WAR AND PEACE

Results Of Hague Conference

NOT ENTIRE FAILURE

Inevitable War Robbed of Some of Its Horrors

PERPETUAL PEACE BUT A DREAM

The Work of the Conference Not Void Of Important Results.—Rule Established of World-Wide Significance.—Airship an Important Factor.

The impression that the Peace Conference, whose deliberations are almost at an end, has been a dismal failure; that the meetings of this body are altogether without purpose and reason is a wrong one. In an editorial the Philadelphia North American says:

The international conference at The Hague is drawing to a close, and its results invite the serious thought of all who regard the betterment of the human race as the highest and noblest incentive to human endeavor.

It is quite true that from the standpoint of the advocate of perpetual peace the result of the conference has been in the fullest measure disappointing. That measure meant the establishment of a court of arbitration to which all international disputes would be submitted, and the judgment of which the powers would pledge themselves to recognize. That great object of the conference has not been attained, but it is not improbable that the scheme of the representative of one of the great countries, that arbitration courts between individual nations be created, may take tangible form in the immediate future. If this be so, the conference shall have made a most decided advance toward securing the peace of the world.

While waiting for universal peace, a great question is to rob war of some of its horrors. This the peace conference at The Hague has done to an extent beyond the conception of the casual reader who has followed its proceedings with but perfunctory interest. For instance, it has laid down the principles, or, more correctly, established the rule, that, in future, hostilities between two or more countries cannot be begun without a formal declaration of war and a notice to neutral powers of such declaration. In theory this system has already obtained, but in theory only. In the war between Russia and Japan the navy of the Czar was attacked and crippled while the Japanese minister was yet on Russian soil and when the officers and men of the Muscovite squadron had believed that their country was at peace with the world.

A recurrence of such tactics has been rendered impossible by the peace conference, and it is passing strange to note that the Japanese delegates were the most insistent in the establishment of the rule that a formal declaration of war should invariably precede hostilities. This, if nothing else, is a triumph for the conference. For war is much less likely to occur if it must be preceded by a formal declaration in which the aggressive nation accepts before all the world the responsibility for the carnage that is to follow. There can be no dodging the issue or saying that the antagonist had really begun the strife, for there can be no war until the proclamation is made.

In other respects, too, the horrors of wars of the future years have been mitigated by The Hague conference. Scientists and military men alike agree that the airship is likely to be as decisive a factor in warfare as either the submarine boat or the torpedo. With a dozen of these terrible engines of war, freighted with the most powerful explosives, floating in midair over city or camp, and held in restraint by no law, the sacrifice of human life, particularly of the lives of noncombatants, and the destruction of property would be simply awful. This terrible phase of the war of the future has been averted by the conference, and the mission of the war balloon has been practically restricted to that of observation of the location or movements of an enemy.

The peace conference at The Hague has not accomplished the dream of the optimist. It has not barred or otherwise impeded the pathway to armed conflict between the nations, but it has robbed war—grim, terrible, inevitable war—of some of its horrors; has exemplified the pacific tendencies of the age, and has been a marked stride toward the goal of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

LONDON'S LORD MAYOR

Election A Farce Solemnly Gone Through With

MAYOR RECEIVES $50,000 A YEAR

Office of Mayor of London No Longer One of Importance.—Chief Business To Preside at Dinners and go Through Ceremonies.

Sir John Charles Bell is the new Lord Mayor of the city of London. Without cracking a smile he went through the solemn farce which goes by the name of an election. Then, clad in gorgeous robes, he submitted to having a wonderful bejewelled gold chain thrown around his neck and was duly acclaimed as the choice of the city for the highest civic office in the land.

Everybody who takes an interest in the affair has known for years that Sir John would be made Lord Mayor in 1907. He qualified for the office first by getting admitted to membership in one of London's ancient guilds, that of the Haberdashers. It made no difference that his business was that of a brewer, and that he knew nothing of haberdashery. The only other step necessary was to get elected "worshipful alderman" from somewhere. After that all Sir John had to do to become Lord Mayor was to sit tight until he was "next."

As long ago as 1215 King John, by charter, granted the citizens of London the right to elect their own Mayor. But somehow the Aldermen fixed things up among themselves so that each one of them, in the order of seniority, should attain to the coveted office. And thus, for the last 200 years or more, the election has been a farce. But the liverymen—members of the old guilds that have long ceased to exist as genuine trade organizations—go through the pretence of voting for a candidate with as much solemnity as though everything was not cut and dried.

As Lord Mayor, Sir John gets $50,000 a year—the same salary that is paid the President of the United States. He is allowed another $2,000 or $3,000 to pay the income tax on his salary. And to defray the cost of his robes—of which he has three or four sumptuous outfits—another $2,000 is allotted to him. For his official residence—the Mansion House, with which all American visitors to London are familiar—he pays no rent.

The office has long been stripped of its once great powers, but the symbols of its vanished authority are clung to with greater tenacity than in the days when lord mayors were really important personages. Some municipal work the lord mayor does, but his chief business is to preside at a lot of official dinners, go through a lot of funny and fussy ceremonies, and in general do things precisely as they have been done by his predecessors. —Philadelphia Bulletin.

Those who work hard are the happiest although they may not know it. Work is the best antidote to worry, the surest cure for boredom and satiety. It is the grand panacea, the universal anodyne. It is better to be overworked than to have too little to do. When hands and brains are occupied we have no time to think about imaginary grievances or to brood over real trouble. —Elizabeth Chesser.

Health, love, honor and power, those goals at which man aims, are all to be found in being honest with Nature. That means honesty of mind, honesty of purpose, honesty of heart, honesty of body. —Dr. Emil Reich.

SCHOOL FOR DOMESTICS

Baltimore's Institution Teaches Requirements of Domestic Science and How to Become Efficient Helpers.

There has recently been established in Baltimore the "Little Mothers' Training School for Domestic Science." It is a nonsectarian, practical attempt to train young girls in the simple rudiments of domestic science and to teach them that the position which they may occupy as trained help in homes is a better one than that of the factory to which so many drift. This school has been organized by Mrs. Maryland S. B. Sheppard, who for several years was the founder and head of a similar school in San Francisco, which attracted much favorable notice by its work. This school suffered severely by the earthquake and fire, and Mrs. Sheppard after the fire came East with the intention of founding similar schools in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and Baltimore.

WILLIAM EYLER WILL NOT HANG

Adjourned Meeting Of Board Of Pardons Commutes Sentence

GOES TO EASTERN PENITENTIARY FOR LIFE

Prisoner Remarks "That Is Good" When Informed By His Attorney Of The Board's Finding

MAY BE FREED IN FUTURE YEARS IF HIS CONDUCT IS EXEMPLARY

The Decision Largely Due to The United Efforts of People of Emmitsburg and Professional Men of Gettysburg.—Prisoner Does Not Seem to Appreciate Significance of Situation.—His Manner Extremely Peculiar.—Will be Taken to Eastern Penitentiary on Monday or Tuesday.—At Best Eyer will Spend Most of His Life in Prison for Murdering Miller.

The Board of Pardons of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania at an adjourned meeting held on Wednesday in Harrisburg commuted the sentence of the Adams county court in the case of William Eyer, who was condemned to the gallows for murdering Howard Miller on Decoration Day, 1906, to a life imprisonment in the Eastern Penitentiary at Philadelphia. Eyer will be taken to this penal institution on Monday or Tuesday.

When the result of the efforts made in his behalf was disclosed to Eyer by his attorney, Mr. Hersh, he remarked, "That's good," without seeming to appreciate or feel the significance of the situation. This peculiar demeanor and behaviour has been with the man ever since his imprisonment and would apparently justify the general belief that this decision is a correct one.

The good conduct of the prisoner while in durance at Gettysburg if continued while Eyer is an inmate of the penitentiary, taken with the peculiar facts in his case and the apparent absence of malice may mitigate in future years in his favor. These things will all be favorably considered after he has served for a considerable length of time.

The average population of the Eastern Penitentiary is 1,251 prisoners. The separate system, which requires the segregation of prisoners during working hours as well as at night, prevails at this penitentiary.

The following are the chief facts in the Eyer-Miller tragedy: On Decoration Day, 1906, Eyer accompanied by his wife and several relatives drove to Gettysburg. When they reached that place and even before arriving there Eyer indulged rather freely in intoxicating drinks. Some one reported to Eyer that his friend William Long was being killed by Howard Miller in the Globe Hotel. Eyer went to Long's rescue taking an iron pump handle as a weapon. With this he struck Miller killing him instantly. Eyer was arrested and tried, found guilty of murder in the first degree and refused a new trial. Judge Swope sentenced him to be hung and an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court. The Adams county court was sustained. After all these efforts had failed the citizens of Emmitsburg at the suggestion of the Rev. Mr. K. M. Craig drew up a petition which was laid before the Board of Pardons. This paper was largely signed by citizens and clergy of this place and professional men of Gettysburg.

