TWO SENATORS TO QUIT

PASSING OF OLD GUARD

Hale and Aldrich to go Back to Simple Life

MAINE SENATOR'S LONG SERVICE

Various Reasons Assigned For Retirement.—Hale Has Represented His State For Five Terms, The Record For This Congress.

Probably the most important event of this session of Congress is the announcement that Senators Aldrich and Hale will retire from public life. These two men have dominated the Senate for some time and when they go new forces will appear which may rule wisely or otherwise.

It will be claimed that Mr. Hale is retiring because he fears that the legislature of Maine will not re-elect him. It is true he has on his hands a determined fight, and the fact that his son is a candidate for the House of Representatives has complicated the Senator's battle. But it is well to recall that Senator Hale has always had enemies in his own state, and that he has never returned to the Senate without a fight.

The Senator himself gives as his reasons the unsettled condition of politics in Maine and the fact that for the first time he has encountered opposition. He told his friends that having been accorded the unparalleled honor of five full terms in the Senate without contest of any character he did not relish the prospect of entering into a scramble at his present time of life.

But while this was the principal reason given by the Senator, he made it plain that his course had not been dictated by any fear of the results. The Senator contends that so far as the contest has gone the indications are entirely favorable to his re-election. It is the conflict itself that appals him. Seventy-four years of age and unused to opposition in his political aspirations, he simply hesitated to enter upon a scrimmage which, while it probably would result in his triumph would be injurious to his health and at the same time greatly disturb his peace of mind.

Republican leaders express the greatest apprehension as to the result of the departure of these two master minds from the Senate. Messrs. Hale and Aldrich stood for the Republicanism of the Old Guard. They were high protectionists. Their departure from the Senate at this time is undoubtedly a blow to the policy of high protection. No Payne-Aldrich tariff bill will be possible after March 4, 1911. It is true that there remains in the Senate a majority for high protection. Senators Burrows, Smoot, Gallinger, Smith, of Michigan; Warren, of Wyoming, and many others, are as devotedly attached to the doctrine as Messrs. Hale or Aldrich. But it would be idle to deny that not one of these men will assume the reins laid down by Messrs. Hale and Aldrich. Senator Lodge is a brilliant man, a scholar and forceful orator. Senator Crane, his colleague, is a splendid organizer, and a man of great diplomatic skill in winning over obstinate colleagues. But there is no leadership in either of these two distinguished men. Nor can any man who knows the Republican senators at this moment suggest the name of any man on the Republican side who has the qualifications of such leadership as was displayed by the two great Senators, who unwittingly, perhaps, made their last fight when they forced the Payne-Aldrich bill through the Senate.

SENATOR ALDRICH HAS AN IDEA OF RETIRING

Ambition to Remodel Monetary System of the Country May Be Realized Before He Steps Out.

Notwithstanding the reports to contrary Senator Aldrich has an idea of leaving public life and he will retire from the Senate in 1911.

The one great ambition of his life has been to go down into history as a second Alexander Hamilton. He proposed to satisfy this ambition by doing what no other single individual has done since Hamilton's days. He intended to remodel the present monetary system of the country by creating an entirely new system based upon the principles of a great central bank of issue. Until he could accomplish this work he did not mean to retire. If he can succeed in doing it before he will retire next March he will be gratified.

The Republican "boss" of Rhode Island, General Brayton, is reported to have said that under no circumstances will Senator Aldrich again be a candidate for reelection.

Col. Roosevelt is in Paris.

ALL ARE PREPARING FOR THE FUTURE WELFARE OF THE TOWN

Clean, Non-Partisan Ticket to Carry Out Provisions of New Charter Nominated in Business Men's Association and Approved by That Organization

The Coming Town Election on Monday May 2nd, Will be the Most Important Election Held in Emmitsburg for Years as it Will Usher in a New Form of Local Municipal Government

Instead of a Burgess and Six Commissioners elected for one year as heretofore, there will be a Burgess, elected annually, and three commissioners whose terms will be for one, two and three years respectively, so that annually, after May 2nd when a full board is to be elected, a burgess and one commissioner to serve for three years will be chosen.

This arrangement, as has been stated before, will afford an opportunity for carrying out a definite and substantial plan for town improvement, uninterruptedly, as the governing body of the Corporation will be practically continuous—not completely overturned each twelve months as formerly.

This broadening of the governing power of the town was the outcome of the progressive spirit of the citizens of Emmitsburg and was brought about by the Business Men's Association. It was that body, having in view a greater and a better town, that formulated the new charter and had it passed by the Legislature, and it was this association, solely mindful of the welfare of all the citizens and with the single desire of giving an administration that would be non-political, non-factional and at the same time conservatively progressive, if that term may be used, that nominated and endorsed the following ticket:

For Burgess, To Serve One Year,

SAMUEL L. ROWE.

For Commissioner, To Serve One Year,

MILLARD F. SHUFF.

For Commissioner, To Serve Two Years,

E. E. ZIMMERMAN.

For Commissioner, To Serve Three Years,

DR. JNO. McC. FOREMAN.

Registration Days.

It will be noted that under the new law it is necessary for every eligible voter to register. If he does not register he cannot vote. It is therefore of the greatest importance that "the male citizens of Emmitsburg above twenty-one years of age who shall have resided in said town for twelve months next preceding the election" take advantage of this opportunity and register for the coming election. Tuesday, April 19th, was the first registration day and ninety-two qualified.

The next and last registration day will be Tuesday, April 26th. The registration will be at Fireman's Hall on that date from 9 A. M. until 2 P. M.

The Duty of the Citizen.

It is the duty of every good citizen to participate in local as well as in State and National government, and every man who shirks that duty by refusing to register and to vote voluntarily stamps himself as one who is indifferent to the welfare of the community in which he lives.

The time has come when every vestige of factionalism, every semblance of partisanship, every suggestion of an alliance with this or that interest and every appearance of subservience to one man or to one clique should be done away with for once and for all.

The coming election is not a political one. It is a community election, having for its end and aim the improvement, the advancement and in every sense the betterment of Emmitsburg and her entire population, and in this light only should it be regarded.

The new charter, or rather the old charter as now amended and amplified, opens the way to a systematic and comprehensive scheme of development for Emmitsburg. It is broad, liberal and reasonable. It safeguards the personal and property interests of the citizens and it provides a modern, clean and wholesome mode of municipal administration which—in the hands of men who take solemn oath to faithfully execute the offices to which they are elected, to the best of their judgment and ability, "without favor, affection or partiality"—cannot fail to meet with the approbation of all, and the ticket nominated in open session by the Business Men's Association and approved and endorsed by that organization is one that should be supported.

COL. BRYAN HOME AGAIN FROM A FOREIGN STRAND

Does Not Commit Himself on Cook-Pearry Controversy But Thinks Discoverer Was a Democrat.

Col. William J. Bryan reached New York Monday full of enthusiasm about the wonders of South America, and with absolutely no ideas, so far as he was willing to admit, about the state of affairs political in this country.

Some one asked him: "Did you hear of Dr. Cook?"

"Yes, everywhere I went in South America the papers said he was there. I met a Texas man, who said Dr. Cook was a Democrat, and asked me if I didn't hope he had discovered the North Pole. I told him that while I could express no opinion on the controversy between Peary and Cook, I thought, as a general proposition, that a Democrat would be more likely to discover the pole than a Republican, because the Democrats have been out in the cold a long time and are used to it."

PACKERS TO FIGHT HARD AGAINST STANDING TRIAL

Governor of New Jersey Hears Argument For and Against Extradition of Leading Beef Barons.

Governor Fort of New Jersey heard argument on Monday for or against the extradition of Chicago packers who have been indicted by a grand jury for alleged illegal practices at cold storage plants.

This is part of the crusade against the Beef Trust as instituted by Prosecutor Garven of Hudson county, New Jersey. A hard fight is ahead for every means known to the legal profession will be used to keep J. Ogden Armour, Lewis F. Swift and Edward Morris, those wanted in the case, from being brought to trial in New Jersey.

Australian beef is selling in New York at six cents less than our own Western meat.

INTIMATE VIEW OF LIFE AMONG THE CHINESE

Miss Simonton, Formerly of Emmitsburg, Tells of Her Experiences in Celestial Empire

ATTENDS RECEPTION AT TSINAUFU GIVEN FOR WIVES OF OFFICIALS

Delicious Viands Served on Chinese Tables.—Persimmons That Are Not Puckery and Cabbage More Delicate Than Our Own.—Consternation Over The Comet of a Few Months Ago.

It is known to many people in Emmitsburg that Miss Martha Snodgrass Simonton, daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Simonton, and formerly a resident of this place, has been living for some time in China. Her experiences there will be of great interest to her friends in Emmitsburg and the following letter from her to the Pittsburgh Dispatch, both from its intrinsic interest and from a high regard for the writer, is reproduced. It is hoped that other letters from Miss Simonton may be published in the near future. Miss Simonton writes under the name Sai Hsiao Jieh:

TSINAUFU, Shantung, China, Jan. 26.

