VERY REV. DENNIS J. FLYNN, A. M., LL. D., PRESIDENT MOUNT SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE.

The soul that lodges philosophy, ought to be of such a constitution of health, as to render the body in like manner healthful too: she ought to make her tranquillity and satisfaction shine so as to appear without, and her contentment ought to fashion the outward behavior to her own mold, and consequently to fortify it with a graceful confidence, an active and joyous carriage, and a serene and contented countenance. The most manifest sign of wisdom is a continual cheerfulness; her state is like that of things in the regions above the moon, always clear and serene.

HIGH SCHOOL CLOSES.

TENTH ANNUAL COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES HELD.

Graduates Addressed by the Hon. Glenn H. Worthington and Prof. Oscar B. Coblenz. Excellent Essays and Speeches.

On Monday evening the class of '07 of the Emmitsburg High School, with appropriate exercises, graduated from that institution. The young men and ladies acquitted themselves most creditably and the various essays and speeches were listened to with marked attention by one of the largest audiences ever gathered in Spangler's Opera House.

The procession of the graduates began at eight o'clock and after the invocation, pronounced by Rev. Mr. Reinwald, Mr. Robert Rowe Sellers greeted the audience, school board, Prof. Palmer and the visiting speakers with the opening oration. As salutatorian Mr. Sellers pleasantly surprised his friends by his masterful speech. The honor of delivering these opening words of welcome is bestowed only on those of particular merit and scholarship and on this occasion the speaker reflected credit on the proficiency of his instruction and the high standard of the Emmitsburg High School. "On Determination," the subject on which he based his remarks, Mr. Sellers said: "Every scholar is well aware that determination to study and determination to excel make the student's school life a success."

"In life determination is needed; life is indeed what we make it; if we are to achieve our aim we must possess determination; if we lack it, life becomes a miserable failure. It enables us to overcome temptations and conflicts which are sent to strengthen the character of man."

"Determination may be styled the forerunner and ally of Perseverance, for surely the course which we are to pursue, or the object which we desire to possess, must be determined upon before we strive to succeed in the former or secure the latter."

"What is termed self-will or obstinacy in the child, if judiciously directed, will develop determination; a determination which, tho it may have no weight in national affairs, will make the noble, loyal citizen and high-minded man that helps to constitute a state. Seeing the value of Determination in life, let us endeavor to possess this valuable quality, so useful, so important, and so necessary to make life a success."

The essays were all excellent and excerpts from them will appear under separate headings in other parts of this paper.

Mr. O. Alexander Horner, the other honor man, delivered the valedictory, taking for his subject "Perseverance." He spoke of the sense of sorrow that came to him when he thought of this, the time of parting from the immediate association with the High School and its memories. To the under graduates the speaker said: "Schoolmates, soon for you will come the day when your relations with those who have worked and toiled with you shall be severed; then you will be better able to understand the real meaning of these exercises and to appreciate how those of us who are parting to night feel. I can only say, as a word of encouragement to you, persevere in everything you undertake and if you fail do not become discouraged but try again for failure through perseverance is sure to bring success."

Mr. Horner, concluded his remarks

Taken From Baccalaureate Sermons Delivered By EMINENT PREACHERS.

Both Men And Women Urged To Make Their Ideal Real.—Never Abandon The Boy Life Says One.—The Value Of Conviction And Persuasion.

"There are here three things of great moment: experience, memory and exigency. There is an original experience in the fellowship of Jesus Christ; there is a deep and tenacious memory in which this experience in a dim and somewhat unconscious way abides; there is a sense of difficulty, immediate, urgent, threatening, through which the word of the Lord is recalled. Experience stands first; next comes memory, the sure but slumbering keeper of experience; in the third place there is the exigency and its awakening call. Experience is primary, fundamental, essential."

"Your college life has been one great experience. This experience means a trained intellect, quick and exact in observation, clear and sure in inference, swift and sound in judgment, ready and reliable in turning ideas to account."

"The great keeper of experience is memory. Memory is not a useful power to its possessor if it is detached from insight, imagination, moral feeling and deep human interest. In that case memory becomes simply a beast of burden."

"When the sense of worldliness invades your life, when the love of pleasure comes to you, when you come to the supreme privilege of mortal existence—to love and marriage and parenthood and are tempted to take them in the cheap way of sordid men, when your classmates begin to fall faster and faster by your side, when you can no longer resist the fact that you are growing old, when the immemorial tradition of human sorrow has become for you a cup of bitterness, pressed to your own lips, then on each occasion the glorious dreams that you honored in youth, the ideals that in your college days hung over you brighter than mid-day sky, the experience of God in your soul by which you were able to live the life of a man, will come back to you, as the song birds do in the Spring. They will make for you a new world, and they will sing again in a deeper, mellower tone the old songs of the soul in your college days."—Dr. Gordon to Harvard graduates.

"The success of a free government depends largely upon the possession of a due sense of responsibility on the part of all citizens. All history shows clearly that where this sense of responsibility to the State and to each other is deep and abiding the material life is vigorous and progressive. Whenever this sense of responsibility decays and men allow themselves to be controlled by short-sighted, selfish men and by motives largely mercenary, the national life decays and the body politic becomes enfeebled."

