Street Crowds In Caracas.

One of the features of the city of Caracas, Venezuela, that most strongly impresses a foreigner is the rapidity with which a crowd gathers in the streets. This is best exemplified when some of the many wandering musicians, in whom Caracas abounds, prepare to give an impromptu open air concert. Their first notes o sooner echo through the neighborhood than there gathers to listen a vast throng that almost blocks up the thoroughfare. The cobblers and all the other tenants of the entries, having no doors to open or stairs to descend, are on the spot almost instanter. They eagerly drink in the music, but at the same time bear a wary eye upon the hats of the musicians, and no sooner do they observe the slightest indication that one is about to be taken off for the purpose of taking up a collection by passing it around among the crowd than they disappear even more quickly than they

A CREATIVE VOCATION.

Perpetual Delight. If you want to be contented and happy, if you want to experience a over what somebody else started or created, but that you have brought something out of the mysterious realm of mind, made it tangible and effective and started a new impulse in the world.

We get closer to nature when we are creating, whether in art, in literature, in invention or in working at new and progressive ideas. We can feel our mind reach out into infinity and grasp and bring back something fresh, new, something never seen on this earth before. It is perpetual delight and a consummate satisfaction. This is why brain workers are longer lived than other people. Creations keep the creator always young, since we are perpetually in contact with the new, the youthful, when we are creating. When we are stretching the mind into the unknown and calling out something new we seem to touch hands with the Creator himself. People who never think or do anything original-mere automatons, cogs in the wheels of the great world's machinery, the mere routinists, do not know the exhibaration which comes from the consciousness of creating something new and fresh every day. The creator feels that he is accomplishing something worth while; that he is doing something which the world needs, which will make it a little better place to live in, and the very newness, makes it the most fascinating thing in the world.-Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine.

As fast as the trees crowd we keep cutting from the trees to be eventually taken out and let the permanent trees spread at will. Now, after thirty-two years from setting, all the large lower branches are off some of the trees, and it is only a question of time when the trees will be taken out entirely. As will be seen by the diagram, this will leave the permanent trees (P) about forty-five feet apart each way.

Poisoning the Boll Weevil. B. W. Marston of the Louisiana crop pest commission predicts that in five years the cotton boll weevil will be universally poisoned wherever it is in April and May, just as the potato bug being universally poisoned. Mr. Marston bases his prediction on experiments carried on at Keachie, La., last year. He contends that it has been conclusively proven that the hibernated weevil can be killed in April and May with paris green, and, he adds, in Farm and Ranch:

"The Keachie demonstration proves that had every weevil in Texas and Louisiana been poisoned upon its first appearance it would have solved the boll weevil proposition. But it is said that the boll weevil continues hibernating into the hot, scorching month of June (?). All the weevils I put up this last year died in December. We can risk those June hibernated (?) weevils."