—Lately I attended a reception given for the wives of the officials here, and was pleased to see the elite of Tsinaufu native society. There were only 40 Chinese ladies, but with their maids and attendants there were many more. Most of these ladies had feet so tiny as to require assistance in walking. They were all beautifully dressed in heavy silks (of sometimes brilliant and startling colors) and handsome furs. Their hair was oiled until not one hair was out of place. They were powdered and painted until their faces looked like wax dolls, and most of them had a deep crimson spot on the lips.

One of them smoked, her maid holding the silver water-pipe and handing it to her every now and then for a whiff. Several of them brought their babies, so stiff in their heavily wadded clothes—made of silk, of course—that they looked as if they could have been stood in a row without tumbling over.

There were, also elaborate hair ornaments, some of them very handsome, particularly those worn on the very elaborate headdress of a Manchou lady, whose heads looked as much like a flower garden as hats do on the ladies in the homeland. They all wore a great deal of jewelry, the head ornaments being Chinese, but the watches, chains and bracelets being foreign.

Two among the number could speak English, and several shook hands with us in our fashion, though their custom is merely to bow. They gave quick little bows, bending the body at the waist, and were not ungraceful except in walking.

Some of the men are strikingly graceful, but the women who have bound feet cannot be. The Governor's daughters have natural feet, which shows his progressive and pro-foreign tastes. The courtyard at this reception was almost as interesting as inside the house. It was full of chairs, wheelbarrows and men. Each lady had four men to her chair, and her maid on a barrow had one, besides the servant, who walked ahead with a large lantern.

The different livery of the servants was interesting and the maids were all very well dressed. As so-and-so's chair was called by a servant at the door that lady would rise, bow all around and toddle out, leaning on the arm of her maid. Most of the maids had bound feet, too, but not as tiny as the feet of her mistress, and to see two or three hobbling out together with an air of dignity was rather comical to me.

IS TAFT TIRED OF THE LIFE AT WHITE HOUSE

Latest Story is That He Wants Roosevelt to be Re-elected in 1912.—Joyful President's Ambition.

The latest sensational story from Washington is that Taft is advocating the nomination of Roosevelt for President in 1912.

Mr. Taft has made no secret of the fact that he prefers the work and life of a lawyer to that of an executive. He has made the declaration that all his training has been in the interpretation of the law and not towards an understanding of the expedients necessary to obtain the enactment of laws by Congress.

The greatest ambition of Mr. Taft's life, Congressmen are pointing out, has always been an appointment as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. It was only because of Roosevelt's persuasions and the arguments of his relatives and friends that Taft consented to make the run for the Presidency.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Landslide at Rochester, N. Y., Is a Surprise Even to Democrats.—Called Political Earthquake.

Monroe county, New York, which Senator Perkins, Republican, carried by 10,167 votes, went Democratic on Tuesday by 5,831 votes, electing James S. Havens, for Congress, over G. W. Aldrich, the Republican. Havens is an avowed tariff reformer.

Coming on the top of the heralded retirement of United States Senators Aldrich and Hale, and the capture of a rock-ribbed Republican district in Massachusetts by Eugene N. Foss, Democrat, recently, the Democratic landslide in Monroe county, New York, has shaken the deepest strata of Republicanism.

The mob which welcomed Col. Roosevelt at Budapest, trampled on the chief of police and broke his leg.

COMET NEARS US FAST

MONSTER OF THE SKY

Will Appear as Magnificent Object in Few Weeks

BRIGHTEST EVENING OF MAY 19

Best Time to See It in the Morning Will be Between May 10 and May 19.—It Will Vanish to the Unaided Eye About July 1st.

In an exhaustive article on Halley's comet that appeared in the New York Sun last Sunday, Prof. G. A. Mitchell, of Columbia University, tells some interesting things of this monster of the sky.

It is now over seven months since the comet was picked up on a photographic plate and during this interval it has been coming closer and closer to the sun. In a short time it will appear as a magnificent object in our skies.

Throughout the ages of the world's past history men have been prone to look for signs and wonders in the sky and always to them a comet has been a thing to be regarded with fear and dread. To such an extent is this true to-day that the English Government, to avoid consternation and panic among its primitive dependents in Africa, has announced by proclamation the appearance of Halley's comet.

The younger generation have not been favored with the sight of a comet, for the last brilliant comet was that of 1882, thus the appearance of Halley's comet is of more than usual interest, especially to astronomers for it is the first of these wanderers which has revisited the earth according to calculation; it is to present the unusual phenomenon of crossing the face of the sun, and we are to be swept through its tail.

Halley, the Englishman who first predicted the return of the comet of which we speak, died before his prophecy was fulfilled. Another scientist, with the aid of subsequent calculations, verified the assumption of Halley and named a date when the comet would be closest to the sun. He was one month astray in his calculation as the comet was one month ahead of time in its journey of seventy-five years. Prof. Mitchell remarks that this seventy-five years "would be in the same ratio as if the Twentieth Century Limited on a trip from Chicago could pull into New York just one minute and twelve seconds away from schedule."

From the verification of these predictions was laid the foundation of exact astronomy. At the present time with the refinements of modern science it is possible to trace the records of Halley's comet back without a break to the year 11 B. C. These records are absolutely authentic. The first recorded appearance of the wonder was in 240 B. C. Thus for over 2000 years this same comet has been revisiting the earth at periodic intervals. "For a thousand years in Thy sight are but as yesterday."

On Tuesday night at 11 o'clock this comet may be said to have finished another lap in its journey for at that time it turned on its course and started back on its long journey out into the depths of space, where no man can follow it even with the most powerful telescope. Away out through space beyond the orbit of the most distant of discovered planets it will journey, again turn in its course and return as a spectacle to those unborn.

As the earth and comet approach each other the comet enormously in—

ROUGH RIDERS GETTING READY FOR TEDDY'S RETURN

Reunion of New York Association Held Last Night at New York.—Greeting From the Colonel.

Last evening, the twelfth anniversary of the declaration of the war with Spain, the New York branch of the National Roosevelt Rough Riders Association, met at the Harvard Club in New York City, at which meeting they discussed measures to be taken in regard to a proposed reunion of the regiment about the time of Colonel Roosevelt's return.

A dinner was served followed by a smoker and the veterans of the Rough Rider Regiment were apprised of the fact that Col. Roosevelt had sent word to them from Khartoum, expressing his approval of the idea.

Col. Jesse Claggett, of Motter's Station, a member of the famous regiment, received an invitation to this reunion.

A New York branch of the Young Men's Christian Association has opened a night course for students in aeronautics.

Their First Visitor

[Original.]

Waverly, unlike the other suburban stations on the railroad, had been settled by people of the old regime. Not that the regime was very ancient—nothing is ancient in America—but it was certainly not the new regime of wealth. There were families that had been in comfortable circumstances for a hundred years, some who had descended from those once prominent, and all were refined. Refinement necessarily means exclusiveness, and Waverly was known as an exclusive place. A wealthy soap boiler had settled there, but after years had passed without making any friends he moved on.

But one day a little house that had been vacant for a long while was opened, the paint retouched, shutters repaired, broken window panes put in and the fence set up. No one in Waverly was especially interested in who was to occupy it, for people occupying such houses were usually not of a kind to be associated with. But when a young couple appeared, a boy and a girl just married, both bearing the marks of refined parentage, some of the Waverlyans took notice. Those who would scorn to visit a millionaire soap boiler would not hesitate to take into their hearts refined people.

But the citizens of Waverly were not in the habit of being in a hurry in their welcomes. Time enough to call when they had learned something about the young couple. The husband went into the city almost every day, but not every day, and when he did go in he often came out long before the closing of business hours. The wife remained at home all day. She dressed plainly, but neatly. If she had fine clothes she had no occasion to show them except at church, where she wore such costumes as were appropriate. But information concerning the young couple did not come rapidly. Weeks had passed before the name, Tileston, was generally known. The couple did not appear to wish to be left alone. Indeed, young Mrs. Tileston made several efforts to become acquainted with the ladies of her church. But the ladies of the church did not see why persons traveling on the same road together to heaven should need to camp together by the way—not that they proposed to exclude Mrs. Tileston; they simply intended to find out all about her before becoming intimate with her.

Months passed and still information concerning the young couple lingered. There came a vague report that letters were coming through the post-office to them under an assumed name. This settled the matter. There was no further question as to the future social status of the so called Mr. and Mrs. Tileston. They were to be let severely alone.

One day a man with a small satchel came out from the city and made straight for the Tileston house. He stayed half an hour, went away and came again the next day, and the next, and the next. Neither husband nor wife was visible, and the shades in an upstairs room were drawn.

No one in Waverly took note of this except an old maid who lived opposite. Though living so near the Tilestons, she had not paid any attention to them. She had an income of $6000 a year, the remains of a large fortune built up by her great-grandfather in the slave trade. She was a De G., and the De G.'s had once been the social heads of society in the city. When one of the Waverlyans had proposed to call on the soap boiler Miss De G. had held up her hands in holy horror and prevented the call. But she was an old maid, and old maids are proverbially curious. What could be going on in the little house opposite? There was but one way to find out—to go over and see.