"There are no forces in our American communities to whom more has been given than to the youths who have received collegiate education. They are the scion of all that is fruit in the twentieth century. Vast populations and enormously developed business affairs afford scope for trained and accomplished men such as has never before been possible."

"Our civilization has the right to demand that those to whom it has given most should be the most to save and advance it. The college-bred man is in duty bound to regard his education not as a means to profit at the expense of his fellows."—Rev. Hamilton of Tufts College.

"We emphasize today, and rightly, the responsibilities and duties of society, but the chief duty of society is to give the individual a chance. The single man bareheaded is more than a match for armies, fortunes, philosophies, if only he sticks to his inner vision and work it out in the lives of men."

"But in another field also are we summoned to achievement, and that is

RT. REV. EDWARD P. ALLEN, D. D., BISHOP OF MOBILE, WHO PRESIDED AT THE COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES ON WEDNESDAY

One of the largest audiences that ever convened for a like occasion gathered in Assembly Hall of Mount Saint Mary's College to grace the ninety-ninth annual commencement of this far-famed Catholic institution last Wednesday morning. The weather, so frequently bad, on this occasion was all that could be asked. For several days visitors have been flocking to Emmitsburg and not in many years has such a large concourse of people attended these exercises. The campus, beautiful at any time, was in all its glory. The bright dresses of the many visiting ladies, and the elegant buildings together with the throngs of happy students made the scene one long to be remembered.

Early in the day the teams began to bring the visitors and long before nine o'clock, the hour at which the exercises were to begin, the Assembly Hall was crowded. This large auditorium was most tastefully decorated with college colors, and flags interspersed with the papal and episcopal colors.

The academic procession was headed by the Rt. Rev. Edward P. Allen, Bishop of Mobile, followed by the visiting clergy, members of the faculty and speakers. When these gentlemen were seated the twenty-three graduates, in cap and gown, entered the hall and took their seats to the right of and below the rostrum.

The address to the graduates was delivered by Francis C. McGirr, LL. D., of Pittsburgh, Pa. Dr. McGirr's remarks were of a serious nature and full of sound advice. It was a finished, excellent talk, impressive and dignified.

On Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock the annual banquet of the National Alumni Association of Mount St. Mary's College was served in the college refectory. A large and representative gathering of both clerical and lay members of the institution were present at the sumptuous dinner.

During the year there has been a social and business activity among the local alumni associations in various cities and the large attendance at this banquet is in part due to the work of those with the interest of the "Mountaintain" at heart. Immediately preceding the dinner, a meeting of the association was held in Assembly Hall where the discussion centered around the celebration of the centennial of Mount St. Mary's in 1908. The order of exercises for this occasion will continue for three days, from June 9 to 11, inclusive.

Mr. A. V. D. Watterson, of Pittsburgh, whose energy and untiring interest in all that pertains to his alma mater is largely responsible for the success of these gatherings, was rewarded for his efforts by the way in which the alumni responded to the call for funds for the institution. One hundred thousand dollars was pledged for the erection of a new chapel.

Some one hundred and fifty guests gathered around the banquet table and amid toasts and speeches the following elaborate menu was served:

A. V. D. WATTERSON, LL. D., PRESIDENT ALUMNI ASSOCIATION, MOUNT ST. MARY'S COLLEGE

THE IDEAL MEN

That Leading Educators are Anxious to Produce.

COMPOSITE STATEMENT

From the Presidents of Leading American Educational Institutions as to the Aims of their Colleges or Universities in the Shaping of Character.

On the seal of Harvard appears the word "Veritas," or that is, "a tale, a great danger that the search for Truth is one of the principal aims of these two leading Universities. The Sunday Magazine for June 16, 1907, furnishes the following interviews with some of the heads of America's foremost institutions as to the kind of men they are trying to produce.

Dr. Eliot says "Harvard University aims to send forth men who will seek the truth passionately and further it bravely; who love freedom in thought and action, and promote it steadfastly; who are trained for efficiency in their callings; and who aspire through that efficiency to serve well their fellow men."

The president of Yale, Arthur T. Hadley, adds the following: "Our colleges should produce men who will use their brains for the benefit of the public. This is the object which distinguishes collegiate training from technical or professional training. In a professional school a man is taught to make a living, to use his brains primarily for his own benefit. Our social arrangements are such that in so doing he will, to a considerable extent, serve and benefit others also. But experience shows that something more than this is necessary for the welfare of a nation, and particularly for a self governing nation. We must have public spirit, readiness to work for national ends instead of individual ones. There is no greater danger that the American people will fail to produce and distribute the material things that are wanted; but there is great danger that in so doing they will work apart instead of working together, and that they will sacrifice to produce a few men of high caliber for lower and more immediate ones."

"It is the business of our colleges to face this danger, and to train men who will meet it."

