THE HIGH SCHOOL AND THE COMMUNITY

It is said that the welfare of a community depends to a great extent upon the interest which the people of that community display toward the education of their boys and girls. No thoughtful person can doubt the truth of this statement: for who can estimate the beneficial influence which a liberal education exerts upon the mind of the young? The youth of to-day is the man of to-morrow and with him rests the shaping of the future.

The high school gives a boy and girl their first real start in life. Whether the pupil expects to take up a college course or not the high school must always remain a most important factor as a preparatory school. Without its advantages the school days of a host of boys and girls, destined for brilliant literary and professional careers, would end with the seventh grade. The high school is their opportunity since it serves as a stepping stone whereby they are enabled to rise by their own efforts to better things in life.

The high school gives that preliminary training necessary to all who would engage in business or who desire to high school and enter upon a new and wider field of activity.

Perhaps he doesn't appreciate the efforts of the school in his behalf but the day is coming when he will appreciate them. Hitherto in times of difficulty the teacher has come to his rescue and relieved his responsibility. In that little group, characterized by friendship, consideration and mutual cooperation, the individual counted for more than he will when, having left high school and taken up some more advanced work, he is forced to rely upon his own resources. Then he will have to act more upon his own responsibility whether in the office, the school room or the college.

The high school training enables the student to reach out, as it were, and to discover wherein his abilities lie. It thus inspires confidence in him. It gives him a footing which will enable him to make a success of his chosen work. The boy or girl who has worked conscientiously in high school will never regret the time spent and the struggles endured during those few brief years. The sad part is that so many boys and girls fail to realize the opportunities, offered by the high school until it is too late to take advantage of them. They look upon this period as a

PROF. P. F. STRAUSS, PRINCIPAL.

The commercial spirit of the day demands trained men and women in all walks of life. Moreover the educational tendency of the day is toward greater improvement of both public and high schools. But the latter in particular are receiving unusual attention in order that their work may be better adapted to the needs of the individual student. The central high school owes its origin to the pupils need of a school where he can engage in more advanced work than the ordinary high school gives or where he can get better preparation for entrance to college. This is its principal work, to fit the student for college.

The college recognizes the importance of the high school. It knows that its most earnest workers are high school graduates and it almost invariably happens that the student who made a good record in high school, sustains that record throughout the college course or nature of the high school work is such that it requires the teacher to be entirely in sympathy with his work. Yet he is often unjustly criticized while the value of his services is frequently underestimated. And yet his work will force recognition sooner or later. For it is a work the influence of which increases with the lapse of the years. Surely the training of the youthful mind is a work of sufficient scope to engage the best efforts of any man or woman. "If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples they will crumble into dust: But if we work upon immortal minds, if we imbue them with the just fear of God, We shall engrave on those tablets, something that will brighten to all eternity."

Well may every community be proud to have a progressive high school in its midst; well may any boy or girl be world, and it is certain we shall take nothing out. A man may live for pleasure, but the time comes sooner or later when the body no longer cares for pleasure, and the man who has lived for it is a poor man indeed. A man may live for fame, but fame is a very uncertain thing for which to live; it comes to very few, and as a rule, it is short-lived when it does come. A man may live for work, for the service he can render to his age and generation, but this, however noble, is still not the highest life. The one true end and aim of life is Christian character, the possession of the Christ spirit.

But how is Christian character to be obtained? It is to be obtained by means of culture. And what is culture? Matthew Arnold says that culture is a study of perfection. In other words, it is the means which are used for the perfection of the soul. Shall we leave ourselves to grow up like the trees of the forest, however they may, or shall we seek those conditions and put into action those imperfections which will make for the perfection of the soul? It is clear to any rational human being that the latter course is the right course, and he who walks in this course is walking in the way that leads to true and lasting nobility. The object of cul-

PROBLEMS OF THE RURAL HIGH SCHOOL

Every undertaking in life has its problems to solve and its difficulties to overcome. The rural high school is no exception to this rule. When the rural high schools were first established no doubt it was felt that the problem of giving to the children living in the country districts the advantage of an education higher than that of the public school was solved. They had not been in existence very long before it was felt that the course of study was not suited in every way to the needs of the pupil. This is at the present time one of the problems of rural high school.

