FIRST FATALITY AT THE SAN ANTONIO ARMY CAMP

Eye Witness To Death of Aviator Kelley Tells of What He Saw.-Neck Broken and Skull Crushed.

San Antonio, Tex., May 18.-While descending to the earth after an early morning flight above the division camp at Fort Sam Houston about 7.30 o'clock Lieutenant George E. M. Kelley, formerly of the Thirtieth Infantry, recently attached to the aviation end of the United States signal corps, was catapulted from his machine a distance of twenty-five feet and killed.

He fell on his head and in addition to breaking his neck received bad contusions which in themselves would have been sufficient to cause death. The accident happened in a manner new in the annals of aviation.

Lieutenant Kelley had successfully accomplished a flight of several minutes over the aviation field and had attempted to descend. He came to the ground safely, but the machine struck an obstacle and one of the wheels under the the machine at once rose again in the

The aviator let the machine ascend fifty or sixty feet, circled around and again made for a landing. This time he shut off the power alright, but the machine stuck on the broken wheel instead of skipping lightly over the ground and came to an abrupt stop.

Lieutenant Kelley had probably just released his hold prepatory to stepping out of the carriage and was not braced to withstand the shock of the sudden stop. He shot out his seat as if he had been fired from a gun and landed on his head about twenty-five feet away. He died in about an hour. He was flying the new Curtis machine which the government had just purchased at a price of $5000. It was badly damaged. Many men saw the accident, the writer also being an eye witness.

The new Mexican situation is growing more complicated every day and the intelligence of the modern farmer and 13th Infantry is expecting any time to move right up to the Rio Grande River. RAY HENRY.

NO REASON FOR OLD MOTHERS

Wrinkles Will Be a Thing of the Past if the Advice of Mrs. Lewis Is Followed---Her Son Looks Older Than She Does.

ERE is how Mrs. Selma Lewis of the Health and Longevity club has kept herself looking like a young woman of twenty-five, while her son has accumulated a beard and sings bass in the choir of one of the big New York churches.

"First of all," she says, "don't worry. I don't even worry about servants, and I have never had a servant leave me. I have dismissed some, but they never left voluntarily. I teach them how to do their work once. Then I expect them to remember it, and they do. I always thank my servants for what they do for me. I never fuss. Fussing makes a woman old.

"I know that one of the surest signs of youth or age is the condition of the skin. I determined to have a good complexion. I secured it in three ways—first, by slapping my face. Oh, yes, I am quite serious. I don't believe in massage. It drags the skin and loosens it from the muscles, making it hang loosely and giving the appearance of age. But every morning I dip my palms into cold water—ice cold—and vigorously, but not too harshly, slap my face until it tingles.

"My second means of keeping a youthful skin—and I believe that a woman looks as old as her skin—is to go to the window as soon as I rise and, wrapping a blanket-like dressing gown around me, breathe deeply at least thirty times. This empties the exhausted air, for we breathe but shallowy at night, and packs the lung cells with fresh air for the day's beginning.

"One reason for my excellent health, which is a synonym for youth, is that I go to my bath not as a duty, but as a pleasure. I don't go grumbling to it as something that must be got over as soon as possible, but as a privilege, a joy. I use soap—plenty of it—being careful what soap I use and sure it is pure, and I scrub my body and splash about in the tub. I enjoy every second of the bath. I rub my body thoroughly with a big coarse but soft

"I eat simple food in moderate quantities. I exercise, not violently, but in moderation, preferring walks by the river to any other form of exercise. I am inclined to believe that the athletic girl overdoes it a little.

"In the evening I make my toilet carefully and slowly. I believe in looking just as nice for my family as I would for King George and Queen Mary. I massage my scalp for five minutes. I give my face three baths—first with a good cold cream, then with soapy water, then with witch hazel. The witch hazel is a good astringent and tonic for the skin. I never think of anything unpleasant as I fall asleep, for the thought with which we fall asleep follows us through the night, and the worried mind makes a wrinkled face."

The pity of it is that the only way a bridesmaid can keep it as a souvenir of her dearest friend's happiest day is to have it photographed. The above sentence has something of a Milesian flavor, but the girl who has to watch her beautiful remembrance wither will know exactly what is meant.

