Mr. Mathues said he had never increased the deposit in the Enterprise National Bank, and that he had been gradually withdrawing a portion of the money belonging to the general fund from the state depositories for several months for the purpose of paying the school appropriation of $5,-500,000, which fell due last June, and of which nearly $2,000,000 remains unpaid. The belance in the sinking fund, according to the statement given out, was $4,192,028.31. This money is carried on deposit in 135 banks and drust companies in the state.

The directors and stockholders of the bank we still in the dark concerning the deficit and do not know whether the private loans made by the suicide cashier, T. Lee Clark, will reach $700,000 or greatly exceed that amount. Mr. Gwinner, president of the bank, when pressed for a statement, said he did not know whether the shortage would be $1000 or $2,000,000. He intimated that he would insist on a statement being given out on behalf of the firectors concerning the bank's affairs.

It is reported that a syndicate is buying the accounts of the small depositors at 50 cents on the dollar, but sales are few, as the depositors are hopeful of gettting back every cent of their money.

Besides reasserting that a statement soon shall be forthcoming, Mr. Gwinner declares he intends to make whoever is responsible for the wreck suffer for it. Said he: "The story has been published that the officers of the bank are to be prosecuted. Very well, I shall prosecute the men who wrecked the bank. All this is going to cost me a great deal, but I will spend the money to do it."

Mr. Gwinner is rated as a millionaire three times over, and is amply able to keep his promise.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 21.-The sensation in the investigation of the affairs of the suspended Enterprise National Bank of Alleghery was the report that among the dead cashier's papers was found a confession giving in detail the operations which culminated in his death and closing of the bank. The confession or statement, it is learned from the best of authority, consists of a short paper written with a lead pencil, declaring that W. H. Andrews is responsible for the whole trouble. Details of the statement are not known, but Andrews is the only man mentioned. The paper was found among Cashier Clark's private papers. Fred Gwinner, Sr., president of the bank, stated positively that notes for large smounts are in possession of the bank which bear the names of W. H. Andrews, F. J. Torrance and other politicians.

Penrose Makes Denial. Philadelphia, Oct. 21-United States Sepator Boies Penrose denied emphatically the rumors connecting him with the loans from the Enterprise National Bank of Pittsburg. Senator Pessose's statement follows:

Rev. Alfred J. P. McClure is the originator of the plan, for which he has anlisted strong support. The erection of the colleges will be begun as soon as the necessary funds are collected. It is proposed to make the movement national in its scope.

Shot Herself In Atlantic City Hotel. Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 23.-Miss Annie Scott, of New York, committed suicide in a hotel here by shooting herself in the right temple. Her act was premeditated without a doubt. She laid down on a couch in her bedroom and placed a revolver to her temple and fired. Her body was found by a servant. She was about 35 years of age. It was learned that the suicide was due to the fact that her intended husband had died suddenly in the west. Her mother at present is in a New York hospital, an invalid.

The dead are: William Winch, John Norman Delaney and James Yonkers.

The launch was hired by eight of the men, most of whom lived in the northcross the tug's stern. Captain Mott hailed him and tried to prevent him from doing so. Captain Winch was standing at the wheel of the launch as he went around the stern of the tug. The hawser of the tug struck him and knocked him overboard. Before the captain's son or any other member of the party could take the wheel to steer the launch clear of the barge the latter struck the frail boat amidship, capsizing it, The launch rolled under the barge and its occupants went with it. Captain Mott put the tug about and went to the rescue. He and his crew threw ropes and life preservers to the struggling men in the water, but they were only able to save three of them. The rescued men were landed here by the tug and cared for at a hotel, Captain Mott, assisted by several residents of Beverly, went in search of the bodies, and were rewarded by finding three. The local authorities requested the Philadelphia police to send a tug to Beverly to drag for the other bodies, and a police boat was ordered to the scene. The launch was washed ashore. It is badly wrecked.

With the exception of Captain Winch and his son all of the party were in the cabin of the launch when the crash came. Russell and Rutherford got out of the cabin before the launch rolled under the barge, and to this circumstance they owe their lives. The other did not get a chance to get out of the small compartment. The families of the victims did not know of the accident until Russell and Rutherford went to their homes and broke the news.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 24.-All Mobile lent itself to the reception of Presi- rably. dent Theodore Roosevelt during his two-hours' stay in Mobile. There was general closing of all business houses and along the route of the procession to the stand on Bienville Square, where the reception ceremonies took place, residences and stores were covered with decorations of lights and bunting in the national colors. The sidewalks and streets along Government street were packed with humanity, and at McGill Institute, Barton Academy and other points thousands of school children were massed. singing patriotic songs as the procession passed. Cheer after cheer welcomed the nation's chief. A stand was erected in Bienville Square, which, when the president arrived, was filled with 40,000 citizens. The area was brilliantly lighted, while live oaks formed a canopy of green.