At the meeting of the Board of Pardons the death sentence of three men was commuted to life imprisonment. In all thirty-one cases for crimes of more or less enormity were presented for the Board's action.

TREMbles FOR NEXT GENERATION

Overloaded Minds Fill Lunatic Asylums.—Specialist Speaks Out on Dan- gers of Modern Civilization.— Prospects Seem Gloomy To This Authority.

An eminent specialist in mental diseases, Prof. Jeggersma, takes exception to the ways of modern life. He startled Germany by his outspoken utterances on modern civilization as the fundamental cause of the prevailing and increasing nervousness of modern men and women, both in Europe and America. In a dispatch dated Berlin, Oct. 13, appearing in the New York World he is reported to have said:

"We must gradually get rid of our notions that the training of the intellect is the highest part of education. The training of the mind must give way to the training of the body. We send a child to school when it is only six, and immediately the wretched being begins to read, write, reckon and a dozen other things which it ought not to look at for years to come. It is this which stunts its intellectual development and retards the growth of qualities which are far more useful, more noble, than mental agility. You overload the mind and sow seeds which blossom later in a lunatic asylum.

"Mental wrecks are being caused by the thousands in every big city in Europe and America simply because we are placing this strain on the weaklings. I tremble to think of the next generation and the next after that." (Continued on page 8.)

Apples have become one of the great money-producing crops of the United States. Almost any one whose years are three score can remember the time when apples were hardly considered as a means of revenue to the farmer.

"The apple, we are told, was the instrument by which the race fell—lost Paradise," begins an article that went the round of the papers last Sunday.

The article continues: "The apple, it now appears, has opened up to this twentieth century world a new Paradise—one of wealth, beauty, lusciousness. 'Look at the figures—expert statisticians have just given them out—and see if you can grasp the tremendous meaning to the United States of the apple crop this year. The estimate places it at 30,000,000 barrels, at an average price to the grower of $2 a barrel.

"Sixty million dollars for a single year from the apple crop! 'And this is but a repetition of the song the apple tree has been singing for several years past—a song that has told of one of the pleasantest, surest means of profit open to American money-makers.

"The apple trees of the country will alone during this single year, without working overtime, yield profits amount-

NO-HIT GAMES OF YEAR

The National League Adds Two To Its List

RECORD OF SUCH GAMES PLAYED

The American League Does Not Figure in This List.—New York Times' Dope on The Last Season of Baseball Just Closed.

For the second year in succession no pitcher in the American League has received credit for a no-hit game of the full nine innings during the major league championships of the season just closed. Since 1905 no American League team has finished nine innings without one safe hit. In that year there were three no-hit contests registered. This year Walsh of the Chicago shut out the Greater New Yorks without a hit, but the game lasted only five innings. Last season Walsh officiated in two games in which the opposing batsmen were unable to score a hit for eight innings, but in the final inning the slate was broken by a single hit.

Six times this year the American League pitchers have come within one hit of a clean record for nine innings. Joss of Cleveland pitched three one-hit games, Detroit being his victim twice and New York once. Doyle of the Greater New Yorks, Dygert of Philadelphia, Hughes of Washington, and Berger of Cleveland are the other one-hit pitchers of the year. Last season there were eleven one-hit games in the American League.

Although breaking their shutout record of the year before, the National League clubs failed to surpass their mark for light hitting this year. There were two games in which a pitcher held his opponents down to nothing in the hit column for a regulation game. Pfeffer of Boston let Cincinnati down without a hit on May 8, and Maddox of Pittsburgh did the same trick against Brooklyn on Sept. 20. There were two other instances in which no hits were made, but the games were not complete. Karger of St. Louis did not allow a hit against Boston in seven innings and Camnitz of Pittsburgh pitched five innings without allowing a hit to the Giants.

The record of no-hit games since 1893 in the American and National Leagues and the pitchers who officiating were:

1893—Hawke (Baltimore) vs. Washington.
1897—Young (Cleveland) vs. Cincinnati.
1898—Hughes (Baltimore) vs. Boston.
1898—Breitenstein (Cincinnati) vs. Pittsburgh.

SAVES THE LIVES OF 200.

Cool Bravery of Priest Who Risked His Life to Save The Wrecking of Express Train in France.

The bravery of a French priest saved the lives of possibly two hundred persons at Aubenais, France. The priest noticed that thirty yards of track had been undermined by a flood and tried to signal an approaching express train to stop. The engineer disregarded the priest's frantic gesticulations, thinking him insane, but hastily applied the brakes when the man fell at full length in front of the locomotive. Many passengers were hurled from their seats and slightly hurt by the suddenness with which the train stopped, within but a few inches of the priest's body.

NEW SENATORS

Next Senate Will Be The Largest

AGE LIMIT IS REDUCED

Most Interesting Body Ever Assembled In Capital

TWO-THIRDS ARE REPUBLICANS

Thirteen New Men in The Senate of Sixtieth Congress.—Democrats Will Have to Elect Leader.—Two Indians And One Blind Man in Number.

The next Congress will be one of the most interesting bodies that ever sat in the legislative halls of the capitol; the Senate in particular with its new men will be especially so. With the expiration of the Fifty-ninth Congress the terms of thirty Senators expired. Of these, seventeen were reelected, leaving thirteen new men to take their places. If a Senator is elected in Rhode Island; if the President proclaims Oklahoma a state and its two Democratic Senators, elected at the primaries are seated, the new Senate, says the New York American, will consist of sixty-one Republicans and thirty-one Democrats—the Senate for the first time in its history comprising ninety-two members. Thus the new Senate will be the largest yet, and will consist of two-thirds Republicans, which gives them the power to ratify treaties without the aid of Democratic votes.

The Democrats will have to elect a leader. Senators Daniel of Virginia and Culberson of Texas are the most promising candidates so far.

Through the retirement, death or expired terms of such men as Clark, Alger, Dryden and Millard the new Senate will not be as wealthy in the aggregate as was that of the Fifty-ninth Congress, there being only two millionaires among the newcomers—Guggenheim, of Colorado, and Richardson, of Delaware. The age limit is greatly reduced, the newcomers nearly all being comparatively young men.

This will be the long session of the Senate, but it will probably adjourn by June 1908, as the convention of the two big parties will be held about the last of that month or the first of July.

From the infusion of new and young blood much is anticipated that will be picturesque, pyrotechnic and even pathetic, for one of the expected Oklahoma Senators is totally blind.

With the seating of Robert L. Owen and Charles Curtis, who are Indians, there come for the first time two members of this race. Guggenheim, of Colorado, is the seventh Hebrew to enter the Senate, and there will be two of this race—Ankeny and Rayner—to welcome him.

"Bob" Taylor, of Kentucky, is a famous humorist, and has promised to make things lively in the austere end of the capitol.

The noted platform speaker, Jeff Davis, of Arkansas, is expected to out-Tillman Tillman and furnish some of the pyrotechnics, and they may come. "Tom" Gore, the spell-binding orator from the new State, with the windows of his soul closed forever to the light of day and the silent appeal of his blind face.

Those who may be classed as new Senators for the approaching session, including two who have filled short unexpired terms and the probable new Senators from Oklahoma, are as follows:

John H. Bankhead, Fayette, Ala.
William E. Borah, Boise, Idaho.
Jonathan Bourne, Jr., Portland, Ore.
Frank O. Briggs, Trenton, N. J.
Norris Brown, Kearney, Neb.
Charles Curtis, Topeka, Kan. (served out the unexpired term of Senator Burton in the 59th Congress—may be considered new).
Jefferson Davis, Little Rock, Ark.
Joseph M. Dixon, Missoula, Mont.
Simon Guggenheim, Denver, Col.
Joseph F. Johnston, Birmingham, Ala.
T. H. Paynter, Frankfort, Ky.
Harry H. Richardson, Dover, Del.
William Alden Smith, Grand Rapids, Mich. (served out the unexpired term of Senator Alger in the 59th).
Isaac Stephenson, Marinette, Wis.
Robert L. Taylor, Nashville, Tenn.
Thomas L. Gore, Oklahoma.
Robert L. Owen, Oklahoma.
Three of these members are promotions from the House—Bankhead, Dixon and Smith.

LIVE CAPITAL TOPICS.

From Our Regular Correspondent.

Throughout official Washington the greatest gratification is felt over the result of Secretary Taft's visit in China and from the cables received from there the people in that far off land are equally enthusiastic. Evidently the Chinese consider the United States to be the only power not wanting to annex part of the territory of China and as being disinterestedly concerned in China's welfare, and it is regarded as assured that the utterances of Mr. Taft will give American business men in China renewed confidence to push the lines of trades in which the United States is interested.