What the average country girl and boy needs is not a smattering of the branches that are required for entrance to college, but it is a thorough knowledge and understanding of those branches which we use every day and which will best fit them to fill the positions which they will be likely called upon to fill in after life. Are pupils when they leave the rural high school thoroughly acquainted with practical arithmetic, have they a general knowledge of history, and do they know how to use the English language correctly? or have to enter literary, technical or professional careers. To one desiring to become a teacher the high school offers peculiar advantages. Here it is that the student develops the qualities of self-reliance and of independent thought and action. He realizes that success depends upon his own individual efforts. The teacher can only indicate the way, the student must cover the course himself. The high school age is the time when the mind is most susceptible to impression hence the student cannot afford to idle away his high school days.

Another advantage which the high school offers is that the student receives a preparatory education without leaving home and at a minimum cost. The high school age is a period of transition for the student. It is at this period of his life especially that he forms habits and associations which may affect his entire after life. In most cases it is much better for the boy or girl to spend this period amid the influences of the home circle than to spend these years of vigorous growth and activity among strangers. This formative period is the most critical in the life of a boy or girl.

The student in high school often thinks he has a hard life of it and longs for the day when he will say farewell time for pleasure rather than for self-spirit of the revolving years bring them to the close of their high school course while their lack of mental development attests the indifference with which they pursued their studies.

Nor is the student himself always to be blamed for this indifference. It frequently happens that parents show a decided lack of concern for the work of the high school in which they should be deeply interested. Some parents do not send their children to high school because they think that money spent in the cause of education is a poor investment. They seem to think that they are not getting their money's worth.

Others give the high school no support because they do not know the work it is doing for their boys and girls. Let the parent learn the various ways in which his boy or girl is benefited by the high school training and he will no longer be indifferent. The principal is always pleased to have the patrons visit the school for he knows that he cannot get the best results unless he has the sympathy and support of the patrons.

However the influence of the high school is becoming greater and its future appears brighter than ever before.

in any other line of work. Nor is this fact difficult to explain. The student who worked hard in high school has learned that nothing worth while is achieved without considerable effort. He knows that this is true in any line of work therefore he doesn't expect success to follow if he doesn't expect conscientiously to win it.

However the influence of the high school is not confined to the school-room but it is felt far and wide. It elevates the mental and moral tone of the community. It raises the ideals of the youth and extends his intellectual horizon.

The work of the high school teacher is most exacting and yet he is not true to his task if he fails to encourage his pupils to seek worthy ideals. For the thankful for the opportunity to enroll in such a school. You cannot estimate, in dollars and cents, the value of the work which the high school is doing for the community. If you would estimate the true worth of the high school, consider that vast number of young men and women who have gone forth from its halls into every field of activity and are doing the world's work.

EDUCATION AN ELEMENT IN CULTURE

The true end of life is Christian character. A man may live for wealth, but wealth, however necessary, is useful only so long as this life lasts, and that at best is very short. When we come to our final end our hands will be found empty. We brought nothing into this ture is the perfection of the human spirit to the end that all that hinders, or limits, may disappear and only the true, perfect man remain. The cultured man is the man of physical, mental and moral refinement, and such a man is a Christian man.

Culture, however, or the means of perfecting the soul is made up of many different elements. Work is necessary, for it is only through work that the human spirit finds development. We have lost the knowledge of what a mighty force it is and should be in the development of the individual, and we have forgotten the great lessons of restraint, concentration and discipline which work, and only work, can teach us. The best man is the man who has been fashioned by work. Another element in culture is environment. In a bright, clear, sunshiny atmosphere the growth and development of the soul is most rapid. Environment has more to do with the growth of the soul toward perfection than work. And another element is associations, companionships. One's choice of companions means much to him. Consequently, the wise man chooses to put himself in contact and touch with those who will have a refining influence upon him. And then there is another element in culture which concerns us particularly at this they spent the four years in high school in getting a little knowledge of Latin, Botany, Geometry and Physics? It therefore looks as if one of the problems to be solved for rural high school is that of selecting a course of study best suited to the need of pupils attending these schools.

