CLOSING WEEK AT COLLEGE

BRILLIANT OCCASION

Twelve Graduates Received Their Degrees

ANNUAL SERMON BY DR. TIERNEY

Exercises Ushered in by Solemn High Mass.—Rt. Rev. Edward P. Allen, D. D., Former President, in Attendance and Confirms Class.

The festivities that mark the closing week of the scholastic year at Mount St. Mary's College with each recurring year gather greater interest and gain in brilliance. This is particularly true of the one hundred and third commencement which ended on Wednesday when the graduating class received their degrees. His Eminence James, Cardinal Gibbons, presided over the exercises that were graced by the presence of many church dignitaries who came to honor the Mountain, to encourage the young men who bade the institution farewell and to congratulate the Cardinal whose fifty years of service to his country and his church, closing as it does with this year, has called forth expressions of felicitation from the highest and lowliest of his fellow citizens.

Never did a brighter sun shine on the dimpled surface of St. Anthony's Lake than that which peeped over the blue hills in front of the college into the dormitories and rooms, on the morning of Wednesday, June 14th, and awoke the boys from their "late sleep" to participate in the 103rd annual commencement of the Old Mountain. "Exi" Day closed one of the most successful years ever experienced at Mt. St. Mary's College, while the events of that day and the few preceding days will ever linger in the fond recollection of all who were in attendance. Fr. Bradley, the acting president, and his worthy assistants in the Faculty and in the Seminary, had labored long and earnestly that the commencement exercises might eclipse those of former years. The students looked forward to the "great day" with mingled feelings of sorrow and delight; sorrow in the knowledge that, in many cases, the ties of fellowship formed during the year must be broken on the morrow; delight in the fact that a year's work had been successfully accomplished, and that home with its pleasures awaited their return. To the "Old Mountaineers" present, there came back the memories of bygone days, when they, too, had looked upon "Exi" as their "red-letter day." On the whole, there was that feeling of joviality so congenial to all sons of the Mountain, and at the same time characteristic of them. Nothing marred the pleasure of the day. Everything had on its gala attire. The groves by the College "lane," St. Anthony's Lake, and the Mountains were especially charming after the heavy rains of Sunday and Monday, and beautifully prepared to make new acquaintances and greet their student lovers of yore.

As early as Saturday evening old students began to arrive, and by Tuesday evening indications pointed to a far larger gathering than in a number of years. The exercises of this important week at the College began at the Solemn High Mass in the new College Church on Sunday morning, when Rev. Dr. Tierney preached an eloquent sermon. His words to the home-going students were in part as follows:

"The first thought which arises to our minds on the close of this scholastic year is one of gratitude, and a prayer of gratitude should ascend from us to God. We are not here enjoying the blessings of an education as a result of our own merits; we are here because God so willed it. During the year you boys have ever been surrounded with dangers, yet you are here strong and well, while others throughout the world have perished. You are still striving upward and onward, and all through the providence of God. Hence our first prayer is one of gratitude. To-day we must look forward; you are going forth, for vacation is at hand. Vacation is a splendid thing; I would not do away with it. We must from time to time come in touch with parents, friends, the world. We must learn from the world, the book of humanity.

"You have closed your books, but do not forget the lessons which you have learned from them. You are going to your parents; your hearts ought to be with your parents, and no doubt they are with them already. Be guided by their wisdom and love; be obedient to them. We can learn from heroes of Pagan literature as well as of Christian. Aeneas is an example of piety and filial obedience.

"You are going among your friends;

let them see that you are a product of a Catholic college engaged in the great work of Catholic education. You will be watched; your conduct, your words will be studied. Let your life be a proof that you have grown better. Though young in years, you must be old in wisdom. Never follow a boy who gives you bad advice; while you think you are winning his respect, he will be only laughing at you. Do your duty and you will win the respect of all. Be pure in words and actions, and you will be a proof before the world that Catholic education means something.

"Neglect not your prayers, for your own strength is not sufficient. You need the strength given by God, and to obtain it you must pray. You are going forth from this mountain-side to sections where there are more dangers of sin, more temptations. Hence the more reason why you should pray and approach the sacraments frequently. It may be a little hard on you at times to leave your friends, your playfellows, but the performance of your religious duties will give you more joy, more strength of character, than mingling in gay society. To-day is Trinity Sunday; we are consecrated to the Father, the Son, and to the Holy Ghost. Your promises in baptism should be renewed to-day. Consecrate yourselves to the Holy Trinity and promise to be faithful to the graces given to you. During your vacation look up to God; you will see Him everywhere; in the woods; for as the poet says, the trees have tongues; in the mountains, among their ledges, for there are books in stones. May God the Father bless you; may God the Son guide you, and may God the Holy Ghost inspire you and teach you. May the Holy Trinity protect you and enable you to perform well the work which God has willed for each and every one of you to reach your destiny both here and hereafter."

On Monday, at 6 A. M., Rt. Rev. Edward P. Allen, D. D., conferred the Order of Deacon on Mr. John B. Conroy, Diocese of New York. At 8 A. M. Rev. Fr. Bradley celebrated Solemn High Requiem Mass for the dead Alumni of the College. Rev. William Whalen assisted as deacon, and Rev. John Chatagnon as sub-deacon.

Confirmation Services.

Following the ordination exercises, the sacrament of confirmation was administered by Bishop Allen, of Mobile, to the following students of the College: Lawrence Lofton Cobb, Albert Joseph Ancerawicz, Edward Louis Zimmer, Oscar Raphael Farmer, Charles Alphonsus McCubbins, Walter James Joyce, Michael Francis Kearney, Ryland Thomas Michael and Forest Charles O'Leary.

Blessing of the Bell.

The blessing of the majestic bell, presented by Mrs. Anna Malloy, mother of several graduates of the Mountain, took place after the ceremony of the ordination. Rt. Rev. Edward P. Allen, assisted by other dignitaries, was consecrator.

Very Rev. John N. Codori, V. F., pastor of St. Columbus' Church, Johnstown, Pa., preached an eloquent sermon, which those who had the privilege of hearing, will be glad to have in permanent form. Fr. Codori said:

Rev. Codori's Sermon.

"I came" says our Blessed Lord, "to turn out the prince of this world, to destroy his works and to take away sin or evil." (St. John xii, 31.)

"Christ, our Lord, can banish the devil and deliver man and the things of man from the malign influence of the devil, and this power which He exercises, He can delegate to those whom He designates as His representatives. On this principle rests the power and the usage of blessings in the Catholic Church. She is possessed with the all-absorbing desire to bring man and the creature back to primitive sanctity, hence she blesses them. This blessing frees creation from the oppressive tyranny of the devil, converts hideous disorder into attractive harmony, and delights the face of creation with the benign and resplendent smile of the Creator. Man becomes a new being; heaven and earth are renewed, and all creatures exclaim with rapturous voices, 'Holy, holy, holy is the God of hosts: all things are full of His glory.' In the language of the Church, to bless a thing means to draw it from its natural state, to separate it from common and ordinary purposes, to change it from profane to holy, in a word, to devote it to God.

"The blessing of things pertaining to divine worship antedates apostolic times and comes down to us with the witness of centuries. When God created the universe He blessed it, and He blessed the day on which He completed the work of creation, and decreed that it be observed as holy, and as a day of worship.

"Aaron, the great high priest, was blessed by Moses. The vestments used in the temple of the Most High God were blessed, and, so also were the victims that were offered as a pleasing sacrifice, to the God of heaven and earth.

"The gorgeous temple of Solomon, reared to the honor and glory of the God of Israel, was dedicated with every solemnity and blessing, and the greatness and glory of the presence of God filled the holy place, and He declared it consecrated to Himself.

"But in the New Law we have the special fruits of the blessings invoked by the Church through the ministry of His priests. Now all is reality, whereas, the ceremonies and sacrifices of the Old Law were but types and figures.

"Christ came, and efficacy of blessing came with him: hence, every blessing is invoked through the merits of Jesus Christ, the Mediator.

"To-day we shall witness the blessing of a bell, which is to be attended with every solemnity which the beautiful ceremonial of our holy religion will permit. The bell when blessed is to be enthroned in the graceful tower which adorns this majestic church, and its every melodious note is to be sounded for the glory and service of God exclusively, therefore, it is fitting that it be sanctified by the blessing of God's Church.

"The use of bells in the service of the church is distinctively of Christian origin. Prior to Christianity they were never employed for this purpose. Early in our era it was deemed a symbol and safeguard of independence that a city be allowed to construct a tower or belfry. Whoever was the progenitor of this custom, or whatever be its origin, it is obvious that the transition of this practice to the services of the Christian religion was easy and natural. It bespoke a new liberty and independence, namely, that based upon revealed truth, which makes us free in a more profound sense than can be attributed to any political enfranchisement.

"From the time when bells began to be employed in the service of the church the custom obtained of conferring on them the name of a saint, to whose honor and veneration they were dedicated, and prior to their use in this respect, a ceremony of blessing or consecration was observed which the Fathers have not hesitated to dignify with the name of Baptism.

"The bell before us is dedicated to the patron of the Mountain according to this inscription: 'Mary Immaculate, I was presented to thee by Anna Malloy, in memory of her husband. Rt. Rev. Edward Patrick Allen, Bishop of Mobile, anointed me June 13th, 1911.' Thus in our beautiful ritual it is invested with a living consciousness; it is blessed with oil and chrism that are employed in the administration of sacraments; it is to perform the functions of a consecrated minister of God. It is to be a voice whose sound will summon the faithful to all that is most sacred under heaven—the word of God, the offices, assistance at and participation in the Holy Mysteries.

"Its tones, though inarticulate, bereft of human speech will send forth many a saving message over the valley and along the mountain, speaking in accents clear and authoritative, and "Sprinkling with holy sounds the air, as the priest with his hyssop sprinkles the congregation and scatters blessings upon them."

Thus spoke the Fathers of an Ancient Council: let bells be blessed as trumpets of the Church Militant, by which the people are assembled to hear the word of God; the clergy to announce His mercy by day, this truth in nocturnal vigils, that by their sound the faithful may be moved to prayer and that the spirit of decorum may be increased.

"In one of the prayers recited in the blessing the Consecrator says: "O God, who by Moses, Thy servant, didst command silver trumpets to be made, in order that by the sweetness of their sound, the people might be moved to come to the sacrifice and to make ready to pray to Thee, grant that this instrument, which is intended for Thy Church may be sanctified by Thy Holy Spirit, so that, having been struck, and yielding a melodious and agreeable sound in the ears of Thy people, their faith and fervor may increase from day to day; that the snares of their enemies, hail, and rain, storm whirlwinds and tempests may be scattered; and that the dreadful effects of lightning may be prevented. Hold back by Thy Almighty hand the enemies of salvation, and grant that, on hearing the bell, they may tremble at the sight of the cross of Jesus Christ, at whose name every knee bends in heaven, on earth and in hell."