There seems to be an organized effort to create the impression that there is friction between Admiral Evans and the Secretary of the Navy and the Staff officers in Washington. Nothing could be further from the truth. The utmost harmony prevails between Admiral Evans and his superior officers and the Secretary, whose entire respect and confidence the Commander of the Atlantic fleet enjoys. Admiral Brownson, Chief of Navigation, has more than once recently taken occasion to give unequivocal expression to the high respect and esteem in which Admiral Evans is held and to the gratification of the department that the Admiral is available to command the Atlantic fleet on the notable forthcoming Pacific cruise. The department is at a loss to understand who can be circulating these fallacious reports, put forth apparently for the sole purpose of making trouble, or what object there can be in thus seeking to injure "fighting Bob Evans."

Mr. Wilbur F. Wakeman, Secretary of the American Protective Tariff League, in an interview with various Washington correspondents recently, expressed amazement over the extent of the tariff revision sentiment which he has found in the Middle West and admitted that reports from all parts of the country to the organization he represents indicate a general tariff revision sentiment; but he hastens to add that it is his conviction that all such sentiment will have dissipated before time for the elections. It is the opinion of politicians in Washington that the tariff revision sentiment will prevail and that Mr. Wakeman places himself in a rather ridiculous light when he undertakes to prognosticate its evaporation before the election throughout the country.

The National Association of Railway Commissioners, in annual session in Washington this week, has placed itself on record as opposed to Federal control of the railroads of the country and has virtually repudiated the proposition advocated by President Roosevelt that the Federal government assume complete control over all interstate railroads.

The sentiment of the National Association was formally manifested by the unanimous adoption of the reports of two committees: the committee on amendment of the act to regulate commerce, and the committee on powers, duties, and work of state railway commissions. Franklin McNeill, of North Carolina, chairman of the committee on amendment, submitted a report declaring against any material amendment of the Hepburn law, at least, until the act had been fully tried. Benjamin F. Chadbourne, of Maine, chairman of the committee on powers, etc., pointed out in his report, the usefulness of commissions of the various states, and declared in favor of an extension of their powers, instead of a curtailment, as has been proposed by the President.

Mr. Chadbourne, in the course of his remarks, said: "We cannot pass lightly the suggestion of Federal incorporation of railroads and that of government ownership, so often heard. The assembling of the smaller corporations into the immense combinations of today brought a few moneyed men and corporations into ownership and control, these who had local interests, enterprises and benefits going out. In this evolution a clear field was opened for overcapitalization, discrimination, rebates and all of the other wrongs that make Federal interference necessary."

"The railroad commissions of the various states long since demonstrated their value to the people as well as to the railroads. It may well be asked whether any of the things now complained of as wrongs would have happened if the State commissions had been clothed with greater powers."

"As long as the several states have the power of granting railroad charters cannot that body have the granting of charters under a well-regulated general law? They could pass upon the question of public convenience as intelligently and as conscientiously as the legislatures. They are every day in contact with the transportation problem, and could exercise the better judgment as to financing. Their investigation as to locations of roadbed and stations would be more careful than would be possible for the legislative body to make."

"Whatever may be the powers given the Federal body in railroad regulation, there will always be a useful field for the work of the State railroad commis-

A TEMPERANCE WAVE.

Considerably Over Half of United States is Dry.

A BRIEF REPORT OF CONDITIONS.

Drys Are Winning the Day All Over The Country.—Roll of States and Territories as to Existing Laws on Prohibition.

Considerably more than one-half of the United States is now governed by some sort of prohibition law, the sale of liquor either being forbidden by State statute or through local option laws. South of Mason and Dixon's line, in particular, nearly every community outside of the larger cities, according to Prohibition leaders has become "dry."

In Alabama, twenty-seven counties are dry; in Arkansas, sixty out of seventy-five; in California, four; Colorado, local option law obtained in 1907; Connecticut, town local option—ninety-six no license to seventy-two license towns; Delaware, half a dozen towns dry, state no-license campaign on, vote on Nov. 5, 1907; Florida, thirty dry counties out of forty-five; Idaho, license; Georgia 130 dry counties out of 146—state prohibition law goes into effect Jan 1, 1908; Illinois, 200 dry towns; Indiana, 710 dry townships out of 1016; Iowa, sixty-five out of ninety-nine counties dry; Kentucky, ninety-seven out of 119 counties dry; Louisiana, eighteen prohibition parishes, and parts of others dry; Maine, state prohibition since 1851; Maryland fourteen out of twenty-three counties dry; Massachusetts, local option by cities and town, 250 being dry, 100 wet; Michigan, county option with few dry counties; Minnesota, license with village local option, 123 dry municipalities; Mississippi, sixty-eight out of seventy-five counties dry; Missouri, fifty-seven out of 115 counties dry; Montana, license; Nebraska, village and city option, 400 dry and 600 wet towns; Nevada, license; New Hampshire, trend is toward prohibition, sixty-two per cent. of population in dry territory; New Jersey, poor local option law; New York, town and township option, 300 dry towns; North Carolina, few saloons, governor leading prohibition campaign; Ohio, 1140 out of 1376 townships dry; Oregon, twelve dry counties and 170 dry municipalities; Oklahoma, 535 saloons in the state; Pennsylvania, license, with privilege of remonstrance; Rhode Island, sixteen dry municipalities out of thirty-eight; South Carolina, recently passed county local option and repealed dispensary law; South Dakota, large section of state dry; Tennessee, saloons excluded from all but four municipalities in state; Texas, county local option law, 147 counties absolutely dry, fifty-five partially so, and only forty-seven totally wet; Utah, license; Vermont, dry, save for twenty-four municipalities; Virginia, much dry territory; Washington, license, with fifty dry towns; West Virginia, thirty dry counties out of fifty-five; Wisconsin, local option with 650 dry towns; Arizona, license; District of Columbia, ratio of saloons to population reduced more than half in last fifteen years; New Mexico, license; Alaska, waiting for developments. These figures and reports are taken from those prepared by Dr. Alison, of the National Temperance Society.

Cost of Maintaining Public Schools.

In its annual report on the statistics of cities having a population of over 30,000, the Census Bureau presents a very interesting table showing the costs of maintaining free public schools, including in such costs the interests on investments in school buildings and grounds. These vary from 7 cents per capita in Charleston, S. C., and 22 cents in Atlanta, Ga., to 133 in Denver, Col., to 143 in Newton, Mass., and 153 in Spokane, Wash.

sion. They can work in harmony with the Federal body in many ways, be of great service to them, and be the means of inspiring the people with the feeling that there are local influences, acting alike for them and the railroads in the adjustment of the fair deal.

"If as has been said, there is no tendency toward a great centralization of power—a surrender of the rights of the State to the national government—the nearer the Federal body gets to the people the better, and in this instance the State railroad commission is the best means of so doing."

SPRING SALE SPRUNG

Springer Springs a Spring Sale in Springfield this Autumn.

Yesterday, a week ago, in Springfield, Pa., Mr. Adam Springer disposed of a lot of stuff at public sale. The Philadelphia North American says of the sale:

In quick order a spring wagon, spring bed and springing board were knocked down after lively bidding.

Then a lithia spring on the farm was offered for sale, and after rival bidders had run this up to $1100, it was purchased by a Mr. Waters. Several poems on spring found no bidders.

A surprise was sprung when Mr. Springer refused to allow a spring harrow to be sold for $350. A set of spring scales went to a local butcher, who bought them because they were out of order and there was no come-back to them.

A clock with a broken mainspring and a few toys were bought in by one of the offspring of the family. This young man also bought the spring gun, which had been used by the farmer to prevent thieves from getting his spring chickens.

Several bottles of spring tonic were purchased by neighbors, who were chronic sufferers from spring fever. Several bushels of spring onions and the spring wheat were not sold.

If they select a place high in the air, a mild Winter is sure to follow.

Only the Names Fictitious.

This story is not only founded on fact—it is fact, only it is put in story form and the names are fictitious.

In the latter part of the last century a steamer crossing the Atlantic was lost by collision in a fog. Among the passengers never heard from were a lady and her little daughter.

Twenty-five years passed. One summer a "want ad." appeared in a newspaper stating that a lady desired the position of chaperon to young people on a trip to Europe. This led to the engagement of Miss Adelia Craven to take charge of two young girls, Teresa Fay and Rachel Cunningham.

These three were one day visiting one of the art museums in Dresden. Miss Fay stood looking at a picture which seemed to interest her, and while she was doing so Miss Craven, the chaperon, came up.

"A copy of that picture is in father's collection at home," said Miss Fay.

