Farmers in Convention Desire These Benefits

U. S. SENATE STANDS OPPOSED

President of Express Company and Member of Upper House Commands Situation.—Big Postal Deficit of $17,000,000 Could Be Wiped Out.

The National Grange after a session of a week in Washington has adjourned, says our special Washington correspondent. Toward the end of the meeting it adopted a resolution demanding the introduction of the parcels post on rural routes and also of its universal extension. Another resolution was adopted asking for the establishment of postal savings banks for the benefit of farmers. These are measures that have been recommended by Postmaster General Von Meyer and by his predecessors for twenty years. The parcels post has long since been in use in European and even in Asiatic countries. If the United States were an oppressed despotism we would long since have had the parcels post but being a free and independent Government of Senatorial, Congressional and other bosses and having a Senator from New York, representing the Express Companies of which he is President, on the floor of the Senate, and having a powerful Express company lobby with its pockets bulging with ill-gotten gains ever present at the Capitol, we must be content with our vaunted superiority in name over monarchies and despotisms. The recent post office deficit was seventeen millions. The post office establishment, spending nearly two hundred millions, brings the country in debt seventeen millions a year. The establishment, well managed in a business like way and doing the profitable work that the Express company filches from it, would bring the Government yearly enough money to build a half a dozen dreadnoughts and would at the same time furnish all of the people of the United States a vastly superior service. With thirty thousand rural routes, nearly all of them supplied with a horse and wagon, the small amount of fifty five pounds a trip would wipe out the deficit. The National Grange has passed a resolution to oppose Senators who oppose the parcels post delivery.

CARNEGIE'S VIEWS ARE WANTED

Invited to Appear Before Ways and Means Committee in Connection With Tariff Schedule.

As a result of the declaration of Andrew Carnegie in an article in the forthcoming number of the Century Magazine that the tariff schedule on iron and steel should be reduced the Ways and Means Committee of the House on Monday night formally invited Mr. Carnegie to appear before it at once to tell what he knows about the reduction of the tariff on iron and steel products.

Gold Pieces for Christmas Gifts.

A total of $500,000 in gold is being coined every day at the Philadelphia mint to meet the demand which has already set in for the yellow pieces for Christmas gifts. There is an unprecedentedly large call for Christmas coins, and the demand will continue until that date.

WAR AGAINST OPIUM

Commission of Leading Nations Soon to Meet.

EIGHT COUNTRIES REPRESENTED

Will Convene at Shanghai, China.—Study of Conditions to Be Made From Exhaustive Data.—Use of Opium in America Increases.

The war against opium which is being waged by the leading countries of the world is gaining ground very rapidly. In a recent number of the Scientific Temperance Federation the following article appeared:

The joint commission on the opium traffic appointed by the countries who have possessions in the East, viz., Great Britain, Germany, France, Portugal, the Netherlands, China, Japan, and the United States, is to meet in Shanghai, China, Jan. 1, 1909. Meanwhile, the American Commissioner, who is working in the United States, Mr. Hamilton Wright, Washington, D. C., is endeavoring to find out how much opium is used legally and illegally in this country. Physicians, boards of health, and police departments are asked to send him any authentic information they may possess to aid his inquiries, the results of which will be studied at the joint meeting in Shanghai for the purpose of arriving at some practical plan for international control of the opium traffic.

The figures already collected by Mr. Wright show that there is a marked increase in the amount of smoking opium imported, although our Chinese population has decreased. At the time of the Vancouver race riots, two opium manufacturers presented claims for damages to their business at the rate of $100 a day. It is estimated that there are 5000 white opium smokers in New York City alone, and over 100,000 in the United States.

"It would be a serious deprivation," says the Journal of the American Medical Association (Aug. 22), "if the world should lose the medical and pain-killing uses of opium, but its absolute suppression would be a small price to pay if by it only could the evil as it exists in China be checked." This nation realizes this fact as does also England and it may be possible to check the evil after this meeting.

CHINESE SEND COMMISSIONER

To Thank United States for $14,000,000 Remittance.—Leader Outranks Minister Wu Ting-fan.

Conveying to the American Government the gratitude of the Chinese people for remittance of a debt amounting to nearly $14,000,000 (part of the Boxer indemnity,) Tang Shao Yi, a powerful figure in the Chinese Empire, arrived in San Francisco on Sunday on the steamer Mongolia. With him was Prince Tsai Fu, a member of the royal family, and a large retinue.

At present Tang Shao Yi is Director-General of Railways of the Chinese Empire, High Commissioner of Customs and a member of the Grand Council.

PRESBYTERIANS DON'T LIKE IT

Second the Lutherans in Their Attitude As to Catholic Being President.—Not Unanimous.

The Presbyterian Ministers' Association of New York and vicinity at its last meeting adopted a resolution protesting against the statement by President Roosevelt to the effect that a Catholic, like any other worthy citizen, was entitled to the votes of his countrymen.

The meeting indorsed the action of the Lutheran ministers in their open letter to the President. The resolution was not passed unanimously, although a majority favored it.

Cannon Will Vote For Revision.

Joseph G. Cannon, Speaker of the House of Representatives, who was in Chicago on Monday on his way to Washington, placed himself on record for a revision of the tariff in accordance with the promise of the Republican platform, and declared, that, so far as his vote was concerned, he would see to it that the announced policy of revision would be written in the national laws as soon as possible, so business may adjust itself.

"HELLO THERE BUFFALO BILL!"

Better Not Say That to His Honor the Burgess of Myersville

WOULD BE SOMETHING DOING RIGHT AWAY

He Might Fine You One Dollar and Costs or He Might Sit on You For a Couple of Hours

WHICH IS NO MORE THAN JUST—AUTHORITY MUST BE RESPECTED

Comical Situation Is Brought About By a Few Bad Boys And An Earnest Burgess Who Means Well But Has No Sense Of Humor.—Better Element Divided Into Factions Which Gives Opportunity For Tough Elements To Assert Itself.—Neighbors at Odds.—The Officiality Has Resigned.—Burgess Stands Pat.—Get Together Good People!

MYERSVILLE, NOV. 23. And the Burgess sat on the Boy.

That was really the beginning of the trouble. Or, rather, it was the beginning of the end; for trouble had been brewing before the sitting on the Boy occurred. It all happened in Myersville. If you want action you can get it in this progressive borough in less than a pair of minutes—if the Burgess is on the job. When he is not burgessing he teaches school. Then you may look cross-eyed on the street, if you want to, or even say "Oh, pshaw!", and nothing happens. But if you are hunting for trouble, if you want to start something, say to his Honor, as you pass him on the public highway: "Hello there, Buffalo Bill!"—just like that. Then there will be something doing and it is liable to be a plenty.

In the effete monarchies of the old world, where the bird of freedom has never soared; where the eagle has never screamed; where the voice of the peepul is never heard; it is a crime to speak disrespectfully of, or to, the King, or the Kaiser, or the Tsar, or whatever the main squeeze happens to be called. The name of that crime is lese majeste. They don't call it that in Myersville but it comes to the same thing. And why not? If you were in Berlin you wouldn't dream of going up to Kaiser Bill William and saying, "Hello Bill!" right to his face. Then why should you say, "Hello, there, Buffalo Bill!" to the Burgess of Myersville? Have you no respect for Authority?