A WEDDING FRACAS

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Many years ago I took passage aboard the steamer Indian Belle from Cairo to New Orleans. We were about to swing off when a man of the real old fashioned ante bellum planter type came hurrying over the plank and up into the forward saloon, where I happened to be standing at the time. Reaching the top of the companion way, his eyes caught the Tame of the boat, which was painted on a panel, and he stood with mouth and eyes wide open.

"Upon my hono'!" he exclaimed.
Just then a negro waiter passed, carrying some glasses on a tray.

"And if there isn't Joe too! Why, Joe, you rascally nigge'; yo' don't mean to tell me yo're alive an' on this boat!" Joe studied the newcomer awhile, then said, "I disremember yo', cunnel."

"Why, Joe, it was right thar"—pointing—"that I stood to be ma'led in a hurry just as this boat was cutting loose from Memphis on June 20, 1860.

And, Joe, you waited on me an' my bride at the wedding suppe'."

"Fo' Gawd! Air yo' de gentleman what wor married dat day? I wouldn't 'a' knowed yo'."

By this time several passengers had gathered around, all intent upon the passenger who had evidently stumbled on a boat on which he had enacted a romance.

"Colonel," I ventured, "would you mind telling us about it?"

slap my face until it tingles.

"My second means of keeping a youthful skin—and I believe that a woman looks as old as her skin—is to go to the window as soon as I rise and, wrapping a blanket-like dressing ind the bullet holes afterwards."

"I shall be ve'y happy to do so, sah," was the reply. "The'e was a fracas connected with the event, gentlemen. I'll give yo' the story, and I think unde'neath the paint and putty I can find the bullet holes afterwards.

"I was living at Memphis at the time, and if I do say it myself I was the biggest fool in the town. A young lady-the daughte' of Majo' Whitman, one of the most high toned gentlemen in the south and a ve'y influential citizen-was silly enough to retu'n an affection I conceived fo' he'. I neve' could unde'stand why she did so unless it was on account of he' youth, fo' she was at the time not quite sev-The'e's no wonde' her fathe' objected to my attentions, fo' I did nothing but drink mint juleps and play the American game with young bloods of my own age.

"Majo' Whitman met me one day, and, says he: 'William, if I catch yo' coming round my daughte' any mo' I'll squeeze a few chunks o' lead into yo' vitals. If yo' don't want em tha' yo'd bette' keep away.'

"'Majo',' I replied, 'if yo' do yo'll get rid of one who is enti'ely unwo'thy of so beautiful, accomplished and vituous a lady as yo' angelic daughte'. Good mawning, suh.'

"At that age, gentlemen, if a man is a natu'al bo'n fool he has the sense not to drag a lady he loves down with him. Besides, the'e's not much to expect from a young woman ba'ely seventeen. But I assu'e yo' it was she who proposed an elopement. Thank heaven, I have not that sin on my conscience. One afte'noon when we we'e sitting on the rive' bank we saw a steame' coming down, and when she came opposite us we noticed that he' name was Indian Belle—this ve'y boat, gentlemen.

"What did we two little fools do but make up ou' minds to run away on he'. I give you my wo'd, gentlemen, I hadn't fou' bits in my pocket, and the young lady had but three levys. Well, suh, while the boat was rounding to head up stream to make a landing we we'e going down to get aboa'd.

"It so happened that a friend of Majo' Whitman saw us go ove' the plank What did the mis'able sneak do but go off to find the majo' to tell him that his daughte' was going aboa'd the Indian Belle with a man whose principal occupation was drinking julips. suh. But it was not till the boat was leaving that the majo' was found. was standing on the gua'd with my sweethea't when I saw my prospec tive fathe' in-law coming on the ru. and gitting out his gun as he ran. Miss Whitman screamed, and a gentleman standing beside us took in the situation.

"'The'e's no time to lose,' he said.
'yo' must be ma'ied or pretend to be if yo' wish to beat the old man.'

"He led us inside, put a white handke'chief around his neck, stood us up thar'—pointing—"and made believe he was going through the se'vice. His greeted with a bullet that sung just ove' my head and bu'ied itself in the wood. Natu'ally I returned the compliment, directing my weapon at the majo', whose head was just above the companion way, fo'tunately missing him.

"Well, suh, those standing about inte'fe'ed, the supposed bride ran and threw he' a'ms about he' fathe' and brought him round. We soon found a cle'gyman aboa'd and we'e really ma'ied. Befo' the end of an hou', sitting round a table in the ladies' cabin at suppe', the majo' with a julep befo' him, had one a'm around my neck and th' othe' round that of his daughte', and that rascal Joe thar was waiting on us.

that rascal Joe thar was waiting on us."