Regular attendance is another problem to be solved by rural high school. An absence of one day in the week if, on that day some particular part of a subject is to be studied and discussed, means a loss to the pupil which in some cases can never be made up. In case of sickness there is an excuse for the absence of pupils, but sometimes pupils are absent for the most trifling reason. Regular attendance means loss of interest in lessons and imperfect preparations for recitation and in the end failure in examinations and consequent disappointment in promotion. For this the pupil has no one to blame but himself, but how frequently the teacher gets the blame. If parents could be made to understand how important it is that their children should attend school regularly, then one of the problems that stand in the way of rural high school accomplishing what it aims to do, would be in a measure, solved.

Another problem is how to get the patrons interested and made to understand

A DAY SPENT IN THE E. H. S.

(Supposing Myself to Have Graduated in 1900.)

After these ten long years that I have been away from the E. H. S., I now recall vividly, certain happy days which I spent there. One day in particular I will try to describe to you.

The welcome old bell that hangs in the lofty tower was rung and all the scholars took their places. The boys and girls of the infant room seated themselves in the High School and Miss Ruth Hoke's room. School was opened with music and devotional exercises. Then all the scholars went to their respective rooms, the doors were closed and work began.

First the C class in History came up to recite and all did very well with the exception of one boy who, when he got to the blackboard to whom he had to go, discovered he had forgotten everything he knew about this particular subject, but suddenly recalled something from a previous lesson, that had been drilled and hammered in by the Professor.

Next was the A and B classes in Latin Grammar and nouns and verbs are alike to one boy, so the Professor told he and another boy, who was equally efficient, to write a new Latin Grammar with his compliments. Next came recess and when the good old bell came ringing again, work began once more.

The C class now came up to recite in Latin. It was a Latin Introductory and had some short sentences to translate. Each pupil had two sentences and one of the scholar's sentences contained the word 'baggage.'

In Composition and Rhetoric he gave one of the boys, 'Washington at Valley Forge' to discuss on. This is his version—'Valley Forge was a small village and George Washington marched in there one bright winter morning and captured the village. The consequence was the school became uproarious with laughter and it took ten minutes to get everybody settled to work.

In Commercial Geography a girl pronounced 'steppes,' a plain in Europe, step-peas. In the A class in English History, one of the girls was going to 'treason' somebody, but I don't think she succeeded.

I could recall many more of the happy days I spent there and also some not so pleasantly spent, but these were few and far between, and taken as a whole, my school life in the E. H. S., which dated from 1896 to 1900, was a pleasant if not a most fruitful one, and one I will never forget.

When I meet an old schoolmate we always have pleasant remembrances of the days we spent in the E. H. S. and think now much higher in the eyes of the world we would be now, if we had sown the seeds of all our studies a little deeper and then would have reaped a more Golden Harvest.

SINCERITY AS RELATED TO VISION

'Sincerity, someone has said, is like traveling in a plain beaten road, which commonly brings a man sooner to his journey's end than by by-ways in which men often lose themselves.' This is true, and especially so as related to the subject before us.

Primarily, we shall consider such persons who have written sincerely what they have actually seen and experienced with their own senses. Literature abounds with various poems and choice selections, all products of men who by really relating what they themselves saw and felt have made their readers see and feel the same.

Two other great American poets, Lowell and Holmes, having given the world examples of sincere vision, so that, tho' dead, their works live on true to nature. As Shakespeare once said of a great man:

'His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles, His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate, His tears, pure messengers sent from the heart, His heart as far from fraud as Heaven from Earth.'

Perhaps the best of Lowell's works which represent him as this type of man is the Grave-yard poem called 'The Little Grave.' He cannot help but be sincere as he is writing about his daughter that one year ago he laid to rest. He is again rehearsing and seeing in details all her foolish acts and pranks, and in his sincerity, humbly bends down and kisses the tombstone, symbolical of her forehead. Truly can we feel with him after we read this scene. In Oliver Wendell Holme's poem entitled 'The Last Leaf' we have a picture of an old man true to nature.

'And if I should live to be The last leaf upon the tree In the Spring, Let them smile as I do now At the old forsaken bough Where I cling.'

No better instance can be cited of how great an influence a sincere writer can have over the mind of a reader than the instance of a late scene along the shores of Lake Michigan. A certain wealthy gentleman had a fourteen-year-old son, who while bathing one day in the waters of Lake Michigan was drowned.

'Break, break, break At the foot of thy crags, O Sea! But the tender grace of a day that is dead Will never come back to me.'