Miss De G. knocked at the door and received no answer. The latch was not caught, and the door was shaken fitfully by the wind. Opening it, she went inside. Neither in the living room, the dining room nor the kitchen was there a sign of a living being. Curiosity overcame her objection to intrusion, and she went upstairs.

The Tilestons had received their first visitor—a visitor who had come to stay. On the bed lay the wife, dead. The husband sat in a chair, his arms on a table and his head on his arms.

Miss De G. saw this from the head of the stairs. Her curiosity was satisfied. She stepped back stealthily, went out and reported what she had seen to one of the ladies of the church. The lady called on several other ladies, and the matter of taking some action was discussed. All those visited were engaged to go to a lunch party, but they decided that it was their Christian duty—after the luncheon—to go and see if they could do anything for the widow.

As they were about to enter the little house a carriage, the coachman and footman in rich livery, drove up to the door, and a gentleman and lady with two children alighted and hurried into the house.

The visiting ladies looked at one another. Evidently their kind offices were not needed. Too well bred to intrude, they went away. This was the third and last visit the Tilestons received during their residence in Waverly.

The next morning the papers gave an account of how two youngsters belonging to families socially prominent, the father of the girl being both celebrated and rich, had eloped. The bride had died while they were negotiating with their parents for forgiveness, which had been determined on, and settlements, which were being arranged for.

F. A. MITCHEL.

RELIGIOUS THOUGHT.

Gems Gleaned From the Teachings of All Denominations.

The boundary of the church is the world. Every church that lives for itself ought to die.—Rev. T. H. Marsh, Baptist, Aurora, Ill.

Success in God's Work.

Our personal success in work for God depends much upon our methods, for we hope to deal with men as we find them and not as we would desire them to be.—Rev. George Adams, Methodist, Brooklyn.

Noblest Virtue.

The noblest of virtues is that which impels one to stretch out the hand to save a fellow being and put him in the right path on which he can be of use to himself and his kind.—Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters, Baptist, New York

Man's Life Chance.

A man's chance in life must not be determined by where he was born or by his inheritance, but by his personal worth. Every man must have a full chance to be all the man there is in him to be.—Rev. Dr. N. McGee Waters, Congregationalist, Brooklyn.

True Religion's Business.

It is the business of a true religion to restore society to its pristine patriarchal state, in which the family suggests the principle and brotherhood the spirit of the associated life of humanity.—Rev. Dr. C. Elwood Nash, Universalist, Los Angeles, Cal.

Fear of Life.

As people are afraid of death they are still more afraid of life, with its varied experiences. In almost every face there is written the story of trial in mind and soul. Only the fewest men and women show by their serene looks that they met the hard facts of life in a living faith.—Rev. George R. Gebauer, Unitarian, Duluth, Minn.

Abiding Greatness.

There is no such thing possible as abiding greatness where there are not within the man a tender, a quickly responsive and a loyal heart and a burning affection for God and for all humanity. Unless a man can love much and love as did the apostle he can never fill any but a small and obscure place.—Rev. Henry Mottet, Episcopalian, New York.

Marks of Christ Within Us.

The power of attracting and the power of being attracted, the sense of unutterable joy that we find in being about our Father's business—these are some of the marks of the Christ within us. But there is one that overpasses and overmarks them all, which is the distinguishing mark of the Christ spirit in the man. It is the joy he feels in daily laying down his life for others.—Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, Unitarian, Washington.

Backbone Religion.

There are qualities in religion that appeal more directly to a man than to a woman. The first is hand grip. It must recognize human brotherhood. The second is backbone. It must have a surplus of courage. It must dare to do the right thing, however unpopular it may be. It must look sin between the eyes and not flinch. The religion that will appeal to the man who thinks must also be wide. It must be as impartial as the sun and as tolerant as summer.—Rev. Alan Hudson, Congregationalist, Brockton, Mass.

The Best Things.

A man can leave to his son a good farm, splendidly stocked and perfectly improved, and he can leave to his daughter a full bank account that will grow by itself if she leaves it alone. He can leave his children all his fortune of money and property at its full face value. But the best things in the world, the things that are beyond all estimate of money value, the priceless, everlasting things of life, the things that enrich the mind and endow the soul, no man or woman can inherit. We have to learn them and earn them, every one for himself in his own generation, in the same old way, beginning at the beginning.—Rev. Dr. Robert J. Burdette, Baptist, Los Angeles, Cal.

A Singing Religion.

If we are melancholic and gloomy, pessimistic and fault finding, we may be sure we are not in proper connection with the source of strength. God yearns to make us strong, and if we open our souls to the incoming of his power that will enable our spirit to sing. It is a singing religion, a religion that sings while it serves, a cheering, musical religion, that the world needs. And Christianity is that. There are enough grumblers and fault finders in the world, and it was intended that every Christian's life should be a song of cheer. Many an individual and many a home is enveloped in gloom, and if my life is a song I can drive away some of the world's sadness. It is a beautiful thing even to try to do that, and it is well worth living for.—Rev. Dr. John H. Prugh, Reformed, Pittsburg.

Can Never Escape God.

There are two beings that man can never escape. One is God. God is a tremendous fact in man's life. It is so now. It will be so forever. Man lives and moves and has his being in God, as the birds in the air, as the fish in the sea. Man can never escape God. The other being that man cannot escape is himself. Every man has to live with himself, whether he wants to or not. Some men would be very happy if they could get away from themselves, but they cannot. As man cannot escape God or himself, he can never know blessedness except as he gets in harmony with himself, and he comes to such harmony only as he gets right with God by surrendering himself to Jesus Christ, so that he will come to think as Christ thinks and to will as Christ wills and to love as Christ loves.—Rev. John Reid Shannon, Methodist Episcopal, Washington.

The Frenchman Looked Innocent.

Some time since, in a Tremont street store in Boston, a nervous little Frenchman brushed against a pretty trifle of vase ware valued at about $14 and succeeded in getting several score more pieces out of it than had gone into its making. The floorwalker led the abashed Parisian aside and politely explained that the broken vase must be paid for. Monsieur fetched a handful of small silver and copper, mostly foreign, from his pocket when he was told the value of the trifle.

"Mon Dieu," cried the Parisian, "70 francs!" At this he took out his bill book and discovered a fifty dollar express draft, which the floorwalker instantly seized upon, to the unspeakable horror of its owner.

After deducting the value of the vase the former handed the man his change and dismissed him with a floorwalker's blessing. The express draft reached the bank in due time, with four others as fraudulent, but the volatile little Frenchman had departed southward with the swallows.—Bohemian Magazine.

Followed Suit.

On the day of the admission of M. Rostand to the French academy the author of "Cyrano" and "L'Aiglon" gave a breakfast to a few of his friends, the guest of honor being Mme. Bernhardt. The actress was dressed in a handsome gown, which had been made expressly for the occasion. At the end of the breakfast she arose and in an impressive manner took a glass, held it high and said, "I drink to the greatest of French dramatists, M. Rostand, and I drink after the Greek manner!" She then poured the contents of her glass over her head and gown.

Two of Rostand's small sons were sitting at a side table wearing new velvet suits, also made for the occasion. In the silence which followed Bernhardt's dramatic tribute the elder of the boys arose and, imitating her manner, said, "I drink to the greatest of poets, my papa, and I also drink in the Greek fashion!" and straightway deluged himself and his small brother with the contents of his glass.

A Scene Not in a Play.

An extraordinary scene took place in the Princess theater, London, on the night of the first production of Charles Reade's great play, "Never Too Late to Mend," Oct. 4, 1895. During the prison scene a large quantity of water was thrown over Miss Moore, who took the part of Joseph, the character done to death by the warders. One of the critics, Mr. Tomlin of the Morning Advertiser, rose from his seat and publicly protested against the unnecessary cruelty. This aroused almost a riot among the audience, and the action of the play was stopped for some considerable time. Fuel was added to the fire by George Vining, the lessee of the theater, who was playing the part of Tom Robinson and who made a most imprudent speech, in which he practically insulted every critic present, with the result that the theater was left severely alone by the press for many months. The play, however, turned out to be a popular success and had, for those days, the phenomenal run of 140 performances.

Reading in Bed.

"Boys and girls under eighteen should be strictly forbidden to read in bed," says the Lancet, on the authority of Dr. Hugo Felchenfeld of Berlin, who declares that in the case of young persons whose eyes are not fully developed the practice is likely to induce myopia. While young people run the greatest risk, the Lancet thinks that reading in bed is undesirable for persons of any age and states that "in the case of aged, anxious, worried and bedridden people, to whom it would seem cruelly to deny what may perhaps be almost their only luxury, for fear of inducing some slight error of refraction, care should be taken that the light is sufficiently brilliant, the eyes being shaded from it, and that the patient lies on his back with head and shoulders raised."

Wellington's Tact.

