The Prevention Of Railway Disasters.

ARE THEY CRIMINAL?

An Incomplete Record Gives a Total of 173 Persons Killed This Year. -Congressional Bureau Of Investigation Proposed With a Public Report.

The following paragraphs are from an editorial in the New York Evening Post on the dreadful list of accidents on the large railroads in this country.

What can be done to prevent these appalling railroad disasters? No question is, we believe, more frequently asked by the public to-day. Americans are not inclined to worry over little risks, but when the percentage of accidents steadily grows; when the Interstate Commerce Commission again records an increased death-roll during the last period for which it has compiled statistics, it cannot be denied that there is room for amazement, indignation, and anxiety. Have all the talented and able men gone into the financial side of railroading to the detriment of the operating branch? Are the labor unions responsible for the slackness of discipline on certain lines? Is the congestion of traffic the real reason for so many disasters? Have the more than ques tionable financial methods of our railroad magnates affected their subordinates? These are some of the questions heard on every side, and there follows the inevitable query whether any preventive measures are possible.

According to an obviously incomplete record, 173 persons have been killed since January first-less than two months-in wrecks large and small, and 413 injured. Seven disasters on five railroads-the New York Central, the Pennsylvania, the "Big Four," the Rock Island, and the Boston and Maine-accounted for 123 killed and 313 injured. Just before the first of January there were the accident on the Southern, ir which President Spencer lost his life, and the frightful disaster at Terra Cotta. According to the latest bulletin of the Interstate Commerce Commission, 267 persons were killed and 3,891 were injured in train accidents during July, August, and September of 1906. 668 injured during this brief period.

It will be said at once that no legislation and no amount of executive abil- the wreck to-day, carrying a life line, ity can eliminate the human factor that so long as men are what they are, and a girl, were taken off by this means. some blunders are bound to occur. There is a modicum of truth in this; but the greater the efficiency and the line aboard, the sturdy swimmer, after better the discipline of a road, the near- Herculean efforts, succeeded. Huner will the irreducible minimum of accidents be approached. If, as on one heroic fight against the tremendous road running out of this city, the fire- waves, which are still running. Time men and engineers do about as they and again it seemed he would have to please without fear of more than a give up, but he never faltered. rebuke, accidents may naturally be looked for. Or if, as in one case report- tached to the wreck the survivors were ed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, the signalman sets both signals at a crossing at clear, and then goes off for a social evening, a collision may also be expected in the natural order of things. To cite another case, it is not surprising that when an engineer, twenty-one years of age, is on duty 39 hours and 25 minutes successively, he should wind-up by failing to read an order and by colliding with a train

For such accidents and many like them, the best cure is their characterization as crimes, and the rigid punishment of all responsible, directly or indirectly. Unfortunately, it is impossible for the Interstate Commerce Commission to tell what punishments are awarded or how many guilty men get off scot free.

According to Mr. James J. Hill, the block signals are hourly being disregarded the country over, so much so that WAS BORN IN LIMERICK IRELAND of the United States Army, be placed to purchase land near Sabillasville, in street railways, and the like, should be he wonders every time he steps on a train whether it will be the last time or not. Now, if he and other railroad Head of the Catholic Church in Arkanpresidents are unable to make their engineers obey signals, the time is ripe for a law punishing every engineman who runs into a closed block, whether an accident occurs or not. Some railroad men of experience have advocated such a measure as necessary, unless the block system is to be rendered

"The 'Florodora sextette' has now had three murders to its credit. The tuneful song, intended to be the utterance and expression of casual and fugitive desire, has cost a life for every other woman who stood in that picturehatted row.

But this poison plant brings death only when society is careless in punishment for murder. There is no necessary connection between breaches of the sixth and seventh commandments and it is noticeable that, where society executes those who murder because desire has been thwarted or indulged, paroxysmal insanity does not accompany violations of the seventh commandment,