For Princeton Woodrow Wilson says that "it seems to me that a college should produce, not men whose gifts and visions are narrowed to a particular task or calling, but men whose eyes have become accustomed to being lifted to a general comprehension of their duty in it. For this purpose, the studies of the college should cover those subjects which reveal, not only of bodies of knowledge, but also of men themselves in the complicated field of history and individual action. This is the real argument for a liberal education."

Edwin A. Alderman contributes this. "You ask me to tell you the kind of man the University of Virginia is trying to make. The ideal of what a man ought to be has differed with the ages, conforming itself to the ideal of what each age fancied it most needed; and yet all ages have endowed true manhood with at least four qualities,—truthfulness, courage, sympathy, and purpose. Though a man have all the learning of the schools and all the social graces, if he have not these qualities he is something less than a man. And, if he have these qualities, though it walk unlettered in the alleys of life, he bears upon him the stamp of a man and a gentleman."

"First of all, therefore, the University of Virginia is trying to produce a truthful, courageous, purposeful, and sympathetic man. Upon these qualities as upon the fruitful basis of all proper growth the university is seeking to evoke open mindedness, efficiency, and social responsibility. The sort of man, then, that informs our dreaming and nourishes our hopes is the truthful, courageous, purposeful, sympathetic, open minded, efficient man who does not fear to bear burdens. You shall not be able to deceive or frighten him, because his brain holds knowledge and his hands have cunning. You shall not be able to cajole or bribe him, because he holds honor dearer than life and loyalty finer than gold. He will be satisfied with the whole truth, and not the half truth, or the sectarian truth, or the sectional truth. He will not permit himself to shrink and shrink and harden; but, with his mind open to all the winds of human affairs, and his faith in the final rectitude of popular impulse whole and entire, he will grow with the years, and gain increasing pleasure in the service of men.

"This is the kind of a man we want to produce, and we shall press on in the firm faith that we shall not wholly fail."

A vacillating, undecided, negative man can never amount to anything, no matter what his environment or advantages may be. It would be impossible.

—Success.

Many women too often forget that there is such a thing as a dowdy mind, as well as a dowdy frock.—The Gentle Woman.

COLLEGE GRADUATES.

WHAT THE WORLD HAS A RIGHT TO EXPECT OF THEM.

Education Is A Sacred Trust And Should Be Used For Other Than Selfish Ends.—It Should Be A Wider Door of Opportunity.

At this season when throughout the land the graduates from universities and colleges are going forth to enter upon a life of activity and usefulness, the thought of what the world expects from the graduate naturally presents itself, and as an answer to the question comes the following from Success:

Something larger, finer, something of a higher grade, a better quality than of the man who has discovered only a small part of himself, is infinitely greater than only a little corner of his possibilities, who has never had the opportunity of the advantages of a higher education. That he shall be an inspiration, an encouragement to those who long for that same kind of training that he has had, but see no opportunity to get it.

That he shall not be content with commonness, or grope along in mediocrity.

That, even if he has not a thousand dollars to his name, he shall be so rich in his personal and intellectual endowment that the wealthy ignoramus will feel poor in his presence.

That he shall convince those who know him that to be a millionaire of culture, of manhood, of ideas, of nobility, of honor, is infinitely greater than to be a mere money millionaire.

That his education shall bring to the world a lesson of enlargement, of release from the slavery of narrowness, superstition, bigotry, which handicaps the ignorant.

That he shall open a little wider the door of opportunity to those whose lives have been dulled and narrowed by iron circumstance.

That he shall bring the world a message of a broader manhood, a larger aim, of higher ideals, not merely of more dollars.

That he shall regard his education as a sacred trust, not to be used wholly and solely for his own selfish ends.

That he shall transmit his knowledge into power, and use that power for the advancement of righteousness, truth, and civilization.

That he shall set an example in courtesy, charity, and all manly virtues, wherever he goes.

That he shall treat his mother, even though she is ignorant and old-fashioned, with the same deference and respect that he would accord to the highest lady in the land.

That he shall treat every woman, old or young, as a human being, rich or poor, with the same deference and respect that he observes toward his mother.

That he shall respect those who cannot flourish a college diploma.

That he shall remember that there are other effective ways of securing the advantages of a college course besides going to college.

That flippancy, vulgarity, lack of tolerance, irreverence and contempt for the beliefs and opinions of others, shall have no place in his code.

That wherever he is, people will say, as Lincoln said of Walt Whitman, "There goes a man."

All Should Cultivate It.

Optimism in life is a good working hypothesis. To be optimistic is not necessarily to be foolish, to lose the clearness of horizon, the sense of values, by centering all on self. The true optimism is the open-eyed faith that all is worth while, and that our own part in it is worth playing to the end.—D. S. Jordan.

FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1907.