"The invocations contained in this prayer suggest to us the reason why our Fathers in the faith rang bells to avert storms. Our learned and spiritual philosophers ridicule their simplicity by the argument that the clash of bells would shake a column of air, and, thus, call forth a thunderbolt. But they, in their irreligion, find in the sound of a bell only a material sound. Our Fathers recognized in the peal of the church bell, a prayer, a cry of alarm, an earnest supplication to the Master of the elements, a vocal prayer, as the oration above intimates.

"What impressions the sound of this bell will make on all those who are to be within reach of its musical pealings: It will beat in unison with the pulsing of merry-hearted youths who will enter the church at its bidding to consecrate their happiness to the Giver of all good gifts.

"To those it will be a summons from labor or pastime at morn, or noon or dewy eve to pay the tribute of their love to the first and best of God's creatures, Mary Immaculate, under whose patronage they are preparing for the future in time and eternity.

"It will charm away, as with a knell, the evil spirits of gloom and discouragement and dispondency in young hearts which begin to feel and forecast the weight of those varied problems the present and the future offer for solution, as it calls aloud in the air to men to make up for the deficiencies of our weak, frail nature by fervent appeals to the God of nature.

"It will sob with mournful cadence in memory's halls as the old student recalls how the mortal remains of a beloved companion or professor were amid tolling, borne to rest, mayhap, in the hallowed plot of God's Acre where the Saints of the Mountain are awaiting the resurrection.

"Its sweet and solemn and celestial tones will thus twine unyieldingly around the holiest and most tender memories of the days of youth spent at the Mountain.

"Yes, especially those memories that revitalize the heavenliest hours of earth that are devoted to our patron's honor as worthiest of her incense breathing morn and sweet dewy evening, when mountain and valley, forest and meadow grow jubilant with supernal song.

"The true mountaineer in his reveries never sunders the college from its patroness, the spiritual from the material boon, St. Mary from the mountain, for this is the Mountain of St. Mary thus his tender retrospect readily merges into a sense of gratitude that expresses itself in heartfelt benediction on his old College Home.

'Ave Maria! blessed be the hour!

The time, the clime, the spot where I so oft

Have felt that moment in its fullest power

Sink o'er the earth so beautiful and soft,

While swings the deep bell in the distant tower,

Or the faint dying day-hymn stole aloft And not a breath crept through the rosy air,

And yet the forest leaves seemed stirred with prayer.

Ave Maria! it is the hour of prayer! Ave Maria! 'tis the hour of love! Ave Maria! may our spirits dare Look up to thine and to thy Son's above Ave Maria! oh that face so fair!

Those down cast eyes beneath the Almighty dove—

What though 'tis but a pictured image? strike—

That painting is no idol, 'tis too like."

Elocution Contest.

The annual Elocution Contest was held in the College gymnasium Tuesday evening. Always anxiously awaited, the suspense was greater than ever this year, since the contestants were very equally matched and well

Commencement Exercises Proper.

Wednesday morning all was hustle and bustle within the college precincts; students hurrying to and fro, visitors crowded into the gymnasium and members of the alumni association collected in groups relating reminiscences of the days that were past. The exercises began at 9.30 and were presided over by His Eminence James, Cardinal Gibbons. On the Cardinal's right sat Rt. Rev. Bishop Allen and Very Rev. Wm. Byrne D. D. On the left of the platform sat the college professors and members of the alumni. When all were seated the graduating class of 1911 filed in to the strains of "Commemoration March," and amid the applause of their companions took their seats on the platform to the right of the Cardinal.

The exercises of the day were of a high standard. There were four speeches delivered, all of them upon the topics of the hour. The gentlemen handled their subjects skilfully, evincing originality of thought, and proving from their style of speaking the earnest labor they had spent in preparation for the event.

The music, too, both vocal and instrumental, surpassed anything of the kind ever rendered at the Mountain. Much was due to the painstaking efforts of Prof. Braun and the earnest labors of the members of the orchestra and glee club.

Mr. William H. Sheridan's speech on the Portuguese uprising of last October when that country changed its form of government was particularly strong. Mr. Sheridan declared that the uprising planned in Lisbon and carried out by dupes in Lisbon was hypocritical in its announced purpose. Of De Costa, the Minister of Justice, Mr. Sheridan said in part:

"This wonderful statesman, when the revolt was in progress, instead of formulating a constructive policy and bringing order out of chaos, wasted time in making a vain display of authority by cross-examining and browbeating women and young convent girls. Surrounded by an admiring throng of newspaper writers, the brag-gart Alfonso Costa carried on this disgraceful burlesque of justice. As one writer caustically remarks, 'How splendidly Citizen Alfonso cowed them with his magnetic eye, overwhelmed them with his imperious glance, made them tremble at his Napoleonic gestures.' To men of such character has the destiny of unfortunate Portugal been entrusted."

"The question naturally arises in our minds," he concluded, "will such a commonwealth founded upon hypocrisy and lies, stand before the invincible host of Justice and Truth? Our experience and better judgment give a negative answer. Truly once glorious Portugal is in the hands of her enemies. Imagine the terrifying shriek of anger and despair that our American Eagle, the bird of Freedom, would send forth, if such a condition of affairs ever existed in this land of the free and the home of the brave."

"But the spirit of loyalty and liberty is now wholly extinct even among the Portuguese people. For murmurs of dissent are heard faintly but nevertheless heard, in every part of the stricken land. While little or no pity is felt for Manuel, still general dissatisfaction is evident in regard to the administration of the present regime of political intrigues. Braga and his followers try to dupe the world by sending out reports that all is serene in the country and that the army and navy are loyal to a man. However the inability of the government to cope with the situation is shown by its threatening to exile foreign correspondents who send out truthful and consequently unfavorable reports. A pertinent fact is that the circulation of a royalist paper has increased tenfold in the last few months. The army at present is in a demoralized condition, sedition is rampant and discipline lax; the laborers are complaining of unfair wages and all in all the position of the new regime is ominous, giving warning of the danger in store for it."

During the orchestra number Gov. Crothers arrived and the music was quickly changed to "Maryland, My Maryland." His Excellency was heartily welcomed.

Mr. Thomas Burke was the next speaker and he addressed the Cardinal as follows:

A Tribute to Our Cardinal.

"Deeply conscious of the great honor conferred upon me, I, in the name of the students of Mount Saint Mary's College, offer our tribute of love, esteem and veneration to him whom the nation hails as 'the foremost American.' The old Mountain has donned her festive garb, the flowers waft their sweetest perfume to the breeze, and even the feathered warblers sing their choicest songs, as though all nature vied with us in pouring forth a mead of praise to our honored guest, James, Cardinal Gibbons, in this his jubilee year.

"Our hearts overflow with an emotion which we find words all too inadequate to express when we consider that at a time when people everywhere are clamoring for his presence, he has torn himself away from the cares of his great office, and the social duties that crowd upon him, and has come to confer a signal honor upon our loved Alma Mater and upon us. What college more favored! What graduates more honored!

"Today, throughout the world of letters, men of prominence in the religious, social and political life of the state, are called upon to lend their presence to the solemnity of commencement, and to give to the young graduate starting upon the quest, advice which they have gleaned from long years of experience. If our fellow college men rejoice that they have with them representatives of distinction and rank in the state, should not our joy surpass all bounds since it is our proud boast that our guest is not only illustrious in the Church and state in America, but one revered and honored throughout the world,

"James, Cardinal Gibbons needs no introduction; he is known to all, rich and poor, learned as well as untutored. Where will you find a school boy who cannot recount the deeds of His Eminence with the same accuracy of detail that he would the story of Washington crossing the Delaware or Anthony Wayne storming the heights of Stony Point? And why should it not be so? I deem it not unpatriotic to ask, what are these when placed in contrast with the achievements of our cardinal. Washington crossed the Delaware, James, Cardinal Gibbons has spanned the almost boundless gulf of sectarianism; Mad Anthony stormed the fortifications of Stony Point, and captured the enemies of his country. His Eminence unaided by gun and sabre, equipped only with his gentle disposition, brilliant intellect and the invincible armor of the Faith has battered down the bulwarks of prejudice and made captive the enemies of the Church. Nay he has done more, he has made them friends and is ever solicitous for their welfare.

"To us, the children of the Church it is a source of commendable pride to think of him as our Cardinal, but to those outside the fold it is not the cardinal but James Gibbons the man and patriot who has earned a high place in their esteem. He is the ideal man simple in his tastes, gentle in his manner and the possessor of a heart large enough to embrace all men regardless of creed. In the busy pursuits of life many there are who will forget the Cardinal, but all will remember the man who has done so much to uplift. A staunch patriot he is ever on the alert to aid in forwarding any movement for the betterment of his country. In all questions of moment, in all crisis his opinion is sought with avidity for, all thinking men appreciate the worth of his decisions, founded as they are on sound morality and wisdom. He has but to speak and the whole world lends a willing ear. Let me quote Justice Dowling's beautiful appreciation of His Eminence which is so truly the sentiment of all Americans. He says: 'Whether it be to denounce unjust opposition or unlawful resistance, to warn against the evils of divorce or the dangers of social unrest, to inspire patriotic fervor or impart wise counsels, his labors have been at the service of his country no less than of his church, at the service of humanity not less than of his fold.'

"That these are not the words of an enthusiast we have proof superabundant in the ovation tendered him a short time ago in the city of Baltimore when men of all beliefs united in one spontaneous outburst of devotion and love for our most distinguished citizen.

"Amid all these plaudits of diplomats statesmen and churchmen, His Eminence is the same humble priest of fifty years ago. Robed in the royal scarlet of his exalted position, surrounded by the grandeur of his pontifical court he is still one of the humblest of men. When secular potentates are heaping gifts upon the royal lords and ladies of the land, this Prince of the Church, this 'blameless Knight of God' gathers around him a galaxy of the poor and lowly, the weary and heavy laden and dispenses aid and consolation to all.

"As Cardinal he ranks high in the Sacred College, his wisdom and unflinching zeal have done much to strengthen the position of the Catholic Church in the United States. When a history of these times shall have been written every page will bear evidence of the influence of his master-mind and mighty intellect, and his fame will ever be cherished a precious heritage by every true American Catholic.

"As patriot, priest and cardinal we esteem and revere him, but as a friend of the Mountain he is especially dear to the heart of every Mountaineer. He has rejoiced with us in our prosperity, in adversity our sorrows have been his. When the barque of the Mountain was tossed about by waves of disaster His Eminence, by his wise counsels aided in piloting her safely to the port. Though not an alumnus of this grand old college he is a Mountaineer in spirit and in deed, and so to-day we rejoice in his triumph.

"Your Eminence, we Mountaineers appreciate the honor you have conferred upon us, and we beg you to accept our tribute. Let our congratulations mingle with those of the nation in this your year of jubilee. Our prayer shall ever be that the All-wise Giver of Gifts, who has granted you fifty golden years at the altar, twenty-five as a peerless leader among the Princes of the Church may shower upon you His bounties in the future and grant you many more years to labor in his cause.