But to go back to the Burgess and the Boy. The Burgess is Robert J. Ridgely—a well-intentioned, impulsive, hot-headed man who ought to be a power for good in his community. There is not the slightest doubt that he wants to do what he thinks is right. But it must be done his way and the other fellow isn't to have even a look-in. And he lacks the saving salt of humor; that must be so, or he wouldn't have all the boys in his town against him. It is a safe bet that he won't even think this account is funny, if he reads it. The Boy who brought things to a head is Guy Shank who probably has no more, and no less, cussedness in his

OUR YEARLY BILL FOR SUGAR

American's Sweet Tooth Cost $400,000,000 Annually and Taste Is Still Increasing This Bill.

It is calculated that the yearly sugar bill of the American people, for all purposes, industrial and domestic, is not far from $400,000,000 says the Boston Herald, and this increases at the rate of about 5 per cent. a year. It is a large expenditure, and it comes out of the pockets of all the people. This is what gives special and particular interest to the sugar schedule in the tariff bill, though the activity of the refiners is considerably more marked than is that of the consumers.

C. J. Magness Begins His Sentence.

Charles J. Magness, husband of a daughter of the late United States Senator Gorman, of Maryland, who was recently convicted of desertion from the United States Navy, left the Philadelphia Navy Yard Monday for Portsmouth, N. Italians Solve Wireless Problem.

Bellini and Tosi, two Italian scientists, who have been conducting experiments in wireless telegraphy, announce that they have solved the problem of independent wireless communication.

make-up than the average youth of his age and station.

On last October 13th, the Burgess swore out a warrant for Guy, charging him with assault on Mr. John Gaver. For good measure, he threw in charges of disorderly conduct and carrying concealed deadly weapons. The next day Squire Wolf dismissed Guy. He was then seized by the Burgess who tried to persuade him that he ought to submit to a corporation fine. Guy couldn't see it that way and wouldn't go along with the Burgess to be fined. So the Burgess sat on Guy, in Preacher Stanton's front yard, and he kept on sitting on him for two hours, waiting for the sheriff who never came. It was a continuous performance and the whole town took in the show. Finally the Rev. Stanton swore out warrants for both the sinner and the settee and Squire Wolf dismissed them both.

Out of this affair, which is a roaring farce except to those who are immediately concerned, and who could not be expected to see the comical side of it, has grown a distressing situation. It is not the present intention to give a detailed account of the litigation, the charges and counter charges, the hearings before the Justice of the Peace, the resignations of the town officers, (the Burgess hasn't resigned), which have followed this comic-opera incident.

The dangerous feature of the present situation is, that the good people of Myersville who ought to be pulling together are divided into two hostile factions—one supporting the Burgess, the other bitterly opposed to him. The opposition faction seems to have lined up behind Squire Joseph Wolf who has been the local Justice of the Peace for many years.

They who have followed the tangled web of recent events in Myersville will remember that the Burgess and Squire Wolf came together as the result of a dispute as to whether the Burgess should give security for his appearance at Court in a case in which he is involved. Without touching upon the merits of the controversy between them, suffice it to say that they finished

WIRELESS TELEPHONE FOR NAVY

Department Asks for Bids for a Powerful Plant in Washington to Send Messages 100 Miles.

Bids for what is to be the most powerful wireless telephone plant in the world will be asked by the Navy Department within a few days. The apparatus will have to be capable of flashing words for a distance of not less than one hundred miles. It is intended to supersede the wireless telegraph, so far as is possible, with the wireless telephone in communicating from Washington with the navy yards, the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and such ships as may rendezvous in Hampton Roads.

An Automatic Weather Prophet.

A meteorological kiosk or automatic weather station has been erected in Washington. It is one of 20 ordered by the Weather Bureau to be established in the principal cities of the country. This boothlike innovation shows on its four sides a barometer, to foretell approaching storms or fair weather; a standard thermometer, which will obviate the speculation of the accuracy of different kinds of recorded temperatures.

Filipino Band Employed in Navy.

The flagship Connecticut of the battleship fleet has taken on board an entire Filipino brass band, which will be employed at the regular ceremonies of the ship, alternating with the marine band.

MARINE CORPS' RECORD

Oldest Branch of United States Naval Service

WON GLORY IN FOREIGN PARTS

Formerly Bore Brunt of Fighting, Now to Be Used on Garrison Duty in Far Away Posts.—Are The Butt of Sailors Everywhere.

The order recently issued by the President which will withdraw the Marine Corps from service afloat brings to mind the fact that this branch of the service was established in 1775 by the Continental Congress and is thus the oldest corps in the Naval service. At that time it consisted of two battalions and was authorized for duty on board frigates. Their chief duty was to bear the brunt of the fighting when, as was the custom then, two ships were lashed together and boarding parties fought hand to hand. In this capacity the Marine Corps has won great distinction in the history of our wars. To them belongs the honor of planting the American flag for the first time over a foreign port; this was done at Derne, Tripoli, in 1803 and ever since the word "Tripoli" has been emblazoned on their colors.

Up to the time of the President's order the American Navy and that of Great Britain were the only ones in which the Marine Corps formed an integral part of the ship's company. Every where the name of this force of men has been looked down upon by seamen and this disrespect has crept into the language. An English equivalent for an empty bottle is "marine," signifying its uselessness, and the expression "Tell that to the marines," means utter disbelief in a statement or story from the fact that marines being ignorant of seamanship were capable of believing anything.

The United States Marine Corps has won glory for itself recently having distinguished itself in the Spanish-American war in 1898 and in the rescue of the foreign legations in Peking in 1900 during the Boxer uprising. Their new duty as guards for posts other than those in the United States proper, takes them from the firing line as it were, and relegates them to garrison duty.

TO STAMP OUT CATTLE DISEASE

Government Quarantines New York And Pennsylvania Against Foot And Mouth Disease.

Vigorous efforts will be made by the Department of Agriculture to stamp out the dreaded contagious ailment among cattle, known as foot and mouth disease, which has been discovered to exist among livestock in Pennsylvania and New York States. Secretary Wilson issued an order quarantining these two States. During the existence of this quarantine the interstate or foreign transportation movements, trailing or driving of cattle, sheep, or other ruminants and swine from the two States is prohibited.

WOULD NAME STATE LINCOLN

Not "New Mexico" Which Brings Up Unpleasant Memories of a Black Mark on Our Nation's History.

Mr. Albert E. Pillsbury has made the admirable suggestion in the Boston Post that the prospective new State of New Mexico be given the name of Lincoln "the only American who has taken rank with Washington." As Mr. Pillsbury puts it: "The name New Mexico is a standing reminder of a chapter of our history which every American citizen who values the good name of his country would be glad to forget."

Denmark will put a new half protective tariff in force January 1.

Bryan Nearly Got One More Vote

There was a slight possibility that the electoral vote of Missouri might be divided between Taft and Bryan last Monday, when it was discovered that one Bryan elector had received more votes than the lowest Taft elector. Whether Bryan would be given this vote in the electoral college depended upon a decision which Governor Folk had under advisement and has now decided against Bryan.

A wounded reputation is seldom cured.

THE "DUMPING" PROCESS

Testimony Of An Expert Given

OLD ARGUMENT UPSET

Selling Abroad Is Cheaper Than Selling At Home

PROFIT LARGE ON SUCH SALES

Sewing Machines Sold For $65 Here Are Purchased Over There For $19.—50.—Same Ratio Obtains On Other Goods.—Government Aid Responsible.

