The announcement had been the sensation of the day. It had met with denials high and low. It was declared to be impossible, incredible. The Japanese declined to admit it, and the Russians said they had no confirmation. Mr. Witte intimated strongly that St. Petersburg had not apprised him of any such action by the president. There was even. a Arsposition to ridicule the idea of arbitrating the price of half of the island. Nevertheless, on all hands it position the ground was cut out from under Emperor Nicholas.

Mr. Witte by consummate skill in conceding all the demands of Japan anvolving the real issues of the war, declared that the supposed case of had manoett, ad his adversaries into a position where unless they aban was malarial fever only, and that doned the claim for in emnity, they could be held responsible for continu- The patient is Wade Hardy, who had ing the war for money. But such a stroke is not expected. Mr. Witte knows that public opinion, both in America and in Europe, as well the women and took a short cut as in Russia, would condemn him if he way was opened for a possible accord.

While apparently the real negotiations leading up to the denouement were conducted by the president at Oyster Bay, acting through Baron Kaneko on the one hand and Ambassador Meyer on the other, it is now believed that much has been going on beneath the surface here. Another indication of the sudden turn in the events was the arrival here of Frank A. Vanderlip, vice president of the City National Bank of New York. He registered at the hotel as "John Howard," and after dinner went to Mr. Witte's room and remained there one hour. When asked his mission, Mr. Vanderlip said he was only "interested" in the situation. He had met Mr. Witte several years ago when he was at the head of the Russian finance ministry and had also seen him in New York upon his arrival. He had talked with him about the situation and outlook in Russia, the state of the negotiations, etc. He evaded inquiries as to whether the subject of a loan had been discussed, N. It Is Sald to Make a Better Infusion Than the Whole Leaves.

'An English traveler says in a letter to the London Times: "History tells us that when coffee was first brought to the cities of western Europe the first makers of it were Turks. They roasted and ground the berries and served the liquor, as it is served to this day in the east, grits and all. We still drink coffee as we drank it then, with this difference—that we mostly omit the grits and drink an infusion instead of a decoction. It was not so with tea. Sterne's Bad Grammar. Among authors of any rank the most incorrigible offender, from the grammarian's point of view, was Sterne. That lay for lie does not constantly appear in his writings in modern editions is not due to him, but to the editors of his works. Contemporary critics attacked him for perpetrating "such English," but their censure had no effect upon his practice. When in 1768 his "Sentimental Journey" was published the leading review of the day savagely assailed him for adopting a vulgarism characteristic "of a city news writer," it said. "But Maria lays in my bosom," wrote Sterne. "Our readers," remarked the lrate reviewer, "may possibly conclude that Maria was the name of a favorite pullet." Sterne's indifference to the rebukes he received on this particular point seems to indicate that he was one of those who regarded the usage as proper .-Professor Thomas R. A Smoker's Fad. There are some men who have certain fads about smoking, and some of those fads are curious and expensive, said a New York dealer. I know a man who believes that the retention of the ash on the end of the cigar makes the cigar smoke better and taste better. He says if he were a rich man he would never smoke a clgar after the ash had fallen from it. I attempted to persuade him that a cigar that retained the ash was possibly better because by this it showed that it was more evenly and closely rolled and the ash from such a cigar would not injure the flavor or the smoking quality. But he would not be convinced. find a deal of delight in active games He says he can tell the difference immediately. And so he goes about careand such games as deer and hounds, fully guarding the ashes on the end of his weeds as long as possible and looking upon their accidental loss as a terporary misfortune.

alarm had been given she had gone to the bottom and no trace of her was left upon the waters.

The account of the escape of the two men out of all the ship's crew was remarkable. One of these men was at the wheel at the time the order was given; the other was upon watch. As son as the ship began to careen these two men rushed for one of the small boats, which they jumped into as the vessel began to go down. With their knives they severed the ropes as the waters level was reached, and the small boat was thrown far out on the waves. They furthermore say that they discovered through the blackness and storm the figures of part of the awakened crew, who some of them managed to crowd into another of the ship's boats. This was, however, caught in a trough of the sea, thrown help could be heard as the ship went down into the sea which swallowed Homesteads In Stock Regions. The movement to increase the homestead from 160 acres to 640 for the stock sections of the west has many supporters and is a good thing. No man can think of starting in the stock business with a quarter section, while with an entire section he can begin in a modest way and make money until he is able to buy more land. About all. the territory available for farming purposes has been taken up. What remains is fit only for grazing unless irrigation is possible. Why not give enough in a homestead to make it worth while for a stockman to take up a homestead? It is better to have the vacant government land taken up by small holders than to let it remain ille and be used by the big ranchers for little or no compensation.-Orange Judd Farmer.

Wheat Midge or Red Weevil. Wheat midge seems to have done more damage than usual in some sections of Ohio this season. H. A. Gossard, entomologist of the state experiment station, says the great majority of the flies are always derived from the supae buried in old wheatfields. Rotation of crops will be of some help in controlling them. However, the only thorough remedy is to plow the stubble under in the fall to such a depth that the flies cannot make their way to the surface the next year. This should be done as soon after harvest as possible. Plowing to a depth of eight | ing brides absolutely self possessed, at or nine inches is sufficient. Burning the most jocose, laughing and smiling and stubble before plowing will help.