"Friends of the Mountain and Fellow students, rejoice with us, and join us in three rousing cheers for the patriot, the priest and the Mountaineer,—James, Cardinal Gibbons."

The building shook with the resounding response to Mr. Burke's invocation.

Conferring of Degrees.

By decree of the Faculty the following degrees were conferred:

Honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws:—Nicholas Dominic Maher, Roanoke, Va.; Ambrose Bernard Reid, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Joseph Buffington, Pittsburgh, Pa. Judge Buffington is well-known in Emmitsburg. Mrs. Buffington was a daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Simonton, for many years pastor of the Presbyterian Church here at Emmitsburg.

Honorary Degree of Doctor of Literature:—Allen Sinclair Will, Baltimore, Md.

Honorary Degree of Master of Science and Architecture:—Francis J. Baldwin, Baltimore, Md.

The Degree of Master of Arts was conferred on Albert Louis Cahill, Thomas J. Francis Early, Edward Joseph Flanagan, Albert Joseph Hoenninger, James Garvey Horan, Vincent Joseph Keating, Edward Emmet Kirwan, Joseph Lawrence Lonergan, Charles Augustine Murray, Vincent Luke Parker, Joseph Michael Sheridan, James Stephen Grady Smith, and William Henry Wymard, M. D., and honoris causa on William Wilfrid Whalen.

The following graduates were made Bachelors of Arts:—John Edmund J. Cammack, John Louis Flanagan, John Ringgold Gloninger, Peter Aloysius Stewart, John Joseph Fagan, James Joseph Mooney, Walter Joseph Tobin, Thomas John Burke, William Henry Sheridan, Norbert Alphonsus Driscoll, Louis Alexander Giroux, and Francis Patrick McHugh.

The valedictorian of the class, Mr. Norbert A. Driscoll, after paying tribute to the Cardinal and outlining the growth made by the institution during the years of his student life said:

Tribute to Mgr. Flynn.

"O UR feelings of pride and joy at the wonderful advances made by our Alma Mater are not without a tinge of sadness. To us the connection between the glory of the mountain and the bed of pain whereon lies, racked and worn, the once commanding form of our beloved president, Monsignor Flynn, is too intimate to allow of the enjoyment of the sweet unmixed with the bitter. It was under his kind and fatherly direction that we began our college life and pursued it to the midway. Then a bad disease attacked our counselor and guide. To the decree of an all-wise Providence we can only bow our head in humble submission and pray that this man, the fruits of whose labors confront us on every side, may yet be spared for many years to the Mountain."

Addressing the Vice-President Mr. Driscoll said:

"Rev. Fr. Bradley, during the illness of our Very Rev. President you have been a tireless worker for our good. The memory of the many acts of kindness received at your hands shall long live in our hearts, and your life shall ever remain to us a shining example of humility and self-sacrifice.

"Alma Mater, we must leave thee. Our hearts are wrung at the parting, and the last sad word chokes our utterance. You have been a tender and loving mother to us, taking our hand, pointing to the good to be done, the evil to be shunned, you have led us in safety to this day when you send us forth, your loyal sons, to fight the good fight for God, for our country and for Alma Mater. Alma Mater, Farewell!"

Rev. Eugene Garvey, D. D. Rev. Fr. Kerrigan was ordained for the Boston diocese, Rev. Fr. Brady for Baker City, Oregon; Rev. Fr. Martin for Richmond, Va.; Rev. Fr. Eckenrode, for Baltimore, Md.

Annual Inter-Class Meet.

On Tuesday the college held a very interesting Inter-Class Track Meet. The meet was run under the personal direction of Coach Thompson and its success augurs well for all such future events. Prof. Thompson had a full corps of competent officials and all the entries were handled in a satisfactory manner.

The First Preparatory Team succeeded in winning the first cup, offered to the class scoring the highest number of points. This win was made possible by the magnificent running of Engel and Holahan, who took places in all of the events in which they participated.

Engel took first place in the One Hundred Yard Dash, first place in the 220-yard Dash, first place in the 880-yard Run and third place in the Running Broad Jump. Holahan, also of First Prep., took first place in the Mile Run, third place in the 880-yard Run, third place in 220-yard Dash, third place in the 16-lb. shot put, and third place in 100-yard dash. Engel also took the silver cup awarded to the individual scoring the highest number of points, with a total of 10.

50-yard Dash for Minims—Letters 1st, Long, 2nd, Hickey, 3rd. Time, 7 seconds.

Special Race for Minims—Letters, 1st, Long, 2nd, Hickey, 3rd. Time, 59 seconds.

Minim Relay Race—Won by team representing South, composed of Scott, Kearney, Hickey and Long.

100-yard Dash—Engel, 1st, Kelly, 2nd, Holahan, 3rd. Time, 11 2-5 seconds.

One Mile Run—Holahan, 1st, Quigley, 2nd, White, 3rd. Time, 5 minutes, 27 seconds.

440-yard Run—White, 1st, Mulholland, 2nd, Jos. Letters, 3rd. Time—220-yard Dash—Engel, 1st, Leary, 2nd, Holahan, 3rd. Time 26 seconds.

880-yard Run—Engel, 1st, White, 2nd, Holahan, 3rd. Time, 2 minutes, 21 seconds.

Running High Jump—Jos. McManus, 1st, Leo McManus, 2nd, Gallagher, 3rd. Height, 5 feet, 1 inch.

Running Broad Jump—Martin, 1st, Goldsborough, 2nd, Engel, 3rd. Distance, 17 feet, 8 inches.

16-lb. Shot Put—Rice, 1st, Leonard, 2nd, Holahan, 3rd. Distance 34 feet.

Letters To The Editor.

[The Editor would have it understood that he is not responsible for the views expressed in communications addressed to him and published in THE CHRONICLE.]
If no attention will be paid to anonymous communications.

Any body that thinks that Emmitsburg is in a complacent stupor, ought to think again, though he is not fairly entitled to that privilege. For instance, the battle between the progressivists and reactionaries now being fought out in the national arena has found an echo, and enlisted doughty champions pro and con, in our town. Shall we advance or slump, progress or crawl? The trouble with Mr. Welty's article is that it is full to overflowing with prejudice, passion and buncombe. Let's see. He lost his eyesight, his temper and what not in a city, therefore cities be hanged.
He caught a cold in a cement house,
and he blamed the cement as a fabric of demerit, though any medieval quack could have told him that he was himself predisposed to a cold before he entered the house, else he wouldn't have caught it—the cold, because of this now the cement is catching it from his hands or feet. Anyhow, says he,
to perdition with cement houses. Again, opticians or oculists weren't consulted when streets were paved, electricity wasn't so generated as to emit a subdued color like green baize, consequently away with paved streets and electricity. Whatever other misfortunes he encountered in cities we are not informed, but we're inclined to believe that as soon as he set foot in one of them he was spotted by one or more of the undesirable cits, as a fine representative of Dope-town and was touched nearly.

His views on the ethical side of the question if pressed to their logical conclusion would eliminate human nature, and with that Quixotic aim we have no patience.

If all men were created to be farmers, and slow, sleepy farmers at that,
why we'd have nothing but weeds growing up between undressed flagstones.

What are we here for? To loaf through life like an inert lotus-eater, or have we brains to conceive and hands to execute? The sleek healthy polish of industry suits the writer much more than the rust and mildew of slothful inertia; the ruddy glow of healthy labor more than the flaccid stupidity of bloated ease. There is in the bee kingdom, there ought to be in the human realm,
a society for the extirpation of drones.
The evils of cities are not due to the industries therein. The proverb says that idle hands are the great evil-doers.
The individuals the writer complains of would be bad denizens even of his fantastic Dope-town. Factories, mills, corporations are responsible for many ills, but the writer goes too far when he charges them with the guilt of his so-called original sin!

Were the Middle Ages happier than ours? Assuredly says our author, because they slept more—took things more easily. We agree with the author excepting his reasons. It was because they worked more; with fewer facilities and less encouragement than we have they really laid the solid foundations of present greatness in the higher activities of man: art, science, literature, etc.

The undersigned has not traveled much, but has tried to make up for this lack by reading. He has always had a high regard for Europe, its history, art, architecture and civilization, but he had yet to learn, until he had seen Mr. Welty's article, that Emmitsburg was a section of the old world let down into the new. Will the gentleman please name the European city that is a facsimile of our own. For we've always thought that ours had the rare distinction of being unique and unapproachable in its general aspects.

The undersigned cannot give an unqualified endorsement to our public school system, but he is not inclined to blame it because our people manifest an assimilative and imitative faculty, and perhaps carry it to extremes especially in architecture. We think that such studies might well be omitted from the public schools, which should accordingly be confined, as they were designed, to imparting the funda-mentals of education, that portion of education which reaches the greatest number of the people.

The undersigned has not had the good or indifferent fortune to consult Lord Northcote or Lady Doorcote, neither does he believe the old world can be brought to readjust itself to any cantankerous prescriptions that promise undiluted happiness, but he has not been convinced even by Mr. W's pungent criticism that it is our be-all and end-all to luxuriate in the sweet-do-nothing; that it is better for our youths to go elsewhere in quest of employment denied them at home; that it is better for active business men to be content with half a day's work and a mediocre income, and our village to languish in a condition of semi-coma instead of energetically expanding its industries and increasing its population.

Care of a Watch.

A slight knowledge of the works of a watch and the care it should receive would keep many good dollars in the pockets of people who for the slightest cause take their watch to the jewelers.

The man who repairs watches says:
"Never get into the habit of holding the stem and winding the watch; always hold the watch and wind the stem."

And if notice is taken of the people who possess watches it will be seen that in many cases they grasp it firmly by the stem and proceed to twist the watch until it is wound or until something breaks.

Another thing to be remembered is that the watch should be wound at pretty nearly the same time every day, as it is bad for a timepiece to be wound too often or allowed to run down entirely.

Many women have a habit of carrying their tiny watch in their handbag, where it knocks around, and if the bag is dropped the watch generally stops with an aggrieved tick.

If the owner has no fob, chatelaine or chain, then it should be pinned firmly to the dress. The leather wristband is another cause of many broken springs, since the delicate hair-like wire is more than likely to break at the sharp jar it receives when the wrist comes in contact with one of the hundred things it is liable to bump against.

And, lastly, once a year the watch should be sent to the jeweler's to be cleaned and regulated, and if this is done, and the watch handled carefully, there will be no trouble with its "works."

Summoned Home.

"I have called to confer with Mr.
Hartwell," stated the visitor. "What!
gone home, this hour of the day? Why,
what was the matter?"

"Oh, his wife 'phoned him that the new baby was asleep," answered the office boy, "and he hurried home to see what the baby looks like."—Boston

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scotch-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoclin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.—Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

ALL HAIL TO THE "MOUNTAIN."

