pieces of Hellas, whose themes were mainly legendary, are responsible for the impression that the ancient Greek ful, egotistic demigod. He had no counterpart in any historical figure except Alexander the Great, who deemed himself a descendant of Achilles, the sea nymph's son, and acted very much like him.

The Greek of history was an uncommonly consistent republican. In the tolerance he gave to individualism and the capacity he showed-inside his city state-for collective action he carried i the science of government and of political self control in some respects to a height from which all subsequent history is a descending slope. While maintaining democratic standards, he did not enforce nor bow to that tyranhous and narrowing public opinion which the our own time threatens to cast all men in much the same mold, then. But now-He found a place in his scheme of things for diversities of natural bentfor the effeminate dress of Alciblades, the tub of Diogenes, the railings of Cleon, the austerities of Aristides, the satire of Aristophanes, the arrogance of Phocion. The democracy of Athens level. It meant opportunity, not a steam roller.

As creditable a story is told on the side of collective action. Greek politics implied, as Mahaffy has observed, "the reasonable discussion of the public, the final decision of the majority, the submission of magistrates and rulers to the will of the people." The Greek "muritude" was toleraut, patient, loyal to its leaders and capable, as it showed in the Peloponnesian war, of anaking exemplary sacrifices and of instiating and maintaining a course of action for a Protracted period. The whole population of Athens, for inabandoned the country and conquered him on the sea. For that Every free Greek was at entirely above the surface with no ef- moose sheds and renews his antiers conce a legislator, an orator, a potential fort of the arms or legs. The large every year. They become full grown, admiral or general.

There was one capital defect in the Hellenke character. The individual Greek could not stand prosperity. As Grote put it, "The effects of a copious draft of glory on the temperament of an enterprising and ambitious Greek were perfectly maddening." He was a good loser, but nearly always a bad winner. Almost every conspicuous Greek of history became at the end a corruptionist or a traitor. Miltiades, victor of Marathon, became a pirate and died in imprisonment. Themistocles was negotiating to betray the Grecian armament to the great king the day before he destroyed the Persian fleet at Salamis. Alcibiades betrayed in turn the Athenians, the Spartans and the Persians. Demostbenes was banished for embezzlement. The Syracusan leaders became tyrants when they could. Of all Greeks only Timoleon, the Corinthian who freed Syracuse, was at once honorable, fortunate and acclaimed.

Although the Hellenic world fringed the Mediterranean and the Black seas from end to end, the significant political history of Greece is almost altogether the history of Athens and Sparta. The great places of heroic legend, Ithaca and Pylos and Phthia and Areadla and Argos and Corcyra, "the Phaeakes' land," figure but faintly in the historical period. Ithaca was only a barren rock, Arcadia a recruiting ground for rustic mercenaries and Argos and Corcyra and such states as Aetokia, Messens, Thessaly and the Achaean League ancient prototpyes of the rude and turbulent Balkan states of today. The transitory pre-eminence of Thebes was the pre-eminence of its one great soldier. Epaminondas. Between them Spartans and Athenians wrote the great story of political Greece. The Spartans were more a military brotherhood than a state, the men dining in barracks and visiting their families by stealth and all freemen despising wealth and any toll except that of the gymnasium, the drill ground and the battlefield. They were a proud, shy, self contained, home keeping people, so ill at ease and unpracticed in public speech that the word "laconic" has become a proverb. Their cautious political sense, their smilitary discipline, their long lived dynasty and their unbroken maintenance of one form of government secured them the instinctive deference of other Greeks. What the Spartans were not the Athenians in their best period wereeager wanderers over the earth, trafdickers, imperialists, orators, scholars and artists. They were always "getting forward." As the slower Peloponnesians complained, every acquisition was made by them the basis of a new venture, and when they measared arms with the complainants they showed that they could be as constant in misfortune and as elastic in rising from crushing disaster as they were eggressive in pressing an advantage.

"DOUSING" RODS.

Art of Divination In the Bowels of the Earth Explained.