The gentleman then proceeded to search for the bullet holes and found them.

"Does any one here know who the gentleman is?" I asked of a bystander.

"Know who he is! Well, I reckon. That's Gene'al B., one of the big southe'n commande's in the late shooting match between the no'th and the south."

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scoth-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.-Maryland Manual issued by Board of

HOW TO "GET THERE."

In another month thousands of graduates will be pouring forth from schools and colleges to face the world and seek their level in it. Many, having by special courses prepared themselves for particular professions or specific avocations, will enter the activities of these several callings with earnestness and the determination to go to the very top. Others, with no definite purpose but with nevertheless a desire to succeed, will probably at the beginning "take life as it comes," trying

They retrace their steps and set out for the heights again; but presently some transient attraction lures them off into a side path, and they wander on until bogged in a marsh of futility."

These are the visionary persons-without perseverance and concentration. They are full of imagination and they possess, perhaps, a certain amount of initiative, but they lack singleness of purpose and grit, and without these to "get there" is impossible. The division was disabled for the intended march to Leon Springs, by a hurricane that laid the camp low. The storm smote the tents about midnight. One of the officers of the division headquarters line awoke to find his tent dancing a jig about its poles in a sixtymile gale. He lit a lantern and stepped outside to tighten the guy ropes. His night clothes whipped into a snarl about his head and he set his lantern down to fight with his linen. When he recovered his undress his light was tumbling across the field in the distance like a will-'o-the-wisp. While he was chasing the lantern the rest of the camp was lit up by a flutter of lightning that gave the impression of some of the moving pictures of the camp San Antonians have been seeing in the theatres. #### A PERSONALS.

It is the aim of THE CHEONICLE to publish as many personal and social items as possible, but it frequently happens that those who have guests visiting them, and those who entertain, fail to send a list of their friends, or an account of these events, to this office. Readers who live at a distance are always interested in what is going on "at home," and for that reason, if for no other, this column should be filled every week. #### Misuses of the Comma.

The point on which most writers are at odds with the compositor is the comma. It is not that he misplaces it so outrageously, as in that sentence which was the cause of many tears in a Berlin newspaper office some years ago: "Prince Bismarck walked in on his head, Mr. Levi Frock, of Taneytown, spent "Prince Bismarck walked in on his head, Sunday with Mr. David Mackley and the well-know cap on his feet, large brightly polished top-boots on his fore-brightly polished top-brightly polish brightly polished top-boots on his fore-Mr. J. P. Delphey spent last Sunday head, a dark cloud in his hand, the inevitable walking stick in his eye, a menacing glance." No, but he is too fond the M. E. Church on Sunday evening, of this particular punctuation point. He takes a delight in breaking up the flow of a sentence with his artificial NEWS FROM THE TRACT flow of a sentence with his artificial pauses. We all say, "Why then did you do it?" in one breath. It is the each other and will be sold as a whole. Mr. Russell Durr visited friends in this vicinity over Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Overholtzer has returned home after spending sometime with her significant spending spend after spending sometime with her sister, Miss Ruth Overholtzer.

Miss Ethel Overholtzer has returned home after spending a week with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Overholtzer.

The farmers are busy planting corn. A little rain would help the work.

Mr. Edward Clodd, in his memority of a compositor who dissented very strongly from that writer's moral philosophy, and had to "set up" an interview with Allen in which the sentence occurred "He is happily married." He salved his conscience by printing it "He is, happily, married." London Chronicle.

Short Crop of Cow Peas.

Prices Are Going Up.

The enormous demand for Cow Peas last year carried the price very high, and as the crop is very short and the acreage is rapidly extending, there are many indications which point to much higher prices as the sowing season approaches. Whip-Poor-Will Cow Peas.

The Whip-poor-wills are generally preferred in the Central and Southern States. They are bush form, early maturing and especially desirable for Peas.

New Era Cow Peas. New Era's are a little earlier and make more vine than the Whip-poor-wills.

Wonderfuls, Clay and Mixed Cow Peas. For Hay, the Wonderfuls or the Mixed Cow Peas are more productive, they should always be planted with an occasional grain of corn, Sorghum Seed, Kaffir Corn etc., which will pre-vent the vine from getting damaged by coming in contract with the ground.

Black Cow Peas.