Unconsciously he repeated these words of Tennyson because he had once read them and could truly feel their import. Secondly, let us take that which has to do with sincerely relating facts which have not been actually seen by naked eye or experienced, but imagined in the mind and only felt to that degree.

This is the reason why Waldo Emerson an interpreter to tell them what is really in their minds. He says: 'There is no man who does not recognize a supernatural utility in the sun and stars, and in the earth and water.'

ferent world of Literature would there be! Yes, we can be sincere and confidential, saying all that lies in the mind and yet go away feeling in a quite different way.

PROMINENT E. H. S. ALUMNI.

Miss Sara Miller was the first graduate of the Emmitsburg High School. She graduated in the year 1898, and at present she is teaching the primary department of the Public School.

In the year 1899 there were four graduates, namely, Kremor Hoke, George Gillelan, Anna Adelsberger and Maud Derr. Kremor Hoke, after leaving High School took a four year course at Mt. St. Mary's College and later attended the University of Virginia, in which state he is now teaching.

The class of 1900 consisted of the following: Joseph Rowe, Annabel Hartman, Amelia Annan, Rhoda Gillelan. Joseph E. Rowe is a graduate of Gettysburg College. After this graduation he took a course at the University of Virginia. The next year he taught at Mercersburg Academy, then he went to John Hopkins University, where he will, this year, finish a four year course.

The members of the class of 1903 were Ada Hollinger, Lulu Fitez, Mary Shuff, and Newton Sharrer. Miss Hollinger having taught a few years, is at present taking a theological course at Ursinus College, Mary Weigand is teaching public school and Madeline Frailey is taking a course at Womans College, Frederick City.

The class of 1906 was Ruth Adelsberger, Luella Annan, Clara Rowe and Helen Shuff. Miss Annan took a course at Wilson College, Miss Rowe, took a post-graduate course and is now teaching public school.

The class of 1907 was the largest ever graduated so far. Its members were Oliver A. Horner, Robert Sellers, Mabel Whitmore, Rose Jackson, Grace Rowe, Emma Ohler, Carrie McNair, Joanna White and Lulu Patterson. Mr. Horner is attending Lafayette College, Mr. Sellers is attending Bucknell University and Lulu Patterson took a course at Irving.

The class of 1908 consisted of Luther Valentine, Charles Stokes, Lottie Hoke, Hazel Patterson, Dunn Black, Lillie Hoke and Anna Rowe. Charles Stokes took a business course at Washington, and Luther Valentine is now attending Gettysburg, Lottie and Lillie Hoke are attending St. Joseph's Academy and Hazel Patterson is attending normal school at Baltimore.

The class of 1909 were Frances Rowe, George Eyster, Keilholtz Hoke and Robert Gillelan. Mr. Gillelan is now taking a commercial course at Mt. St. Mary's College. Miss Rowe is now preparing to be a teacher by taking a post-graduate course at this school. Mr. Hoke is now working for an electrical company. Therefore we can see that a large number of pupils have been graduated, fifty-six in all, during the years this High School has been in existence, many of these filling the higher callings of life.

Jesus the Healer. Matt. 8:2-17.

Golden Text. Himself took our infirmities and bare our sickness. Matt. 8:17.

Verses 2-4.—What is the nature of the disease of leprosy?

How many points of resemblance are there between leprosy and sin?

How were lepers treated in those days?

How had this leper probably learned that Jesus had power to heal him?

Did Jesus desire that this leper should never tell who had healed him, or that he should tell the priest first, and thus get his cure officially recognized before telling any other person?

If God will he can do anything, but to how many of our requests may we be certain that he will say "I will?"

What prompted Jesus to grant the request and to heal this leper?

Verses 5—What was the position of a centurion, and if he had been some obscure person, would Jesus have treated him just as courteously?

Verses 6,7—What benefit is it to us, to-day, to bring our sick ones to Jesus?

So far as the records show, Jesus while in the flesh, healed all the sick ones that were brought to him, is that sufficient to prove that he will do the same to-day?

Verses 8, 9—From the commendation which Jesus afterwards gave him, was not this man more worthy than he thought?

What are the relative moral values of thinking too much, or thinking too little of ourselves?

Why should not a man be blamable, for folly if not for sin, for having an estimate of himself, whether for or against, other than the facts warrant?

What was the ground for this man's sublime faith, and is such faith possible, for all of us, when we pray for specific things?