There is undoubtedly a practical art of discovering springs. Indians or frontiersmen can find water in the desert when a "tenderfoot" cannot. Mexicans and experienced prospectors can similarly find ore. These arts consist mainly in the recognition of superficial signs which escape the ordinary ob-

It is not necessary that the operator should consciously note these signs separately and reason upon them. No doubt he frequently does so, though he method to others. But in many instances he recognizes by association and memory the presence of a group has repeatedly found to attend springs is often almost unerring for a given limited district, but under new conditions it breaks down. Old miners from California or Australia have often made in other regions the most foolish and hopeless attempts to find gold because they thought this or that place "looked just like" some other place in which they had mixed successfully.

Apart from the magnetic minerals there is no proof that ore deposits exhibit their presence and nature by any attraction or other active force. With regard to water, however, there may be an action affecting the temperature and moisture of the overlying surface. Even here, however, it seems more likely that such effects are manifested visibly to a close observer rather than by direct affection of his nervous or muscular system. The favorite fields for water diviners are regions in which water is abundant, but not gathered upon given horizons of impermeable strata underlying porous rocks.-Cassier's Magazine.

ONE CAUSE OF ILLNESS.

Ridiculous Fnds That Spring From

Smattering of Knowledge. A famous physician upon being asked recently what is the chief cause of ill health replied: Thinking and talking about it all the time. This ceaseless introspection in which so many of the rising generation of nervous folk indulge is certainly wearing them out. When they are not worrying as to whether they sleep too much or too little they are fidgeting over the amount of food they take or the quantity of exercise necessary for health. In short, they never give themselves a moment's peace. Our grandfathers did not concern themselves with these questions. They ate, drank, slept, as nature prompted them. Undoubtedly they were healthier in mind and body for their sublime indifference, and if we asked ourselves fewer questions we should have less time to analyze or imagine ailments.

That medical science has made remarkable progress in the last few decades cannot be denied. The fault for some present day undesirable conditions lies not with the doctor, but with the patient. There has been too great a tendency on the part of the laity to acquire a smattering of medical knowledge through the reading of so called "health" magazines and pamphlets and to put into practice on their own account that "little knowledge," which, it cannot be denied, is a "dangerous thing." The following of some most ridiculous fads along the lines of eating, drinking, sleeping and exercise has assisted in swelling the mortality statistics. Our grandfathers would hold up their hands in horror at many of the foolish things we do in the name of "health." A little more of the comfortable nonchalance of our healthy ancestors would do no harm to the rising generation .- Housekeeper.

Half or Two-thirds. The bishop of Kensington at a prize distribution recently told of a case in which a boy got the better of the examiner. "Suppose," asked the examiner, "I offered you half an orange and two-thirds of an orange, which piece would you take?" "Please, sir, the half!" shouted the lad. "Stupid boy!" exclaimed the examiner. "I shall put a black mark against you for that." Subsequently a deputation of scholars waited on the examiner to convince him that he was wrong. "Why am I wrong?" he inquired. "Because Tommy does not like oranges at all," was the conclusive answer.-St. James' Ga-

The taken from him by three men, their workmen are genuine artists, combining artistic perception with great manual skill. Furnished with rude tools, but with great patience and skill, these workmen produce articles of great beauty. They have applied the principle of division of labor, or specialization, to their work. The cabinet makers first put together the various parts of the materials to be incrusted. The joining is done without the aid of nails and with a nice system of dovetailing and use of paste, of which lacquer is the base. From this cabinet maker the wood passes into the hands of the designer, who makes sketches for its ornamentation on rice paper.