The president was received by a reception committee of 500 citizens. His seat was on an elevated dais in a chair which was built by the students of a technical school in Japan. Back of the chair was an enormous stuffed bear, eight feet tall, bearing in its mouth a floral independence bell and above its head a white dove holding a streamer on which was the inscription: "Blessed is the peace-

THE FLUTED COLUMN.

Why the Greeks Adopted This Form

In Their Architecture. The Greeks observed that a smooth column melted in the light and that its lines were vague and uncertain, writes Jean Schoepfer in the Architectural Record Magazine. In order to restore its definiteness they conceived the idea of fluting it. The sharp ridges of the flutings, catching the light, contrasted with the dark hollows, thus giving body to the column and emphasizing the vertical outline of the edifice. whence a double advantage. Rough Experiences on the Stormy

Coast of the Scilly Isles. There are plenty of adventures to be found in photographing the great waves of the sea. F. J. He had lowered me down a nurrow crevice, a 'chimney,' as it is called, and having seen me safely come to ground at the bottom he calmly threw the rope down to me and went off, never thinking that he might be required to haul me up again. One glance at the sea told me that I was in a most dangerous position. The tide was coming in and would soon be welling up the chimney, and only by way of the chimney could I escape. DOWN IN A SALT MINE

ONE OF THE WEIRDEST SIGHTS TO BE FOUND IN THE WORLD.

An Atmosphere That Exhilarates and Then Parches - Workings In Roumania That Date Back to the Time of the Old Roman Empire.

There are four salt mines in Roumania, two quite close to one another, at tilanic and Doftana. One of the mines at Slanic dates back to the time of the itomans, whose methods were not so scientific as those of their modern successors. They made bottle shaped excavations guite close to one another, with the result that the wedge of earth between bottles constantly threatened to Modern methods avoid any such danger. Instead of burrowing down again into a new mine you cut horizontal gal-Jeries into the rock, huge pillars of salt are left standing to support the earth and fresh caverns are hallowed out. Thus, without any extra amount of labor, it is possible to extend the mine almost indefinitely and the pillars serve to confirm the ecclesiastical effect of the great subterranean basilica,

I saw the old Roman mine from one of the upper galleries, which was reached by strange, almost endless, tunnels illuminated with gay Chinese lanterns. A little verdure alone was needed to complete the Illusions of the gardens of Aladdin. The impressions afforded by the view from this gallery were so unique and so marvelous that I hesitate to attempt to describe them.

Some minutes were necessary to grow accustomed to the twilight. A few braziers containing shavings soaked in petroleum were flaring up in a feverish manner, and as I looked over into the darkness of the abyss I was reminded of Dore's version of Dante looking into the uttermost depths of

What struck me most was the insecurity of my position. There was, of course, no danger whatever, and the ledge on which I stood was fairly broad. But it possessed no parapet, and in order to look down it was necessary to come very near to the brink. What added most to the sense of insecurity was a kind of pier or commencement of a bridge which projected over

I do not know whether it dated back to the days of the Romans, but at any rate it was almost prehistoric in aspect. I did not need the advice of my companions to discourage any attempt at walking the plank along this road to destruction, but I have seen few places capable of affording more temptation to those with suicidal inclinations.

Suddenly a signal was given and enormous bonfires were cast down from the roof of the mine. Several long seconds elapsed before they fizzled out in the pond of salt water hundreds of feet below. The effect was extraordinary. First the gray walls were illuminated as the huge molten mass blazed past them, then they were overcast with fleeting, ghostly shadows and at jast plunged once more into a darkness which was only emphasized by the flickering lights above.

Perhaps the prettlest object in this old mine was a common tub which had been placed some years ago upon the ledge to receive the drippings of salt game. Being a good player, the host water. I tasted this water and found It so salty that it almost bit and solidified my tongue. As the drops fell the greater part of them immediately crystallized with incredible rapidity.

The original tub was no longer to be seen. It had been covered up entirely with glistening incrustations, which gave it the appearance of a huge snow fountain adorned with the most exquisitely artistic designs. It was now about six feet high and several feet in thickness, while a piece of string which had been suspended above it had now become a rope of molten pearls.

Returning along the tunnel, we passed a little trapdoor about two feet square, This was pulled up, and I was privileged to look down into the new mine and beheld one of the most remarkable sights to be found in the world, Hundreds of feet below, upon a ragged field of dazzling whiteness, suggestive of the ice park in the arctic regions, herds of men, each apparently as large as a cheese mite, moved about feveri hly like the occupants of an ant heap, Here and there points of electric light shone like suspended stars. The general impression was that of a nest of insects viewed through a Brobdingnagian magnifying glass,

A hushed tinkling noise came up from the depths, like fairy music. thought I should never tire of watching the graceful movements of these remote human insects. I almost began to fancy that they must belong to another planet, and such was the extraordinary fascination exercised by this marvelous sight that I found it a painful wrench to tear myself away, I yould have remained groucking over this peephole for hours, and I felt quite a moyed with the director of the mine a hen he patiently reminded me that I Fill had much to see before the depar-

1 .re of my train, So we returned along the gallery and titered one of the powerful lifts which are employed to bring up trucks of salt from the bottom of the mine. The director assured me, with a smile, that I need not have any alarm about the capacity of the lift, as it was constructed to carry over twenty-five hundred-

In leed, we crawled down at a snall's pace and had an opportunity of studying the strange natural frescoes on the walls. THE ORGAN.