Black Cow Peas are a little later in maturing than the Clays, they make a good growth of vine, are exceptionally good for medium or poor land and will stand almost any amount of wet weather without injury. We can also supply Shinney Peas, Red Rippers, Blackeye Peas and Soja Beans.

A CIPHER NOTE

By MARGARET BARR

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"I have perfect confidence in my husband," said Mrs. Ackley to Mrs. Bradshaw, "and the reason why I have confidence in him is because he's so careless. If he had occasion to keep anything from me he couldn't do it. For instance, if he should receive a love letter from any illegitimate source he would be sure to have it in his

"But how would that give him away?" asked Mrs. Bradshaw.

"Why, my dear woman, there's not a night when he is in bed and asleep that I don't go through his pockets."

"It's the only safe way with men." Time came when Mrs. Ackley in going through her husband's pockets received a shock. She came upon a bit of paper on one side of which was her husband's name written in a woman's hand, on the other certain mysterious figures-1, 12, 9, 3, 5.

Mrs. Ackley turned pale. She loved her husband notwithstanding the fact that she thought it necessary to watch him. She had gone through his pockets for years dreading that she would find something to convince her of his inconstancy, and at last the blow had fallen. She almost wished she had remained in ignorance. Possibly she would have burned the message had not curiosity interposed to prevent her doing so. She wiped a tear from her eye and looked at the paper again. There were the figures 1, 12, 9, 3, 5. Doubtless every figure stood for some loving word.

Getting her feelings under control, she began to puzzle over the figures with a view to their interpretation. It was the first day of May: therefore the figure I might refer to the day of the month. But 12 came next, and the twelfth month is December. By beginning at the other end the theory fitted better. May was the fifth month. The figure 5 coincided with the month exactly. The next figure, 3, might stand for the day of the month, 9 possibly marking the hour. The figures indicated that the sender wished Mr. Ackley to meet her on the 3d day of May (the next day but one) at 9 o'clock. Twelve might mean the termination of the meeting, the hour it would be necessary for the woman to leave him. But was it not from 9 to 12 in the morning or 9 to 12 in the evening. "I have it," she exclaimed. "The figure 1 indicates that it is the first 9 to 12 of the hour in the day or in the morning. Of course it wouldn't do for them to meet in the evening. I might have something to of the known world, had they not some say about that. In the morning, when he is at his office, I am supposed to be in London Spectator. powerless. We shall see.

Having doubts about the correctness of this deciphering of the message, she tried another theory. Possibly the figures might spell a word that would mean a whole sentence. She tried several plans and at last hit upon one making the figures represent letters. The first figure was 1, and A is the first letter of the alphabet.

"Eureka!" she exclaimed Then she read, 1, A; 12, L; 9, I; 3, C;

5. E-Alice. "Aha," she cried, "so the name is

She thought over all the women she knew, but none was named Alice. Her rival could not, therefore, be one of her friends or acquaintances. She must be some one her husband had met whom she, his wife, knew nothing about. She would unearth this plot, but she would not spoil it by letting it be known that she possessed

When Ackley came home for dinner and gave his wife the usual marital kiss he noticed that her lips were cold. "Don't feel very well, dear?" he ask-

Mrs. Ackley declared that she was perfectly well. Nevertheless, though she tried to appear as usual, she failed. The next day Mrs. Ackley, after breakfast, went to her mother's to remain for the day. She could not bear to remain in the house with the man who was deceiving her. She telephoned him during the day that she would remain away all night. Mr. Ackley passed the evening at his club, went home at 9 and the next morning, having breakfasted, went to his office. There he found a note from a man with whom he had an important business deal asking him to be at a certain place at 9:30 a. m. Mr. Ackley left his office without saying where he was going. He did not return till half past

When he did return he found his wife in the office looking like a thundercloud. She had been there three hours "nursing her wrath to keep it warm," and an accumulation of vindictiveness had placed her in a condition frightful to behold. Those in the office were waiting an explosion. When Mr. Ackley entered he looked at his wife, astonished. Without a word she took from her portemonnale the cipher message and handed it to him. "Miss Quimby," said the gentleman after glancing at it, addressing his stenographer, "there are the figures of the new safe combination you wrote out for me and which I couldn't find yesterday." Then to his wife, "Have you had your lunch, dear?"

Mrs. Ackley went out quietly with her husband. What was said between them the office force did not know. They inferred that the memorandum of the safe combination had something to do with Mrs. Ackley's long wait at the office.