In no field of endeavor is progress and substantial advancement more noticeable than in the field of education. To-day in every college throughout the country, throughout the world, one may say, principles of instruction that embrace greater individual development, more marked improvement, and a larger degree of mental expansion, supercede and overshadow the old ideas and primitive methods of former decades. Educational institutions have ceased to be knowledge factories where it is sought to pump so much erudition into sub-normal cranium cavities, and have risen to their proper sphere—that of preparing and training the mind to think, to reason; to grasp and recognize, and properly digest, assimilate and apply the right kind of knowledge wheresoever and whenever it may be met with.

With this march of progress old Mount St. Mary's College and Seminary, Emmitsburg, has constantly kept pace. Nor has it ever been a laggard in the ranks. Conscious that the true value of a college education is not to be measured solely by the quantity of Latin, Greek, Mathematics, and other branches taught, but rather by that quality of preparation which fits its graduates to learn and make proper use of the greater and more difficult lessons of real life, this great Catholic institution during its one hundred and three years of marked usefulness has taught its students how best to equip themselves for that continuous process of education that ends only when life ends.

One hundred and three years is a long period for active existence. The founding of only one Catholic educational institution in America antedates that of the "Mountain," and few, if any, Catholic colleges can point to a fairer record, a more distinguished alumni or to as many substantial additions to buildings and equipment. Almost every year for some years past, ground has been broken for a new building; not of wood or even of bricks and mortar, and not on lines of mediocre architecture, but buildings of imperishable stone, of massive proportions and of pure and correct design, until to-day there stands on the mountain-side in a rare setting of Nature's most beautiful handiwork a group of structures of university proportions that reflect the wisdom and forethought and good judgment of the broad-minded, level-headed men who have guided so well the fortunes of this ever enlarging seat of learning.

In athletics, which if properly supervised is a most important factor in the physical well being of the student body, Mount St. Mary's has made great strides. This year's record of its various teams is an enviable one, and under the present favorable auspices and with the extensive improvements to track and equipment shortly to be made, athletics will be a still more important feature of college life at the "Mountain."

The early and eventful history of Mount St. Mary's can best be gleaned from the first volume of that excellent and intensely interesting "Story of The Mountain," recently published by the College; its middle and its later life from the second volume soon to appear. Read these books, we would say, and then turn to the Church, the Bench, the Bar, to legislative halls and to the marts of trade. There will be found the alumni of this noble seat of learning, each alumnus reflecting credit upon his Alma Mater.

Little wonder is it, then, that so many return to Mount St. Mary's at Commencement time. They are proud of the "Mountain" and loyal to its Faculty. They love the noble traditions of the old place and because of this feeling and this bond of affection they wander back, as they did during this gala week, to express that feeling in person and to share in the enjoyment that these happy occasions invariably offer.

PEREGRINATING PRESIDENTS.

It used to be that presidents remained a while at home, before they caught that fever that compels them all to roam, around the blooming country making speeches here and there, to dedicate a monument or start a county fair. They used to be more dignified and fill the office right, but soon we'll find them making terms to referee a fight. They're getting worse than governors, who rush and gallivant, to make "a few well-timed remarks" to boost some private plant. The cereal folk and doctors who get up big dopes all know, that if they get the President to say a word or so, when ground is broken for the place where such things will be made, good fortune will be with them and 'twill stimulate their trade. All lodges, clubs and orders, all societies well know, that if they have the President the thing will be a "go." And so they send committees to invite him to take part, in anything they want to boom, originate or start. And if the habit still keeps on increasing we may find, "The President For Hire" a-hanging on a White House blind.

A striking little example of courtesy and propriety was given last week by the Boy Scouts of Gettysburg as they came through town. Just as the company reached the corner of the Square a funeral was approaching St. Joseph's Church. Instantly these little soldiers uncovered and remained at attention until the cortege passed. It was an act that may have escaped the notice of many, but those who witnessed it were deeply impressed by the thoughtfulness that prompted this outward and manly expression of respect for the dead. Of such material let it be said are courteous citizens made.

A "Friday" Ship.

A true story is told of a skeptical Massachusetts captain who way back in the early years of the republic determined to exhibit the fallacy of the Friday superstition. He contracted on a certain Friday for the building of a ship, and it was arranged that the keel of this vessel was laid on Friday, that she was launched on a Friday, named Friday, commenced loading on a Friday and hauled into the stream on the same day of the week. To add to the possibilities of disaster, a negro cook named Friday was engaged, and thus fully freighted with the sinister name, the Friday sailed on a Friday, bound to a port in the West Indies. From that day to this no tidings of the ill fated craft have been received.

Japanese Buddhists.

Japanese Buddhists have a word, "nazoraeru," which is translated by the dictionaries as "to imitate," but it has the esoteric meaning of "to substitute in imagination one object or action for another, so as to bring about some magical or miraculous result." An example of this is laying a pebble before the image of Buddha to show that you would like to build a temple in his honor if you were rich enough and making a bookcase revolve which contains the 6,771 volumes of the Buddhist canon and earnestly wishing that you had time to read them, by which you acquire the same merit in the eyes of heaven as if you did read them.

Feast of Fools.

The best authorities agree that the origin of the ancient custom of celebrating a feast of fools is unknown. Some identify it with the Roman feast of fools on March 31. But why did the Romans institute the feast of fools? In India March 31 is "the full festival," when all manner of pranks are played upon the heedless. But, again, where did the Hindus get it? The French call the April fool "un poisson d'avril" (April fish). To the Scotch he is a "gaw" (a cuckoo).—London Graphic.

Appearance Not Deceptive.

"Boss, I've just come out of the hospital, an'—"
"What?"
"I've just come out of a hospital, an'—"
"I was in a hospital once."
"Well, then, you know."
"I know they give the patients a bath oftener than once a year."—Houston Post.

Smart Youths.

A young man walked up to a clerk in a cigar store.
"Say," he said, "there's a sign over there, 'Cigars, 5 Cents Apiece.' Which end is the piece cut from, and how big a piece do you get for your nickel?"
Before the clerk could answer another young man walked in.
"If those cigars are 5 cents apiece," he ventured, "how much does a whole one cost?"—Judge.

Might Be Worse.

Horrid Mother—I just this minute saw Mr. Niecefellow's arm around your waist. It's perfectly awful. Repentant Daughter—Y-es, mother, but it would be a great deal more awful to see his arm around some other girl's waist.

Mild Exactions.

"Bliggins says he loves his work."
"I should think he would. He's one of the men whose work leaves them about half the day to play golf."—Washington Star.

London Club Etiquette.

The American duchess, followed by her motor, led Miss Cochon of Chicago out St. James street.
"Oh, there's the duke!" cried Miss Cochon of Chicago as they passed through the club, but the duchess said hurriedly:

"Don't look at him, my dear, or he will cut you. Don't you understand club etiquette?"
"No; not if it differs from other etiquette."

"Well," said the duchess, "it differs altogether. The club, you see, originated in London. The club has been defined as the weapon wherewith the savage keeps the white woman at a distance. In club etiquette women are ignored. As you pass White's or the Carlton, the Junior Carlton or Brooks you will see your best friends, top hat pushed back and hands folded on stick, glaring solemnly at you from this window or from that, but your best friends won't speak to you. It isn't club etiquette. And if you spoke to them it would be a worse faux pas than if you appeared at court under the influence of liquor."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Delicate Generosity.

One of the many stories of Grant which grip the hearts and minds of the people was once told by General Simon B. Buckner at a meeting of Confederate veterans.
"Grant and I were chums at West Point," began General Buckner. "I had befriended him at one time, and it can justly be said of him that he never forgot a kindness. After the Union victories at Henry and Donelson I met Grant on the boat at the surrender, and he followed me when I went to headquarters. He left the officers of his own army and followed me with that modest manner peculiar to him into the shadow and there tendered me his purse—pressed it into my hand without a word."

"It seemed to me," concluded General Buckner, "that in the marvelous modesty of his nature he was afraid the light would witness that act of generosity and sought to hide it from the world, almost from his own soul."

Music of "The Lost Chord."

The music of "The Lost Chord" was composed under most touching conditions. Arthur Sullivan was watching by the bed of his dying brother, Frederick. One night shortly before death the invalid sank into a peaceful slumber. Arthur, who attended his brother day and night, took the opportunity to read, and it happened that his eyes fell on Adelaide Anne Procter's poem, "The Lost Chord." The verses impressed him greatly, and music appropriate to them suggested itself to his mind. Taking a sheet of music paper, he began to write, and so absorbed was he in his task that he sat hour after hour working at it until the song was completed. Probably the acute emotional conditions under which the music was composed account largely for the power to touch the emotions which undoubtedly "The Lost Chord" possesses.—George Leon Varney in National Magazine.

A Go as You Please Railway.
The Quest-Etat railway is a standing joke in Paris on account of its slipshod ways. They tell there this story of an incident which happened when M. Briand was premier:

A Russian prince was in Brittany and wanted to come up to Paris. He telegraphed to his secretary: "Shall arrive Invalides tomorrow 8 a. m. Don't want accident to train. See Briand about it." The secretary called on the prime minister, who was most affable. "It is not the general custom on the Quest-Etat to avoid accidents," he said, "but I will ask the director to see what can be done." The express arrived safely without the smallest mishap, but six hours and a half late, during all which time the Russian prince's secretary had been waiting on the platform.

His Three Questions.

"I'll just bet you cigars for the crowd," said one of a party of prominent men to one of the number who was bragging of what he could do, "that you can't answer 'yes' to any three questions I ask you."
"Done," said the boasting one.
"Well, were you ever in jail?"
"Yes."
"Were you ever electrocuted?"
"Yes."
"Will you pay for the cigars if I lose?" Curtain.—New York World.

Cause For Thanks.

Small Elmer, who had just received a severe scolding, said, "Am I really so bad, mamma?"
"Yes, Elmer," she replied, "you have been a very, very bad boy."
"Well," rejoined the youngster after a moment's reflection, "you ought to be thankful that I ain't twins."—Chicago News.

Beyond the Husband Stage.

"You say you are your wife's third husband?" said one man to another during a talk.
"No; I am her fourth husband," was the reply.
"Heavens, man," said the first man, "you are not a husband; you're a habit!"—Ladies' Home Journal.

Agreeable advice is rarely useful advice.—Massillon.

The Norman's Coronation.

A peculiar incident happened at the crowning of William the Conqueror. After the coronation oath, in which the new monarch promised to protect the church and to execute judgment and mercy, the archbishop put the question to the assembled crowd, "Will ye have this prince to be your king?"

A clamorous response of assent startled the Norman garrison. They believed the English had revolted and took up their swords and torches. They set fire to the house, the flames spread, and there was a general alarm. The English, hearing of the plunder, rushed out of church. The bishops and clergy who remained were in such confusion that they could hardly go through with the act of crowning. William heard the tumult, but could not conjecture the cause and sat trembling at the foot of the altar. No great mischief was done by the fire, but the occurrence laid the foundation of a long enmity between the English and Normans.

The Shakespearean Sonnets.