Courtly, Serene, Majestic. At once a genius and a favorité of fortune, Titian moved through his long life of pomp and splendor serene and self contained. He was of old and no ble family, born at Pieve; in the mountain district of Cadore. By the time that he was eleven years old his futher, Gregorio di Conte Vecelli, recognized that he was destined to be a painter and sent him to Venice; where he became the pupil first of Bellim and then of the great artist Glorgine. From the first indeed he enjoyed every privilege that an artist of his time could need. The doge and council of Venice recognized his ability, as did the dukes of Ferrara and Mantua. As the years went on kings, popes and emperors were his friends and patrons. In his home at Biri, a suburb of Venice, from which in one direction the snowclad Alps are visible and in the other the soft luxuriance of the Venetian lagoon, he maintained a princety bousehold, associating with the greatest and most accomplished men of Verice, working on until he had reached the age of ninety-nine years. Even then it was no ordinary ailment, but the visitations of the plague, that carried him off, and such was the honor in which he was held that the law against the burial of the plague stricken in a church was overruled in this case, and he was lail in the tomb which he had prepared for himself in the great Church of the

LONG-MISSING SAFE UNEARTHED AT LAST.

The old iron safe, containing a large amount of specie and other valuables, which was washed away in the Leishear Building, on the Potapsco River, in the memorable freshet of 1868, has been unearthed on the river bank some distance down the stream from Ellicott city, While the names of the successful have not been made public, the re- A. M. covery of the safe with its contents can scarcely be doubted, as the old rusty doors and broken pieces of the old receptacle which were left by the searchers have been seen and inspected by several persons who were familiar with its former appearance. These evidences are considered conclusive as to the truthfulness of the reported finding of the almost forgotten property.

The safe belonged to the late Thomas Leishear, and was in his store, which was situated on the Baltimore county side of the Patapsco. It contained between $4,000 to $5,000 in gold and silver coin. When the sudden rush of waters came down the river one day in July, 1868, Mr. Leishear's store and warehouse, together with 20 other residences and business places along the river front, were carried down the stream. The safe was also taken away, and from time to time searching parties have spent days in their efforts te recover the missing treasure. Rewards were offered for its recovery, and the Potapsco was sounded as far down as Lichester, but the work of the searching parties proved unsuccessful, and all abandoned by the owners.

FUTURE OF C. & O. CANAL.

The future of the C. & O. canal is a subject now occupying the attention of the railroad world. Since the acquisition of the State of Maryland's interest in the waterway by the Western Maryland railroad, many ramors have been Rheumatic trouble followed, and now in possession of the surviving trustees and is virtually controlled by the Baltimere and Ohio.

While the Western Maryland owns the canal, subject to the mortgage of 1844 and 1878, it cannot, under present conditions, force a sale of its interests and claims until January 1 next. The condition therefore will hamper the Western Maryland railroad in any plans which may be in contemplation, but it is possible that this receivership, He is survived by his widow and the folwrit of habeas corpus sued out by their upon a large leather covered sofa in the short distance south of Dry Bridge the for that is what the trusteeship amounts father, who was out of town when they cloakroom. TWENTY YEARS' SLEEP. Rip Van Winkle's Case May Have Been More Fact Than Fiction. Even superficial students of folklore know that the tale of Rip Van Winkle, supposing that Irving really heard it in the old Dutch settlements along the Hudson, is by no means peculiar to that district, but is found in some form or other all over the world. In other words, the idea that it is possible for a human being to survive in a state of unconsciousness for a very long time would seem to be either a universal sancy or to be founded on some actual experience.

Dr. Lancereaux in the Paris Bulletin of the Academy of Medicine reports such an experience, the case of a woman who actually did, so far as intelligent consciousness was concerned, sleep almost exactly twenty years,

The patient, of a neurotic and hysterical family, had always been delicate and nervous. On May 31, 1883, she was severely frightened and fell into violent hysteria, which after twentyfour hours passed into unconsciousness. In this condition, interrupted every month or six weeks by sudden conyulsive attacks, she lay until May 23, 1903, kept alive entirely by injections of nourishment.

On May 23 she was selzed with hysteria similar to that at the beginning of her sleep, and the next day there was another convulsion. On May 25 she began definitely to recover conactousness and by the next day was able to speak intelligently of events before her sleep and could also remember from day to day since her waking, Of happenings during her sleep, such as the drawing of some of her teeth, she knew nothing. On the evening of

May 28 she died peacefully, The particular case is of interest chiefly to the medical profession, but the general fact of survival in unconsciousness for a very long time shows how such tales as those of the Sleeping Beauty, the Seven Sleepers of Ephesus and Rip Van Winkle, to mention only the most familiar examples, could have originated from actual experience and observation. Very likely such cases occurred more than once.