Mr. N. B. Arnold, who appeared at the tariff hearing in Washington on the chemical schedule, in behalf of the varnish interest, took occasion to upset the common argument in defence of selling abroad cheaper than at home, says the New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin. We have been told so many times that many people believe it, that in such cases, as a rule, a surplus unmarketable at home is sold abroad at a loss, or at best at little or no profit, for the purpose of maintaining the scale of production and keeping more labor steadily employed. It is contended that no harm is done to the domestic consumer, who would not take the surplus product, but that he is benefited by steadier prices and continued employment. Mr. Arnold said bluntly that there was nothing in this, and that goods were sold abroad only at a profit. "Why," said he, "I have myself sold in South Africa sewing machines for $19.50 that were selling at $65 in the United States. We sold them in that way because there was a profit in trade at that price." The same was done in varnish and every other business.

Now in regard to sewing-machines and other patented articles, the tariff has nothing to do with the case. The protection comes from the exclusive patent right, the remaining vestige of actual monopoly granted and protected by the Government. It is notorious that before sewing-machine patents began to expire these useful instruments were sold at several times their cost, and huge fortunes were made in a few years by a tax upon a universal industry. The same thing is going on now with other patent machines, appliances and processes, and it demonstrates that there is oppressive monopoly in our patent laws as well as the tariff. Many of these patented articles are sold abroad much cheaper than at home, and still sold at a profit. Our own people are

It is declared that in the coming year a fight on a large scale will be waged in the Republic of Mexico for control of the local oil market and of the rich and vast fields which experts declare, will be opened up. The chief contestants in this struggle will be the Standard Oil Company and S. Pearsens & Sons, Limited, an English corporation.

avid Culbertson Aughinbaugh, for more than a half century engaged in the drug business in Hagerstown, and one of Washington county's best citizens, died rather suddenly of liver and stomach trouble at his residence on Saturday morning. He was 77 years old.

Mr. Aughinbaugh was the son of John Aughinbaugh and was born in Chambersburg in 1832. His mother before marriage was Miss Bliss McCullough. He came to Hagerstown when only 12 years old to become a clerk in the drug store of his brother, Henry P. Aughinbaugh, remaining in his employ until 1857, when he embarked in business for himself. During the half century in which he was engaged in business he amassed considerable wealth and owned one of the finest drug stores and residences in Washington county.

He was twice married. In 1854 he married Miss Mary J. Winter, daughter of Christian Winter, of Hagerstown. She died in 1855. He then married in 1857 Miss Mary E. Updegraff, daughter of George Updegraff. Two children survive—William C. Aughinbaugh and Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Barr, of Hagerstown. He was a brother of Rev. Dr. George W. Aughinbaugh, of Greenvillage, Pa., one of the oldest ministers in the Reformed Church in the United States and formerly pastor of the Reformed Congregation in Emmitsburg.

With simple ceremonies, and in the presence of a number of distinguished officers of the navy, the handsome favrile glass memorial window to the memory of Admiral William Thomas Sampson was unveiled in the Naval Academy chapel, Annapolis, Saturday morning. The window was erected to Admiral Sampson by officers of the navy, the funds for its construction having been raised by subscription.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has decided to establish experimental farms all along the Delmarvia Peninsula, and to place in charge of these farms the very best farming talent which can be secured in this or any other county. President McCrea has determined that the railroad shall take its part of the responsibility for the cultivation of the farming and trucking lands of the peninsula. The object of the railroad company is to demonstrate to farmers and truckers the best and most profitable crops to grow on their different lands, and to establish a closer union with the farmers and truckers of the peninsula, to confer with them as to the best crops to grow and to help them in the selection of the best markets for the shipment of their produce.

The hoof-and-mouth disease has been discovered by Dr. W. L. Herbert, of York, Pa., on a farm in the vicinity of Lineboro, Md. While inspecting cattle in the southern part of the county Dr. Herbert heard of a farmer living near Lineboro who had several sick cows. He made investigations and found that five cows and two steers were suffering from hoof-and-mouth disease. The cattle had been shipped from Buffalo along with others, some of which were sold in York county.

Travellers' Tales

The Bright American Boy.

"The more I see of the American small boy, the more I marvel at him," said a travelling man who occasionally visits Emmitsburg. "Recently I was at the McLure House in Wheeling, W. Va., and late in the evening as I was going into the hotel I noticed just inside the storm door a little chap, certainly not over six years old, crouched down in a corner, his newspapers scattered over the floor, his face buried in his arm and crying as if his heart would break. I thought of my own little fellow at home—we travelling men get sentimental sometimes, you know, when we are not selling goods—so I was down on the floor by the little ragged miffin in a minute, trying to comfort him and find out what the trouble was. I patted him and stroked his hair and spoke soothing words, but all to no purpose. He emitted the most heart-rending sounds, until my sympathies were worn to a frazzle. Presently he managed to articulate, 'I ain't got no money,' though he nearly strangled over it. "Then I saw the light and stepped aside to await developments. Immediately a young fellow and his girl came in. I doped them out to be bride and groom the minute I laid eyes on them and I was sure of it as soon as the man got into action. It was a great opportunity for him to show his new wife what a generous heart he had hidden away in his buzzard."

"Oh, George," says she, 'look at that poor little boy. Ain't that a shame!' "What's the matter, my little man?" says George getting down on his knees and doing the fondling act, same as I had. Nothing but sobs and strangles. So George began to fill the little boy's pockets with small change while Mrs. George looked admiringly on. Out comes one of the hotel bellboys to see what was doing. Says I to him, 'How often does that kid do his act?'"

"Oh, every evening about this time," says the dusky servant.

"You ought to have seen George get up and dust the knees of his pants. And you ought to have seen the scurriously looks he and Mrs. George favored me with—as if I had done anything. I suppose I spoiled the scene. Besides, George had got parted from his coin and had been caught playing the fool and no man, I reckon, wants to be exposed like that in the happy honeymoon season. I didn't want to see the end of the show, so I don't know what happened next. I left them to settle the thing between 'em."

"I went out to buy a pair of socks and I was so pleased with myself, that I hadn't got stung. I had to tell the man that waited on me all about it. 'Why,' said he, 'that little scamp works that racket on the street every night until he is chased away by the policeman.'"

"I am confident that youth will be able to take care of himself and I don't doubt he will succeed in whatever walk of life he elects to adorn. He hasn't much to learn now."

"Well," said THE CHRONICLE reporter, "I am glad we haven't any such smart kids around here."

"You are, are you?" said the travelling man, "I wouldn't be too glad if I were you for I am not so sure that you haven't at least one who could give pointers to the Wheeling lad."

"I will tell you what happened to me the last time I was in Emmitsburg. As I was going into the station to get my samples checked a shy youth of about fifteen summers stopped me and said: 'Please, sir, may I get on that car?' I replied that it wasn't my car but I guessed nobody would bite him if he did get on it. When I boarded the train I took a seat behind the boy, and he immediately confided that he had never been on a railroad train before in his life. He had never even been down to Motter's Station. Emmitsburg was his metropolis. He had been several times in your charming town, which I wish I never had to leave, but always he had come by the back road, he said, and returned to his home in the mountains by the same route. So he had never seen a train near at hand.