There are many excellent reasons for thinking that Shakespeare did not write all of the sonnets that have come down to us associated with his name. It is a fact that he never published them, never claimed their authorship, never acknowledged them, and never, so far as can be ascertained, gave his consent or authority to have them published in his name. Some of the sonnets imply in their author certain physical defects, peculiarly embarrassing and other things which could not have been applied to Shakespeare, but which might very well have fitted Marlowe, or William Herbert, or Henry Wriothesley, or any one of a half dozen other young men in Shakespeare's circle. It is as good as settled that several, if not many, of the sonnets were written by other hands than those of the author of "Hamlet" and "King Lear," though, of course, the task of naming the real authors is an impossible one.—New York American.

Smoky Achill.

One of the smokiest places on earth is undoubtedly Achill, off the coast of Mayo, Ireland. A smoky atmosphere is not an unknown thing in any Irish cabin, but in Achill the greater the smoke the higher the satisfaction of the natives, for there smoke means potatoes, and potatoes mean food. It is to one of the methods of procuring soot that the islander owes the smoky condition of his cabin. Soot he must have or the potatoes will not grow. In the tiled fields he erects little huts, called "scrawhogs," formed by "scraws," or sods, of heather from the mountains. Within these huts he keeps a fire of peat burning for six weeks or two months, at the end of which period the scraws are, from their continual impregnation with smoke, transformed into soot. Turf or peat is abundant on the island, and the large fires cost nothing.—Harper's Weekly.

Diana of Ephesus.

Ephesus was one of the twelve Ionic cities of Asia Minor and was situated in Lydia, near the mouth of the river Caystrus. According to Strabo, it was founded by Androclus, son of Codrus. It ultimately came into possession of the Romans, and in the time of Augustus it was the greatest place of trade of all the cities of Asia west of the Taurus. St. Paul resided there three years, but the destruction of its great temple by the Goths in 260 A. D. gave it a blow from which it never recovered. This was the famous temple of Diana. Near the western extremity of the town are still to be seen some massive structures, which have since 1868 been carefully excavated. It is now certain that these stand on the famous temple site.

A Famous Windmill.

Nantucket possesses what is believed to be the oldest windmill for grinding grain in actual operation in America. Nathan Wilbur, a Nantucket sailor, who had seen the busy windmills of Holland as he sailed abroad, built it out of timbers of wrecked ships in 1746. There has never been a day in all the 165 years since that time when the mill has not been busy. There is always a wind to turn its outstretched wings.

What He Would Pay to Hear.

"Clemens," said a friend to Mark Twain some years ago, "wouldn't you like to go and hear Ingersoll on Moses this evening?"
"No," replied the humorist; "I wouldn't give 10 cents to hear Ingersoll on Moses, but I would give $10 to hear Moses on Ingersoll."

Snubbing an Ex-President.

On the morning of March 4, 1844, Mr. Tyler left the White House, not caring to assist in the inauguration of his successor. As the Potomac steamer was about to swing away from the wharf, which was crowded with those who were glad to see the ex-president depart, he came along with his family, a squadron of negro servants and a great lot of luggage. As they alighted from their carriages at the head of the wharf the whistle sounded, the boat's bell rang, and she began slowly to move away. Some one in the crowd sang out: "Hello—hello, captain! Hold on there! Ex-President Tyler is coming! Hold on!" The captain, an old Clay Whig, standing near the stern of the boat on the upper deck, looked over the rail, saw the presidential crowd coming, but pulled his engine bell violently and shouted: "Ex-President Tyler be dashed! Let him stay."

This scene was lithographed, and copies hung for years in many of the saloons and public houses of Washington.—Perley's Reminiscences.

Bloodhounds.

A bloodhound is not much more dangerous than a French poodle. His deep ears and wrinkled forehead give him an appearance that does not invite intimacy, but he cannot help his looks and despite them is a sociable, good natured dog. He has not a keener scent than any other member of the hound family. As a man chaser he is a dismal failure. A crime has been committed, the trail of the criminal is warm, a pack of the best bloodhounds from the next county is turned loose, etc. One may read something like this every week. But one never reads of these bloodhounds really getting the criminal at bay. If they tree a man he is the wrong man. No one ever ought to be convicted on the testimony of a bloodhound. A bloodhound on the trail of a criminal is just as apt as not to trot up to the back porch of a gentle old parson and wag his tail in ecstasy at sight of a ham bone.—Washington Star.

Great Writers and Great Readers.

Macaulay was quite contented if he turned out two foolscap pages as his actual completed task in mere writing for one day. He was never tired of laying in new stores, and he persistently refreshed his memory by running over books which he had read oftentimes before. The books and manuscripts which Gibbon read in twenty years reached such an enormous number that when he attempted to form a catalogue of them he was compelled to give up the task in despair. He was constantly adding to the enormous reservoir of knowledge which he had at command, and thus his works never grew stale, and he was ready instantly with a hundred illustrative lights on any point which chanced to crop up either in conversation or in the course of his reading.—Exchange.

Did He Get Off?

The famous Liddell, who, with Scott, compiled Liddell and Scott's lexicon, was dean of Christchurch college, Oxford. It was whispered in regard to the lexicon that Liddell provided the money and Scott the brains. A young undergraduate was haled before the dean for some misdemeanor. "I hear, Mr. —, that you have a pretty wit for impromptu verse," said the dean. "If you will write one on the lexicon I will let you off." The young man thought a moment and then said:

"There's a lexicon written by Liddell and Scott.
Some of it's good, and some of it's not.
The part that is good was written by Scott.
The part that was written by Liddell is rot."

London Built on Sponges.

One could surely find no worse ground to build upon than a bed of sponges such as we use for the bath. And yet London has for its subsoil only sponges, although we call them flints. Once they grew as sponges do now in salt water shallows, and they are found in layers petrified among the chalk of southern England. The Thames valley chalk has been melted like so much sugar and carried away with the running waters, but the flints have been left behind, and on these the whole city of London has found its excellent foundations.—London Spectator.

DAINTY DRESS.

Many Unconsidered Trifles Important In Giving It Finish.

A striking example of the new patterns of dress goods was seen recently in a foulard of Egyptian red having a coin spot in white and a four inch border done in oriental colors.

The bolero is fashioned frequently with the sleeves cut in with the body of the garment.

While there are many tunics exploited with shawl or pointed outline, the majority have a straight, even edge that terminates above the knees or just below and has some variety of border decoration.

Lace enters conspicuously into the trimming scheme of garments. This has reference to the dresses of cotton marquisette and voile as well as to those of batiste, fine lawn and mouselines.

This tucked blouse closes at the front and, while in this case made of lawn and lace, may be of any fabric preferred. The narrow center front is attached to the right side of the waist and buttoned to the left. The neck is finished with a band. Any stock or collar preferred can be worn.

GOOD FORM.

The Short Peplum Negligee is Neat and Very Modish.

White cotton cord forms a novel finish to the high waist line of many lingerie frocks.

Linen vests in contrasting colors are worn with cutaway jackets.

For dresses of summer silks, linen and lingerie fabrics the necks are collarless—in round, V and square outline.

The wattleau plait has returned. It is shown in several wraps of silk or satins, and it is quite evident in negligees.

One of the favored materials for summer waists and frocks is cotton marquisette. It neither musses nor soils readily and is soft and becoming.

Stripes are still among the most noticeable weaves for heavy suitings or for the trimmest of fabrics for evening.

This negligee is especially adapted to warm weather, yet it is neat and well fitting. The peplum affords a smooth fit over the hips and a moderate, not excessive, fullness. The beading conceals the line where the peplum is joined to the skirt. The sleeves are each cut in one piece and may be loose or gathered at the elbow. The large shoulder collar and the sleeves are edged with lace or embroidery.

A LITTLE REBEL

By ALBERT TUCKER KENYON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

In the spring of 1863, when the Federal General Rosecrans was confronting the Confederate General Bragg at Murfreesboro, Tenn., I was a captain in the 4th Ohio regiment of that army. One morning while I was officer of the picket post deployed on either side of the turnpike leading directly south a young girl of fifteen or sixteen came to me and asked me to let her go through the lines to her home, which she said was about a mile down the pike. I told her that I had no authority to do so, but if she would go to headquarters very likely she would get a pass.

She said that she had been to headquarters, but the general was busy and she was pressed for time. She had come up to town to get some medicine a doctor had prescribed for her mother, who was at the point of death. She looked so distressed, turning a pair of heavenly blue eyes upon me beseechingly, that I was sorely tempted to disobey orders and let her go through. War is very hard on the people of the country where the armies are contending, and I confess I had no stomach for that part of it. The girl saw I was weakening and exercised all her persuasive faculties upon me.

"While I am waiting here," she wailed, wringing her hands, "mother may be dying."

The brutality of keeping her under the circumstances was a little more than I could bear. It was several miles back to the town where were the army headquarters, the girl looked tired, and two or three hours would necessarily be consumed if I forced her to go there to make another application for a pass.

"Can you see your house from here?" I asked.

"You can just see the chimney over the hill. There it is, on the right side of the turnpike."

"I'll go with you."

I expected an outburst of gratitude. Instead she threw up her hands in protest.

"Not for the world would I get you into trouble. A Confederate vedette is stationed on the road right in front of our house. You would be captured."

Her unwillingness to implicate me enhanced my desire to serve her, but it also tended to add to my uncertainty as to what to do. My orders were to let no one go beyond our line who did not have a pass. To disobey such an order would render me liable to a very severe punishment. But I was young and full of chivalry. Would it not be better for me to take the risk upon myself than keep this poor girl from carrying medicine to her dying mother?

My offer to accompany her was that I might be able to state that I had not let her out of my keeping while beyond our lines. Since it was evident from what she told me as to the proximity of the vedette that this plan would not serve I was at a loss to decide what other course to pursue.

The girl kept wringing her hands and moaning till she almost set me wild with indecision between the dictates of my heart and my duty.

"If I let you go," I said to her, "and it is known by my superiors I shall be court martialed and doubtless suffer some severe penalty."

She stood for a moment thinking, then said: "Suppose I start to run. You follow me and at last give up the chase."

"No," I said. "I will either let you go through openly, disobeying orders, or not at all."

"Oh, do let me go!" she pleaded. "While you are detaining me you are withholding from my mother what may save her."

"Well," I said at last, "I'll risk it. Go ahead."

She gave me a grateful look, and I saw in it at the same time something of pain or regret. I was looking her straight in the face, on each side of which were two puffs such as were in vogue in women's hairdressing at the time. These puffs were, I believe, usually rolled over something to give them their shape. There was a break in the puff on one side of the girl's head, and a thin line of something white, over which it had been rolled, was visible.

A suspicion struck me. "One moment," I said.

I reached for the puff and held on to it till I had taken out some crumpled white paper. Smoothing it out, I saw on it writing and figures. A brief examination showed me that it embraced estimates of each division of our Army of the Cumberland, giving its exact position.

"This is the medicine," I said to the girl, "that you are carrying to your sick mother."

There was no reply, only a look of disappointment and vexation that her scheme had failed.