"It is also familiar to me," said Miss Craven. "It has been a part of my surroundings at some time in my life, but I can't recall where or where. I have it. I have or had an uncle who had a copy of the picture in his library."

"Why do you say 'have or had'?"

"Because I have not heard of my uncle for years."

"Did he lose you, or did you lose him?"

"I don't know. I was quite young when I last saw him."

Whether there was something in the picture connecting the two or what was the reason, from the time of this conversation about it there seemed to be something in the voice or the manner or the walk of her chaperon that was familiar to Miss Fay. The incident led the two to chat upon family matters connected with the past, and there was a singular sameness in certain events pertaining to both families. While there was some sixteen years' difference in the ages of the two, there sprang up a lively friendship between them. It became evident that instead of a friendship during the trip they would more likely be intimate for life. Miss Cunningham met friends, joined them, and this left the other two alone together.

One day while traveling in a railway car a gentleman asked Miss Fay if she would object to his raising a window. She said she would not. Then he asked if it would be disagreeable to her mother, referring to Miss Craven. The girl smilingly explained that Miss Craven was not her mother or any relation to her, whereupon the gentleman apologized, saying that he had been uncertain whether they were mother and daughter or an older and a younger sister. He certainly saw resemblances between them, though he could not define them.

Miss Fay had letters to people in Rome, which procured her an entree to the best Italian society there. A young man of excellent family fell in love with her and signified his wish to make her a proposition of marriage. Unfortunately there was no one on the continent of Europe of whom he could make a formal application except the chaperon, who was not authorized to give the family consent. The result was that Miss Fay wrote her father of the affair. He took the first steamer, traveling night and day till he reached Italy.

"What sort of a chaperon is this you have," he exclaimed, "to permit you to receive attention to lead to such an unfortunate result?"

"There is no unfortunate result in my case, papa," she replied, "nor in hers either."

"What do you mean by her case?" "She's engaged already, while I'm waiting for your consent. A member of the Italian parliament, a widower, wants her."

"A fine pair to send abroad together! Both you and your chaperon receiving marriage proposals! However, I will look into this affair of yours."

While Mr. Fay's investigations were pending his daughter told him of the picture that both had seen in Dresden, a copy of which was in both families.

"There has never been but one copy of that picture made," replied Mr. Fay, "and that was for me by special permission."

"That proves it," replied the daughter. "I have known it all the while. She is a relative of ours."

There followed an investigation not of a man's family, but of Miss Craven's. The next day Mr. Fay called upon that lady's fiancé and said to him:

"I understand, sir, that you are engaged to Miss Craven and she has told you she has no relative of whom you may make a formal application for her hand. When she told you this she was mistaken."

The gentleman appeared much interested. Mr. Fay proceeded:

"Many years ago a ship was lost at sea by collision with another vessel in a fog. My sister and her little girl were passengers on the lost vessel. I never had heard a word of the mother or of the daughter till yesterday. By a remarkable chain of coincidences it has been discovered that Miss Craven is my niece. The child was rescued, adopted and raised, growing up without knowing who she was."

The outcome was a happy one for all concerned. The two friends were delighted to find that they were cousins. Miss Craven was delighted to know that she was a member of the Fay family instead of being a waif. This was especially a relief since the man she married prided himself on his ancestry, and it had been mortifying to his fiancée that she could not even tell him who her parents were.

GETTYSBURG NEWS

Wilmer, the partially blind 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Delap, near Gettysburg, was burned to death on Monday, his clothing having caught fire from matches with which he was playing. In his agony he rushed against a table which threw him underneath a baby carriage in which a baby was sleeping. The flames from the boy's clothing set fire to the carriage, but the baby was saved by the heroic efforts of its mother. The house also caught fire, but was saved with little damage being done.

The Philadelphia North American, published the following, dated Littlestown, Oct. 13:

Newton Bennington, residing near here, was driving along the Gettysburg road the other day, when a stranger sitting on a rail fence hailed him:

"Want to buy a horse?"

Mr. Bennington said he would if he could get it cheap enough, and the man, pointing to a fine animal in pasture, said:

"Well, I have no use for that sorrel, and you can take her along for $20."

Paying over the cash, the farmer led the horse out of the field and took it along with him. He hadn't gone two miles when he was arrested for horse stealing, and when he told his story a hunt for the stranger was made.

He was found trying to sell another horse for $10, and was later identified as an escaped lunatic from a Maryland asylum. His only explanation was that business looked so dull in the country that he wanted to stir things up.

"If they would have left me alone," he said, "I'd 'a' sold all the horses in this section of the country."

In an interview at Jackson, Miss., Governor Vardaman returns to the attack of President Roosevelt, who he characterizes as a past grand master in the use of words. He says that within the pile of verbiage lurks the most pernicious principles and that to the President the Constitution is a blank piece of paper, upon which he would write anything that his judgment might prompt. The Governor wants a constitutional convention called and certain changes made to suit the conditions of to-day. Mr. Roosevelt he calls a revolutionist who has no respect for the laws of his country, constitutional or statutory.

"There is too much water in stocks," remarked the financier.

"That," responded Colonel Stillwell, genially, "is due to your lack of foresight in not locating Wall Street down in Kentucky, where the limitations of water are more properly understood."

FRIDAY, OCT. 18, 1907.

THE CHRONICLE extends a cordial welcome to all the clerical and lay delegates who are honoring Emmitsburg by their presence at the eighty-eighth Annual Convention of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Maryland. There meeting here is an honor which the citizens of this town fully appreciate and a pleasure which they enter into with great zest. The members of Elias Evangelical Lutheran Church of Emmitsburg are to be doubly congratulated in that such a large representation of that influential body, of which they are by no means an unimportant part, is meeting in their particular church and that the presiding officer of this Synod is their own beloved pastor. Mr. Reinewald's executive ability, his noble qualities of mind, his true worth as a preacher, a pastor, a citizen and a friend, are too well known to this community to need even passing comment, and that these traits should have been recognized in so conspicuous a manner by the Synod of Maryland at its last year's session, is particularly gratifying to his own people and to Mr. Reinewald's large circle of friends and admirers in this place. Maryland hospitality is a characteristic of Emmitsburg and now that these honored guests are at her fireside, for all too short a time, she bids them share her pleasure and to feel at home.

It is fair to assume that coincident with the going up of the Dupont Powder mills the other day, the price of saltpetre and deadly ingredients also went up.

Not very far from this place, —at Mont Alto, to be exact— the State of Pennsylvania is carrying on a work which will prove a boon to her welfare as a commonwealth and a blessing to thousands of her citizens who, if denied the assistance rendered by the State, without any expectation of compensation on her part, would die the slow death of the consumptive. We refer to the war against the "white plague" which is being successfully waged, with this point as one of the chief battle grounds. It is estimated that fully 100,000 persons in Pennsylvania are suffering from the scourge and that even a much larger sum than the $600,000 granted by the legislature for establishing sanitariums will be necessary to effectively combat it. Dr. Dixon, the State Health Commissioner has half a hundred patients under treatment at Mont Alto now, and as soon as the necessary buildings are completed fully five hundred will find accomodation there. When an equal number of sufferers are provided for in the sanitarium to be erected in the western part of the state (a sufficient appropriation is set aside for that purpose) and the hundred or more dispensaries, for which provision in the sum of $400,000 has been made, are in operation in those localities where the disease is especially prevalent, a campaign will have begun on a bigger and a more comprehensive scale than has ever been undertaken, so it is said, against a specific disease.

Patient men of science, devoted to their high calling and with a persistence born of a desire to help their fellowmen, have found that consumption, if not in its advanced or last stages, is not incurable. Expert practitioners have discovered that with nature's ever ready assistance this infectious and much dreaded disease can be conquered, and to-day there are thousands of healthy people who are living examples of what special medical treatment can accomplish when cooperated in by intelligent patients. To attempt to cite the smallest results which the medical profession has accomplished in its great work of overcoming tuberculosis, would be to practically publish volume after volume of incontestable data relative to consumption and its wonderfully successful handling by individual specialists, by this government and the government of many foreign nations. These facts, from which new hope has sprung in the breasts of countless sufferers, should warrant the expenditure of any amount of money deemed necessary by competent judges to stamp out for ever, or at least control this ravaging pestilence.

Other States, forced to a realization of the tremendous inroads which this disease has made, have fought and are fighting against it through the medium of medical science supported by vast sums of money, and only lately Maryland has established a sanitarium, almost within own midst, where the conditions of a few victims of the plague (thanks to a very meagre appropriation) may receive at least some slight amelioration. Maryland would do well to follow in a proportionately liberal manner the example of her sister State, and those who are soon to sit in the legislative halls at Annapolis could seek no greater praise from their constituents than that which would follow their successful advocacy of an appropriation commensurate with the importance of the high purpose for which it should be urged.