TIME was, and not so very long ago, when every schoolboy who looked forward to a college education had in his ambitious mind the fanciful picture of one of the big universities or the large and heavily endowed colleges, each with its thousands of students, each with its faculty and instructors numbering in the hundreds. There was a glamor about it all that appealed to the young and inexperienced youth and he argued, as did also his parents perhaps, that true knowledge of the kind he sought could be absorbed only at one of these. And scores and hundreds of young men holding the same belief, have flocked to these tremendous institutions, have entered and have left them to play their parts in the serious drama of life; while others, in still increasing numbers, have entered the scholastic portals from which these first emerged. And so it has gone on until the older and larger universities and colleges have expanded to such an extent that students are known almost by number rather than by name, and anything approaching direct individual instruction has become an utter impossibility.

These very conditions have led to an inevitable reaction which has resulted in a turning toward the smaller institutions where thoroughness is the desideratum, and where the morals of the student are the more carefully considered.

And after all are not these latter the only reasons for entering upon a collegiate course at all? Wherein is the profit in simply spending four years or more at college, unrestrained and without that frequent and personal contact with one's professors and instructors whereby an adequate return in thoroughness of instruction is received?

That this subject has been seriously agitating the minds of educators themselves in recent years, and especially within the past year, there can be no doubt. Certain magazines have followed it closely, and recent statistics prove conclusively that the sentiment in favor of the smaller college, with its legitimate restrictions and its more thorough mode of instruction, is decidedly on the increase.

And right in our midst old Mt. St. Mary's College is proving the truth of what has been said. Each year her list of students is increasing, and each year the country is hearing anew of her old alumni who have distinguished themselves, and of the more recent graduates who, in the Church, in the numerous professions, or in the commercial walks of life, are reflecting credit both upon themselves and upon their noble Alma Mater.

At this institution the student body, as its catalogue very plainly states, is under the unobtrusive supervision of the clergy whose kindly admonition, whose counsel and whose interest insures a willing application to study, and a willing obedience to the mandates of morality and social propriety. As for the curriculum of this far-famed Catholic college, with its equally well-known Seminary, the success of its alumni and their promotion to numberless exalted positions fully attest its value in supplying that groundwork for a student's future efficiency.

Nor is it by any means the policy of this institution to let well enough alone. On the contrary; for under the direction of its present administrators Mount St. Mary's has been ready and willing to respond to the demands of this ever advancing age of educational development.

New equipment is being added every year, and at this very time there is in course of construction a magnificent seminary building which will be ready for occupancy in the fall.

All this shows what Mount St. Mary's has done and is doing. This is her past and present; but the future shines more brightly still; and in that future better things will come. The entrance upon the second hundred years of her career—and next year is her centenary—will find this college better equipped than ever before to give the students entrusted to her care that broadening education that fits men for the battle of this serious, complex life.

To this old college on the Mount, then, may new students' footsteps turn, and may her alumni, in recognition of all that she has done for them, exert untiring efforts in behalf of their Alma Mater in the days that are to come.

JUNE is the month of school and college commencements; the time when graduates leave behind them the class room and the lecture hall, to assume the more serious obligations yet to be imposed upon them by the outside world; when those who, having before them still other years of pleasant scholastic toil, look forward to the day when they too shall stand in the midst of friends and give promise of those deeds they fain would do for the honor of their country, their party or their State. They all have their ideals, and all look out upon the future with pleasurable expectancy, anxious to put to some practical use that knowledge which they have acquired by constant application throughout long but happy years.

For each of these there is a place in this big but kindly world. Positions are open in every community for men and women of education; and for those who have not had the advantages to be gained from a college curriculum, but who have diligently applied themselves during their high-school course, or who have become proficient in the branches taught in private and parochial schools, there are places of trust awaiting. Particularly is this the case at the present time when everything points to specialization, when the possibilities in many new crafts and arts and sciences are still in their very infancy.

But success in this field of specialization, as in all else, means determination and perseverance, with the added factor—ambition. Our schools and colleges may furnish the foundation for future profitable endeavor, but on these three important elements depends a lasting success in any career or undertaking.

And proud indeed, ought this community to be in having in its midst the College, the Academy, the High School, and the various public and parochial schools which have made Emmitsburg a synonym for education. The exercises attending their closing days and the unusually creditable showing made by the graduates of these excellent institutions is a striking evidence of the thoroughness of their training. And to those whose administrative ability, whose labors in the noble realm of teaching have made possible this great success, is due all honor and encouragement.

WHEN seeking a location for a home what more can any one desire than a healthful locality, high altitude, beautiful scenery, the purest water, a good bank, well stocked stores, numerous churches, fine educational institutions, splendid schools, honest people to deal with and good people to mingle with?

Emmitsburg possesses all these advantages—and many more.

REPORTS from Georgia last week were to the effect that hailstones as big as duck eggs fell during a terrific storm in that State.

We do not want to make unpleasant comparisons, but had that storm centered in Emmitsburg the thrifty people in this place would have soon had their icehouses filled with those elegant blocks of frozen rain.

THE man whose policy is always to "look out for number one" frequently misses his calculations and in the long run, loses at his own game.

No one can live another's life for him, but every one can help to make another's life happier by little generous acts, by inspiration, and by friendly sympathy and encouragement.