"Corporal," I cried, "take this girl in to general headquarters and this paper also. Say that the girl was trying to get through the lines with it."

Then to the girl, "You must have a seared conscience to practice such deception."

"Not at all," she replied. "I was trying to help our cause and thousands of our people and our brave boys. I am sorry I failed."

"And I rejoice that you did. Next time I shall not be so chicken hearted."

I never heard if she were punished, probably not. The next day we moved out on the Tullahoma campaign.

We started the advance in interest rate to 4 per cent., and feel entitled to a share of your deposits.

PERSONALS.

It is the aim of THE CHRONICLE to publish as many personal and social items as possible, but it frequently happens that those who have guests visiting them, and those who entertain, fail to send a list of their friends, or an account of these events, to this office. Readers who live at a distance are always interested in what is going on "at home," and for that reason, if for no other, this column should be filled every week. It is of course understood that anonymous contributions will not be published. Names of persons furnishing items will be withheld.

Mr. Tucker and others interested in the good roads of Maryland, accompanied by Messrs. Hammaker and Miller, were in town on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Panebecker and son, John, of Sells Station, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Linn, of Hanover, spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Linn, of near town.

Mr. Edwin A. Newman, Democratic National Committeeman of the District of Columbia, and his family, attended the commencement exercises at both institutions.

Miss Mabel Long has returned home after a week's visit to Washington.

Mrs. Charles F. Smith has returned from a ten-day trip to Norfolk, Va.

Mrs. Mary R. Pampel, of Norfolk, is visiting relatives in this place and vicinity.

Miss Ruth Hunter and Miss Clayton, of Waynesboro, are the guests of Miss Louise Beam at "Rose Hill."

Miss Anna Long has returned from Philadelphia.

Mr. J. M. Young, of Woodsboro, spent several days here on business.

Mr. J. N. Adelsberger, of Philadelphia, is visiting his mother, Mrs. J. M. Adelsberger.

Miss Ethel Shane, of Washington, D.C., is visiting her grandparents, Mr and Mrs. Bache.

Mr. Joseph H. Shuff, of Winchester, Va., is home for his vacation.

Miss Mary E. Kennedy, of Frederick, is the guest of Miss Valerie Welty at "Penola."

Mr. John Rosensteel and Miss Fannie Hoke spent Sunday in Carlisle.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Hoke and Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland Hoke and two children took a trip to Carlisle on Sunday in an automobile driven by Mr. John Wagerman.

Miss Kate Sweeney, of Chicago, is here for the Summer.

Storm Damages in County.

The severe storm of Saturday evening, while it did little damage here, was more destructive throughout the county than any so far this year. Telephone and trolley wires were crossed in Frederick and animals were killed by the charged wires and one man was severely stunned. A barn was struck near Walkersville. The wind was particularly violent in and around Creagertown. The Reformed church at Middletown was slightly damaged and many trees were blown down.

Mr. and Mrs. Gross Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Harry Gross entertained a large number of their friends on Monday evening, the fifth anniversary of their wedding. The invitations and souvenirs of the occasion were most unique and handsome. THE CHRONICLE joins with their other friends in wishing them many other happy anniversaries.

FIREMEN'S PICNIC.

Arrangements are about ready for the Firemen's Picnic to be held on July 4th. The attractions will be better than ever and a large crowd will attend. All that is needed now to insure a pleasant day to those who attend is the weather.

Notice And Warning.

A warning is hereby issued to those who have made a public dumping ground of the lots immediately adjoining the Lutheran hitching ground. Arrests and prosecution will follow any further throwing of papers, dead animals and other offal on these grounds.

CLOSING EXERCISES

AT ST. EUPHEMIA'S

Honors Awarded and Rev. Fr. Hayden Addressed Audience and Pupils.—Importance of Parochial Schools.

St. Euphemia's Hall was crowded on Tuesday morning, when the closing exercises of that institution took place. The stage was tastefully decorated with ferns and flowers. At ten o'clock sharp the children of the school entered the hall to the strains of the Entrance March, played by the Misses A. Dukehart and R. Hopp. Every number of the varied program was well rendered and evinced the thoroughness of its preparation.

The opening chorus "The Stars and Stripes Forever" was sung with true patriotic vim.

Miss Maude E. Walters, this year's graduate delivered in a pleasing and graceful manner the salutatory.

The little girl's number, "This Little Girl Is Not For Sale," the solo part of which was well taken by little Miss Helen Rider, and "Papa Will Settle The Bill" by the Junior Girls found special favor with the audience.

Mr. Harry Scott's declamation of "The Chariot Race," by Wallace, could not easily have been excelled and he is to be congratulated on his splendid delivery.

A diploma of graduation and gold medal were awarded to Miss Maud E. Walters. Prizes in composition were awarded as follows: For best essay on good citizenship, first prize five dollars in gold, to Miss Mary Francis Welty; second prize $2.50 in gold, to Master Charles Gillelan; for best essay on Bishop Brute, first prize $7.50 in gold, to Miss Mary Neck; second prize, $2.50 in gold, to Miss Mary Francis Welty.

Medals in scholarship were awarded, in the ninth grade, to Miss Margaret Boyle; in the seventh, to Miss Rose Gertrude Sebald; in the fifth, to Master Harry Scott; and in the third, to Miss Mary Troxell.

Certificates were awarded the scholars in music, and diplomas of proficiency in rapid business penmanship were awarded to the Misses Maude E. Walters, Mazie Dukehart, Marguerite Mitchell, Margaret Boyle, Ruth Horner, Marion Cotilus, Mary Francis Welty, Mary Neck and Caroline Baker. An improvement certificate was awarded to Master Bennet Sebald.

Immediately after the award of honors Rev. Father Hayden, pastor of the school, addressed the audience. He congratulated the children on the showing they had just made and expressed himself as well pleased with the year's work done by them. Father Hayden dwelt at some length on the importance and necessity of parochial schools and of the advantages they offer. He made it clear that thoroughness was the all important point in the school's courses of study. After exhorting the parents to cooperate with the good Sisters in the splendid work they are doing for the children, Father Hayden closed his remarks saying that material gain alone should not be the goal of education, but rather it should be the aim of a school to prepare its scholars to obtain a higher and a better reward.

SWOPE DEFEATS EMMITSBURG

Fairfield Wins at Baseball.—But One Scratch Hit Made and No Runs.—All Scoring in Two Innings.

On Saturday afternoon Emmitsburg lost its first game of baseball this season. The defeat was at the hands of Fairfield at Fairfield. Emmitsburg's column on the score board looked like an exhibit of horse collars. The score was 2 to 0, with no earned runs. A nice game if we did lose. Swope was too many for Emmitsburg. The score will show one hit credited to Cook but it was a questionable scratch hit and Swope may well be proud of the way he tempered the hot afternoon by making the visitors do the fanning. A strikeout or two was credited to him in every inning except the sixth and eighth. Kerrigan, Morrison and Green are the only Emmitsburg players who failed to strike out once or twice.

A word or two must be said of Rowe's pitching. It is true that the six hits off his delivery were bunched in the first four innings but in the third with one man down and the bases filled he was not scored on. Now that is going a little.

Little Willie's record with the stick was not up to the mark by seven miles. The altitude and certain other things diminished his vigor considerably. Will the lady please step forward and get the pass. "Willie, please hit it" but nixie. Four times he disappointed his friends in Saturday's game. The play in detail was as follows: Sellers struck out. You will have to excuse eleven repetitions of that phrase. Kerrigan sent one to Swope and was out at first. Willie Frailey helped to make the total of eleven strike outs. For Fairfield the first man up was Horner who has been playing ball for thirty-two years, according to the scorer's informant. Horner got a hit, stole second and got to third on the longest drive of the game—Sebald's throw to center field. Shryock sent a long one to Cook and Horner scored before the ball could be returned. For an old man Horner is some pumpkins at base running. Swope was out Morrison to Sellers and Musselman was cut down by Rowe.

In the second inning Morrison gave Swope another assist. Mondorff looked so dangerous that he was walked to first. We might say right here that to see an Emmitsburg player on first was not the scorer's privilege very frequently. Sebald stirred the lazy breezes with three strikes and the side was retired when Cook sent an easy one to second and was out Horner to Rock. The second run for Fairfield came in their half of the second. McGlaughlin bowled one to Kerrigan who is credited with an error. Hoofnagle tried the same place but Kerrigan had it dead. Rock tried to hit the ball three times but three times he missed it. Hoofnagle, number two, got a hit. This put McGlaughlin to third. Now to those who were not there let it be said that this is the record of a baseball game, not discuss throwing or a pigeon shoot. Bear in mind that there is a man on third and one on first. When the first ball was delivered Hoofnagle started to steal second. Yes sir, the ball delivered by the strong-armed Sebald, was true to its mark but alas the mark was center field instead of second base and Hoofnagle, C, scored the second and last run of the game. The side was retired when Rowe struck out McGlaughlin H.

The rest of the game was baseball minus the frills. Emmitsburg, it is true, did not score but they got interested in the sport. In the third inning after Emmitsburg had been retired Horner for Fairfield was out on a slow grounder to Sellers. Shryock connected and so did Swope and Musselman. Rapid fielding kept these men close to their bases. Mr. Neely waxed eloquent over the prospects. Everything spoke of runs and everything missed its dip. Rowe pitched as steady as if nothing was doing. McGlaughlin was struck out and Cook caught Hoofnagle's fly to center.

Mondorff figured in a double play in the fourth. He made a splendid catch of a difficult one from Horner's bat and put out McGlaughlin at first.

In the third inning Green's chin was badly cut by a ball which caromed off his bat. He finished the game however.

The score in detail is as follows:

"A bountiful crop of strikeouts, with here and there an error"—that is the news of the game of ball Emmitsburg played with Taneytown at Taneytown on Tuesday. This comes pretty nearly being all Emmitsburg got in that contest. The score after 6 innings was 8 to 0. Jenkins pitched for Taneytown and in one inning he retired the side with ten pitched balls.

The game yesterday afternoon with Rocky Ridge was won 16-6. Strikeouts may be easy on the batter but in recent games they have become tiresome to the spectators from their frequency, and a decided hardship on the fielders who now and then like to make an assist, put out or even an error. It may be that the players have a kindly feeling for the opposing pitcher, but more than likely it is not. In four games 136 Emmitsburg batters have faced the pitcher and almost one-third of these failed to connect with the ball and when they did it was only for a total of 27 hits. A schedule of the batting averages would be too painful to be read.

Carrie Nation Is Dead.

The militant prohibitionist, Carrie Nation, a product of Kansas, is dead. Her end came in a sanitarium at Leavenworth. Mrs. Nation and her hatchets are known all over the civilized world. She first became notorious by breaking a bar mirror in Topeka in 1901. She was 66 years old. Her mother died in an insane asylum, and her first husband was a victim of delirium tremens. She was divorced from her second husband.