"Truth is stranger than fiction," runs the old saying. It is undoubtedly more correct to say that fiction is merely enlarged, reduced, distorted and otherwise decorated fact and that without a fact within general knowledge from which to start fiction could not exist. It is entirely safe to conjecture that at some prehistoric period, sleeping not out of doors, of course, but under shelter, and for many weeks and probably months, if not years, there was a Rip Van Winkle.-Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Bill Was Not In the Senate. One of Senator Frye's scintillations as presiding officer, when the Philippine bill was near its passage in the senate, should not be lost to the world, Such measures, till perfected, are considered in committee of the whole, not in the senate, as the term goes. The distinction is of little popular significance, but of great parliamentary importance.

Senator Bacon, wishing to make a certain motion, was informed that the bill was not in the senate, but in committee of the whole.

"Oh, I thought we were in the senate," replied Mr. Bacon.

"We are in the senate," Mr. Frye responded, "but the bill is not."-Washington Post.

Henry VIII. and Puddings. Bluff King Hal, otherwise Henry VIII. of England, was exceedingly fond of puddings. At one time he gave a certain Mistress Cornwallis a house in Aldgate for herself and her heirs forever "in reward of fine puddings." In King Henry VIII.'s private accounts occur again and again entries of his rewards to different housewives for bringing him puddings. A typical instance runs thus: "Item. The same day paid to the wife that made the king podings at Hampton corte, vis.

viiid." This would be about $1.75, but

Its value was much greater when the entry was made. This love for "fine puddings" explains much in the familiar rotund figure of King Hal. A Matter of Gender. The English language is supposed to be very simple in the matter of genders, but foreigners who triumphantly handle questions of gender of inanimate things in their own languages often have their difficulties with the English. A Frenchman recently came to grief over his English. "I fear I cockroach too much upon your time, madame," he remarked politely to his hostess. "En-croach, monsieur," she smilingly corrected him. He threw up his hands in despair. "Ah, your Eng-

CASTORIA. The Kind You Have Always sought Charlet Eletchers CABS IN RUSSIA.

Fares Are Low if You Are Up to the Tricks of the Drivers. In no European country are cab fares so cheap as in Russia, for there clasp waists after the Russian mode. If you know just about how far you and tell him where you want to go and what is the price offered. The etiquette is followed invariably. The driver throws up his eyes in horror. He calls upon the saints to witness that so ridiculous a price must be doubled before he could look at it.

And before you have gone ten paces the cabman is after you, pointing politely to the seat in the drosky and, with a grin, repeating frequently the Russian equivalent for "please."

But if you are driving to a destination at an unknown distance it is necessary to ask the opinion of the first bellied, belted, bearded brigand on the box of a drosky. Then it is your turn to throw your eyes to heaven and call on the saints. A quick problem in division works itself out in your head. Threes into a ruble? And you put yourself up to a Dutch auction that the atmosphere is a compressible, along the rank. "Hotel So-and-so, clastic cas we find that when the state of the state sorok kopeck!" you cry, with a leaning toward generosity. There is a race for you. You drive a long way in Moscow for a dime.

When Vigo Was Famous.

Vigo, the Spanish seaport, is an old time scene of war. It was to Vigo that Drake and Norris sailed in 1588 to place Don Antonio on the throne of Portugal. They burned Vigo, but failed to capture Lisbon and went away cursing each other. So little plunder was there that the common sailors received but 5 shillings a man in wages and took to robbery, for which many of them were hanged in and near London. When the English under Rooke put into Vigo harbor again there was treasure in sight. A fleet of Spanish galleons, of which Benbow had been in pursuit, was in the bay, protected by a French fleet. Several galleons were captured by the English, but more went to the bottom and there remain to this day. Nowadays Vigo is a commonplace little town.