There was an army of generals assembled at Paris in 1814, and when the various Austrian and Prussian generals who had been beaten by Napoleon came crowding round the Duke of Wellington and expressing lots of compliments to him for having never been beaten by the French the duke pleased them immensely by saying, "Ah, but you know I never met Bonaparte, and I have always looked on him as being as good as 40,000 men."

How Indians Catch Monkeys.

In South America the Indians take a cocoanut and cut a hole in each end just large enough for the monkey's paws. Then they fill the middle of the nut with sugar. When a monkey comes across the shell he thrusts in one paw and, finding sugar, he pushes in the other. He closes both paws on the sugar and then will not remove either for fear he shall lose the sugar. Then, while he cannot use either paw, he is easily caught.

A Chinese Story.

A Chinese barber while shaving a customer's head drew blood and put one of his fingers on the place. Again he made a cut and put down another finger, and so on until he had no more fingers free. "Ah," said he as he paused in his work, "a barber's trade is difficult. We ought to have a thousand fingers!"—Scrap Book.

Apt Pupil.

"Didn't I see the grocer's boy kiss you this morning, Martha?" "Yes'm. But he ain't to blame, ma'am. 'Twas the ice man set him the bad example."

CLEANUP ORDINANCE.

Scheme Adopted by a Park Commission in Los Angeles.

Many of our California cities and towns are adopting ordinances requiring vacant lots and untidy premises to be cleaned up, says the Los Angeles Times. In Riverside the notification of passage of such legislation is placed in the hands of the park commission, which has sent out the following notice to property owners:

"A provision in the new cleaning up ordinance makes it the duty of the park commissioners to inspect the streets and report all such instances of untidy frontages, dirty vacant lots and other premises as would come under the provisions of the ordinance (a copy of which is herewith inclosed) to the superintendent of streets, whose duty would be to serve legal notice to property holders.

"It is the opinion of this board that a simple reminder in the large majority of cases will be all that is necessary to secure the desired results; hence we take the liberty of calling your attention to the neglected condition of the frontage (description), respectfully requesting that prompt attention be given it that formal legal notices to the superintendent of streets may not be necessary."

Frenzied Financiering.

GETTYSBURG

Mrs. Carey J. Smith died Monday morning at 7.30 o'clock at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raphael Fissel, Hanover St., of a complication of diseases, aged 39 years, 1 month and 25 days.

In February the Smith home then in Mountjoy township was visited by diphtheria, Mrs. Smith having suffered from the disease, being left in a paralyzed and helpless condition. Their oldest daughter died of the disease. They then came to town and took up their abode with her parents, but Mrs. Smith continued to fail until death ensued. The funeral was held on Wednesday morning, conducted by Rev. G. W. Sherrick, of the United Brethren church, of which she was a member. Interment was made in Evergreen Cemetery.

The cylinder head blew out of the engine drawing the 5.45 train at this place Tuesday evening.

Work has been started on a new two-story building at the Seminary, which will be used as a boarding house and dormitory.

The annual Seminary commencement will be held the week beginning May 15.

The college baseball team was defeated on Friday by the score 4-3, by Ursinus college, and again on Saturday by Albright college. Score 9-4.

The Ben Greet players delighted a fair-sized audience in Brua Chapel last week with their rendition of "The Twelfth Night."

Socials were held by the Christian Endeavor Societies of the Presbyterian churches in their respective meeting places Friday evening.

Mr. John W. Stevens, a former resident of this place was arrested in York on Saturday, after he had attempted to sell some jewelry at a ridiculously low figure. He is charged with the robbery of the Weigand home in this place, as noted some time ago. Stevens was an employee of Mr. Weigand at the time of the robbery, which occurred March 4th, and he was kept under strict surveillance for a time, but his actions were such as to allay suspicion. He eventually left town, spent some time in Hanover and finally landed in York where he attempted to dispose of the jewelry and was arrested on suspicion. Upon searching his trunk all of the missing articles were found, and identified by Mr. Weigand.

Monday was the 49th anniversary of the first call for troops by President Lincoln. Messrs. Jerome Martin, Dr. T. T. Tate, John H. Sheads and Lieut. Oscar D. McMillan, of this place, are survivors of Company E, 2nd Pennsylvania Regiment, recruited in response to Lincoln's call.

Fire on Tuesday night damaged the slaughter house, ice house and a shed of Messrs. Shields and Shealer, and several nearby buildings.

Mr. E. C. Valentine is serving the rural delivery route.

Mr. J. Lee Chapman, of Seattle, is visiting his cousins, Mrs. Emma Biggs and Mrs. Sophie Biggs.

Mrs. McCarty was in Baltimore last week.

Mr. Penrose Schildt had a narrow escape from drowning on Monday. In attempting to cross the stream at Stambaugh's fording the buggy in which he was riding was washed down the creek together with the horse and Mr. Schildt gained land by swimming. He then procured a boat and set the horse free from the vehicle. The next day he recovered his buggy.

The Next and Last Registration Day will be Tuesday, April 26th. The place, Firemen's Hall; the hours, from 9 a. m. until 2 p. m.

Paris Ready For Teddy.

The reception which the city of Paris will give to Mr. Roosevelt has been definitely arranged. It will be given on April 25 and will include a special, solemn session of the Municipal Council at the City Hall at 11 o'clock in the forenoon. On this occasion there will be addresses by M. Caron, president of the council; M. Deselves, prefect of the Seine; M. Lampue, president of the general council of the Seine, and M. Lepine, prefect of police. It is probable that Mr. Roosevelt will speak in response.

Col. Roosevelt was a guest of Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria.

MOUNT ST. MARY'S

The annual entertainment given by the pupils of St. Anthony's school in the school hall last Friday evening was a grand success. Much credit for the success of the entertainment and the decorations of the hall and stage for the occasion must be given to the Sister in charge of St. Anthony's school.

This year's entertainment is considered the best ever given. The play "Wrongfully Accused," was given by the boys of the Parish School. A prize of $5.00 was offered to the boy who performed his part the best. Before the play began a number of persons were selected to act as judges, who at the conclusion of the performance decided that little George Althoff, who played the part of the villain, was entitled to the prize, which was immediately presented to him by his pastor, Rev. Father Tragger. Those taking part in the play were: Messrs Willie Wetzel, Felix Hemler, Willie Kelly, George Rosensteel, George Althoff, Willie Myers, Ray Althoff, Frank McNulty, Willie Rosensteel, Joseph Kelly, John Hobbs, Joseph and Willie Keepers, Eugene Warthen, Russel Wetzel, John Kreitz.

Miss Catherine Seltzer, who on her way to school last Friday fell and broke her arm, is rapidly recovering.

Last Friday Mt. St. Mary's handed Franklin and Marshall a defeat by the score of 4-1. The game was a pitchers battle in which Molina had the better of the argument, allowing but one scratch hit and fanning 12 men. Tomorrow Susquehanna is booked for Echo field. Tuesday 26, Y. M. C. A. of Frederick will play at the Mountain.

Mr. George L. Baker, who severely wrenched his wrist last Friday, is improved. Baker, as we all know, is the star catcher on the Kitchen Mechanic's baseball team. His absence during his recent ailment is greatly missed.

Mrs. Augustine Wagner, who has been visiting in Hagerstown, has returned.

The new stone steps from the terrace to the athletic field at the College add greatly to the appearance of the grounds.

One of the most pleasing social events of the season was the surprise party given at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Miller near Fountain Dale on the evening of April 13th, the occasion being the birthday of Mr. Miller. MIDDLEBURG.

Mr. and Mrs. David Mackley and daughter Miss Clara, attended the funeral of Emanuel Mackley in Westminster on Tuesday, April 19th. Mr. Mackley was born in Middleburg in 1837.

When a young man he learned the milling trade which he followed for a number of years. About 35 years ago he moved to Westminster and opened a feed and grocery store, which business he followed until two years ago when failing health compelled him to sell out and lead a retired life. He was confined to his bed for three weeks and died from paralysis of the heart. He was a devoted member of Centenary M. E. Church, and his place there was seldom vacant. He lived a godly, upright life and he died in the full triumph of faith. The large attendance at the funeral attested to the high esteem in which he was held by the people of Westminster. Rev. Bennett, Rev. Harold Rider, and Rev. Dr. Miller conducted the services. The deceased was survived by a widow and three brothers, David of Middleburg, and James and Harrison, of Thurmont.

Miss Carrie Clifton and Mr. William Scaf, of Baltimore, spent last Saturday and Sunday with Mrs. Eliza Clifton.

Preaching this Sabbath evening at 7:30 by the newly installed pastor, Rev. C. H. Hastings.

New Flag for Lincoln's Tomb.

The sarcophagus bearing the body of Abraham Lincoln was re-draped last Friday with a new American flag given by Illinois members of the Women's Relief Corps. There were appropriate ceremonies as the flag was placed about the stone repository. Since 1899 it has been the custom to cover the tomb of Lincoln with the American flag. At that time the flag was given by the Minneapolis Department, G. A. R., and was presented on Memorial Day. The second flag was presented by the women of the Ohio Relief Corps.