Truly this is an age of women's organizations. This Winter one hundred and sixty three women who have christened battleships will meet at the National Capital to form the Society of Naval Sponsors. Pretty soon we will no doubt hear of organizations among Pullman Car namers, apartment house christeners and inventors of appellations for breakfast foods.

SEVERAL times we have commented on the execrable lighting system of Emmitsburg; not with any intention or desire to speak disparagingly of those who have the matter under control, but rather to call their attention to the importance of providing a proper amount of light for this good town which sorely suffers in this respect. The street lamps of the corporation are small and antiquated, and the number provided is but sufficient to cast a series of gloomy shadows here and there—to cast, in reality, only an unwarranted reflection on the town itself. We are aware that the money available for purposes of this kind is small at best; we are cognizant of the fact that when the present Board of Commissioners assumed office there was a deficit in the town treasury; we realize that these gentlemen are handicapped for this reason in doing many things which they otherwise would do; yet nevertheless we believe that a decided improvement over the present methods can be made, and at a very little additional cost.

As things are now, when every light is turned on and the moon is working up to its full capacity the streets of Emmitsburg appear like graveyard lanes at dusk, and why the services of the coroner are not needed every week is something we are unable to comprehend. When the Commissioners adopt the plan of refusing to light the lamps at all when the calendar indicates that there is to be a new moon—and it does not seem to matter to them whether or not the moon really appears—the scene presented reminds one of the villain's suggestive lines: "this is a fine night for a murder." It likewise prompts the thought that the hand-lantern trust may have somehow gotten in its work in this vicinity, especially as only a night or two ago when it was particularly dark and when the few "dips" we have were snuffed out earlier than usual, (no doubt because some of the town fathers had received a tip that the moon was on her way to town) a bevy of young ladies returning from a sewing circle had to be supplied with lamps in order to enable them to reach their homes without bodily injury.

Such a state of affairs should certainly not exist outside of "Darkest Africa." We are not living in the time of Emmitt, but in the twentieth century when every known kind of improved lighting apparatus is available, and at prices lower than ever before. In view of all this would it not be wise, would it not be considerate, would it not be practicable for our local governors to look into this matter?

CHICAGO, according to a news dispatch, has had a very unique wedding in her midst. The bride and groom, and officiating minister and the bridal party wore roller skates during the ceremony. As wheels in this instance seem to have been abundant in that part of the anatomy usually thought to contain brains, the entire assemblage might have saved trouble and expense by standing on their heads.

THERE was a very perceptible change in the rate of speed at which automobiles came through town on Sunday. The usual number of tourists were here, but they respected the signs which were placed at conspicuous points on the four roads leading into Emmitsburg since the suggestion was made by THE CHRONICLE last week. The Commissioners acted wisely in thus warning owners of machines that there is an ordinance against scorching within the corporation limits; but their prompt action was just what was to be expected from a board which has proven to be only too willing to quickly adopt any reasonable measure that is for the betterment of the town.

THE football season at Mount St. Mary's College began last Saturday and the first game was a victory for our strong home eleven. Athletics, by the way, is a feature which is by no means neglected at this splendid old institution. Thorough and careful physical training, proper outdoor sports, and exercise in the open, all of which are so necessary in developing and maintaining a healthy body, are looked upon as important adjuncts to the regular curriculum, and the athletic records which have been made by the various teams at Mount St. Mary's and the healthy condition of her student body, exemplify the wisdom of the course which this college pursues.

NOT TOO SERIOUS.

A Bit Of Wit And Humor To Season The Serious Side Of Life.

A Clean Sheet.

"I see you have arrested a man whose mind is blank," said a large woman, pushing her way into the police station.

"Yes."

"Well, trot him out. John didn't come home last night, and that's a pretty good description of him when I've given him a list of errands."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The New York Idea.

A Westerner visiting New York was held up by a highwayman with the demand, "Give me your money, or I'll blow your brains out!"

"Blow away," said the Westerner. "You can live in New York without brains, but you can't without money."—Christian Register.

Professor—"This milk contains 1,234,567 bacilli to the cubic inch." Layman—"Poor things! they must feel like they were in a street car."—Judge.

Only A Suggestion.

The Boston Herald is devoting some space to a discussion of the question, "When should a boy put on trousers?" We would suggest that a boy should put on trousers as soon as he has donned his underclothes, shoes and stockings, and shirt. That is the usual order in this part of the country. We don't know how it may be in Boston. But so far as we have heard the Oneida County method has always proved satisfactory to the majority. There used to be a widely respected farmer living not far from Utica who always put on his broad-brimmed straw hat when he first got out of bed, and didn't put on his trousers until after he put on his vest. Then he had to tuck his "galluses" up underneath the vest at the back and pull them down in front. But the custom never spread much.—Utica Observer.

Rugged Hiram and Hiram's Giddy Wife.

[Copyright, 1902, 1903, by Robert Howard Russell.]

A TRAILING WORTH GOWN.

Once there was a staid Business Man who was hooked up with a hoop-la Spender. It was often remarked that Hiram's Wife seemed to take it for granted that a Treasury Notes grew on Trees. She wore those long, lozenge-shaped Rings that blind the Spectator, and she had a different Sunburst for every Day in the Week and a Diamond Tarara that made the other Women sizzle with Envy. She wore a trailing Worth Gown that kept coming into the Room long after she had entered.

Now and then she would give a Party at which $80 worth of Spinach would be hung on the Chandeliers. The highest-priced Caterer in Town would deal out the sparkling Conversation Water as if Brut and Buttermilk cost about the same.

She was, in very Sooth, among the highest of the Rollers, but Hiram stood for the Bills with nary a Whimper. He was proud to be the Husband of the Lady Ki-Bosh of the Local Knickerbockers.

He never pranced into the Ring himself for Fear that he might interfere or throw a Shoe, but he sat back in Section A and rooted for the Missus. Every time she was awarded a Blue Ribbon for another Social Triumph, he was pleased beyond Compare.

Hiram was a Child of Nature, and he never had been able to outgrow his Birthright. Even when he was attired in his $135 Evening Clothes, one could tell by looking at him that he knew how to milk a Cow. He had more Hands and Feet than he could dispose of at one Time.

Hiram could not comb his Hair so that it would Stay, and although he had been in the City for 30 years he never contrived to get the Hang of a tie-it-yourself Bow Tie, so he used the kind that fastens behind with a little Buckle. It was even said that Hiram was unable to put the Studs in his Shirt without getting Finger-Marks on the Bosom. Hiram's Wife or daughter Jessie always had to go to his Room and look him over and turn him around a couple of times before they dared to lead him out where the Company could see him.

When there was a Theatre-Party, Hiram always sat back between the Curtains so as to avoid spoiling the Picture, and at the same time keep the Draught away from the other People. At a Dinner-Party he was usually put in between two gabby Girls who had tacit Instructions to keep him elbowed into the Background.

And yet, withal, Hiram was a Man of Sterling Worth and many admirable Qualities. He was the Family Gibraltar, while his Wife and Jessie were supposed to be mere Floral Ornaments. Best of all, Hiram was known to be a Star at getting the Coin. The Fact that the Family put up such a tall Front in the Society Column helped the Public to believe that Hiram was as good as Old Wheat and as prosperous as a Kansas Farmer. And he was supposed to be long on Business Integrity. It was argued that one so Yappy would have to be correspondingly Honest. Hiram was so Severe and Puritanical and had so much clinging Agricultural Simplicity that no one dreamed the Truth about him. In Reality, his Arteries were surcharged with Sporting Blood. When no one suspected it, he liked to put on a Mask and sneak out and hold up the Stock Market. That is what he did until one sad Day in May the Stock Market up and Did him. He got it right where the Hired Girl wears the Ruching.

IN HIS EVENING CLOTHES.

Hiram came home as Pale as a Ghost and broke the News that he was in the Hole. He hesitated to tell the Wife, for she was a Fragile Being, unaccustomed to the rude Buffets of the Strenuous Life, and he feared that such a cruel Blow might crush her. But he finally divulged the frightful Truth and then flopped to the Settee and began to Bluff about killing himself, so that she could get the Insurance Money. She told him to Behave, and then she went out and made a Cup of Strong Tea for him.

Hiram had been an Imposing Figure so long as he had his Financial Underpinning, but when they yanked away his Supports he'd a horrible Collapse. When he got the Swing in the Plexus and toppled over he proved to be a sorry Quitter. He lay on his Back and claimed a Foul, while his Wife and Jessie hustled around to save some of the Wreckage.