SOME minds are mouldy with the pessimism that is nurtured in the dampness of general disgruntlement, and what they need is fresh air, sunshine and the companionship of those whose thoughts are blended with the optimism that paints out the shadows and heightens with attractive color the aspect of everything in general.

Clothing

For the Extra Stout the Short, and the Tall, Slim Man.

For the man of abnormal build, the extra stout, and slim, we have well provided. And there is no price penalty whatever for the abnormality.

Usually the very stout and the tall, slim fellows have an unusually hard task to find a suit of clothes that will not only fit their person, but that will fit their fancy as well. We have long since changed that order of things by keeping in stock at all times a very broad variety of neat patterns in worsteds, Cheviots, and Cassimeres, in addition to plain effects.

We provide for every variation of the human frame—normal or abnormal—and every garment measures up to an infinitely higher standard than that which usually governs the clothing of unusual measurements.

Prices, $15 to $35.

THE CALL.

Because the night is dark and lone,
Because the fields are bleak and bare,
Because the clouds are dark above,
Shall we forget the stars are there?

Because the way is steep and hard,
Because our hearts are wavering weak,
Because the heights seem hard to win,
Shall we neglect our trust to keep?

Not so did He in Galilee,
Not so did anyone who dared,
But mindful only of the right,
Through sorrow, suffering, onward fared.

Ours was the fault; we who forgot
That all was ours; we who were still,
While wrong traduced the nation's right,
And giants stole the nation's will.

We who forgot our children's rights;
We who forgot our legacies,
Bought with the best blood of the years;

We who are masters, one and all,
Ours is the duty, we who can!
The hour has come: Where is the man?

THE ACADEMY.

Celebrates Ninety-Eighth Commencement.

DEGREES CONFERRED.

Beautiful Scenes and Impressive Ceremonies Mark this Occasion.—Class of Eight Graduate.—Friends and Relatives of Young Ladies Crowd the Halls.

Yesterday was a happy occasion at St. Joseph's Academy for Young Ladies. It was the date of the ninety-eighth annual commencement at this celebrated Catholic institution; celebrated not only in this country, but in lands beyond the seas, and everything within St. Joseph's walls reflected the felicity incident to the event.

Throughout the spacious corridors of the beautiful old buildings where groups of students lingered, bright faces smiled on parent, friend and visitor, and flowers and ferns and beautiful decorations formed a most fitting background for the scene.

Shortness of time does not permit more than a mere mention of degrees and honors conferred. A full and much deserved description of the commencement being reserved for next week's issue, in which will appear an interesting detailed account, together with pictures of the Academy, the graduating class and of the president of the Alumnae Association.

By a decree of the faculty of the Sisters of Charity of Saint Joseph's, the degree of Doctor of Literature was conferred on Mrs. M. E. Henry-Ruffin, '77, of Mobile, Ala. In the classical course the following graduates received medals and diplomas: Frances Gildart Ruffin, Mobile, Ala., Mary Madeleine Robinson, Bel Air, Md., and Ellen Brunner Rohrbach, Frederick, Md. Four members of the class received medals and diplomas in the modern language course: Marguerite Teresa Eckenrode, York, Pa., Alice Marguerite Galvin, Brookline, Mass., Mary Natalie M'Carthy, Shamokin, Pa., Hortensia Maria Angulo, Havana, Cuba, Miss Pauline Cecilia Eckenrode, special course, received a gold medal.

The Carrell gold medal for general excellence, was awarded to Miss Frances Gildart Ruffin. For proficiency in Christian Doctrine and in the Fourth Year Academic, the medal for general excellence was given to Miss Mildred I. Todd.

In the Freshman Class, Miss Pauline E. Scholz, was awarded a medal for general excellence and in the Fourth Year Academic, the medal for general excellence was given to Miss Mildred I. Todd.

On Tuesday at five o'clock the Sacrament of Confirmation was conferred by Rt. Rev. Edward P. Allen, Bishop of Mobile, upon Miss Annie C. Oldenberg, of Baltimore, Miss Anna Lynch and Miss Margaret Lynch, of Columbus, Ohio, Miss Ila Louise O'Brien, of Portsmouth, Va., and Miss Agnes Mackey, of Newport News, Va., each having an individual sponsor.

On this solemn occasion the Chapel was unusually beautiful, the electric lights bringing into relief the richness of the Bishop's robes and showing the contrast between the deep red and long stemmed brilliant peonies and the whiteness of the magnificent marble altar.

There will be a Masonic service in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening at 7.30. Rev. Mr. Wheeler, of Taneytown will preach the sermon.

The Rev. Mr. Kenneth M. Craig delivered the address to the graduates of the High School in Thurmont last Tuesday evening.

The seventy-first annual commencement exercises of the Franklin and Marshall College were concluded last week.

Changed His Motto.

A Southern representative in Congress is reputed to be of such a persuasive manner that, no matter what party may be in power, he outdoes his colleagues in procuring favors for his constituents.

One afternoon the statesman was met by a newspaper man. "Well, Major," asked the latter, "how many appointments and appropriations have you arranged for to-day? We all know your way of getting everything that you go after."