"What could I do but tell him all I knew about railroading? I explained in detail the principle of the steam engine, the air-brake, the electric telegraph, the functions of the engineer, the fireman and conductor. He gave up his ticket to Captain Felix when asked for it but I think he had fully expected to keep it. My, but he was scared when the train struck the bridge over Tom's Creek! He pretty near jumped out of his seat. As we gathered speed his amazement grew and when we had got up to nearly fifteen miles an hour he was scared again. He said he had no idea trains went so fast. I assured him we were in no danger and that trains on other roads sometimes attained even a higher velocity.

"He was going to Rocky Ridge, he said, to meet somebody and would return to Emmitsburg in the evening and drive from there to his mountain home. Such a nice, ingenious boy as he was! I took a great fancy to him. I thought of my Wheeling experience and reflected how cities spoil the lives of the boys who have to run the streets and take away their youthful innocence. And I thought, here we see the contrast between the city and country. This boy would regard it as an insult if I should offer him even a tip to say nothing of giving him money in charity.

"I took him up to the front of the coach to see Captain Felix cut the engine off at Rocky Ridge. He observed the operation with interest then he stood up, stretched himself, and said: "Say, Mister, help me out with a little change."

"I did. I passed out a small coin—a very small one. He told me what it was for, but I didn't pay much attention. I think he said somebody had a $5 gold-piece and the boy who could collect the most money and give it to the person who had the gold-piece would get the same. I lose myself in admiration of that scheme whenever I think of it. The author of it has John D. Rockefeller beat four ways from the ace.

"Do you play poker?" asked THE CHRONICLE man with seeming irrelevance.

"Well, I thought I did until I struck Emmitsburg, said the travelling man. Did I never tell you about the time I sat into a game with—well that is another story. I may say, however, that I highly respect your local talent in that line and I know you have at least one bright boy in your neighborhood the one I've just told you about."

Lieutenant Governor Murphy accepted the monument in behalf of the State and Capt. Robert T. Cornwell of Westchester, Pa., delivered the oration of the occasion. Lieutenant Governor Murphy and a party of more than 200 veterans came in on a special train. The monument is 35 feet high and stands about a mile from Frederick Junction, near the road along which it is proposed to build the Lincoln memorial boulevard for which Congress will be asked to make an appropriation at its coming session. It is the second monument erected on this battlefield, the other being one erected by the State of New Jersey two years ago.

GETTYBURG LETTER

One of the most interesting cases tried in the courts of Adams county for some time was that heard last week—that of the first National Bank of Gettysburg vs. Noah R. Beamer, on a charge of forgery. The Bank held a note giving by Calvin H. Beamer, deceased, and purported to have been endorsed by said Noah R. Beamer.

The case consumed nearly a week, as an unusually large number of witnesses were examined, including bankers, business men who had dealt with the defendant and several handwriting experts. The addresses to the jury by the opposing attorneys were of unusual length. The jury retired Wednesday morning and after an hour and a half's deliberation brought in a verdict in favor of the defendant.

A new plan was conceived for the instruction of the teachers at the Institute on Tuesday of last week, section sessions being held. They were divided into three classes, Primary and Intermediate, Grammar, and High School work. Addressed were made by Drs. Gordonier, Schmucker and Miller. The afternoon sessions were addressed by Dr. Miller on "This Busy World of Ours"; Dr. Schmucker on "Needless Fears"; and Dr. Gordonier on "Charles Dickens as an Editor."

The evening entertainment was given by D. Byron W. King, his subject being "What Fools These Mortals Be". He held the closest attention of a full house for nearly two hours. He was both entertaining and instructive.

On Wednesday the institute opened at nine o'clock with devotional exercises by Rev. Mr. J. A. Clutz, pastor of St. James Lutheran Church. Three addresses were made in the morning. Dr. King spoke on "The Art of Memory"; Dr. Schmucker followed with "The Meaning of a Leaf"; and Dr. Miller had as his subject "South America the Land of the Twentieth Century."

At the afternoon session Dr. Miller's subject was "Four Great Educators"; Dr. King's—"Helps for Defective Speech"; and Dr. Schmucker's—"The Toad and His Cousin". The evening's entertainment was given by Dr. Russell H. Conwell, President of Temple College, Philadelphia, who delivered his lecture on "Acres of Diamonds". Dr. Russell is an eloquent speaker and held the strictest attention of the large audience.

On Thursday Dr. T. C. Billheimer conducted the devotional exercises. Dr. Schmucker spoke on "The Real Purpose of Nature Study"; Dr. Miller on "The Present Day Trial of Aaron Burr"; and Dr. King on "Language Studies".

The same three gentlemen made addresses in the afternoon, their subjects being as follows: Dr. Miller—"And This is Rome"; Dr. Schmucker—"The Meaning of a Flower"; and Dr. King—"The Literature of Life."

The evening session, though somewhat delayed was much enjoyed. The Honolulu Students, who were engaged to perform, failed to change cars at Highfield and went over the main line of W. M. R. R. to Rocky Ridge, thence to Emmitsburg, from which place they were brought in carriages, arriving here at 9 P. M., and commencing the entertainment shortly thereafter. The audience was entertained by the College Quartette, Messrs. Weigle, Schmitt, Clare and Stauffer, until the arrival of the Hawaiians. The entertainers showed remarkable talent and were well received. A number of slides of their native land were shown by Mr. Frank Bean and explained by a member of the company.

On Friday Dr. Barley conducted the exercises. Dr. King spoke on "The Needs of the Teacher"; and Dr. Miller on "Russia, the Sleeping Giant". The last session, held in the afternoon, was addressed by Dr. Schmucker on "What Next"; Dr. Miller—"Heart Power in Teaching"; and Dr. King—"Poems that Live." The evening entertainment was given by the Edwin R. Weeks Company, consisting of Mr. Weeks, humorist and impersonator; Miss Gillespie, pianist, and Miss Sinclair, violinist. The programme was good and brought forth much applause.

SPEAKERSHIP OF THE HOUSE.

It would be a fair statement of fact, we believe, to say that the people of the country would be more satisfied to have "Uncle Joe" Cannon step down and remain out of the Speaker's chair for all time to come.

Speaker Reed was called a Czar; he was accused of the most arbitrary ruling that the House had ever known up to the time of his incumbency; and yet compared with Mr. Cannon's governing acts, the rulings of Mr. Reed sink into utter insignificance.

In view of the dissatisfaction that has prevailed with regard to Mr. Cannon's actions; in view of the candidacy of Mr. Fowler and several other Representatives who, according to news dispatches, "emboldened by his advance into the contest," are aspirants for the speakership; and furthermore, in view of the stand which it is said Mr. Taft will take in the coming contest in respect of his determination to live up to his ante-election policy regarding the tariff, the situation is becoming exceedingly interesting.

In the meantime it hardly seems probable that Mr. Fowler's scheme for the taking over of the government of the House by a caucus of seven members of that body will do more than furnish a new subject for lobby discussion and hotel chit chat.

NEED OF A FARMERS' CLUB.

Next to the last question in the circular sent out to farmers by the Commission on Country Life is this: "Do the farmers and their wives and families in your neighborhood get together for mutual improvement, entertainment, and social intercourse as much as they should?" Applying the question to this particular neighborhood, that is Emmitsburg district, we feel full certain that the answer would be yes; except to that part of the query relating to "mutual improvement."

In the absence of any other direct single question on "mutual improvement" contained in this circular, we take it that one of the objects of this comprehensive inquiry is to find out if the farmers have an organization which brings them together to discuss practical farming, to interchange ideas, tell of various experiments that have been successfully carried on, to talk over the advisability of adopting this or that method of cultivation, to exploit the advantages or disapprove of certain kinds of farm machinery—in a word, to discover if there is a grange or farmers' club at which, at stated times, there is an open discussion of every subject bearing on the science of agriculture.