They gave up the Servants and soaked the Jewels and moved into a smaller House. It was a rapid Come-Down, but even while they were doing the Parachute they continued to look Pleasant and be Game. Although their Female Friends came around to express Sympathy and stick Pins in them, they forced the Angelic Smile and did not act a bit like Heavy Losers.

They had to take in Roomers and give Lessons in China-Painting in order to save Hiram from the Poor-House, and yet with all their Skimping and Economizing they never pretended to know Poverty.

When a Man loses his Money he goes to his Bedroom to drink himself into a Trance. A Woman lights the House from Cellar to Garret and sends out Invitations for a Party.

On an Income of about $3 a Week, Hiram's Wife and Daughter managed to keep up Appearances and occasionally have some of their Old Friends to Dinner. Hiram never understood how they managed it. When he looked at his empty Bank-Book and then out at the Cold

HAD TO TAKE IN ROOMERS.

World he was for giving up and disappearing beneath the waves. His Wife braced him and told him to think of Jessie. Hiram wept and said there was no Hope for the Child of a Pauper. Notwithstanding which, Hiram's Wife kept the Family right along in the Swim and married Jessie to a desirable Catch. It is true that she starved the Household for six months in order to give the Young Couple a daisy Send-Off.

And all this time Hiram, the astute Business Manager, was standing around on one Foot like a Town Simpleton at a Kissing-Ree.

Hiram had learned how to do Things with Money, but he had to turn to his frivolous Wife to find out how to Manage it when there was no Money. In other words, Hiram discovered that Cash had been the Essence of his Existence while it had been the mere accidental Adjunct to his Wife's Social Campaigns.

Without a big Reserve he was a Smoke. She, minus her Check-Book, rose to greater heights of Diplomacy. In time she succeeded in resuscitating her groggy Husband and putting him back on the Track, but he had lost his Ginger. He was stoop-shouldered and gray as a Bat.

She turned up at the Club Meetings just as chipper as of Yore, only she came by Trolley instead of Coupe.

AUTOMATIC JUMPER.

An Amusing Experiment With a Card and Glass of Water.

Take an ordinary tumbler and pour water into it until it is three-quarters full. Then carefully wipe the edge of the glass so that it may be perfectly dry before you begin your little experiment. Place upon the top of the glass, as if you intended to protect the contents from dust, a playing card made of good, firm paper with the printed figure turned down toward the water. The card must be large enough to extend just over the edge of the glass all around.

Let the card remain on the glass for half an hour or so, and you will then see that the moist vapor rising from the liquid has caused the card to swell or arch in the center. Then take the card carefully by one of its corners and replace it on the glass with the arched side reversed.

Having cut out of paper the figure of a little man and inserted it in a slit in the top of a small vial cork, place the cork carefully upon the center of the card and wait. Presently the moist vapor will make the card swell in the opposite direction, and with a little clap up will fly your manikin and your cork in the air.

"Comin' Through the Rye,"

It is said that Robert Burns' famous song "Comin' Through the Rye" did not have reference to a rye field, but to a small river, Rye, in Ayrshire, which could be forded. In wading through, however, the lassies had to hold up their petticoats, and it was a favorite pastime of Robble Burns and mischievous companions to lie in wait for the lassies coming through the Rye. When they got to midstream the laddies would wade out and snatch a kiss from the lassies, who were unable to resist without dropping their skirts in the water.—Westminster Gazette.

What The Sphinx Thinks

—That a big head may be occasioned by many other causes than excessive brain development.

—That he who spends time in worrying about what people think or say of him, spends it to very poor advantage.

—That when the "poor health" germ gets busy with the imagination of a normal person it's the beginning of red letter days for the doctors.

—That if all the money could be parted from all the fools at one and the same time, wise men would have a larger immediate working capital.

—That the energy wasted in the process of working one's anger into fever heat, would accomplish much good if conserved and applied to a different purpose.

—That the man who at first assumes the responsibility for running counter to recognized laws, eventually shifts his responsibility for failure on an "unkind world."

NEW YORK FASHIONS

Pattern For Box Plaited Walking Skirt Designed by May Manton—No. 5756.

Box plaited skirts are always graceful and at the moment are in great favor. This one is designed for the fashionable walking length and is appropriate for almost every skirting material and is adapted both to the coat suits and the odd skirts. In the illustration it is made of white silienne mohair stitched with belding silk, but it suits the linens and piques of the present and also the wool materials that will be in demand before many weeks. Again, it can be utilized for pongee and for silk, so that it becomes a very generally useful and serviceable model. The stitched hem is a sufficient finish, but banding, either of the same or contrasting material, can be applied above it.

The skirt is cut in nine gores and is laid in box plaits, the edges of which meet at the upper portion and which effectually conceal the seams. The plaits are stitched flat over the hips. The quantity of material required for the medium size is 11½ yards 27, 6¼ yards 44 or 52 inches wide. Sizes for a 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30 inch waist measure.

DIRECTIONS FOR ORDERING.

Send 10 cents to this office, give number of this pattern, No. 5756, and state size desired. It will then be sent to you by mail postpaid. Be sure to write plainly and always give full address. Several days must be allowed for delivery of pattern.

SHORT STORIES.

Tea was discovered in the eighth century.

The lead of a very cheap pencil is often nothing but coke.

It has been calculated that $50,000,000 worth of standing timber is destroyed annually in the United States.

Two of the most productive wheat regions in the state of Washington are named Horse Heaven and Rattlesnake. The merchants of Emmett, Kan., are offering presents of furniture to couples under twenty-five years of age who will marry before Jan. 1, 1908.

On Sept. 1 a fall of one-tenth of an inch of rain occurred at San Francisco, the first time in fifty-eight years that rain has fallen so early in the season in that locality.

Professor Charles J. Bushnell in a lecture delivered at Washington said one-eighth of the families in the United States now own seven-eighths of the wealth of the country.

He Wanted Them Dead.

Mrs. Black was to meet her husband at a certain store at 1 o'clock. After standing around for some time she grew very impatient and, thinking that he might have forgotten to meet her, called him up on the phone at his place of business. Supposing that central had given her the right number, she exclaimed: "Hello, Frank! Is that you? I'm nearly dead!"

"Well, madam, I think you have the wrong man. I'm an undertaker and want them all dead!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Not the Last.

Patience—I'm going to congratulate Peggy on her last marriage. Patience—You'd better wait. Patience—Why so? Patience—I don't think this one is her last.—Yonkers Statesman.

AROUND THE HOUSE.

Save your bits of old velvet for polishing. When washed they will prove as useful as chamolis.

Remnants of laundry soap can be boiled into a jelly or soft soap for dishwashing or shaved into the wash boiler on wash day.

It will be economy to finish your sheets with the same width hem at each end. By so doing they can be used either side up and gain much wear.

Use fine wire for hanging up such articles as rolling pins, chopping knives, potato mashers and pastry boards. The wire loop is perfectly clean.

Combs should not be washed with water. This is apt to split the teeth. A stiff nailbrush is a good thing to keep for cleaning them. After using the brush take a damp cloth and wipe between each tooth with this.

The Arctic Blueberry.

In August, when blue and salmon berries ripen in the reindeer moss, Eskimos are everywhere with sealskin leather pails, their gay colored parkas, the hood with wolven fur border, adding a picturesque color note to the chiaroscuro. The arctic blueberry is richer, more delicious than its kindred of the States, while the salmon berry is an aesthetic delight as it lifts its royal yellow fruit from a bed of autumnal tinted leaves of waxlike texture. American housewives combine the blue and salmon berry into a delicious preserve. The natives bury them in the ground, marking the place with a cover of willows. There they freeze and are taken out as needed and eaten with seal oil.—Circle.

Mildred—They say young Huggins wants to marry every girl he meets. Clotilda—Then why don't you get some one to introduce you, my dear?

AMPUTATION NECESSARY.

Postmaster at Motter's Has His Hand Mashed by the Coupling on the Engine of the Emmitsburg Railroad.

On Monday afternoon Mr. Marshall Saylor, postmaster at Motter's Station, had his left hand mashed by a coupling on the engine of the Emmitsburg Railroad. Mr. Saylor was standing on the cow-catcher of the engine at the time of the accident and was holding some manifests in his right hand. The engine slowed up and to steady himself Mr. Saylor took hold of the knuckle joint of the coupling with his left hand. When the engine hit the cars his hand was drawn into the coupling and mashed.
Dr. James W. Eichelberger was sent for and when he looked at the members he found that an operation was necessary. Mr. Saylor was brought to Emmitsburg and Dr. Eichelberger assisted by Dr. J. B. Brawner amputated the first three fingers. It will more than likely be necessary to take off the little finger as it was terribly broken.

EMMITSBURG'S GYMNASIUM

Classes Under Proper Instruction Will Meet in the Opera House.—Room Fully Equipped.