"Nothing to-day," responded the representative rather wearily. "My experience this time reminds me of the old Confederate soldier that I knew in Tennessee. 'I went into this war,' said he, 'with the motto 'veni, vidi, vici,' and I came out vice versa.'"

LIVE CAPITAL TOPICS.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

Secretary Taft's political campaign as a presidential candidate (and everything that he says or does now is regarded rightly or wrongly as a part of his campaign), is watched with much interest by distinguished men of both parties here. It is doubted if he is as shrewd a politician as President Roosevelt, and he is criticized for having made some recent breaks or false steps. His eulogy of Senator Spooner without eulogistic reference to Senator La Follette from the same state is looked upon as a mistake. Secretary Taft is a big man in every way, and must be accorded the right to say what he thinks and feels, but Senator La Follette is also a very big and popular man in his state, and with a growing popularity throughout the United States, and people in his state and the United States are desirous that a man of his ability and strenuous zeal for the interests of the country at large should not be slurred. A feeling has been growing in Wisconsin that the administration is not quite friendly enough to Senator La Follette. There may be no ground for such feeling. La Follette is friendly to all that is best and most approved by the country in President Roosevelt's administration. There is no more sincere advocate or exemplar of the square deal than Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin.

The Public Lands Convention which takes place at Denver next week is likely to have an altogether different effect from the one expected by its organizers. It was originally planned as a meeting in which the President's policies concerning public lands in the West were to be fought to the end and for this purpose delegates from all the states were selected as far as possible from those who could be relied upon to vote in condemnation of the Administration policy. An unlooked-for element has been introduced through the announcement from Washington that a number of prominent men under the administration will be present at the Convention and that of these, several will deliver addresses.

Garfield of the Interior Department has already left for the West ostensibly to inspect the various land offices but in reality to attend the Land Convention and head off the resolutions inimical to the Administration. He will be joined there by Gifford Pinchot, Chief Forester and intimate friend of the President, Secretary Wilson of the Agricultural Department, Mr. Ballinger, Commissioner of the Land Office, Chief Engineer Newell of the Reclamation Bureau and others who will attempt to explain that the President's Land Policy is really designed to preserve the land to the people instead of taking it from them and that the objection to the Administration has been inspired by those who were trying to steal timber and mineral lands, principally in the transcontinental railroads.

Incidentally Mr. Garfield will drop in at the various Land Offices without previous announcement of his coming so that he will see the everyday condition of the offices without any special hurried housecleaning for his benefit.

FLOWER WITHOUT FRUIT.

Prune thou thy words; the thoughts control
That o'er thee swell and throng—
They will condense within thy soul,
And change to purpose strong.

But he who lets his feelings run
In soft, luxurious flow,
Shrinks when hard service must be done,
And faints at every woe.

Faith's meaneast deed more favor bears,
Where hearts and wills are weighed,
Than brightest transports, choicest prayers,
Which bloom their hours, and fade.

—John Henry Newman.

From All Points of The Compass.

Cardinal Lecot, archbishop of Bordeaux, has decided to suppress all church services in a number of communes of his diocese because the municipal authorities have ordained that the bells of the churches must be rung on the occasion of civil marriages and funerals, although unaccompanied by religious ceremonies.

The Red Cross Society at its conference in London decided to wage a war against tuberculosis in times of peace.

Former Mayor James D. Phelan says that "Mayor Schmitz will go to prison for life. He was convicted on the weakest indictment of the entire collection. There are twenty-six others. If he should get ten years on each, the rest of his life would be spent within the prison walls, and no man could stand forth and say it was not just."

Former Congressman John Hollis Tankhead will succeed the late John Tyler Morgan as Senator from Alabama, if former precedent is followed in the selection of a Senator.

With the adjournment, late Friday evening of last week, of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs the Brownsville investigation was practically brought to a close. When the Committee reconvened on Nov. 18, its principal work will be the preparation of its report to be submitted to Congress at the opening of the session.

John Temple Graves said in an interview that "nothing on wheels can ever catch up to the popularity of Roosevelt or to the popularity of anyone whom he delegates to wear his mantle. If Taft is nominated by the desire of the President it would be worse than folly for anyone to run against him."

The Olympic Theater, the oldest vaudeville house in Chicago, was practically destroyed by fire at midnight Saturday night. The loss will exceed $150,000.

Fire destroyed the Eleventh Avenue Opera House building at Altoona, Pa., on Saturday. The loss is estimated at $250,000.

Communications intended for publication in THE CHRONICLE will not be inserted unless they bear the name of the sender. This however does not necessarily mean that the name will be published.

The College Theatre, the new Chicago $300,000 auditorium erected by the faculty of St. Vincent's College was formally opened on Tuesday. The report that this theatre will enter the field in competition with the high-class downtown amusement halls and that the priests who make up the faculty of St. Vincent's College will manage the house, booking all its attractions &c., is false.

MR. ANNAN INTERVIEWED.

Nominee for Board of County Commissioners Makes a Statement.