Throughout the year there is a great deal of entertaining going on among farmers' families and by this custom much enjoyment is had. But there is no grange, no farmers' club, and in this respect the tiller of the soil in this vicinity—and by the way the farmer is the real lord of creation—is at a distinct disadvantage, and one is at a loss to comprehend why it is that the owners and workers of our farms are content to remain without an organization by which they can protect and advance their own interests.

Some of them may recall that not so many years ago there was a Farmers' Club in this district; a splendid organization that seemed to repay its members two-fold. One naturally inquires then, why, realizing as they do, the great advantages to be gained by clubs of this character, these farmers around Emmitsburg do not come together to-day and revivify the old club or start an entirely new one.

The opportunity is at hand; an organization could be easily effected and an enrollment made, and all through the long Winter when there is little to be done on the farm much could be accomplished. So much, in fact, that by Spring the Farmers' Club of Emmitsburg would be ready to take a prominent place among the granges of Frederick county.

THE LINCOLN BOULEVARD.

Newspaper discussion of the location for the Lincoln Memorial Boulevard is becoming quite general as the date for the assembling of Congress draws nigh, and the counties of Carroll and Frederick each with arguments more or less convincing lay claim to this great national thoroughfare.

Frederick city, on the other hand, has put forth many reasons why Mr. Lincoln's memory should be honored by having the Boulevard include that historic old city; and to us—and we trust we are not unduly influenced by a feeling of strong loyalty to our own county—it appears that Barbara Fritchie's town has decidedly the better of the argument.

Thurmont and Emmitsburg can refer to events leading up to the famous battle of Gettysburg that are indissolubly connected with these respective towns.

To exclude Frederick and Thurmont and Emmitsburg would indeed be a short-sighted policy if the real object of the memorial road is to have it embrace historic ground, and the people of Frederick county, of Frederick city, of Thurmont and of Emmitsburg will make a great mistake if they fail to uphold Col. Pearre in his promised effort to assist them in gaining their point.

APPROPRIATING EDITORIALS.

"All mankind love a lover." And all mankind admire the man of nerve. But there are several kinds of nerve; one kind in particular, which all mankind deprecate, and it is best explained by the slang word, "gall."

Regarding it in one way, this appropriation is decidedly complimentary to the paper from which the editorial is taken. It proves conclusively that the article copied hits the nail on the head; expresses what the copier himself feels on the matter alluded to. But looking at it in another light this practice is—well it is scarcely necessary to explain further.

We will assume that The Argus, (Catonsville, Md.,) in the editorial columns of which several editorials from THE CHRONICLE appeared, without credit,—the last one in the issue of Saturday, November 21st,—we will assume, let us repeat, that these appropriations by The Argus were intended as compliments to THE CHRONICLE, and therefore we feel called upon to publicly acknowledge our appreciation of the kind thought of our very esteemed contemporary.

Forest Fires: Their Cost and Prevention

Forbes Lindsay writing in the Craftsman for December, says: Within the past thirty years some two thousand persons have perished as a result of forest fires, and these figures do not include the hundreds of lives lost during the recent months of drought.

The census of eighteen hundred and eighty gives the area burned over per year as two millions, and the value of the timber consumed as from twenty-five millions to fifty millions. In the past twenty years the administration of the Forest Service has resulted in a considerable decrease in the acreage subjected to the flames, but the loss has been even greater because the value of stumpage has increased at least five-fold during that period.

Fire burns out the ground and entails a loss of soil fertility which is beyond computation. Again, the destruction of the forests involves incalculable damage in its effect upon water courses causing floods and drought with resultant injury to the adjacent farming country.

During the months of the past fall when forest fires were constantly burning in one or another part of the country, the aggregate loss was in excess of an average of one million dollars a day. In almost every case these devastating fires might have been warded off if the various States in which they occurred had provided a sufficient force of men to patrol the forests and arrest the flames at their outbreak, and if lumbermen and other users of the forests had been careful to dispose of brush in a proper manner after logging.

It is impossible to prevent fires break-out in the forested areas. The great point is to extinguish them before they grow into dangerous proportion. The principal causes of these fires are carelessness on the part of hunters, camping parties and others in the forests, brush burning and locomotive sparks. These sources of danger can never be eliminated, but efficient patrolling during the dry season will minimize their effects.

Abraham Lincoln, The Poet. Few know Abraham Lincoln, the poet. The simple, gentle melancholy of the great President flickers across his few attempts at versifying.

My childhood's home I see again, And sadden with the view; And still, as memory crowds my brain, There's pleasure in it, too.

Hand More Accurate than Machine.

The common notion that machine work is more accurate than hand work is shown to be fallacious by a writer in the American Machinist.

So much has been said upon this subject, he adds, that many will hesitate to believe that there is scarcely anything produced by machinery which cannot be improved by skilled hand labor, if there are economic reasons for such improvement; but, nevertheless, it is a fact. Take, for instance, the apparently simple matter of the production of a true flat surface upon a piece of cast iron.

The Awakening of China. It is said that the President has already begun his editorial work on the Outlook and that the coming number will have an article from his pen on the "Awakening in China."

It is questionable if he will write as well on the subject now as he might write after he has made a study of that country on the ground. There is no doubt that China is awakening but so long and so profound has been her slumber and so impervious is she, owing to physical and psychological conditions, to modern thought that it is doubtful if even our grandchildren will be able to say she is awake.

Today's Suggestion by Ellen Stan.

SILK JUMPER FOR DRESSY OCCASIONS.

IT is important that we select colors that are becoming and inconspicuous and that do not bear imprints of a certain season. The so called fashionable shades are never worn by the best dressed women, it being considered by them as poor taste to lose their individuality and thus be merged in the popular sea of dress. From the subdued shades of blue, brown, red and green every woman can at least find one color that will be becoming.

Garments of one tone are really more artistic and truly elegant than those that display a combination of color. However, white and its opposite, black, can be artistically combined with any color if the proper shades are selected.

Women can never be pleasingly gowned until they learn the unchangeable law of art that there must be sufficient plain to show to advantage the ornamentation. It is right here that most women fall to make the best of what they have. It is here, too, that they spend more money than on any other part of the dress, with less satisfactory results.

For many women it would be a blessing in disguise if they were without the means to buy trimmings and were forced to bring their ingenuity into play and manufacture from the dress material any ornamentation that the dress required. In this way the artistic eye would be spared many trying combinations. Why is it that women persist in wearing dresses trimmed with yards and yards of cheap lace and settle into them with a self satisfied air, while the same money invested in a small, even a very small, piece of real lace would give a truly elegant air to any gown with which it was worn?

This tuckered jumper will be pretty made from any soft, clinging material. The pattern is cut in six sizes—from 32 to 42 inches bust measure. To make the garment for the average person it requires 2 yards of material 27 inches wide or 1 1/2 yards 36 inches wide.

Any reader of this paper who desires to secure this pattern may do so by sending 10 cents to this office. Give the number, 3890, state size desired and write the full address plainly. The pattern will be forwarded promptly by mail.

Lawyer's Trick Does Not Hold Good.