What is the force of the centurion's analogy between obedience rendered him as a general, and the instant obedience of the laws of nature to the commands of Jesus? "Speak the word only."

Verses 10—What reason is there to believe, that in every nation, and under every form of error and superstition, men are found who fear God, and that all who do fear him are accepted of him?

Verses 11, 12—When it comes to a matter of personal salvation, what advantage did the Jew have over the Gentile, and what advantage has a man from a Christian family over one from the family of an infidel?

What is the reason for the belief that many heathen will be saved in that day and many church members shut out in the darkness?

Verses 13—Have you any reason to believe that this man's faith and its results, are other than typical of cases that are constantly happening?

* Verses 14-17—Does God to-day purpose to cure our sick miraculously, like these cases, or are these exceptional and for a special purpose? (This question is to be answered in writing by members of the club.)

Lesson for Sunday, March 13, 1910—Two Mighty Works. Matt. 8:23-34

ART AND MUSIC IN SCHOOL.

Art and music play two important parts in the school-room, each having its particular function to perform throughout the school year.

Art comprises the pictures and sculpture that adorn the walls and help to brighten the tedious hours of study spent by both pupils and teacher. In having pictures of great men on the walls we add one great feature to their study which teaches a pupil to become acquainted with the outward appearance and to judge a man's character by his face in connection with the object of the lesson. They make a school homelike and help to content a child and make his or her school life a pleasure instead of a burden. They enlighten the mind, they inspire you with loftier ideas, and cause the pupil to wonder at the origin of the picture, as to the artist with palette and brush in hand sitting before his easel, and his thoughts and imaginations while painting. In this same way sculpture work and busts of ancient men which are found in the school room cause a pupil to become inquisitive as to when these men lived and what they contributed to civilization, and consequently the scholar will search the encyclopedia for a correct and satisfactory account of their existence, thus making himself acquainted with the lives of these ancient men through the agency of this insignificant piece of sculpture. Such a knowledge as this acquired by personal curiosity is lasting and will consequently place the mind in a more advanced state of development, better fitted to cope with the problems of every day school life.

Music as we all know is another great feature in the school room which cannot be given too much attention. This is a subject familiar to the majority of people, and one whose moral and spiritual effects are not pictured in words. It inspires a pupil with perseverance, and courage through many dreary hours which would have been drudgery, but for the wonderful power of melody. The benefits from attaining a knowledge of music in school may seem few and far between, but if the seeds are sown on good ground and properly cared for they will manifest themselves and be seen and appreciated by the sower. A pupil unaccustomed to the melodious strains of music, will listen with ears so interested that he will drink it in as if it were a glass of refreshing water applied to the lips on a mid-summer day. He may have talent and through the influence of the school finally win his way to success.

When we say, however, that the purpose of education is the development and formation of character, we do not mean that that is the only purpose of education. Education has many purposes and uses. An education is an equipment for performing the duties of life. The trained and skilled workman can do more and better work than the untrained and unskilled workman. If things are worth doing at all they are worth doing well, but if things are to be done well there must be intelligence. This holds true with respect to all work, whether it be on the farm, in the factory, in the school, in the church or in the legislative hall. An education gives us the ability for the proper enjoyment of life, and to make proper use of the things of the world. He only gets the good out of life and the world who sees the real true meaning of life and the world. An education helps one to understand the great human race of which he is an integral part and to find his true place therein. But when all this is said it still remains true that the primary and fundamental purpose of education is the formation and development of character.

What can one do for himself in order to promote his growth and development? First of all he must recognize where the sources of knowledge and strength are to be found, and then he must put himself in touch with these sources of knowledge and strength. In the home, in the church, in the school, in our work, in communion and fellowship with our fellowmen, in God's out of doors, in books of biography, fiction, history, travel, poetry and drama, philosophy and religion, and, above all, in the great school of life we find the unending springs of knowledge and strength. Let us not make the mistake of confounding school training with education. The former is but an incident in life, while the latter is coextensive with life itself. Culture and the discipline of life are identical. The real teacher is always life, and the real university is the human experience.

The human being is a three-fold being, that is, body, soul and spirit, and a full and complete education must look to the perfection of all these departments of human life. Each one of us has a body, and a mind; and moral possibilities and religious aspirations, and the training of all is necessary in order to true and noble manhood and womanhood. And discipline which will produce a sound and healthy body, a well trained mind and a noble Christian spirit will ever be sought by the earnest and energetic youth of our land. We should be satisfied with nothing else.