ENOUGH OF MR. GORMAN.

Ever since the dramatic scene during the closing hours of the legislature when Mr. Gorman, smarting under adverse criticism, offered to resign the presidency of the Senate and then signified his intention to give up active participation in affairs political, "the gentleman from Howard" has maintained a silence that may be taken as indicating either that he has said his last word on the subject or that he awaits a decidedly pressing invitation from the Democrats of Maryland to reenter the ranks and take up the leadership of the party.

While the "Ring" and those of the Democratic party who favor machine politics and the dominating control of a few look upon Mr. Gorman with favor not unmixed with pride, a very large portion of the same party—those who are more truly Democratic, in that they stand for statesmanship and that rule whereby the people's rights are taken care of, instead of one-man rule in the interest of an autocracy, are perfectly content to take Mr. Gorman at his word and let him retire from public life.

For the good of the party to which he belongs, and more particularly for the best interests of the State in which that party is in the majority, we are with those who advocate the withholding of any appeal to Mr. Gorman to assume the leadership. There are others whose political motives have been higher than Mr. Gorman's. There are others whose executive ability is at least as good, whose mental equipment is of a much deeper kind, whose statesmanship is far superior, and whose conception of the needs and the wishes of the people is certainly more accurate—Senator Blair Lee, for instance.

CHEER UP! It's not too late. A little application now will win back the lost ground.—Ambition.

This is good advice. You can't gain anything by brooding over the mistakes and errors of a year or a month ago. Forget them. Redouble your determination and put in some extra good looks now.

BE HAPPY AND HELP OTHERS TO BE SO.

The man who said, "One third of our ills are fancied, another third have no existence; let us not waste worry on these," was a good philosopher and a wise counsellor. He must have been related to him who wrote that splendid, but unfortunately not nearly popular enough song, "Never trouble trouble till trouble troubles you." But that is neither here nor there. It is true that ills and troubles come unsought at times, but it is also true that there is a class of people who seem positively anxious for trouble. They court all the ills they can; they go about with a dragnet trying to catch them, and trouble is seemingly so indispensable that when it does not come unbidden they pursue it, and unable to overtake it or get a clear title to it by purchase, they borrow it. Sympathy is wasted on people like this. They are abnormal by choice and as they are happy only when miserable, let it go at that. They are hopeless; they will try to be unhappy even in Heaven. The other class—made up of over-nervous, apprehensive beings who lack self-confidence and are given to melancholy—in many cases through force of circumstances—deserves consideration, and it should be the desire of all those not thus affected to try to show these unfortunates how to overcome their difficulties. One way is to demonstrate to them that happiness must come from within, and that only cultivation and sunshine will make it bloom; that cheerfulness and laughter and good-nature and the disposition to look on the bright side can be developed and matured by practice.

Get next to those around you who have perhaps been forced to hide their real selves in the shadow. Lead them into the sunshine; let your good nature entice theirs to come out; stand by them and stick by them till they have acquired the ability to get rid of their false imagination and their dismal conception of things. This will help them to realize that sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof; and it will enable them to develop strength to stand alone and cope with real trouble when it comes. And it will do you a world of good.

A man has no license to be ill humored, morose, melancholy and grouchy. He holds no valid permission to make people unhappy. He can show no warrant entitling him to be dismal, long-faced and sepulchral. But on the other hand he has scriptural authority to "rejoice and be exceedingly glad." It is his duty to absorb brightness and light-heartedness from nature, from the world of light and beauty which God has given him to enjoy, and it ought to be his highest privilege to make happy those who share this world with him.

"In the tropics," says a Western contemporary, "more food is necessary than in the North." Due, no doubt, to the fact that fewer clothes are required. A little like the opera in this respect,

THE human body, in some irritating way or other insists upon having something more than pure nourishment.—Toledo Blade.

We have observed that this is especially the case in dry towns.

"How can I rise in the world?"

wrote an humble employe in a Jersey powder factory to a New York evening paper the other day. And the editor didn't say a word about matches in his reply, but gave the inquirer lots of good advice all done up in blue ribbon verbiage like good and precise Mr. Bok sends out. And yet some people say that editors are not kind and sympathetic.

ONE hundred and fifty-two murderers pardoned by the governor of Tennessee. And still people wonder at lynchings.

BALLAD OF MISERY AND IRON.

The man who was recently liberated from the Minnesota state prison on account of his poetical ability, and who gave his name as Carter penned the following lines:

Haggard faces and trembling knees,
Eyes that shine with a weakling's hate,
Lips that mutter their blasphemies,
Murderous hearts that darkly wait;
These were they who were men of late,
Fit to hold a plow or a sword.
If a prayer this wall will penetrate,
Have pity on these my comrades,
Lord.

Poets sing of the life at the leas,
In tender verses and delicate—
Of tears and manifold agonies—
Little they know of what they prate.
Out of this silence passionate
Sounds a deeper, a wider chord.
If song be heard through the narrow grate,
Have pity on these, my comrades,
Lord.

The following also is an extract from one of his poems:

But the lamp's alight and the clear,
proud song
Shall reach to the throne of God ere long.
The night must pass, and a strange new dawn
Burst upon field and copse, and lawn:
For out of the warp of shame and tears
I weave the joy of the coming years.

POEMS FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The following poems have been selected by Miss Ella V. Kreig, primary supervisor, for use in the public schools of the county during the month of April.

The Blue-bird.

I know the song that the bluebird is singing,
Out in the apple tree, where he is swinging.
Brave little fellow! the skies may be dreary,
Nothing cares he while his heart is so cheery.
Hark! how the music leaps out from his throat;
Hark! was there ever so merry a note?

Listen awhile and you'll hear what he's saying,
Up in the apple tree swinging and swaying,
"Dear little blossoms down under the snow,
You must be weary of winter, I know;
Hark! while I sing you a message of cheer,
Summer is coming and spring time is here.

"Dear little snowdrop! I pray you arise;
Bright yellow crocus! come open your eyes;
Sweet little violets, hid from the cold,
Put on your mantles of purple and gold;
Daffodils! daffodils! say, do you hear,
Summer is coming and spring time is here."

In April.
The air is soft and balmy,
The grass is growing green,
The maple buds are swelling,
Till their slender threads are seen.
The brown brook chatters gayly
Its rippling course along,
And hark! from distant tree-top
I hear the blue bird's song.

O joyous, gladsome carol,
Exultant, fearless, true!
There is hidden a heavenly message
'Neath that coat of heavenly blue.
My heart thrills as I listen,
God's love is sure and strong.
Thank Him for life's awakening!
Praise for the blue bird's song!

After the winter, springtime,
The sunshine follows rain;
Thou' grief and sorrow chill us,
The heart grows warm again.
From earth to His glad heaven
God will His loved ones bring;
Still after frosts and snow-drifts,
We hear the blue bird's song.

An unidentified man about 70 years old, of respectable appearance, believed to be a Maryland farmer, committed suicide by hanging in the Georgetown Police Station. Every effort to get his name or locate his friends failed, and he was visited every 10 or 20 minutes during the night and morning. At 11.10 this morning, 15 minutes after the last visit to him, he was found hanging by a handkerchief to the bars of a cell door.

Wherever it has been done by the County Commissioners the Road Commissioners have estimated the cost.

Discussion of Affairs in General from Leading Journals of The Country.

The Gov. Patterson Outrage.

(New York Evening Post.)

Anything more outrageous than the pardoning of Col. Duncanson Cooper, one of the murderers of ex-Senator Carmack of Tennessee, has not occurred in many a month. The supreme court of Tennessee had just affirmed Col. Cooper's sentence of 20 years, when the governor instantly pardoned him. This brings both the law and the supreme court into contempt, and is from every point of view a disgrace to the state. The governor says he has read all the evidence; that, in his opinion, neither of the defendants is guilty, and therefore as far as possible he annuls the action of the supreme court. He thus asserts that the supreme court judges are not as good jurists as he, or that they have deliberately connived at a miscarriage of justice. This is interference with a co-ordinate branch of the government, with a vengeance. Moreover in the matter of Col. Cooper's son, for whom a new trial had been ordered, the governor prejudices the case by asserting this man's complete innocence. As to the case itself, there never was a clearer one. Carmack was brutally shot down in the street—as brutally as was Stanford White by Harry Thaw. The governor's action will stimulate the gentle and extensive southern pastime of shooting editors, and will generally be used for decades to come as an excuse for lynchings and private vengeance.

Which Will He Do?

(New York Evening Post.)

The only question now is whether Colonel Roosevelt will abolish the House of Lords or merely reform it.

Be Kind To Census Man

(Washington Herald.)

The butt of many jokes and much good natured ridicule, the census man, nevertheless, has commenced his rounds and will get you, and ought to get you, if you do not watch out.

The census man is no laughing matter, anyway. He is, on the contrary, a highly important personage, and is entitled to much respect. His work should be thorough, and to be that it must be carefully and systematically carried forward. Moreover, unless he has the cordial co-operation of the public, he is going to have an exceedingly hard road to travel.