GETTYSBURG

The Boy Scouts, 40 in number, who left here last week for Washington, D. C., found the trip a little arduous. The original plan for the third day's march was to go from Frederick to Gaithersburg, a distance of 23 miles. This march proved too much for the boys and a halt was made at Clarksburg. However, a dozen of them hiked the full distance and spent the night in the open in Gaithersburg. They arrived in Washington but only six of them on foot. The others completed the journey by electric cars. The six scouts who made the entire trip were: Frank Kelly, Carl McDonald, Lloyd Gallsrath, Clarence Epley, Spurgeon Keeney and Harry Troxell. William Timins was brought from Frederick by Robert Witherow. Timins since has developed a case of typhoid fever.

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Pennsylvania College two new professors were elected: Richard S. Kirby, Civil Engineering; B. S. Schapelle, French. The salaries of the present professors were increased a $100 each.

IO TRIUMPH M. S. M.!

Loud let the brazen trumpet sound!
Beat the drum with a ruidubdub!
And hail to the champions of Maryland,
The Mt. St. Mary's Baseball Club!
Full many opposing college teams
Saw Victory in their sanguine dreams—
But when they on the diamond met
With Mt. St. Mary's Nine,
Their dreams dissolved; their glory set;
While radiant, divine,
The star of Mt. St. Mary's shone
With a glory all its own.

So come, ye clubs of Maryland,
And like the stars in Joseph's dream,
Bend your proud foreheads in the dust
Before the Mountain's peerless team!
'Tis no disgrace to honor thus
A club whose deeds with radiance shine,
Ye all were good at playing ball,
But not with Mt. St. Mary's Nine!
So let the brazen trumpet sound!
And beat the drum
With a ruidubdub!
For lo! they come; yes, yes, they come,
Pennant in hand,
The Champions of Maryland,
The Mt. St. Mary's Baseball Club!
Three cheers
For the Mountaineers!

Plot Against Madero Discovered
A widespread plot against F. I. Madero Jr., with ramifications in San Antonio, El Paso, New York and Mexico City, has been discovered, according to news coming from Mexican government officers. The first purpose of the instigators is said to be the establishment in the cities named of juntas, similar to those of the revolutionary party, and then to carry on a systematic effort to hamper Madero and to restore to power a political element that was ousted when President Diaz resigned.

PUBLIC SALE

—OF—

Valuable Real Estate!

Finely Located for Summer Homes.
Excellent for Fruit Culture.

By virtue of a power of sale contained in a deed of trust from Victor E. Rowe to J. Stewart Annan, Trustee, which deed is dated the 13th day of April, 1911, and recorded in Liber T. H. No. 236, folio 297, one of the Land Records of Frederick county, and by virtue of an order of the Circuit Court for Frederick county, passed on the 21st day of May, 1911, the undersigned trustee will offer for sale on the premises about three miles west of Emmitsburg on the road leading from the town of Taneytown to Friends' Creek, in Frederick county, Maryland, on Wednesday, June 21st, 1911, at 1.30 P. M. o'clock all the following described real estate located in Emmitsburg District, said county and State, to-wit: First—All that tract of 88 ACRES OF LAND, more or less, on the South side of the road aforesaid about three miles west of Emmitsburg, Md., adjoining the properties of Annan's Farm, Enoch L. Frizell, Joseph and William Gamble, Mrs. Sarah Stouter, et al., improved with a two-story weatherboarded dwelling house, a good bank barn, and other necessary outbuildings, well supplied with never failing springs of mountain water, with well at dwelling house. Has an apple orchard of about 250 trees in full bearing and red winter variety of fruit—very best of quality and good sellers, a pear orchard of about 50 trees of Bartlett and Ben Jonson variety and good sellers, an orchard of about 100 peach trees full bearing and of best varieties. The said tract being the same land excepting the better lot of two acres included in tract No. 2, conveyed to the said Victor E. Rowe by deeds from Charles F. Rowe and Annie E. Rowe, his wife, dated the tenth day of May, A. D. 1905, and the tenth day of May, A. D. 1906, and recorded in Liber S. T. H. No. 260, folio 58, Liber S. T. H. No. 276, folio 155 and Liber S. T. H. No. 276, folio 558, respectively, all Land Records of Frederick county aforesaid.

Second—All that tract of 25 ACRES OF LAND, more or less, which adjoins the above described tract of land and is improved with a good two-story weatherboarded dwelling house, with chicken house and other necessary outbuildings, a good well of water and fine cherry and other fruit trees. All of this land is of the best quality for the growing of fruit. It is bounded on the north by the said Victor E. Rowe by deeds from Charles F. Rowe and Annie E. Rowe, his wife, dated the tenth day of May, A. D. 1905, and the tenth day of May, A. D. 1906, and recorded in Liber S. T. H. No. 260, folio 58, Liber S. T. H. No. 276, folio 155 and Liber S. T. H. No. 276, folio 558, respectively, all Land Records of Frederick county aforesaid.

Third—All that tract of 19 ACRES OF LAND, more or less, adjoining the second described tract of land and on the North side of the said road which consists of unimproved timber land; it is excellent soil for fruit culture and is well wooded with fine young timber and is the same land conveyed by Mary A. Wagaman and Samuel D. Wagaman to the said Victor E. Rowe by deed dated the 10th day of January, A. D. 1897, and recorded in Liber S. T. H. No. 282, folio 249, one of the Land Records aforesaid.

Fourth—All that tract of 20 ACRES OF LAND, more or less, adjoining the third described tract of land and situated on the road leading from Annandale School House to Ginnell's Mill and adjacent to the properties of Jos. and Wm. Gamble and on the Mason and Dixon Line. It is unimproved timber land and good soil for fruit culture. It being the same land conveyed by Charles E. Kellholz and Clara E. Kellholz, his wife, to the said Victor E. Rowe by deed dated the 11th day of March, A. D. 1901, and recorded in Liber S. T. H. No. 282, folio 218, one of the said Land Records.

Fifth—All that tract of 7 ACRES OF LAND, more or less, adjoining the first described tract of land and the properties of Mrs. Sarah Stouter, Joseph E. Hoke and others. This land is covered with fine young timber and is the same land conveyed by Mary A. Wagaman and Samuel D. Wagaman to the said Victor E. Rowe by deed dated the 10th day of January, A. D. 1897, and recorded in Liber S. T. H. No. 282, folio 249, one of the Land Records aforesaid.

Sixth—All that tract of 40 ACRES OF LAND, more or less, on the South side of Friends' Creek road, about a quarter of a mile South of Friends' Creek Chapel, adjoining the lands of Joseph Tresler, John Kimmel, George Springer and others. This is mountain land and the same property conveyed by James T. Hays and Sarah A. Hays, his wife, by deed dated the 4th day of June, A. D. 1906, and recorded in Liber S. T. H. No. 276, folio 247, one of said Land Records.

The aforesaid real estate has been recently surveyed and a plat of the same will be exhibited on the day of sale at the place of auction as hereinbefore mentioned.

TERMS OF SALE:—One-half of the purchase price of the sales, the balance in six months from day of sale with interest from that date or all cash at the option of the purchaser to be paid on ratification of the sale. A deposit of $25.00 will be required of the purchaser of each tract of land and the purchaser to be at expense of conveying.

Short Crop of Cow Peas.

Prices Are Going Up.

The enormous demand for Cow Peas last year carried the price very high, and as the crop is very short and the acreage is rapidly extending, there are many indications which point to much higher prices as the sowing season approaches.

Whip-Poor-Will Cow Peas.

The Whip-poor-wills are generally preferred in the Central and Southern States. They are bush form, early maturing and especially desirable for Peas.

New Era Cow Peas.

New Era's are a little earlier and make more vine than the Whip-poor-wills.

Wonderfuls, Clay and Mixed Cow Peas.

For Hay, the Wonderfuls or the Mixed Cow Peas are more productive, they should always be planted with an occasional grain of corn, Sorghum Seed, Kafir Corn etc., which will prevent the vine from getting damaged by coming in contact with the ground.

Black Cow Peas.

Black Cow Peas are a little later in maturing than the Clays, they make a good growth of vine, are exceptionally good for medium or poor land and will stand almost any amount of wet weather without injury. We can also supply Shiny Peas, Red Rippers, Blackeye Peas and Soja Beans.

REMEMBER BOLGIANO'S COW PEAS ARE UNQUESTIONABLY THE BEST.—IF YOUR LOCAL MERCHANT WILL NOT SUPPLY YOU WITH BOLGIANO'S COW PEAS—WRITE US DIRECT AND WE WILL TELL YOU WHERE TO GET THEM.

FREE—Send us 5c. in stamps to pay postage, and mention this paper, and we will send you free a 25c. package of "My Maryland" Tomato Seed, also our 1911 Catalogue of Seeds and our 1911 Poultry Supply Catalogue.

Farm and Garden

A FINER ALFALFA IS DUE.

Experiments on Forty-three Kinds to Bring a General Seed.

Of interest to farmers everywhere is the latest report of the agricultural department on the experiments made in Arizona in alfalfa growing. For a year the plant breeders have been growing and scrutinizing forty-three distinct varieties of this wonderful cattle fodder. They had, in separate plots, eleven varieties from Turkestan, five from the United States, nine from Mexico and South America, five from Europe and thirteen from Arabia and Algeria.

The results to date show:

	Per cent of stand.	Yield per acre in lbs. whole season.
Turkestan	88.33	48,733
United States	86.69	49,034
Mexico	87.72	45,258
Europe	86.83	50,463
Arabia	85.35	37,265

Now begins the work of producing a seed that shall combine all the good qualities and bring forth a plant that will flourish practically anywhere south of Greenland. The reports of T. F. Freeman from his station at Tucson, Ariz., may be followed with the almost absolute certainty of an increased bank balance at the close of the farming year.

Alfalfa is a native of India, but has been cultivated in Europe since before the time of Christ. The Spaniards introduced it into South America, but it did not reach North America until about 1850, when it was introduced into California. It is now the most extensively cultivated forage crop in the United States; but, according to agricultural experts, we are only beginning to grasp its possibilities.

There is no such pleasure gained from $100 left to you as comes from $1 you have earned. Shed no tears over the fact that you seem to find no easy money.

A Paradox For the Farmer.

In some localities land has doubled in value in the last decade. Where this is true the farmer must make his land produce just twice as much in order to realize the same profit. If he does not do this he is getting poorer instead of richer, although his land is worth more.

Dairy Doings.

Feeds too expensive for dairy cows usually indicate fault either with the cow or with the dairyman.

With a thoroughly good cow to manufacture it we can always afford to put in feed and take out butter.

The dairyman who takes his money out of the savings bank to build a silo makes a good investment of idle capital.

The cream separator, the silo and the manure spreader should find a place in the equipment of every dairy farm.

The chemist cannot find that a silo adds anything to the nutritive elements in a cornstalk, but it does add palatability and that counts for a good deal.

Happy is the cow whose owner grew a crop of mangels. This root equals silage. The Holstein cattle men would hardly undertake to test a cow for great production without mangels.