Mr. J. Stewart Annan, recently nominated by the Republican party for the Board of County Commissioners, in an interview with a representative of THE CHRONICLE relative to his accepting the nomination said:

"It seems to me that this community has needed a representative on the Board of County Commissioners and, as I was the only available person I allowed my name to be used. This immediate district has been neglected for many years and if I am elected it shall be my endeavor to see that our community receives the attention due it. With this purpose in view I have consented to be a candidate for a place on the Board of Commissioners."

When asked concerning the rumor, pretty well founded, that he was previously slated for the House of Delegates Mr. Annan declined to answer.

JUNE WEDDING.

Contributed.

It was a beautiful wedding which occurred at the home of the bride on East Main street, when on Tuesday at 1 P. M., Miss Anna Mary Shriver and Mr. Charles Ross Landers were united in marriage.

The house was a bower of floral beauty, complete and charming in every appointment. Attended by her sister, Miss Ella Shriver, the bride was arrayed in white, and carried a bouquet of exquisite roses.

The marriage service was performed by the bride's pastor, the Rev. Charles Reinwald, assisted by the Rev. Kenneth M. Craig.

Guests to the number of twenty-five witnessed the ceremony and offered their congratulations and best wishes to the happy couple. After all had been served with delicious refreshments, Mr. and Mrs. Landers, with a liberal allowance of traditional rice, were driven to take the 2.15 train for a trip to Philadelphia and Atlantic City.

The bridal gifts were generous in number and splendid in quality.

An Honor to a Well-Known Family.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Sweeney, now of St. Joseph, Mo., formerly of Emmitsburg, will be glad to hear of the appointment of their son Eugene to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Ebbert Waters in the United States Naval Academy.

Mr. Sweeney is eighteen years old and has just been graduated from the St. Joseph High School.

During his High School career he established a reputation for "nerve," he was prominent in athletics and made the best showing in the mental and physical examinations which took place in St. Joseph in April.

Why all this toil for triumphs of an hour? Life's a short summer—man is but a flower. By turns we catch the fatal breath and die; The cradle and the tomb, alas, how nigh! To be is better far than not to be, Though all man's life may seem a tragedy; But light cares speak when mighty griefs are dumb, The bottom is but shallow whence they come. Thy fate is the common fate of all; Unmingled joys no man befall; Nature to each allots his proper sphere, Fortune makes folly her peculiar care. Custom does not reason overrule, And throw a cruel sunshine on a fool. Live well; how long or short permit to heaven. They who forgive most shall be most forgiven. Sin may be clasped so close we cannot see its face, Vice intercourse where virtue has no place; Then keep each passion down, however dear, Thou pendulum betwixt a smile and tear! Her sensual snares let faithless Pleasure lay, With craft and skill to ruin and betray; Soar not too high to fall, but stoop to rise; We masters grow of all that we despise. Oh, then, renounce that impious self esteem; Riches have wings and grandeur is a dream. Think not ambition wise because 'tis brave, The paths of glory lead but to the grave; What is ambition? 'Tis a glorious cheat, Only destructive to the brave and great. What's all the gaudy glitter of a crown? The way to bliss lies not on beds of down. How long we live, not years, but actions tell; That man lives twice who lives the first life well. Make, then, while ye may, your God your friend, Whom Christians worship, yet not comprehend. GRACEHAM.

The baseball game, played here on Saturday last between Graceham and Reinwald, resulted in favor of Graceham in each game.

We are sorry to note the death of the infant child of Mr. Wm. McCahey, on last Wednesday

HIGH SCHOOL CLOSES.

by saying "Let us not forget the value of perseverance and when all about us is dark and discouraging, and success seems impossible let us, with a firm hand, press forth that we may come into the pure sunshine of success."

After the address to the graduates by Hon. Glenn H. Worthington, Prof. Coblenz presented the students with their diplomas. In his remarks, made before he turned to the graduates, Mr. Coblenz spoke of some of the needs of the public schools in this county. He urged the parents and patrons of the schools to lend their efforts toward the bettering of conditions by their not to judge always through the eyes of their children but to pass over certain specious injustices that for the moment might seem so serious and, with an eye to the present needs and future changes, lend their kind counsel and help to the teachers and authorities at the head of our school department. The speaker alluded to the much-needed and important branch of manual training and it seemed, from his remarks, that such an adjunct might, in the near future, be added to the curriculum of the High School. The Superintendent announced the appointment of a Primary Supervisor who, in the ensuing year, would begin a course of instruction for teachers in the first three grades. Gradually by this teacher's school, a uniform system of teaching and instruction would prevail in this county. It is too much, said Mr. Coblenz, to expect graduates, fresh from the high schools to be able to direct their efforts in the best way as teachers and by means of such a course of study as will give them the primary supervisor, they will be able to more intelligently fill their positions and bear the responsibilities that devolve on them as instructors of our future citizens.

The exercises were closed by Rev. Kenneth M. Craig who pronounced the benediction.

FACTS ABOUT SLEEP.