Be kind, therefore, to the census man. Answer his questions fully, frankly, and freely, no matter how foolish some of them may seem. You may put it down that he is not asking you anything he ought not to. It may appear as if he is trying to poke his inquisitive nose into things over which he has no legitimate concern—that he is seeking to "butt in," as it were, on territory to which he has not been assigned. You will be wrong in reaching that conclusion, however. He is not going to ask you things of an actually frivolous nature, or to gratify any sort of idle curiosity.

"Uncle Sam," it must be borne in mind, likes to keep track of his people. He wishes to know what progress they are making in this line and that. He not only wishes to find out how many of his folks there are, but how they are getting along. Great events may hang on some apparently most obscure interrogations propounded by the census man. Facts and figures far-reaching in effect but await the conscientious enumerator's assembling.

You should remember, too, that it is your census the census man is taking, anyway. You may be a small part of it, but you are every bit as big a part as anybody else on earth. For the purposes of the census, you are as important an individual as the President, and even he has to stand the same rapid-fire of questions that you will.

Be gentle and courteous and cheerful with the census man. He is performing a noble duty!

Inquiry That Answers Itself.

(Lincoln (Neb.) State Journal.)

The state of Massachusetts has just spent $18,000 on an inquiry to establish the responsibility for the high cost of living. The committee may be unable to reach any satisfactory conclusion, but a sight of the expense account helps the average citizen see where a part of the trouble is located.

Those Good Old Days.

There is a good deal of rot, as well as injustice to the present, about the bright traditions of bygone days. As an example: A professor of history announces that 8 cents a day was regarded as good pay for twelve hours' work in the Good Old Days of 1300 in most European nations. But this doesn't in the least disconcert the champions of the past. A professor of economics comes back at the historian with the statement that the European laborer of the year 1300, with his eight hard-earned cents a day, was better off than the modern American workman, who makes from $1.75 to $3.50, depending upon what part of the country he works in. The statement proves nothing but the unfairness of humanity. Prices are doubtless too high, and the man on small wages finds it difficult to keep up with the cost of high living. But the man who doesn't know the American workingman averages to be better off than the laborers of any other country, past or present, doesn't know much. And even Europe has improved a good deal over the old days. There it is possible for the laborer to live better than his ancestors did, and still save something. Besides the disadvantages of being old, or dead, there are plenty of reasons you should be grateful you didn't begin life in the Good Old Days.

Keep The Vote Clean.

(Haverhill Gazette.)

It is a good thing for a member of Congress to explain his vote sometimes, but it is better to vote so that there is no need for an explanation.

Packing The Supreme Court.

(Chicago Public.)

A Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Post, Robert F. Wilson, reports the progressive in politics as believing that "they have driven the standpatners to their last ditch—the United States supreme court," as an intrenchment from which to battle for property privileges against human rights. "Under cover of cabinet housecleaning," according to this correspondent, "there will be a chance to pack the supreme court for privilege for 20 years," by filling four places on that bench which are or are about to be vacant, "with comparatively young men whose whole training and careers have made them essentially hostile to personal rights," and who, "with the new justice, Lurton, will have a majority on the bench of nine members."

Not at all improbable. When the supreme court was placed by the constitution upon an equality with Congress, the seed of judicial despotism was sown. When Judge Marshall raised it above Congress politically by deciding that it was empowered to veto congressional legislation in private lawsuits, the seed began to sprout. Its despotic fruits will be ripe for picking as soon as an aristocratic president and a plutocratic Senate pack it with graduates from the law offices of great corporations. Short of a revolution (or impeachments of a revolutionary character) the United States will then be governed; not by the people through Congress, but by plutocratic corporations through five judges of their own selection. It is possible that President Taft will be the aristocratic president to complete the judicial usurpation which Hamilton designed with so much aristocratic forethought and Marshall fostered so skillfully.

Bad Choice of Subjects.

(Springfield Republican.)

The greatest speech on the subject of federal expenditure on rivers and harbors made in 25 years has been able to attract but a "mere handful" of senators the past few days. The reason is clear. Mr. Burton is talking against big and wasteful appropriations. Let him talk in favor of them, and the Senate chamber would fill to its full capacity.

Gov. Patterson's Infamy.

(Charleston News and Courier.)

There will be some to praise Gov. Patterson of Tennessee for having thus prepared himself for political sacrifice to save a friend the penalty of his crime. There will be some who in such a time of passion and bitter animosity will turn to riot and mob law in despair because of the in-effectiveness of legal machinery. And if they do who is to blame? Will it be natural for men of blood in Tennessee to sit still and see justice trifled with and outraged? Personal vengeance should be unknown to civilization. It is a terrible thing, a thing inexcusable in any case, but men are not stones and this deed of Tennessee's governor is so foul a blow at justice and at law that it will not be strange if dire results follow it, however much we hope they will not.

A few years ago Gov. Patterson was one of the most promising of political leaders in the South. In his hour of trial if he could not be the Roman and remain true to his pledge and oath of service, why could he not have done the thing reasonably? Why could he not have waited a reasonable time before thus strangling decency and making a mockery of law? It matters not that in dealing this terrible blow to law and order he stabbed himself as well. It is within the province of a man to sacrifice himself, but not if in the doing of it he sacrifice the honor of a great state and disgraces it in the eyes of the world. Rarely before in the annals of the several states, has any chief executive so flagrantly violated all sense of decency. Never before has any governor so openly connived at murder and held the courts up to scorn.

Suggestive Questions on the Sunday School Lesson by Rev. Dr. Linscott for the International Newspaper Bible Study Club.

(Copyright 1909 by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D. D.)

April 24, 1910.

Warning and Invitation. Matt. 11: 20-30.

Golden Text. Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. Matt. 11:28.

Verses 20, 21.—Have all sinners the power to repent? Why or why not?

What reason can you give for or against the view, that a sinner will immediately repent, on the presentation of the gospel, unless he resists his good impulses?

Why did not Chorazin and Bethsaida repent under the preaching of Jesus, when it was backed up with such mighty works?

What is the woe which Jesus pronounces upon the unrepentant?

Do sinners now, or will they in the future, suffer any punishment other than the natural results of sin in themselves?

Verse 22—Will there be degrees in the punishment of the lost, and if so, by what method do you suppose it will be gauged?

* How and by what method, are the just rewarded in this life, and will the same method, probably, be operative in the future life? (This question must be answered in writing by members of the club.)

How far will the lowest man in heaven, be from the highest man in hell?

Verses 23, 24.—If Sodom would have repented under the influences which Capernaum rejected, does that, or not, imply that it is simply a matter of the influence whether a sinner repents or not?

If a sinner rejects under one influence and repents under a stronger one, is it right to put the blame of a sinner rejecting the gospel upon the too weak influence brought to bear upon him?

Are there influences, which could be brought to bear, strong enough to cause the most hardened sinner to repent?

Verse 25—Why or why not, are culture, education and scientific research, any necessary aid or hindrance to spiritual discernment?

Why have children, and those with a childlike spirit, a keener spiritual vision than others with more knowledge?

Are uneducated people, with the same kind of moral character, more liable to see and yield to spiritual truth than those who are highly educated?

What are the eyes with which we see spiritual truth, are they of the human intellect, or of the immortal soul, and how do you explain the process?

Verse 26—Why did God make spiritual preception not to depend upon the intellect?

Verse 27—Explain how, and why it is that God has given Jesus the control of all things?

To whom does the Father and Jesus reveal themselves?

Verses 28-30.—To what kind of rest does Jesus invite those who will come unto him?

What is your view as to whether Jesus is a hard or an easy master to please?

Can a sincere person of ordinary attainments, perfectly please God in all things, and then find that Jesus' "burden is light?"

Lesson for Sunday, May 1st, 1910.—Two Sabbath Incidents. Matt. 12:1-14.

MANY people have things that they no longer have use for, but keep them in the house, taking up room and doing no one any good.

It is the aim of THE CHRONICLE to publish as many personal and social items as possible, but it frequently happens that those who have guests visiting them, and those who entertain, fail to send a list of their friends, or an account of these events, to this office. Readers who live at a distance are always interested in what is going on "at home," and for that reason, if for no other, this column should be filled every week. It is of course understood that anonymous contributions will not be published. Names of persons furnishing items will be withheld.

Attachments Piled Up Against Thurmont Man.

Harry E. Stimmel, late of Thurmont, is in financial troubles. A number of attachments against him have been filed at Hagerstown. An attachment for $43.28 was filed by Samuel Emmert for goods bought. In the circuit court three attachments against Stimmel were issued—one by the Dickelman Manufacturing Company, of Ohio, through A. J. Long, for $114, for supplies bought; one by Mrs. W. A. Lynn, Thurmont, for $530.50 on a note dated July 1, 1909; one by Mrs. Henry Sipes, Thurmont, for $502.50, on a six-month note made March 16, 1908. Hoffman & Sebald are attorneys in the note cases. Stimmel's assets at Hagerstown, about $2,000 are pretty well covered with attachments. The same is true of his Thurmont business. His dwelling there carries a heavy mortgage. Before Stimmel left Hagerstown he is reported to have collected some $400 from persons owing him.