In the attachment case of Samuel Emmert, of Hagerstown, against J. A. Lynn, contractor of Gettysburg, the attachment has been dismissed and the attached horse and buggy were returned to Gettysburg by the plaintiff to Mrs. Lynn, who claimed to own them.

Mr. Emmert, who is a prominent merchant in Hagerstown, had a claim against J. A. Lynn, of Gettysburg, and by a decoy letter induced him to come to Emmitsburg. This letter was written by the Gettysburg attorney of Mr. Emmert and was signed W. C. Johnson. Lynn came here and when he arrived at the Emmitt House he was met by Deputy Sheriff Ashbaugh and was summoned to appear before the court and at the same time the horse and buggy which Lynn had driven from Gettysburg were seized under an attachment.

Water Plant Held Up.

According to the Fairfield Herald the proposed water system for the borough has been temporarily halted by Mr. Gingell, of Zora, whose mill is turned by the waters of Toms Creek, which source of power, according to Mr. Gingell, would be materially hurt by the closing of the springs on Jack's Mountain which will be used to supply the town with water. Fairfield thinks the price at which they can buy these riparian rights is too high and the whole project is held up until an amicable settlement of the deal can be reached.

Later in the evening refreshments were served and when it was time to return to their home the guests reluctantly said good bye wishing Miss Ohler many happy returns of the day.

REPORTS OF CAMPAIGN EXPENSES

Col. Pearre and Hon. Blair Lee Largest Contributors.—Expenses And Accounts of Treasurers.

In accordance with the requirements of the Corrupt Practices Act, the public has been made acquainted with the expenses, source of income, &c., of the last political campaign. The statement of Mr. Biser, treasurer of the Republican Central Committee of this county, shows that after paying the expenses of the campaign in the county he has left in his hands $145.10, which, with $20.82 in the hands of sub-treasurers, makes a balance of $165.92. The total receipts were $1,988.05, of which Col. George A. Pearre, candidate for Congress, contributed $325, and $900 was received through R. J. Bruce, treasurer of the State Central Committee. Eight persons gave $25 or more; twenty-nine persons gave $10 or more, and contributions were received as low as $2.50.

The Democrats, as shown in Treasurer Levy's report, were not as well fixed, financially, as the Republicans, their receipts amounting to $1,092.25, being consumed to the last cent. Treasurer Levy's receipts included $200 from Joseph Hirat, treasurer of the Democratic Committee of Allegany county; four persons contributed $25 or more; twelve persons contributed $10 or more; and amounts were received as low as 25 cents.

Montgomery county Republicans spent $970 and their Democratic opponents just $226 less in the recent campaign. The Republicans collected $1,272 and have a balance of $302 on hand, and the Democratic fund amounted to $772, of which $28 was not expended. Of the amount raised by the Republicans $1,000 came from the Congressional campaign committee for the district, the other being contributed by members of the party in the county in sums ranging from $5 to $50. State Senator Blair Lee was the principal contributor to the Democratic fund, his check being for $400. The other $372 came from members of the party in the county who gave amounts ranging from $1 to $50.

The receipts of the Democratic Central Committee in Washington county were $792.50 and the expenditures $691.76. Among the contributors were: Col. Buchanan Schley, the county leader, $100; treasurer of the Sixth district Congressional committee, $200; Dr. J. H. Wade, county chairman, $50; T. E. Hillard, $75; Earnest Hoffman and Elias B. Hartle, each $50; D. H. Staley, $40; George H. Hager, $25. A large number of smaller contributions were made.

Richard J. Bruce, treasurer of the Republican executive committee of the Sixth Congressional district, of Maryland, says that $4,500 was received from the Republican National Committee, through William P. Jackson, national committeeman, and Thomas Parran, chairman of the State Central Committee. Congressman Pearre contributed $1,025, distributed as follows: Allegany county, $125; Frederick, $325; Garret, $100; Montgomery, $200; Washington, $275. Contributions came as follows: From Cumberland, $775; ex-Senator Wellington contributing the highest amount, $100; Frostburg, $194; Lonaconing, $40; Westernport, $10; Midland, $2; total in Allegany county, $1,021; contributions from individuals outside of Allegany county, $190, making total receipts $6,536. The contributions from sundry individual subscribers, aggregating $1,211, were turned over to George E. Jordan, treasurer of the Republican County Committee for Allegany county. In addition to this is Allegany's share of the national contribution and Congressman Pearre's contribution, $1,367.64, making a total of $2,578.64 spent in Allegany county.

Treasurer Bruce made other distributions as follows: Representing the contribution donated from the national committee fund and Congressman Pearre's contribution: Frederick county, $1,225; Garrett county, $600; Montgomery county, $1,000; Washington county, $1,175; Irvine R. Dickey, political agent, $75. The total for counties other than Allegany, representing moneys that passed through Treasurer Bruce's hands, was $4,000. There is a cash balance of $82.36 on hand.

The report of Joseph Hirsh, treasurer of the Democratic State Central Committee for Allegany county, shows contributions to the amount of $2,220 and total disbursements, $2,040.49, leaving a balance of $179.49. The largest amount contributed by any individual was $75. The disbursements include $200 sent to the treasurer of Garrett county, $200 to Frederick and $200 to Washington.

Pennsylvania Sanitary Board Issues Most Sweeping Order Ever Pro-mulgated in This Country.

The Pennsylvania State Live Stock Sanitary Board, of which Dr. L. Pearson is the executive officer, issued an order on Tuesday night extending to the roads of all counties where the disease prevails, a quarantine against driving cattle unless a permit is secured. The order is said to be one of the most sweeping ever adopted in this country. It is as follows:

"On account of the prevalence of foot and mouth diseases, a quarantine is hereby established on all public roads and highways in so far as concerns the use of such public roads and highways for the driving movement or transportation of cattle, sheep, goats or swine in the following named counties: Clinton, Union, Snyder, Juniata, Montour, Northumberland, Dauphin, York, Lancaster, Lehigh, Montgomery, Chester, Delaware and Philadelphia.

"It is forbidden to drive, transport or move cattle, sheep, goats or swine over or upon public roads or highways in the counties aforesaid except upon specific permission in writing from an authorized agent of the State Live Stock Sanitary Board.

"Permits for driving, transporting or moving cattle, sheep, goats or swine over the public roads or highways must be taken out in advance, and must be held by the person in charge of and accompanying such animals and must be kept available for inspection.

"All sheriffs, constables, police officers and officers of the law are called upon to assist in the enforcement of these quarantine regulations."

HORSE FRIGHTENED BY TRAMP

Occupants of Buggy Thrown Out, Col-lar Bone Broken and Dislocated Shoulder Result.

On Wednesday morning Mr. Forney, who resides near Thurmont, just after coming through the bridge where the pike crosses Toms Creek, was thrown from his buggy and painfully hurt. Mr. and Mrs. Forney were coming to Emmitsburg and their horse took fright at a tramp lying in the road and turned suddenly to one side causing the accident. They were taken to Dr. Stone's office where it was discovered that the fall had broken Mr. Forney's collar bone and dislocated his shoulder. Mrs. Forney was unhurt. The horse was caught by Mr. Sebastian Florence in front of St. Joseph's Academy grounds.

The Golden Rule in Business.

We haven't the time to preach sermons to merchants based upon strictly moral principles, but feel that appealing to their business sense is a shorter and quicker way of getting there when we want to drive a tack home.

We haven't much to say about the Golden Rule to-day, but there is much in this suggestion for you to think about—purely from a business standpoint—and we hope that you'll think about it, and act upon it.