The theory that people require less sleep in old age turns out to be wrong, according to a writer in an English magazine. Commenting on this article about sleep the Chicago Chronicle said: "It is astonishing that any physician or any person with powers of close observation should believe that people need less sleep in old age. If they had noticed the habits of old people more closely they would have observed that the peculiarity of old people in regard to sleep is that they need it 'little and often.' Every elderly person who has the leisure and the means takes a few hours of sleep during the day—perhaps more than once during the day. 'Little and often' is the most marked characteristic of old age not only in regard to sleep but in regard to eating and perhaps other bodily habits.

It may be that children under sixteen years old require less sleep than infants, but the greatest sin committed against childhood consists in interfering with its sleep. It is considered indulgent for them to be allowed to sleep, and they are frequently roused out of bed in the morning to teach them industrious habits. There could be no greater wrong done them. They ought to be driven to bed early and then allowed to sleep until they prefer to get up. The rude interruption of their sleep in the morning inflicts an injury on their nervous systems which follows them through life and affects not only their health but their intellectual and moral character."

Tensile Strength Not Weight.

One of the leading railroad managers of the Atlantic States is free to admit that recent experience indicates the necessity for a change in the rolling of rails for heavy traffic roads. The increased weight of trains, and the greater traction of the mighty engines required by the demands of modern freight traffic, call for a corresponding increase in the resisting power of the rails, states the editor of the Phila. Telegraph. How that higher quality is to be secured is a problem in which railroad men are anxiously interested. Recent accidents, attributed to breaking rails prove that the best rails now in use are not strong enough to bear the tremendous strain put upon them. Where is the remedy to be found? In heavier rails? That is by no means certain. Some of the old eighty-pound rails, practically of wrought iron, have done better service, according to expert testimony, than the hundred-pound steel rails now in use by the great Eastern roads. The proposal to roll rails to the weight of one hundred and five pounds is therefore met with the suggestion that not greater weight but greater tensile strength of material will be most likely to afford an answer to this important problem.

The Law of Compensation.

Bridget had been going out a great deal, and her husband Mike was displeased. "Bridget, where do ye spend yer time nights? Ye're puttin' iv'ry avengin' fur two weeks," he said. "Shut up, Mike! I'm gettin' an education," she answered. "An' phwat are ye learnin'?" said her indignant husband. "Why, to-night we learned about the laws of compensation," said Michael. "What's that?" "Why, I can't explain; but fur instance, if the sense of smell is poor, the sense of taste is all the sharper, and if ye're blind, ye can hear all the better."

"Ah, yes," said Mike thoughtfully. "I see it's loike this. Fur instance, if a man is born wid an leg shorter than the other, the other is longer."—Sunday Magazine.

"Equally needful is that sympathy between man and man which comes only with developed imagination. Whoever by word or deed in democratic America fans the fires of class hatred is guilty of social arson."—President Faunce of Brown.

"I have spoken to you of fun, of gaiety of spirit, of the boy life never to be abandoned; of the always mighty life through making the most of the body, with its sure reactions of mind and spirit; of brain, of the great life of intellect and culture always to be lived or at least always to be kept in close sympathy with, and its battle ours to espouse; of improving the climate, of changing things and bettering things, and of the vast programme for this into which you go, and which of itself makes life time peculiarly abundant; and of selling life dear, of following after Arnold and Taylor and Bancroft, in not dying until you have done something worth while, and of not reckoning life unduly precious, but of cheerfully yielding it up for something better than length of days."—Rev. Beach at Phillip's Andover.

"The man of conviction is he who before every task will say: 'I am persuaded,' and in obedience to the dictates of his highest ideals does his work for conscience sake. Such a man wins respect; he invites confidence, and finally attains to enduring success."—Rev. Mackay at Mt. Holyoke.

PEACE CONFERENCE BEGUN.

High Words of Praise for President Roosevelt and Andrew Carnegie.

The second Peace Conference was opened last Saturday at The Hague. M. Nelidoff in his opening address declared that universal peace and disarmament are unattainable. During his remarks the speaker referred to words of the highest praise to President Roosevelt and Mr. Carnegie, who gave $1,500,000 toward the cost of the Palace of Peace. No other countries or rulers were in any way alluded to by the speaker.

The references to President Roosevelt in the speeches of both Dr. Van Tets van Goudraan, the Netherlands foreign minister, and M. Nelidoff were greeted with rounds of applause. The whole ceremony lasted hardly twenty minutes, when the Conference adjourned until Wednesday.

Glasses To Protect Cows' Eyes.
"There are cows that wear glasses in my country," said a Russian. "I once saw a herd of 40,000 cows with glasses on. It was on the steppes, the great Russian prairies. Our steppes for six months in the year are covered with snow, but during a part of the time delicate, fresh grass tips protrude from that white and dazzling mantle. The cows then are turned out to feed on the new grass, but if their eyes are unprotected the dazzle of sunshine on the snow gives them snow blindness. Thousands of cows suffered horribly, and hundreds died of snow blindness until a rude, cheap kind of spectacles, made of leather and smoked glass, was invented and put into great success on the Russian market."—Philadelphia Bulletin.