Great Men.

It is a matter of common observation that at the passing of the great men of each generation there is a pessimistic feeling prevalent that "there were giants in those days," But the feeling has never had any warrant in the actual deficiencies of the oncoming generations. Orators have come and gone and statesmen have come and gone, and sometimes their immediate successors have not been discernible. But in time the men have emerged who have taken their places and who have improved upon the patterns they left. -Des Moines Register.

Never Touched Him. The old man paused at the parlor door on his way upstairs. "Don't forget, young man," he said,

"that the lights in this house are all out at 10 o'clock." "Thanks," rejoined the young man, who was helping the fair maid to hold the sofn down, "but-er-couldn't you make an exception tonight and put 'em out an hour earlier?"-Chicago News

MASCULINE VANITY,

Men Who Stop to Admire Themselves In Show Windows.

"Speaking of the trifling affairs of life," said a clerk in one of the big stores, "I'm not so sure that men are so much when you come to compare them with women, although they pretend to rise superior on occasions. I've a notion that human nature is about the same in both sexes, after all, and it crops up in some way. You know there's a theory that a woman couldn't pass a mirror without giving a glance at herself if she were on her way to rescue her only child from a burning accident.

"It may not always be vanity, course. Perhaps it's force of habit. Well, you'd be surprised at the number of men who have that same habit. I'm here at a counter in front, where I can see some things, and it's better than a poor play to watch the faces at that big show window. They are men's faces I'm talking about. The light strikes that window so that it makes a pretty good looking glass of it, and I'm truthful when I tell you that it holds up as many hes as it does shes in the course of a day. The only difference is that the woman makes no bones of what she's doing. She'll give a twirl to her front hair and a pull to her veil and make sure that her hat and nose are on straight, and she doesn't care whether passersby are on to her game or not. But the man plays off. He wants you to suppose that it's the display of goods that's caught him. Yes, it is, I guess not. He's wrapped up in velvets at $1 a look lower down, where there are no shall I send it?"' she reported. 'Eef he goods, and step out a little to get the cut of his trousers and shoes. And very often he'll put on that 'look pleasant' expression the photographer asks you to wear that makes a driveling idiot of you in the picture. There is no great harm in it provided the men are in no great hurry and have nothing better to do, but when I hear them loftily discussing mirrors in connection with their wives I have to amile to myself."-Providence Journal.

THE CURVED BALL.

It Is the Atmosphere Which Causes

Its Eccentric Shoots. Most any ten-year-old youngster can surve a ball, even though he does not know why he can do so except that half a dozen drivers on the boxes of the leather must be held in a certain their droskies-tiny victorias, hung low way. Possibly a half dozen of the and with just room for two if the two major league twirlers know something about the science of the curve, but comparatively few understand why want to drive you take the first driver they can produce their "benders." The Scientific American gives the following as the scientific explanation of the matter:

"The pitcher in the field tells us that the ball curves because he gives it a twist, but scientifically this will not do. Why will the twist make the curve You are not deceived. You walk on. If a ball were thrown in a certain direction and if the force of gravitation were not at work the ball would con tinue on in a straight line forever. Some force of resistance is then at work when a ball is made to deviate in a curve from its straight course. If a feather is dropped in a vacuum in an exhausted receiver of an air pump it will drop like a shot, but if it is dropped out in the air it will go down irregularly and slowly, shifting from side to side.

"It is the atmosphere which causes the ball to curve. Bearing in mind elastic gas, we find that when the ball leaves the hand of the pitcher with a rapid rotary motion it 'impinges upon a continuous elastic cushion,' and this moderate resistance, or friction, changes its course in the direction which is given to the rotary motion. Take an outshoot of a right handed pitcher, for instance. He impresses upon the ball a rapid centrifugal rotary motion to the left, and the ball goes to the left because the atmosphere, compressible and elastic, is packed into an elastic cushion just ahead of the ball by the swift forward and rotary motion, and the friction, which is very great in front of the ball, steers it in the direction which it is turning!"