"I am satisfied that many of the dangers which are attributed to milk are absorbed by it after it reaches the consumer's home. State and municipal regulations in reference to the contamination of milk will have but little effect if the sanitary conditions of streets, of homes and of tenements are not first made good."—Dr. E. B. Voorhees.

There are many farmers who do not keep enough cows to supply milk enough for the table and to support the pigs from which the pork and bacon are to be made. There may be good reasons why dairy cows should not be kept for profit, but it is hard to find a reason for not keeping enough to supply the family table with milk and butter.

MAKE YOUR OWN SEED TESTER

Two Pie Plates Intelligently Used May Improve Next Season's Crops.

Good seed is important to large yields of crops. It does not pay to carefully prepare land for a crop and then sow seed that lacks in vitality and a large percentage of which will not grow. The principal seeds which should be tested before using are clover, alfalfa and corn. It is a simple matter to do this and one that should be attended to before spring's work begins.

The accompanying illustration shows a homemade seed tester which can be made of two pie tins or two ordinary table plates and two pieces of muslin. If alfalfa seed is to be tested take 100 seeds from different portions of the seed package and place them on a moist cloth on a plate, then cover them with a moist cloth and another plate. The plates should be kept in a reasonably warm room, and each day open the plates and lift the cover cloth. In a few days all the good seeds will be sprouted. By counting the unsprouted seeds and noting the character of the sprouts of all the seeds a person will know the percentage of germinable seed and the vitality of the seed.

In testing corn faster work can be done with a larger tester and divided into small squares, each large enough to hold three kernels of seed. Each square should be numbered so it can be easily designated from which ear the kernels are taken. The principles of the larger tester are the same as the one herewith illustrated. When corn is tested it is customary to take three kernels from an ear, one from tip, one from the center and the other from the butt. Ears showing a low germination test and weak in vitality should be discarded.—Hoard's Dairyman.

A Silver Library.

There is in the royal library of Konigsberg a silver library consisting of a collection of twenty books, mostly theological, bound in pure silver and having a rich, symbolical ornamentation partly in gold. The library has been in possession of this treasure since 1611. These books were made by order of Albert, the first duke of Prussia, in the latter half of the sixteenth century. It is supposed that they were made at Nuremberg, where Albert was stationed for three years. Through the efforts of Ostander and afterward Luther, Duke Albert became a friend of the reformation. Copies of the silver library are made accessible to students by taking lithographic copies of the same.

Calendars of the Aztecs.

Calendars are probably the oldest form of literature in the world. The cards which appear by the millions in all civilized countries nowadays have their counterpart among the most ancient known races. The Aztecs, for example, were well supplied with calendars, and several of them have been preserved to this day. They were published in stone and set up in public places.

Daddy's Bedtime Story

Mr. Fox Was Cute and Fooled The Farmer

WHERE did that expression 'as cunning as a fox' come from, daddy?" asked Evelyn.

"Oh," said daddy, "that's easy! It's because little Mr. Fox is just about the smartest, cleverest, shrewdest thing on four legs. The stories that have been told about him since even before the days of the old Greeks and Romans would make a library in themselves, and he is even mentioned in the Bible. I know so many stories about him myself that I hardly know which one to tell you."

"We know you'll pick a good one," said Jack.

"Well, near where we lived when I was a boy," began daddy, "there was a farmer who was a famous fox hunter. He knew every trick of the little brush tailed fellow, and he used to trap and shoot more every year than any other half dozen men in the county."

"One snowy morning he went out at daylight for a hunt, and as he was on his way to let out his dogs he noticed the footprints of Mr. Fox leading to the low opening in the chicken coop which the biddies used for a door. There were no prints coming out, so it flashed upon him that Mr. Fox must be inside at work."

"In a second he whirled an empty box across the opening, and as he did a wild cackle arose that left no doubt but that he had trapped the little thief sure enough. Then he listened at the door for a minute, but except for an occasional grumbled 'cut-a-cut' he couldn't hear a sound."

"So very cautiously he opened the big door and edged in, and there, sure enough, lay a nice fat chicken with its neck broken, and near it lay the fox stone dead."

"Well, of all things!" exclaimed the farmer in astonishment. "He must have fallen off the roost with the pullet and broken his own neck. This will make a fine story to tell down at the grocery store tonight."

"So, with a big chuckle, he picked up the chick and the fox and threw them over the upturned box outside while he spent a few minutes giving some corn to the other chickens to soothe their shattered nerves."

"When he came out his own nerves were shattered, for all he could see was the box, a couple of feathers and another trail in the snow. There was no pullet, and there was no Mr. Fox, who had simply played dead and got away not only with a whole skin, but a good dinner."

"Did he tell the story at the store that night?" asked Evelyn, with her eyes dancing.

"I don't think so," answered daddy.

HER EGGS HIGHEST YET.

Aeroplane Hen Produces Them in the Air Every Day.

An up to date bantam hen residing near New York has taken to aviation, but combines business and sport. To say she lays while she flies sounds paradoxical, but is true.

A rustic hanging basket in her mistress' grape arbor was spied by the aspiring bantam one day last week. She flew up, and the impetus she gave the basket set it swinging like a pendulum. The hen enjoyed the flight in the monoplane so greatly that she paid her fare by depositing an egg in the basket.

Since then she has taken a flight every day and has laid an egg every time.

Omelets are light as air when made from these aerial eggs. Biddy's owner intends to raise chickens in mid-atmosphere, as she thinks they might bring high prices.

Female Supremacy.

A 1,000 pound steer goes to the block and that is the end of him, but only a fairly good dairy cow will produce several times her own weight in milk each year and keep it up during her entire active life. What is the answer?

The wise farmer plans his summer time work in the midst of cold weather.

Orchard and Garden.

Scatter wood ashes through the orchard, especially on the sandy parts.

If you are not using any system of cover crops keep the orchard well cultivated for two reasons, to keep down weeds and to conserve the soil moisture.

Rough, stormy weather should be utilized in preparing the frames and in replacing broken glass in the hotbed and cold frame sash. It is desirable to paint sash at least every other year.

If the orchard is an old one with trees headed high let the chickens run in it and disk frequently, at least twice in three weeks. This will not only cultivate, but also furnishes a good scratching place for the chickens.

If the orchard is young it should, of course, be headed low. In this case work under the trees with an extension frame harrow. This harrow has a frame which may be extended so as to throw the discs out to the sides. This tool may be used as an ordinary harrow or may be used to straddle rows and is a very useful tool for the horticulturalist.

Look for borers in the trunks of the young peach trees. If you find holes with gum exuding, either dig out the borer or kill him by thrusting a piece of wire into the hole and twisting it around. Examine all grafts and remove any branches which might switch them loose. If the scions are growing cut away all the suckers which have started around the edges of the cut.

Judicial Propriety.

"I hate men who won't express an opinion. There's that justice of the peace I asked some unimportant political question, and he refused to commit himself."

"That's all right. He's not a committing magistrate."—Baltimore American.

A Marvel of Chemistry.

One of the most marvelous things is the burning of a jet of hydrogen gas in liquid air. The smoke that arises from the combustion floats off in the air as pure snow—a flame burning brilliantly in the midst of a liquid, with snow given off for smoke!

ILLUMINATION.

LAST night I dreamed of you. I thought you came And caught my hands in yours and said my name Over and over till my soul was stirred

With that fine ecstasy that some wild bird May know when first it feels the blossoming And the keen rapture of the glad new spring.

Almost today I fear to meet your eyes Lest I should find them suddenly grown wise

With knowledge of my heart. Almost I fear To touch your hand lest you should come too near

And startled, dazed by some fierce inner light, We both should cry, "I dreamed a dream last night!"

THE HEART'S REALM.

THE sweetest songs are never sung, The fairest pictures never hung; The fondest hopes are never told— They are the heart's most cherished gold.

FOR in the country of the heart There is a realm from this apart, Whose pictures are too pure for earth, Whose language is of heavenly birth.

—C. K. Shetterly.

MAKE THE BEST OF IT.

A merry heart, a merry laugh, A face with lots of sun in it, A merry tongue with merry chaff, And quip with lots of fun in it!

If trouble comes—and troubles will— When others make a guest of it Keep on a smiling face and still Strive on and make the best of it.

And if the worst comes to the worst And life has no more zest in it— Well, there are fewer clouds to burst So why not make the best of it?

Then learn to leave behind you care. A fool but walks abreast of it. Don't be a victim to despair, But always make the best of it.

—La Touche Hancock.

THE THREE FISHERS.

THREE fishers went sailing away to the west, Away to the west as the sun went down.

Each thought of the woman who loved him best, And the children stood watching them out of the town.

For men must work and women must weep, And there's little to earn and many to keep, Though the harbor bar be moaning.

Three wives sat up in the lighthouse tower, And they trimmed the lamps as the sun went down.

They looked at the squall, and they looked at the shower, And the night rack came rolling up ragged and brown.

But men must work, and women must weep, Though storms be sudden and waters deep And the harbor bar be moaning.

Three corpses lay out on the shining sands, In the morning gleam as the tide went down.

And the women are weeping and wringing their hands For those who will never come home to the town, For men must work, and women must weep.

And the sooner it's over the sooner to sleep, And goodbye to the bar and its moaning. —Charles Kingsley.

THE SPIRIT OF POETRY.

HE measures facts by a gleam of the moon And calendar days by dreams. He values less than a wild bird's tune The world of mortal schemes.

He dons the pack of the work-and-wait On the trail of the never-sure And whistles a song as he faces fate To follow the faroff lure.

HE says a word to the butterfly, And its mottled dream is his. He whispers the bee, and it makes reply With a thought like a honeyed kiss. He speaks the bird, and he speaks the snake

And the ant in its house of sand, And their guarded wisdom is his to take And their secrets to understand.

SWORN comrade he of the rocks and trees, Companion boon of the brooks, Through whose hoary tribes he hears and sees

The things that are not in books. He goes his way of do-and-dare, Led on by freely gleams, And lays him down with never a care By the campfire of his dreams.

Madison Cawein in Century.

SORROW AND I.

Have I known sorrow? Yea, sorrow hath been my guest, Hath walked beside me in the morn, The noontide and the quiet eve And often lingered in my dreams Till her pale face familiar seems.

Do I hate sorrow? Nay; sorrow hath brought me strength And calmness, and silent walking In the shadow of her somber robes, With trust in him who guides aright, Hath led me into glorious light. —Eliza M. H. Abbott.

WHEN I AM GONE.

WHEN I am dead if men can say, "He helped the world upon its way; With all his faults of word and deed, Mankind did have some little need Of what he gave," then in my grave No greater honor shall I crave.

IF they can say—if they but can—"He did his best; he played the man; His ways were straight; his soul was clean, His failings not unkind nor mean; He loved his fellow men and tried To help them," I'll be satisfied.

BUT when I'm gone if even one Can weep because my life is done And feel the world is something bare Because I am no longer there, Call me a knave, my life mispent—No matter; I shall be content.