The Golden Rule is the greatest business maxim in the world to-day—yesterday—or to-morrow.

It will make more money for the store that follows it than any other store rule that can be laid down.

MT. ST. MARY'S ITEMS

Mrs. Fannie Cook and her grandson, Harry, spent several days at the home of Mrs. James Seltzer.

Miss Olivette Weaver is visiting her parents in this place.

Miss Mary Bary and Miss Catherine Seltzer spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. James Seltzer.

Several days ago some of Miss Ada Wagner's friends and relatives tendered her a surprise party in honor of her birthday. The guests met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Seltzer and at an early hour proceeded to the home where a very pleasant evening was spent in playing games and dancing. At a late hour refreshments were served after which the guests having spent a very pleasant evening, departed for their homes. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. James Seltzer and family, Messrs. Geo. Wagner, Joseph Hemler, Joseph Wagner, Harry Kreitz, Edward Kreitz, Felix Hemler, Joseph Peddicord, Daniel Callahan, Misses Mary Hemler, Alberta Little, Addie Kreitz, Edith, Mary and Emma Warthen, Mary Knott, and Sophia Wetzel. Mr. Joseph Welty has put a new roof on a portion of his house.

Hunters from this vicinity report that rabbits and birds are very scarce this season.

We are told that some of our boys picked a football team and played one of the teams at the college. Although they were defeated by the score of 17-5, our boys deserve credit for their work, as this is the first game many of them ever took part in. With a little practice they would no doubt make some of the nearby teams hustle.

Among other improvement at Mt. St. Mary's college is the removing of the old greenhouse that stood in the garden near the new seminary. This building has been torn down and a new greenhouse will be built at a different situation, in the near future.

THE KING OF AMERICAN BIRDS

Large Profits Which Lie In Turkey Raising.—They May Be Reared with Success Under Proper Care.

The native turkey cock is the king of American game birds, but he has a far greater use than as such, says an article in Maxwell's Talisman. The wild birds of the Carolina and West Virginia mountains serve to instil vigor and virility into the high-bred domesticated flocks of our most successful turkey growers. Black and white present hardly greater contrasts than is seen between the vigor and disease-resistant qualities of wild turkey stock and the emaciated and run-down flocks to be found on the average farmstead where turkey raising is attempted.

"There is no other kind of live stock that will return so large a profit to the successful producer as will poultry and no kind of poultry is more profitable than turkeys when properly handled," is the striking statement of T. F. McGrew, the author of the Turkey Bulletin of the Department of Agriculture (No. 200.)

Turkeys fed for market will of course sell for much more per pound than can be obtained for hogs or cattle, while the actual cost per pound of turkey meat is but little if any more than for hogs or cattle. Turkeys will, from six weeks old until winter, gain the greater part of their living from bugs, grasshoppers and waste grain that they pick up in their wanderings. They are almost self-sustaining foragers where they have sufficient range.

This sounds well, and the figures on profits on turkeys appear most alluring on paper; but, on the other hand, many have tried and tried to grow turkeys and after experiencing all kinds of difficulties have become disheartened and given up the attempt. After the large proportion of deaths among the newly hatched poults has been subtracted and account taken of the immense amount of time, trouble and worry devoted to the remainder, the turkeys finally raised for the table or for market are seen to have been produced at a big loss rather than the good profit mentioned by enthusiasts.

Nevertheless, there is money in turkey raising. It needs only personal inspection of successful turkey farms and a comparison of the methods there employed with those used in raising the average small flock to realize this. The greatest item contributing to failure lies in the extremely poor breeding stock used not occasionally but generally throughout the country. Very young turkeys, it is true, are quite tender and old ones are not free from attacks of devastating diseases; but the inherent strength and vitality of the average turkey is so far below what it should be, and what it can easily be, that an abnormal death rate in turkey raising is not to be wondered at.

The fact that one fecundation is sufficient to fertilize all the eggs of one laying has made possible the undermining of the health and vigor of the present day domestic turkey. Inbreeding has reduced many of the turkeys of the country to a condition of almost imbecility.

Before the government purchased Fisher Island as a naval station it was owned by a bird-loving millionaire who used it as a breeding place for all manner of fowls. Located at the mouth of Long Island Sound, it was a rib of wild land, some seven or eight miles long and bearing the brunt of the North Atlantic sweep. Its conditions are rigorous. Yet the greatest success was attained in breeding turkeys and other fowls by the continued introduction of new or wild blood. The island's turkey flock consisted of from 5,000 to 6,000 birds, their blood invigorated each year through an addition of wild cocks from the high Appalachian mountains. Black-head disease has proven a dread maldy among many turkey flocks and during the time when Rhode Island, which has often been termed the "Turkey State," was almost devastated thereby, the turkeys on Fisher Island proved absolutely immune. Experimental inoculation with the blackhead germs made by the Rhode Island Experiment Station had no effect on the splendid birds from this ranch. This is cited as simply one piece of authoritative evidence which goes to show that black-head as well as other turkey diseases finds conditions for attack favorable because of the fact that the vitality of the average flock throughout the country has reached an abnormally low condition. No bird, it is stated, is more hardy or disease resistant than the native American turkey; no bird, perhaps, is more susceptible or harder to grow than the average domestic turkey. The cause is inbreeding. For generations and generations the turkeys of various localities have received no infusion of new blood and the result has been in every sense disastrous. Not fully realizing the cause of the trouble, many people have given up in disgust the attempt to raise turkeys, in spite of the attractive prices offered.

"The real difficulty in rearing young turkeys lies beyond the hatching of young poults. It rests to a great extent with the parent stock," said George E. Howard, the owner of The Feather, in talking of the turkey industry and the money in it for the farmer. "The hen that lays the eggs from which the poult is hatched has the greatest influence over its existence. Growers too frequently make use of turkey hens hatched the year before, which are usually under a year old when they commence to lay. The most thrifty poults are hatched from eggs laid by turkeys in their second, third or fourth year. Poults from immature turkey hens are more than likely to be difficult to rear, no matter what the matings may be. Vigorous hens, in their second year or more, mated to perfectly healthy toms two years old that have been bred from perfectly healthy stock that are in no way related to the hens, should make breeding stock that will produce poults which should be reared with much less trouble than is experienced among average turkey growers.

"The breed or variety, in my opinion, makes but little difference in main results. There are flocks of White Holland turkeys that have equal vigor and that reproduce and rear their offspring to as great an extent as any other variety. The Bronze, the Narragansett, the Black, the Buff, the Bourbon Red, the Slate or the cross of these may all be equally vigorous, or they may be delicate and undesirable. It is the constitutional ability to produce the best results that counts with each variety, and in selecting, choose to please your fancy; but bear in mind the absolute necessities of having health and non-relationship in the flock. If cattle and horses had been so grossly handled and neglected as to the infusion of new blood into the veins of the young, we would scarcely have a representative of these races left to serve us.

"My advise would be to select next year's breeding stock in December, and sell all the balance, especially the toms. People will allow weakling tom turkeys to wander about the farms, seeming to forget that a probable chance mating of these derelicts may ruin all the eggs of the season. Not a single tom should be kept in the turkey flocks after Christmas that would not be considered valuable for breeding stock. If this rule were applied rigidly each year soon the vigor of the flocks would be so improved as to surprise every grower. In selecting breeding turkeys never choose the oversized males or females. The medium sized, well proportioned hens, with strong heavy bone and plenty of life, mated to medium sized toms, that carry plenty of vigor, bring better results than from the pairing over large hens, which are never big egg producers, with over-grown toms, usually inactive and awkward."