Daddy's Bedtime

Tricks

ERE is a story which daddy told his two youngsters, Jack and Eveyln, one evening and which made them laugh very heartily. Perhaps it will amuse other children:

very fond of hunting. One day he decided to go out to shoot birds, but he did not have a hunting dog. So he went to a dealer in dogs and bought one, which new debutant, the dasheen, which was the dealer said was a very good hunting dog. "Of course you know that it is the duty of a hunting dog to get out into the field ahead of his master and look for birds. When he sees one he has to point at it with his nose, so that his master may also see it. And when the bird is shot it is the work of the dog to get it and bring it to the man. "But after this man and this dog had been in the field a short time the man found that the dog would not leave his side. When he said to the dog 'Seek, seek!' the dog stood on his hind legs and began to dance. "That is very pretty,' said the man, 'but we shall not get any birds this way.' So he said again to the dog, 'Seek, seek!'

"This time the dog stretched himself out on the ground and 'played dead.' 'Come, get up!' said the man, but the dog did not move. Then the hunter became angry and took a stick to beat the dog. When the dog saw the stick in the man's hand he immediately jumped over it. 'Ah, I see,' said the disappointed hunter. 'I have bought a trick dog instead of a hunting dog. We may as well go home.'

"Ou the way home the dog began to point, but when the man found that it was only a frog he had pointed at he was disappointed. But he caught the frog, took him home and put him in a jar with some water.

"Soon afterward the hunter received a visit from a friend of his who was a wise man. When this man saw the frog he said:

"'Let us make the frog useful. He will serve us as a barometer to tell us whether it will rain or not. Bring me two small, flat pieces of wood, a dozen matches and two bullets."

"With the two pieces of wood for sides and the matches for rungs the wise man soon made a small ladder. To the ends he tied the bullets to keep the ladder upright against the side of the jar. Immediately the frog climbed to the top of the ladder. 'Ah,' said the wise man, 'it is going to rain. You had better stay home. When the frog climbs to the top it will surely rain. When he remains at the bottom there will be fine weather, and if he climbs balfway up you had better carry your umbrella when you go out."

Wornout City Man Found Life For Family In Wornout Farm.

This is an article not only for farmers, but for the tired out city man who sees nothing in the future but failure and destitution. It also shows that any one with a little capital, good common sense and practical energy can solve the problem of making the farm pay. It is condensed from a department of agriculture bulletin prepared by Scientific Assistant John H. Ar-

The father of a family was in 1892 sixty years old and so worn out by the business struggle that he had to abandon all work. He had a wife and ten children, seven of them boys, all less than twenty-one years old. He had $10,000 and with it bought a 300 acre rundown farm in Pennsylvania and started the first year $8,679 in debt. Then the whole family went vigorously and intelligently to work.

After seventeen years, during which time all the children had been educated at college and a beautiful home built, the farm books at the end of 1909 showed the place to be worth $39,109 and the net income for the year

The father is happy and healthy and at seventy-seven supervises every detail of the farm; the wife, who has never kept a servant, is hale and hearty; two sons are lawyers, one is a minister, one a professor, one a civil engineer and one a farmer, but the first five are putting their savings into nearby farms which they will later farm themselves.

HAIL TO THE DASHEEN.

It's a New Royal Relative to the Potato and Will Grow In Marshy Land.

The great event in the recent annual dinner in Washington of the Na-"About a hundred years ago there lived in France a man who was | tional Geographic society was the ushering into the gastronomic world of a served stuffed in place of the orthodox potato. The cordial welcome given to this new arrival by the 500 guests present at the dinner has a distinct economic significance to the proprietors of lands that are too wet for anything but ducks and rice. The dasheen is a tuber of chemical content similar to that of the potato, and it has for many centuries been a staple crop and article of food in China, Japan, the Pacific islands, Africa and the West Indies.

In appearance it resembles an undersized cocoanut, having a similar reddish brown color and a coating of fine, short, hairy fibers. The tubers average about the size of a duck's egg.

Here are some of the impressions overheard of the dasheen: "Artichoke flavor," "like salsify," "sweet potato without sugar," "halfway between a sweet and a white potato," "a sort of gamy potato," "texture mucilaginous," "reminds me of a potato cooked with cheese," "decided improvement over potatoes grown on river bottom land."

The commercial prospects of the dasheen are signified by the fact that two large metropolitan hotels have entered orders for as large a portion of the 1911 crop as can be spared.
