries by farmers exchanging fields for those owned by others, so and enlarge the fields to permit the use of horses and machinery, at the same time increasing the tillable area by straightening some boundaries and removing others. About 20,000 acres have already come under the operation of this law.

THE COLLAR-BONE BROKEN.

A very common fracture is that of the collar bone. It is a frequent accident on the football field and one which often occasions great difficulty in treatment, as it is by no means an easy matter to keep the broken fragments in position. Fragture of the wrist is frequently met with in elderly people. It is brought about by falls on the palm of the hand. This variety of fractur is very difficult to diagnose sometimes from a simple sprain. This fracture is best treated by means of special splints, the fingers being moved on the third day to prevent their becoming stiff. In a fortnight t'e splints should be taken off altogether and massage employed combined with douching until all stiffness of the joint and fingers has disappear-

Fractures in the region of the ankle often give rise to stiffness of the joint afterward. Much may be done to prevent this by having the ankle massaged early. Even then, however, a certain degree of lameness is to be expected, especially if the patient is old and his tissues lacking in recuperative power.

In treating fractures generally early massage is always to be advised, especially where the bone is broken in the region of the joint. Not only does friction prevent stiffness, but it actually seems to promote the healng process. Abroad a method of treating fractures much in vogue is to put on plaster-of-paris bandages and allow the patient to go about, and in many instances satisfactory results have been obtained from this form of treatment.—The Scotsman.

Water in the desert is so scarce that the ownership of it is fine. most jealously guarded. In "A Search For the Masked Tawareks" the author says that in buying a palm grove it is always necessary to stipulate for so many sa'as per day or week. A sa'a, literally "an hour," is the amount of water which will flow in an hour through an opening the width of a man's fist in the side of a segia.

The main segias, or channels, as a rule follow the roads of the oasis, forming a sort of ditch at the side. A regular time table is kept, showing the hours at which the owners of the different plantations are entitled to draw

The time is measured by a very curious little water clock, consisting of a metal cup, made usually of brass or copper, with a small hole pierced in the bottom. At the commencement of each hour this is placed in a basin of water. The water gradually runs, through the hole until at the expiration of the hour the cup sinks to the bottom of the basin. It is then taken out, emptied and set again to measure off the next sa'a, and so the process is continued throughout the twenty-four

This instrument is usually kept in the village mosque. In order to prevent all interference with it a watchman is set over it, who notifies the expiration of each hour from the minaret of the mosque.

At the end of the sa'a the opening in the side of the segia through which the water flows is closed with clay, and the water is cut off and allowed to flow down the main channel to the next plantation.

THE WHITE HOUSE.

President Madison's Part In Thus Naming the Executive Mansion, Just how the White House came to be so designated is a question on which historians differ. A local historian in Washington thinks that the burden of proof tends to give credit for the name to President Madison.

The structure was made of Potomac river freestone, and the capitol proper was built of the same stone. At the lights." time the British burned the executive mansion they did a lot of other damnge, and the country was pressed for money to repair the same. ## THE RUBBA MUMMA. ~

One of the Queer Superstitions of the West Indies.

One of the queerest of the many queer superstitions in the West Indies colored people laugh to scorn the idea ly believe that water nymples inhabit streams, which are so numerous in their island

In the old slavery days the sources of such streams were worshiped and sacrifices offered to the "Rubba Mumused to persuade their overseers or masters to sacrifice an ox at the foundrought might be averted. The "Rubba Mumma" is still believed in, and in time of drought the peasants still sacrifice a goat or a chicken to her. She is said to be marvelously beautiful, with a Ely white skin, long black hair and soft blue eyes. She comes out of the water at noon every day, sits down on a rock in the stream and combs her raven tresses. If any Peeping Tom sees her and their eyes meet he is blasted upon the spot, but if she does not happen to see him it is all right.

Food is sometimes taken to the river head and left there for the "Rubba Mumma." The natives will not eat the fish of the rivers which she inhabits, for they are supposed to be her children. It is said that wherever the river nymph resides, provided the fountain is deep and blue, there is a table of pure gold at which she dines. It is an enchanted table, and at "sun hot" (noon) it rises for a moment above the surface of the water and quickly sinks

STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occa-sional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in rigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers.