Under ordinarily good conditions turkeys can be grown and sold at 8 or 9 cents a pound, live weight, and return a profit. When the possibility of an advance of 3 or 4 cents or even double this is considered, it is seen that there is a chance for a large margin of profit. All turkey meat does not bring the same price. When ordinary Thanksgiving turkeys are bringing in the large cities 20 or 25 cents a pound, Rhode Island birds range as high as 35 and even 40 cents. It is quite as easy according to McGrew and Howard and other authorities, to grow turkeys of superior as of inferior quality. In fact, strong, virile parents will naturally produce a larger number of as well as a better quality of broilers or roasters. Of course the subject of feeding and forcing turkeys is one of the most important features of turkey raising and bears directly on the question of price.

"The turkey that has been fed to a plump, attractive condition, that shows the full, plump breast when dressed for market, is the kind that sells for the highest price," said Mr. Howard in speaking of this part of the business. "I have known turkeys to be purchased at an average weight of 11 to 12 pounds each, and be fed for three weeks and average 16 to 18 pounds. This increased weight being all edible product added almost a double value to that originally paid for the birds. The money is made in turkey growing by forcing, through heavy feeding, to a finished product that will bring the highest price. Rhode Island turkeys are held up to the world as the best of all turkeys sent to market; but all the best turkeys do not come from Rhode Island. The fact that so many Rhode Island growers understand the feeding of poults from the time they are hatched until sent to market is what has made the Rhode Island turkeys more popular than those from other localities.

"I have seen the White Holland, the Bronze, the Narragansett, the Buff and the Red turkeys all sell side by side at the same high price in the market, and I have also seen each one of these sell for the lowest price, the conditions warranting the result."

An interesting experiment was carried on by the South Carolina Station with a view to inducing turkeys to lay in confinement and thus effect a considerable saving. Bronze and White Holland turkeys were selected, a pair of hens and a tom of each, and were confined in runs 80 by 100 feet long. Two nests a yard square were provided in each run. They were covered on top to keep out rain and were partly hidden by brush. Both breeds began laying late in March, the Bronze producing 42 eggs and the White Holland 36, of which 38 and 27 respectively were fertile. As the stealing of nests by turkeys is a considerable nuisance, the Department of Agriculture has collected some data on the subject of inducing the birds to lay at home. The Ontario Department of Agriculture is quoted as stating that if nests are prepared around the farm buildings and in the orchard with brush and old boards in such a way as to resemble a brush heap, the turkeys are very apt to lay in them. Also if the birds are well fed in the spring they will begin laying before the fence corners and rubbish heaps, which they prefer for nests, are free from snow and under such circumstances they are more likely to utilize the prepared nests.

The Manitoba Experiment Station recently produced some figures comparing pen feeding with ranging. The penned birds were given all they would eat clean of a mixture of wheat, oats and barley, 2:1:1. The unconfined turkeys received a little grain in addition to what they could forage, probably about the amount which would be fed on the average farm. The penned turkeys during six weeks of such feeding increased from an average of 6.55 pounds each to 10.60 pounds each, while those running at large made an average gain of only 1.85 pounds each. In both cases the greatest gains were made during the first three weeks of the period. The penned turkeys when dressed shrank 5 per cent. less than those running at large, and they were of course plumper and in every way more inviting in appearance.

People who are interested in turkey raising should procure Bulletin 200 of the Department of Agriculture. It is a 40-page pamphlet, perhaps the most comprehensive short treatise on turkeys in existence, covering the subject thoroughly with discussions of the different breeds, rules for selecting breeding stock, suggestions as to care of such stock, illustrations of turkey shelters and houses, egg laying, incubation and hatching, growing, handling and feeding the young, feeding for market, feeding breeding turkeys, killing, dressing and packing and notes on the various turkey diseases.

Another publication, Farmers' Bulletin 225, contains an account of a number of experiments with various kinds, and combinations of feeds for turkeys and results of their use.

THE "DUMPING" PROCESS.

charged exorbitant prices that foreigners who will not pay them may be supplied at a lower cost.

The principle is precisely the same, and the effect is the same in a less degree, with articles protected from foreign competition by custom duties and sold cheaper abroad than at home. As Mr. Arnold says, they are sold abroad because a profit is made thereby. The "export profit" is a profitable one, but it has to be lower than the domestic price in order to secure markets in which there is foreign competition. The domestic price is kept up because the Government keeps foreign competition out, and our own people are made to pay all they will stand in order that the protected "interests" may get what they call a "reasonable profit," which with them means all that the highest tariff they can secure will enable them to get. It is a general principle of business to get the highest profit attainable, and where there is unhindered competition the principle is sound for competition will keep profit within reasonable limits; but when competition is excluded or restrained the principle will be applied all the same, and the profit will be made all that the tariff or the patent will permit. With patents there is always a limit within which larger sales at lower prices will be more profitable than smaller sales that would be the result of higher prices; and with protection this may sometimes be the case within the limit set by the duties. But in both cases sales abroad at lower prices are due to the fact that people at home can be taxed higher prices and made to give up larger profits.

Every hindrance to a normal and legitimate competition has the effect of taxing some for the benefit of others, and the "some" are always a numerous body of consumers, while the "others" are a favored few who are enriched at the expense of the many. It is an indisputable fact that when our producers can sell at a profit in foreign markets, in spite of the cost of transportation and exchange, they can sell at a greater profit in the domestic markets at the same prices, and they need no protection. They can have none in the foreign markets, and so long as they can sell profitably there without protection they can sell profitably at home without protection against a competition which would have to stand the expense of transportation and exchange. It is useless to hunt after relative cost of production as a measure of needed protection in the home market, when ability to sell without protection in foreign markets is a demonstration that an industry that does it need no protection at home. Wherever that is done, there is proof that the duties are not needed. Our tariff could be adjusted to the Governments need of revenue, with protection to only a few industries that have been judiciously propped up where they should never have been established, and there would be speedy gain in both domestic and foreign markets, with a wide diffusion of prosperity.

it on the floor of Squire Wolff's shop with the Burgess on top again. In justice to Squire Wolff it should be stated that although he is about half the size of the Burgess, who is a big, powerful man, he is not in the least wanting in pluck. They do say it was a lovely scrap and that the atmosphere for a time was festooned with incandescent word-clusters. It might have gone hard with the valiant Squire if Mrs. Wolff had not intervened and brought the battle to a close. So naturally, it has come about that the anti-Ridgely faction regards Squire Wolff as their champion.

This, in brief, is the situation in Myersville. A very regrettable one, to be sure. It is always a pity for neighbors to be at outs especially when they are such good people. There is one phase of the case which must be touched upon. Undoubtedly there are some very bad boys in Myersville. But there have been bad boys in other towns. When they get too obstreperous they should be well spanked and sent home to mother. If they are allowed to take themselves too seriously they will become an intolerable nuisance. But a little knowledge of boy nature and some sense of humor would prevent matters reaching a critical stage. There are evidences that a situation may arise in Myersville which may call for stern repressive measures. The tough element may take the opportunity presented by the factional quarrel which is now rending the community, to assert itself and if the good people don't quickly get together again they may regret it. This is the only serious aspect of the case. The rest is farce-comedy.