Mr. Stimmel had been in business in Thurmont for a number of years, having conducted a box factory, then a laundry, and about two years ago entered the tinning and plumbing business with W. T. Grimes, trading under the name of Grimes & Stimmel. The partnership continued for about one year, at which time Mr. Stimmel took over the entire business.

Well Known Farmer Found Dead.

D. Dorsey Jones, a well-known farmer, of near Libertytown, this county, was found dead Friday morning in bed at the home of his brother-in-law, William Hammond, at Hood's Mills, where he had been visiting. On Sunday last Mr. Jones left for Baltimore on a visit, and Thursday went to Mr. Hammond's, intending to return home later in the week. While not enjoying the best of health he was fairly well, and was not complaining when he retired, and his death was a surprise. Dramatic Club Again At Work.

NEW EMMITSBURG INDUSTRY

The Amanco Cigar Factory Under Management of H. J. Orndorff Starts Business Here.

The newest industry in Emmitsburg, and one that bids fair to meet with great success, is The Amanco Cigar Factory managed by H. J. Orndorff, formerly of Littlestown, Pa. Mr. Orndorff enjoys a well-earned reputation as the producer of high grade cigars and it goes without saying that the output of the local factory will be as much appreciated here as in other places where Mr. Orndorff's registered brands are familiar.

The name of the new establishment, it may be mentioned, is taken from the "Amanco" cigar, a smoke that lovers of good tobacco have enjoyed for a long time. It is a leader and has proved very popular wherever it has been introduced. There are other brands made by Mr. Orndorff which have been very favorably received, among them being "Arthur Edward," "Little Clarence" and the "Orndorff."

Mr. Orndorff has been cordially welcomed into the community, he has been enrolled as a member of the Business Men's Association, and his factory should receive good support from the entire neighborhood.

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR W. M. R. R. EXTENSION

Line to Compete With B. & O. Will be Ten Miles Shorter.—Pittsburgh Man Gets Job.

The contract for building the branch of the Western Maryland from Cumberland, northwest to a connection with the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie at New Haven, Pa., about 83 miles, has been awarded to M. J. Carter, of Pittsburgh whose bid of $12,500,000 covering the whole distance was the lowest.

The new line will be apparently about 10 miles shorter than the main line of the Baltimore & Ohio between these two places. From Cumberland the projected route is directly west, running south of Savage mountains to Salisbury junction, from which point to Connellsville the line will parallel the Baltimore and Ohio. Between Salisbury junction and Confluence the new line will cross the Casselman river five times, and from that point to Confluence it will cross the Youghiogheny three times. It is said the improvements include one tunnel, about a mile long, and several shorter tunnels.

A Day In June.

Softly sway the spreading trees
Here beside the river.
Where the gentle Southern breeze
Sets the leaves a-quiver;
Soothing sounds of drowsy June;
Bees and insects humming,
Fill our souls with peace—but soon
Theodore is coming!

Sheltered from the city's hum;
Far from toll and traffic;
Here no carking care shall come;
None but thoughts seraphic
Shall intrude upon our peace—
Yet a strain keeps strumming
In our ears—nor does it cease—
Theodore is coming!

Prone among the grasses sweet,
Blissfully ignoring Troubles (though the price of meat
Upward still is soaring)
Here we rest in peace—and yet,
Sounds of distant drumming
Warn us, with a direful threat,
Theodore is coming!

CITIZENS AFTER THE SCHOOLS

Better Facilities For Boy in Frederick Promised by Investigators.

Citizens interested in the movement to procure better public school facilities for boys in Frederick decided to go before the School Commissioners May 4 and urge that immediate steps be taken in this direction, as provided for by the last Legislature. In the meantime a special committee will look for a school building with a view of enabling the committee to advise the commissioners.

The movement for better school facilities was inaugurated some weeks ago, and it led to an investigation which revealed conditions far worse than were at first supposed. Since the movement has been so generally ignored it is not improbable that it may lead to radical changes in the school system in Frederick. Sentiment has been expressed in favor of abandoning the present system of schools for girls and boys and establishing a co-educational system. This question will likely be put up to the School Commissioners.

Under the provisions of a bill passed by the recent General Assembly the School Commissioners are authorized to select a site or sites for a building or buildings and to call upon the County Commissioners for the money, the commissioners being then required to issue bonds for an amount sufficient to cover the cost, provided the bond issue shall not be in excess of $75,000. The directors of the Woman's College anticipate moving from the present location in the city to a site beyond the town limits, and it has been suggested that the college buildings will answer the needs of the proposed building.

PITTSBURGH GRAFTER IS FOUND GUILTY AS INDICTED

Extreme Mercy Recommended by The Jury.—First of Series of Trials on Same Charge.

The first of the Pittsburgh grafters to be put on trial was, on Tuesday, found guilty as indicted with a recommendation for extreme mercy. The first guilty grafter was a former councilman, M. L. Swift, Jr.

Immediately after the verdict was read Attorney Roddy Marshall, for the defense, announced that a new trial would be asked. Assistant District Attorney Warren I. Seymour said that Judge Fraser has signified his intention of considering the recommendation for mercy, and also that the District Attorney's office would not oppress Swift, Mr. Seymour further stated that "the immunity bath" is still open to those "small Councilmen" who appear at the District Attorney's office and tell all they know of the graft syndicate.

Swift has been on trial for two days, and the chief witness for the Commonwealth was John F. Klein, whose confession caused the wholesale expose.

F. AND M. 1—MOUNT ST. MARY'S 4

Errors by Visiting Shortstop Spoiled a Splendid Game.

Last Friday Mount St. Mary's defeated at baseball Franklin and Marshall College, of Lancaster, Pa. In many ways the game was very interesting. Watt, pitching for the visitors, and Molino for the locals, were evenly matched and only three hits were made during the game. Up to the sixth inning the score stood 1 to 0 in favor of the visitors. Errors in this inning and in the eighth gave Mount St. Mary's the game. Brenner in left field played a splendid game for Franklin and Marshall.

BOY ELOCUTIONIST'S EFFORT.

"Once there was a little boy whose name was Robert Reece; And every Friday afternoon he had to speak a piece.

So many poems then he learned that soon he had a store Of recitations in his head, and still kept learning more.

And now this is what happened: He was called upon one week, And totally forgot the piece he was about to speak.

His brain he cudgled. Not a word remained in his head! And so he spoke at random, and this is what he said:

"My beautiful, my beautiful, who standest proudly by, It was the schooner Hesperus—the breaking waves dashed by,

Why is the Forum crowded? What means this stir in Rome? Under the spreading chestnut tree there is no place like home

When freedom from her mountain height cried, twinkle little star, Shoot, if you must, this old gray head, King Henry of Navarre!

Roll on, thou dark and deep blue-castled garb of Drachenfels, My name is Norval, on the Gramplan Hills ring out, wild bells.

If you're waking, call me early, to be or not to be. The Curfew must not ring tonight! Oh, woodman spare that tree!

Charge, charge, charge! On, Stanley, on! And let who will be clever! The boy stood on the burning deck but I go on forever."

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving remembrance of a dear husband and father, William Fuss, who died one year ago April 24, 1910,

Oh, how hard we tried to save him,
But our care was all in vain;
Angels came and took him from us;
He is with the Saviour, free from pain.
The golden gates were open
And a gentle voice said "Come."
Then we were left, heart broken,
For God called a dear husband and father home.

MOVEMENT FOR SANE FOURTH ALREADY BEGUN

New York May Celebrate Independence Day in a Quiet Way.—Twenty-Three Governors for Reform.

Mayor Gaynor, of New York, has signified his intention of upholding the Fire Commission in its endeavor to have a "sane Fourth" in the metropolis. An effort will be made to prohibit the sale of fireworks at retail from June 10th to July 10th.

Mrs. Isaac L. Rice, the pioneer crusader against noise and fireworks, has enlisted twenty-three Governors in a national association for a sane observance of Independence Day. Statistics show that total fatalities in the United States from Fourth-of-July casualties last year were 215, while there were no less than 5,307 accidents.

All through the New England States the reform is going to be tried. Toy pistols, giant crackers and other noise-making devices have been denied the small boy in Boston. Springfield began the reform seven years ago and will continue it. Other New England cities will celebrate the day as one "of pleasure and profit" with choral festivities and other saner features.

OIL TRUST AGAIN BEFORE THE SUPREME COURT

Arguments on Tennessee Ouster Decree Appeal Against Standard Oil Company.

Again the great commercial problem which has so perplexed the people of this country has come up before the Supreme Court when, on Wednesday, arguments were made on the appeal from the ouster decree issued by the Tennessee courts against the Standard Oil Company of Kentucky.