Its Fitness For the Form of Composition Known as the Fugue.

The organ as it existed in Bach's day and as in most essentials it exists now is an instrument peculiarly suggestive in regard to the realization of the finest and most complete effects of harmony, of modulation and that of simultaneous progression of melodies in polyphonic combination which is most completely mustrated in the form of composition known as the fugue. It is so for two or three reasons. In the first place, it is the only instrument in which the sounds are sustained with the same intensity for any required length of time after they are first emitted. However long a note may have to be sustained, its full value is there till the moment the finger quits the key, a quality which is invaluable when we are dealing with long suspensions and chains of sound; secondly, the opportunity of playing the bass with the feet on the pedals, leaving the left hand free for the inner parts, puts within the grasp of a single player a full and extended harmony and a freedom in manipulation such as no other Instrument affords; thirdly, and in the case especially of fugue compositions, the immense volume and power of the pedal notes impart a grandeur to the entry of the bass part in the composition such as no other medium for producing music can give us. In the time of Bach this splendid source of musical effect was confined to the great organs of Germany

The English organs of the day had in general no pedal board, and it is probably owing to this fact more than to anything else that Handel's published organ muste is so light and even ephemeral in style as compared with Bach's; that he treated the organ, as Spitta truly observes, merely like a larger and more powerful harpsichord. Without the aid of the pedal it would be rather difficult to do otherwise, and the English organ of the day was in every respect a much lighter and thinner affair than the "huge house of the sounds," the thunder of which was stored in the organ gallery of many a Lutheran church.—London Standard.

An Anecdote of General Scott. After his retirement General Scott passed the summer of 1862 at Cozzens' hotel, West Point, where every evening a party of gentlemen adjourned to the general's sitting room for their was usually victorious, but if he and his partner were ever beaten Scott's fre was made manifest. One night it happened that the usual party was missing. What was to be done? The general must have his whist. There happened to be staying at the hotel a judge, who was asked to do the favor of taking the fourth hand. With some protest on his part he agreed to do it. By cutting for partners the general and the judge played together and were beaten-horribly beaten, Knowing how it irritated the general to lose the game, the judge as he rose from the table said in his most dignified and courtly way: "I formerly played a fairly good game of whist, but have been out of practice so long that I am somewhat rusty. I hope that fact may be taken as an excuse for my mistakes." Whereupon the general arose with equal dignity and retorted, "I am glad to learn that I have been playing with latent talent and not with a natural born fool!"

Mendelssohn's Contempt For Liszt. "You know," said Liszt on one occasion, "that Mendelssohn, who was the most jealous musician that ever lived, always had a dislike for me, and on one occasion at a soiree at Dr. K.'s he drew a picture of the devil on a blackboard playing his G minor concerto with five hammers in lieu of fingers on each hand. The truth of the matter is that I once played his concerto in G minor from the manuscript, and as I found several of the passages rather simple and not broad enough, if I may use the term, I changed them to suit states is to sow timothy in the fall my own ideas. FATTENING STEERS.

ively heavy grain ration. In this test the largest average amount of concentrates fed daily throughout the experiment was in lots 2, 6, 7 and 8, in all of which the cob is included. The daily ration of concentrates in these lots varied from 23 to 23.5 pounds or approximately one peck of ear corn and three pounds of gluten meal or oil meal per 1,000 pounds live weight of cattle.

The feeding of a nitrogenous concentrate to supplement corn undoubtedly stimulates the appetite and increases the capacity of the steer for consuming to advantage large quantities of concentrates. Hence this system of feeding is to be recommended where a nuick finish is desired.

Where conditions are such as pre vailed in this experiment corn and cob meal is not so valuable for fattening steers, pound for pound, as cornmeal. The presence of the cob in ground corn loes not appear to materially increase the efficiency of corn for beef production or for combined beef and pork production under conditions prevailing in this test.

A given amount of corn and cob meal did not produce any more beef and considerably less beef and pork combined than did ear corn.

Cornmeal proved much more efficient for beef production than shelled corn, while for combined beef and pork

Ear corn is much more efficient for beef production than is shelled corn. This test indicated that the supplementing of corn with nitrogenous concentrates used in this instance increases the efficiency of corn and clover hay for beef production.