On Monday evening Mr. James McGreevy opened his gymnasium much to the delight of the many patrons of athletics. He has a good equipment such as parallel bars, wall machines of every description and in fact all that goes to make a well-appointed place of its kind. Mr. McGreevy deserves a great deal of credit for the step he has taken and will undoubtedly meet with that success which his endeavors justly deserve.

The necessity of proper physical training should appeal to every man and boy no matter how strong he may be, as systematic exercise under proper supervision means more than haphazard development along uncertain lines.

This gymnasium should become an institution in the town as undoubtedly it fills a long-felt want. The Opera House has been fitted out as a gymnasium and Mr. McGreevy's classes will meet him there. His course will include instruction in wrestling and boxing as well as the usual drill with indian clubs, dumb-bells and wands.

THE FREDERICK FAIR.

This Year's Attractions Will be Better Than Any in the History of the Association.—Free Exhibits.

The managers of the great Frederick Fair are making many preparations for this season's exhibition which promises to be better than any held in years. On Tuesday the 22nd of October, the opening day, their will be a special and very attractive feature added to the programme viz., a half-mile running race for horses owned in Frederick county. In this event have been entered Zack Brown, a son of the famous Garry Herrman, who for years held the world's record for five-eighths of a mile. Minnie Hasbrouck, daughter of Dr. Hasbrouck, a well-known winner will be in this race and also a son of Judge Gorvin. These are only a few of the entries for this special race.

It is predicted that the regular racing features will be of the highest order as many of the best horses in the East have been entered for the different events. As usual there will be free attractions in front of the grand stand, to the long list of which the managers have added Arthur C. Holden who will be seen in his marvelous act, "Looping the Death-Trap Loop." The famous Gregory family, acrobats and gymnasts, will also be on the programme, and in full view of the audience a noted diver will plunge from the top of a ninety-foot ladder into a tank scarcely ten feet square.

SENSIBLE ADVICE.

Good For Children to Have Small Responsibilities.

"I believe in giving children responsibilities," said the mother of half a dozen. "I know that most mothers have a foolish prejudice against the idea. They seem to think that a responsibility is a burden to a child, but it really isn't if it is managed the right way."

"I am afraid I am one of the prejudiced," answered her neighbor. "Children learn the meaning of responsibility soon enough. Why should I be the one to teach them?"

"Because you are their mother, and the lesson will come so gently from you that they will not know they have learned it till some great experience makes them rise up and call you blessed for your teachings," said the other. "Take my little family. We are not well enough off to provide a nurse, and so instead of trying to assume the care of them all I have taught each one to look out for the next youngest. The amount of supervision that Tommy exercises over his three small brothers is really wonderful. I feel safe when they are with him as I do when they are with their father."

"That sounds sensible, and I suppose I am rather foolish. My husband told me yesterday that I was literally a slave to the children," sighed the neighbor.

"You are," assented the other frankly. "You give up your time and your health and your friends and your husband for them. You never have a moment to yourself. You've taught your children to come to you for everything, and so they don't hesitate to burst in upon you at any moment, whether you are trying to get a nap or entertaining company or just sitting down for a quiet chat with one of your friends. If you leave them for even a couple of hours you are perfectly wretched for fear something has happened to them. You never have a holiday because you are afraid they might possibly miss you or need you. You think that argues great devotion and a motherly sense of duty, but you are making the mistake of your life."

A WASHABLE SACHET.

Something That Is Dainty and Sweet at the Same Time.

A square of pale green linen is used to make this sachet. The corners are embroidered and the square edged with a narrow cord. Then three corners are folded over to the center, envelope fashion, and their points fastened together with a stitch. The fourth corner forms the flap, and the sachet closes by means of a button and a loop of cord. When the sachet requires washing, it is only necessary to cut a few stitches, and then it can be laundered perfectly flat. Quite a new idea is to have a separate sachet for gloves and handkerchiefs. The case only measures about an inch or two larger than the handkerchiefs and is very dainty and pretty.

What Braising Means.

Braising is a combination of roasting and stewing small joints of meat in a shallow stewpan, called a braiseroir or braiser, which has a close fitting lid with a grooved edge round it on which hot coals (charcoal) are placed, whereby the meat can be cooked with a fire above it as well as under it. This process of cooking, it is said, greatly decreases loss by evaporation. It is a favorite method with the French and is supposed to bring out an unusually fine flavor and aroma.

The pan in which a braise is to be made should always be lined with slices of bacon, carrot, onions and herbs, upon which the meat is placed. It is usually moistened with stock or stock and wine. The more delicate meats, such as sweetbreads, fillets, fowls and turkeys, are sometimes covered with buttered paper. This is done to prevent the heat from the top of the pan scorching or imparting too much of a roast flavor to the meats which are to be braised.

Occasional basting during the process of this method of cooking is essential. When done the meat is taken up, the fat removed from the vegetables and gravy, which latter is then reduced, strained and blended with some kind of gravy or thin sauce.

A Dressmaking Hint.

If you are what is called an "out" size and the paper patterns cut in ordinary sizes do not fit you, rip an old well fitting dress bodice apart, iron out the pieces so that they will lie flat and cut a bodice pattern in paper from this. By allowing extra width where fullness will be needed you can cut blouses from the same pattern.

Brighten Old Carpet.

The colors in an old carpet can be brightened by sprinkling with wet pieces of newspapers wrung out of water. Work with the grain of the carpet, and after the paper has been brushed off wipe up the carpet with a cloth wrung out of a weak solution of ammonia water.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF FARMERS

A Word on the Subject of Feeding Stock to the Farmer's Best Advantage

SOME INFORMATION REGARDING FOOD STUFFS

The Importance of the Subject From an Economic Stand Point.—The Proper Feed Will Bring Results That Can Not be Otherwise Attained.—The Experience of Others Sifted Down for Chronicle Readers.—What Men Who Know Have to Say on This Important Subject.—A Word for the Wise.

Cereal grains resemble each other in composition and there is little distinction between them in feed value. Beans, peas, and leguminous seeds resemble the cereal grains but with the exception of cowpeas, they are not very commonly fed in the United States though much used in Europe.

"The various cakes, gluten meals, and similar feeding stuffs," says the Encyclopedia Americana, "are, generally speaking, commercial by-products. Thus, cotton-seed cake is a material left after the oil has been expressed from the cotton-seed. In the same way linseed-cake is the residue obtained from flax seed in the manufacture of linseed oil. When this is ground it becomes linseed meal. In the manufacture of beer the malted grain remaining is known as brewers' grains, and is best fed after drying, when starch is manufactured from corn, the nitrogenous portion of the grain is rejected and constitutes gluten feed and gluten meal. There are a number of mixed feeds on the market which are made up of shrunken grains, branny material, and other residues obtained in the manufacture of cereal breakfast foods, etc. These vary in feeding value, some of them comparing favorably with more common cereal feeds. Grain, ground and unground, commercial by-products, leguminous seeds, oil cakes and similar products are very frequently called concentrated feeds, the name being suggested by the fact that their feeding value, especially the protein content, is high in comparison with the bulk. So far as the general experience and the result of American and foreign experiments go, most of the common feeding stuffs * * are wholesome and valuable. Some are more prized than others for a particular purpose. Thus, oats are a favorite food for horses, especially in the Eastern United States, and other regions where they are a staple crop, but in the South and Middle-West, corn is the most important feed. For fattening cattle, sheep and hogs, corn is undoubtedly the most important grain in the United States.

"The various forage crops—grass, clover, Kafir corn, corn, etc., all have a high water content when fresh, that is, they are more or less succulent and juicy. They contain, however, considerable nutritive material, chiefly protein and carbohydrates, and are valuable feeding stuffs. The leguminous forage crops—alfalfa, clover, cowpeas, soy beans, vetch, etc.,—are richer in protein than the grasses. When forage crops are dried and cured the resulting hay is richer in proportion to its bulk than the green material; in other words, it has been concentrated by the evaporation of the greater part of the water present. However, this is not the only change that has taken place. When hay is properly cured, it undergoes a peculiar sort of fermentation or oxidation materially affecting its composition, improving the hay by diminishing the quality of crude fibre, and by increasing the relative amount of other nutrients, especially nitrogen-free extract. Hay which has undergone proper curing has a better flavor and agrees better with animals and is apparently more digestible than hay which has dried quickly in the sun without fermentation.

"The feeding value of different forage crops, fresh and cured, depends in considerable degree upon the stage of growth, the nutritive value of the crop, generally speaking, increasing until the growth is complete and diminishing somewhat as the plants mature or become over ripe. Straw, the fully ripened stalk of cereal grains contains some nutritive material, but is less nutritious than the same portion of the plant cut before ripening. In the perfectly ripe condition the nutritive material, elaborated in different portions of the ordinary forage plants, has been largely conveyed, to the seed and used for its development or stored as reserve material."

