Four ment of justice to the matter. years ago the laws against all of the states were considered as practically dead letters. Not because the offense was uncommon, but be cause it was uncommon for officials to be prosecuted for it. Here was a crime worse than any other, for their offense violated the law, while bribery strikes at the foundation of all laws. Yet the law denouncing it was not enforced; bribery became the usual and expected thing all over the land; corrupt men feasted and fattened at public expense, laws became merchandise on the market, and all this time the public conscience was asleep. When the revelation came the people saw how they had been plundered, they saw the offense in all its enormity, and from one end of the land to the other there was a civic awakening. "I have spoken of corruption, bribery and grafting, using the terms as they are commonly used synony. mously. While the effect on the public may be as injurious from grafting as from boodling there is a distinction between them. The boodler sells his vote and prostitutes his trust for bribe money contrary to law, but the grafter is not always a boodler. The remedy for corruption, bribery and grafting of his mother shot and killed his father of every kind is to enforce the law. "What have you got there?" asked the editor, seeing him untie the cord. "These are the sixty stories you asked me to write," answered his visitor. The editor gasped for breath.

"But I didn't ask you to write anything like that number!" he said.

"You expressed your willingness to accept sixty stories like the one I wrote on approval, and here they are. I merely took you at your word," quoth the young Irishman. The stories were not refused.

The Salamander.

In Andrews' "Anecdotes Ancient and Modern" (1789) one reads, "Should a glass house fire be kept up, without extinction for a longer term than seven years, there is no doubt but that salamander would be generated in the cinders." This probably accounts for moved from the truth that the curious lizard-like beast so called cannot enpatients could take a good course of dure even the heat of the sun, but skulks away under stones to avoid it. this treatment they would need no pop-It will never lose its reputation for fire eating, though, which lingers still in the heating utensil that is named The cormorant is trained by the Chiafter it.

Dickens and Thackersy.

"I once missed meeting Dickens at it from swallowing the fish it has taken. One Chinaman will utilize a Chatsworth. He left the day of my dozen of these birds during the day's arrival," writes Leveson-Gower in his fishing, sending them under the water memoirs. "Thackeray came that same afternoon and was anxious to hear about Dickens' visit. He wondered whether he had toadled the duke very much. My impression is that, though professing to be friends, these two great novelists did not care much for one another."

THEONEWHO CAN DO THINGS

There Is Always a Demand For the Exceptional Man.

Progressive employers are always looking for the exceptional man or woman, the one who can step out from the crowd and do things in an original way, who can economize in processes, who can facilitate business. They are always looking for the earmarks of leadership, of superior ability. They are looking for the progressive employee with new ideas who can help them to be more of a success. They know very well that they can get any number of automatons -- multitudes who will do a thing just well enough The to keep their places-but they are looking for originality, individuality, for pose. FLAG ETIQUETTE.

May, 30, Memorial day, each year the United States displays its flag at half staff at all army posts, stations and national cemeteries from sunrise until midday. Immediately before noon a dirge is played by the band or field music, and the national salute of twenty-one guns is fired. At the conclusion of this memorial tribute at noon the flag is hoisted to the top of the staff and remains there until sunset, The idea is that the national ensign is too sacred an object to be long in mourning for any man or number of men, no matter how exalted their rank.

The flag reversed, with the union down, indicates distress. The flag.on anything but a fort actually besieged should never be displayed between sunset and sunrise When the flag is to be displayed at half mast it is lowered to that position from the top of the staff. It is holsted to the top before it is finally lowered .--Washington Post.

THE FIRST CIGARS.

Havanas Were Smoked In Paris as

Long Ago as 1813, When were cigars first smoked? According to a French authority, the weed in this shape was not introduced into France till the return of the French army from Spain in 1823. This fact is on the authority of Hippolyte Auger, the dramatic author, who writes thus in his memoirs:

"Our return from Paris was by way of Orleans, On the route we met quite frequently officers returning from Spain. They had generally cigars in their mouths-a new habit, since become general. From this point of view the campaign of 1823 had the good financial result of establishing a new branch of import trade."

Another document, however, carries back the use of the cigar to a slightly earlier period. The "Hermit of the Chassee d'Antin," 1813, going to see his nephew, a young officer at Paris, F. Shuff. finds him at his hotel in morning costume and smoking a Havana cigar. The taste for cigars seems at this time to have been sufficiently extended to make them a common article in the stock of every grocer who was careful to cater to the wants of his customers.