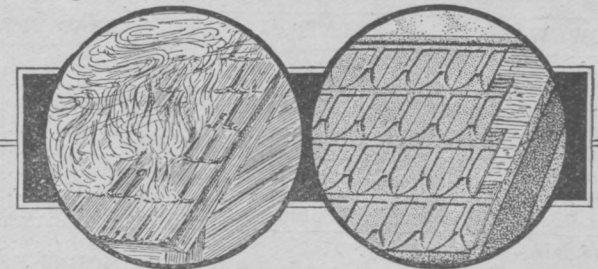

The State claims the Standard Oil Company violated the state antitrust act. The specific complaint is that an agent procured merchants of Gallatin, Tenn., to countermand an order to purchase oil from an opposition company by means of a gift of oil with each barrel purchased from the Standard.

Attorney John J. Vertrees, who defended the Standard, told the court that all dealers in oil tried to get merchants to countermand orders to the opposition dealer, although he admitted that it was not fair trade. He argued that inasmuch as the countermanded order was for oil in another state, the transaction was interstate commerce and if any offense had been committed it was against the Sherman Anti-trust Law.

Eisenberg's "Underselling" Store of Baltimore

The underselling prices at the Eisenberg Store are regulated by a fixed rule. Whatever the prevailing price of an article may be at other stores, the underselling price at Eisenberg's is lower. This applies to everything from a spool of thread to the finest wearing apparel--from a package of clothespins to a set of china. Look over the accompanying list of departments--order anything you desire, and you pay a lower price for it than the same article will cost you anywhere else.

During the Christmas hunt for toys we went to many shops in the city and were surprised to find how many foreign toys can be bought, though of the cheaper sort. There were toy railways, with steam and tram cars to be wound up and run them, and numerous mechanical toys, among them an aeroplane, while clocks of every description seem to be favorites.

The main streets of the city are swept daily and are quite clean, but the poor sweepers do not look like even some of the dirty "White Wings" in our cities. They are most miserably clad and very dirty. The beggars beggar description. You can scarcely conceive how some of them look in their filthy rags.

A few of the shops had a charcoal brazier at which one could warm one's hands, but the stone floors chilled one completely, so the shopping was hurried through as quickly as possible.

Between the 28th of August and the 18th of September we had a scourge of caterpillars. They were bad before and after those dates, but at that time they amounted to a scourge. They attacked the millet first, then the other grains, but the beans were not spoiled by them. Outside our compound were large fields of millet and gao-liang, which, after the rains came, grew so well as to promise unusually fine crops. Standing at the gate of the compound one could hear the myriad jaws of these worms eating away day and night until nothing was left but a few heads of millet that were formed before the worms began, and therefore, were too hard for them to bite. Thus a fraction of the crop was saved.

It sounded like an army of silkworms. You have heard the noise they make on the mulberry leaves. These caterpillars began as little, slender black worms about an inch long, but soon grew to be grandparents, three inches long and very fat. They drove us from the verandas even though the walls were kept swept, and it was only increasing vigilance that kept them out of the house.

In the country, we were told, they overrun some of the poorer homes and got into the food while it was cooking. One of our English friends reported a similar experience--"three one night in the steak and several in the soup." Our compound was invaded in one night and the lawn totally eaten off, but they spared some of the trees, and the vines to some extent. A Chinaman told me he kept them out of his garden, and had many flowers of which he was very fond and tended carefully, by putting lime in the drains.

At this season we are having most delicious pheasants and the stuffed fat ducks that are among the delicacies of Tsinaufu, also little "ice fish," a long, slender fish that is only eaten when there is ice on the ponds. It also is esteemed a delicacy. Since September we have had persimmons daily, and the most luscious persimmons at that. I always was fond of the persimmons one gets in the South in America, and also the few hothouse ones I sometimes ate, but these in China are far and away more delicate in flavor and more delicious than any I ever ate in the United States.

True, we often get the "puckery" ones, but they are so cheap we discard them for those that have no astringency. The Chinese have a way of successfully curing them of that defect, and I do wish they could be cultivated at home in the perfection they are here. I am sure there would be a market for them.

The persimmon orchards are beautiful and the ripening fruit among the dark handsome foliage is really lovely to see. There are also several vegetables unknown at home, and I particularly enjoy the water vegetables--those grown under water. Cabbage here is more delicate than ours, but the celery not nearly so fine. There are food shops everywhere and it looks very appetizing to see great piles of well-roasted chickens and ducks, smoking hot sweet potatoes and various kinds of soups, vegetables and breads, but when one thinks of all these foods exposed to all the dust that blows, and it is seldom no dust is blowing, one hesitates to partake of them, though, as Dr. F. said, "just shut your eyes and Fletcherize."

As I write we are having the icehouse filled with ice three inches thick brought from the ponds north of the city. It comes in four large blocks on each wheelbarrow--two blocks on each side of the barrow--and 60 barrow loads a day is the present record. It will take at least a week to get the icehouse filled at that rate.

The comet is plainly visible in the west soon after sunset. The Chinese all think it presages something terrible, yet notwithstanding the fear of what may happen there are a great many "lucky days," and in walking out one can see almost daily both wedding and funeral processions. If it is lucky to be married on a certain day it is also a day lucky for burial, and dead persons are often kept for burial until one of these lucky days. And that is why fish has been hard to buy lately, as fish is in demand for funeral feasts. I asked a Chinaman if he was going to occupy the same rooms in a certain house that he did last winter. He had been away during the summer. He said he would have to find another lodging this year, as the place had been rented for a dead body that was to be kept there until a certain time should arrive, when the family deemed it to be desirable for interment.

creases in brightness, at first slowly, then quicker and quicker. On May 1st the comet will be fully twice as bright as it is to-day; on May 4th it will be three times and on May 7th four times as bright. On May 19th when at its brightest, it will be thirty-five times more brilliant than it is today.

It will remain a morning object, rising before the sun, till May 18. To find the comet before that date look to the east toward the point where the sun is to rise. The best time to see it will be a little over an hour before sunrise. The comet will rise tail first, the tail pointing directly away from the sun.

The best time to see the comet in the morning will be from May 10th to May 16th, when on the latter date it will be twenty times as bright as it was last Sunday morning. After May 16th the comet draws in toward the sun quickly, and on the evening of May 18th it passes between us and the sun, and after that date it will be in the evening sky, setting after the sun. On May 19th it will be at its brightest and can be seen in the west just after sundown.

For the next few days thereafter the comet should present a magnificent spectacle in the evening sky, with a tail pointing up from the horizon stretching one-third of the distance to the zenith. It will vanish to the unaided eye before July 1st.

From recent measurements the head of the comet is 200,000 miles across and on February 14th its tail was 15,000,000 miles long. To-day its tail is at least double that length.

"If the dimensions of comets are large," says Prof. Mitchell, "their weight is very small. It has been said that if properly compressed a comet could be carried in a man's coat pocket. This statement, however, is probably much exaggerated."

In speaking of its tail Prof. Mitchell says, "the comet's tail is not like smoke left behind by a locomotive, for after the comet passes the sun the tail goes ahead of the comet. Thus it is readily seen that the tail is not a physical appendage that is firmly fixed to the comet's head. So quickly does the tail frisk around when the comet rounds the sun that we can assume only that the tail is continuously formed anew, a new tail not every day but every second.

"The old material that had formed the tail yesterday is left behind in space. As a result of this continuous ejection of matter comets must of necessity be continuously growing smaller; nevertheless we have records of Halley's comet for more than 2000 years at twenty-nine returns to visit the sun, and still it continues to shine apparently with undimmed lustre. Indeed the wonders of the heavens are marvellous!"

ROOSEVELT HIGHLY PRAISED BY HUNGARIAN STATESMAN

Visit to Budapest Memorable On Account of Hearty Welcome by Hungarians to Great American.

Former President Roosevelt was greeted on Monday at the House of Parliament in Budapest as the greatest moral force in public life. A large crowd of officials and members had assembled and there was an enthusiastic demonstration when Roosevelt entered the chamber. Count Apponyi addressed him, praising his work for peace and good government.

"With American policies," he said, "we have nothing to do. You are a private citizen in your own country, but you are received everywhere in Europe with honors befitting the most powerful of rulers."

"This is in recognition of the fact that you are the most conspicuous living representative of moral improvement in public life and public honesty. This is a matter of international concern. This side of your character appeals to all peoples, but particularly to Hungarians, who have long engaged in a struggle of moral forces against material violence."

Col. Roosevelt replied in a happy vein, arousing frequent applause, particularly for his declaration that in American public life he had tried to stand for the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule.

To Entertain Press Association.

The Mayor and City Council of Havre de Grace will entertain the Maryland Press Association Wednesday, April 27, at a fish dinner on the Susquehanna River, and those attending will be given an opportunity to see the catching of shad and other fish by seines, hauled by steam from floats anchored in the river; also to see how the different fish products for which Maryland is noted are handled, and to examine the State fish hatcheries at that point.

A movement is on foot to unseat Senator Beveridge by the Democrats of Indiana.