In next week's issue of THE CHRONICLE the subject of Silage will be taken up. This process of ensiling is of the utmost importance, and of late years has been given no little attention by farmers in this vicinity; therefore do not miss next week's article.

WIRELESS TELEPHONE

New System, if Successful, Will be Adopted by The United States Navy.

Although the wireless telephone is in an experimental state, the tests that have been recently given the system prove beyond a doubt that before long it will be accounted as a finished achievement as practical as the Marconi wireless telegraph.

Wireless telephone is based on the same principle as the wireless telegraph. In the latter system the messages are received through a sort of telephone receiver placed to the ear of the operator. This same means is used by the wireless telephone operator except that where in one case the ticking of the instrument is heard, in the other the operator will hear the human voice. Assurance has been given that as soon as the machines are perfected the Government will install the wireless telephones on all the battleships of the United States Navy.

Jelgersma then points out and argues strongly for his conviction that the later we begin with the intellectual development of a child's mind—"its culture"—the better we provide against future mental unbalance.

"Every child," he asserts, "has to contend against the nervousness of its parents. This struggle begins in the very cradle. A healthy child does not cry naturally, and if it does it has learned to do so from its mother, and the mother all the time thinks she has acquired her peevishness from her child. Nervous mothers are the rule. Eager for their children's future they limit their freedom in play, and when they do permit play the child is so restricted, so formalized, that in nine cases out of ten it is play no longer.

"The father, standing in the battle-ranks and struggling for position and daily bread, influences his child in the most evil way by his caprices, affectations and the qualities he has acquired in his struggles outside. And these caprices and affectations are the more evil and the more poisonous the higher he stands in culture and the further forward he ranks as a modern man."

Jelgersma has some very earnest things to say about the woman's movement.

"It is characteristic of our time," he says, "and is one of the reasons for our prevailing nervousness. To a certain limit I recognize its importance, for the elevation of womanhood is one of the noblest missions of human history. But a woman is not a man, and all the resolutions ever adopted at public gatherings will not make her one. Even a vote of Parliament will not alter this fact. I am firmly convinced that if the movement goes on engrossing attention in the future as it has done in the past the consequences will be disastrous largely to women themselves, but above all to their children.

"More than two-thirds of the women who begin to study do not finish their course, and either break down physically or mentally, or turn to their natural calling of wife and mother. The more a woman devotes herself to study and the more she becomes a creature of modern civilization the more is she unfitted for the duties of childbearing and bringing up children who will turn out useful members of society.

"We are in a transition stage, and the appalling thing about this stage is that the number of nervous and mentally sick persons is increasing at a rate which is not adequately shown by the statistics of our hospitals and mad-houses. Every psychiatrist knows this and feels alarm, which he does not like to express. If the transition state shall merge into one of greater sanity it will be well, but the prospects are all the other way.

"We are paying too much for our civilization and culture; we are paying for it with the deterioration of the nerves of the human race. Ever recurring alterations, new inventions, new social ideas, revolutions in the way of communication, all call for new rules of life. The longed-for rest will apparently never come. My one hope is that this very so-called advance in invention and discovery may some day give us the means of combating its accompanying evils, enabling us to preserve our equilibrium in movement, even as it used to be our object to preserve our equilibrium in rest."

GOLDEN APPLES.

ing to the total assessed valuation of Arizona; would pay almost half the cost of contracting the Panama canal—such a tremendous undertaking that a great nation has for years hesitated to tackle it.

"Cold storage has revolutionized the apple business; exportation to Europe of American apples on ice or in evaporated form has tended to make the business still more profitable.

"So the expression 'apples of gold' is not a mere figure of speech, but a literal fact.

"Aren't our apologies due to Mother Eve?"

From Lockport, N. Y., comes the story of an orchard owned by a Mr. Fred Zimmerman. The Zimmerman farm sold, recently, for $3000. The buyer figures that he will get 1400 barrels of apples from the tract this year. For these he expects a price ranging between $3 and $4 a barrel.

Now, deduct a fair price to cover the cost of picking, packing and delivering at the freight station, and there is still a clear profit for the owner—so he has calculated—of $2.80 a barrel, or $3,920. What does this mean? Don't you see?

It means a total profit in a single year of $3,920 on a farm that cost recently only $3000.

A farm more than paid for in a single year by its apple trees!

And to think of the years when the gold lay all unrecognized in those apples, like the diamond that sparkles beneath the black covering of the rough stone.

From another New York state orchard—that of S. W. McCollum, near Lockport, containing 1100 apple trees—indications are that 2500 barrels of apples will be secured this year against 500 last year.

This will mean a profit of $7000 from the apple trees alone, and Mr. McCollum has also thriving orchards of pears and plums.

In Colorado, however, has come to light the biggest profit from an apple orchard that has ever been reported in any part of America or elsewhere.

For this most remarkable story, Paul Wilson, president of the State Fair Association, of Colorado, is authority, and he declares that he secured his information while travelling through the state seeking exhibits for the State Fair.

"I saw one orchard covering but a single acre of ground," said Mr. Wilson, "which will yield 4000 boxes of apples from its 100 trees and a cash return of $12,000. Another orchard will yield 15,000 boxes, which will sell for $65,000."

In the first instance, Mr. Wilson evidently figured on $3 a box, and in the latter case $4.33 a box. Of course, these were extremely fancy apples—every one a picture worthy being preserved, to say nothing of its flavor.

Such instances are as yet rare. Yet the fact that one is occasionally encountered is in itself proof that the apple business can be made one of the greatest in the country.

Science combined with farming, and a business system to wind up with—in this is that such opportunities lie.

Indeed, a possible profit of $1000 an acre year after year is held forth as a safe promise by authorities on scientific apple growing.

Farmers who have become rich out of the apple business say that it requires far less expense and actual work than almost any other source of profit on the farm.

Tart Reply To Baltimore Sun.

The Baltimore Sun on Tuesday published a praiseworthy editorial endorsing the recent compact by politicians in various counties of this State to prevent the use of whiskey to influence voters on election day. Such utterances, though, would come with a better grace if the Sun had not recently prevented the nomination of a Democratic candidate for Governor because of his pro-temperance views.—Towson News.

To Farmers---A Word of Explanation.

¶ There seems to be an impression that the Fine Set of Harness offered by the EMMITSBURG CHRONICLE for the best article on farming will be awarded to the farmer who has raised the biggest crop.

¶ This is a decided mistake.

¶ The sole idea is to get a series of articles for publication, written by practical farmers, explaining the methods by which they have succeeded with various crops.

¶ Thus the man who farms 30 acres is on the same footing with the one who farms 300, for the one who cultivates the small farm may have far better ideas than he who owns a greater number of acres, and his product, in proportion, may be greater.

¶ It is simply a question of who has the best ideas.

Concrete Construction.

¶ Concrete Pavements, Steps, Gutters, Cisterns, Water Troughs, Hitching Posts, Carriage Blocks, etc.

Valuable Offer to Farmers

In order to benefit farmers in general by giving them—

Free of Cost

—the most practical suggestions about raising paying crops of various kinds, gained from actual experience.

The Chronicle Will Present a Set of Fine Harness to the farmer who sends to this office before January 1st, 1908, the best article on the methods by which he has raised the most successful crops.

As substance is what is wanted, writing, punctuation or expression will not be counted—thus an article indifferently written, but containing the best ideas, will count for more than a well written but less practical one.

CONDITIONS:

1. Every competitor must be a yearly subscriber to THE CHRONICLE.
2. The number of acres cultivated, the character of the soil and the reasons for everything done, must be given.
3. Under each article must appear a fictitious name, and accompanying it must be a sealed envelope containing the real name of the writer. The outside of the envelope must bear the same name that is appended to each article.
4. Every manuscript submitted is to become the property of THE CHRONICLE.
5. Articles must be written on one side of the paper only.
6. None but the assumed name will be published with each article.
7. The decision as to which article is the best will be made by three farmers residing in another county and unknown to those competing.
8. The result of the award will be published in some issue of THE CHRONICLE as soon after January 1st, 1908, as possible and the real name of the successful competitor and his name only will be published, and the harness delivered.
9. Any farmer or farm worker, no matter where he resides, may submit articles and any number of articles may be sent in by the same person.

SUGGESTIONS:—Send in your articles as soon as possible. In giving your experience with any particular crop state the kind of weather that prevailed when you began to plow—why you plowed deep or shallow as the case may be—what work you did on the crop before it was harvested and for what reason—what fertilizer and how much you used and why—when you harvested your crop or crops—the gross and net weight or measurement of the same.