And what if our stations in life are as different as our faces? As in the human body all the members do not have the same office though all are necessary, so also is it in the great social body. In this great world of ours there are many stations to be filled, and a different order of strength and ability is required for each. But the same reward comes to each one who has faithfully completed his task, whatever that task may be. It does not matter what post we may occupy in life when we have done our best to fill that post we will find that we have grown, that we have educated ourselves, we have accomplished our destiny and God's plan for us has been fulfilled.

To teach us to grow into the image and stature of the Christ is, as I conceive, the function of education.

stand the benefit of a high school course. It is only by having them work in harmony with the teacher that success can be attained in rural high school work. One way of bringing this about would be to appoint a day, on which the patrons of the high school could be brought together and this important subject presented to them in such a way, as to make it clear what the rural high school aims to do for the higher education of its pupils.

Germany forbids the use of boric acid in curing meats and requires that all meat pickled in salt or brine must contain at least six per cent. salt in its innermost part.

In London, in 1907, 1449 bachelors married widows.

LITERATURE VS. MATHEMATICS.

early become acquainted. This vast world moves along lines of thought and sentiment and principles, and the press gives to these wings to fly and tongues to speak.

No man has a right to bring up his children without surrounding them with books of mathematics. Children will in that way be allowed to learn to get a foundation at first and after getting this it is much easier when going to school, to become a mathematician. The art of solving problems is really one of the most wonderful things in the world. A child beginning to work problems becomes delighted with it, because he often works ones which are familiar to him.

To do mathematics with profit, the examples must be of a kind to inform the mind. They should be worked with attention, understood and remembered and their precepts put in practice. Then if it is understood well the influence of it upon people is remarkable.

Children often do not understand that the branches of pure mathematics first developed, were naturally arithmetic, or the science of number and Geometry or the science of quantity. Geometry was the only branch of mathematics cultivated by the Greeks. Algebra or the science of number in its most general form, is of a much later growth and was at first merely a universal arithmetic.

Mathematics will always lend us a helping hand. If in some business concerning financial affairs, it aids us most greatly. When in a melancholy state of mind, it is very pleasant to work some problems by Algebra and afterwards reduce it to arithmetic. Of course to some, whose minds are fickle; the ornamental part of Literature seems much more interesting and reviving, and to those who read only the best selected work and who are vigorous and profound thinkers, it also probably seems a more fair index to his character than what mathematics does.

Some people often say:—I have no prospects and no reason for any great hopes. I am not clever and not bright at school. At mathematics I have perhaps some ability but at nothing else. We find the truth to be that they spend their time dreaming, while others are working. And there is nothing to encourage their ambition. If they would devote their time entirely to that of which they have some ability they would surely have great hopes and prospects. They must remember that there are trials of life that a acorn is not an oak when it is sprouted. It must go through long summers and fierce winters, it has to endure all that frost and snow and thunder and storm and sidesteering winds can bring before it is a full grown oak. These are rough teachers but a rugged schoolmaster makes a rugged pupil so a man is not a mathematician when created. He must go through long and sometimes tiresome durations solving it, he has to endure difficult examples and those that he does not understand, before it is fully developed in his mind. He is only begun, his mathematics must come with years.

People, who study mathematics, become fond of it and drop other studies, in which they are also fitted. Take for instance Isaac Barrow, who stands at the head of the theologians of his time. Mathematics was one of his great favorites, and after he had returned to theological studies, he devoted much time to Mathematics. He was Professor of Greek and Geometry and resigned both chairs to accept the professorship of mathematics. Thus showing how fascinating it becomes.

Literature molds and revives the thoughts, and mathematics informs the mind. Literature is the soul of action and mathematics is the art of solving problems. Literature makes the truth tenderness and inspiration grow in the girls, that read it and makes the spirit of rivalry grow with in the boys, who read it and mathematics does not do anything equal to that. Literature helps us to choose our friends and gives its readers knowledge, which helps along much in society.

Thus we find Literature benefits us more than Mathematics, because it does more for the world's general knowledge than mathematics.

If the Lord loveth a cheerful liar, he will reserve a seat next the throne for Dr. Cook.
