BALLOT BOXES STUFFED

IN PRIMARY ELECTION

Baltimore Judge and Clerks Presented on This Charge

GILBERT B. PORTER'S STATEMENT

One Satterfield Charged With Repeating and Election Officials in Seventh Ward, Fifth Precinct With Ballot-Box Stuffing.

With all the evidence needed to show that the ballots were not correctly counted in the recent primary in Baltimore, the grand jury has had presented for its consideration the statement of Gilbert B. Porter which tells of a ballot box stuffing and repeating in the fifth precinct of the Seventh ward of that city.

As outlined by Mr. Porter, the name was obtained of every man in the precinct who, it was expected, would be unable to vote, and then, with the collusion of the judges and clerks of the precinct, ballots marked for the organization candidates were placed in the boxes for each of these men and their names entered on the books as having voted.

Immediately upon hearing the evidence of Mr. Porter the grand jury presented Satterfield and the four judges and two clerks of the precinct.

Upon other evidence which, according to the statement of State's Attorney Owens, reveals "unmistakable evidence of fraud," the jury also presented the four judges and two clerks of the Seventh precinct of the Twelfth ward.

While the nature of the charges in the Twelfth ward presentments was not made public, it is reported that they are of the same nature as in the Seventh ward and that about nine names are marked as having voted on the registration books, notwithstanding that the men named did not go near the polling place on primary election day.

Mr. Porter's information regarding the alleged ballot box stuffing was obtained about two weeks ago, he says, from Satterfield, while the two were on their way by steamer from Cambridge to Baltimore. Mr. Porter says that Satterfield had been drinking freely, and was loquacious, so that it was no trouble to extract the information from him after he had made one or two boastful statements about what had been done in his precinct for the organization.

According to the story told by Satterfield, as related by Mr. Porter, just before the primary Satterfield made a canvass of the precinct to find out just what voters, for one reason or another, would not be able to come to the polling place to cast their ballots on election day. In that precinct there are a number of Bohemians, who frequently leave the city in search of work, and a canvass was quite successful, showing that about 30 of the voters would not be on hand.

Then, still according to the statement of Mr. Porter, Satterfield said he took this list to the judges, who placed, or allowed Satterfield to place, ballots marked for the organization candidates in the ballot box, one ballot so marked for every name on his list of those who would be unable to vote. These names according to the story, were then checked off on the registration books as having voted.

On this testimony Satterfield is charged with repeating, and the judges and clerks with ballot box stuffing. The penalty for either of the offenses is from one to ten years in the State Penitentiary.

By Wireless Across Pacific.

Wireless communication between San Francisco and Japan, a distance of 6,000 miles, was established last week. This is the first time that a wireless message has been received across the Pacific Ocean.

When the operator at Hillcrest station caught the signals he made them out to be the call for the Clive Maru, a steamer that is due to-day at Honolulu. He answered the signal and learned that the call came from the Japanese wireless station on Hokushu Island, in the northern part of the Japanese archipelago. The operators exchanged messages for some time.

Cornelius Bliss Dead.

Cornelius Newton Bliss, for years one of the prominent figures in national Republican politics and otherwise well known as a merchant and a member of the dry goods firm of Bliss, Fabyan & Co., died at his home in New York on Monday night.

GERMAN-AMERICANS HOT AFTER SECRETARY NAGEL

Never Will Vote For Republican President So Long as Commissioner Stays, Says Weissman.

At a meeting of the National German-American Alliance at Washington, Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel and Immigration Commissioner Williams, of New York, were verbally chastised. So bitter was the feeling against Secretary Nagel that a motion, made by John Tjarks of Baltimore, inviting him to appear and make an address before the convention, was withdrawn by its author before a vote on it was reached.

Henry Weissman, of Brooklyn, spoke against the Commissioner and told of an incident within his own knowledge of an alleged misapplication of the law by the New York Commissioner. He said that a German peasant who was well to do sold his possessions in Germany and came to America at the solicitation of relatives who lived in Iowa. Before sailing he contracted, through his kinsmen, for the purchase of a farm in that State. Arriving at New York with his family, including ten children, several of them grown, he was held up by Commissioner Williams because one of his children, a five-year-old boy, stuttered, said Mr. Weissman. It was ruled that the boy could not land in this country because he might become a public charge. Offers to furnish bond against such a happening failed to convince the Commissioner that it would be wise for the youngster to be allowed to land. An appeal was taken to Secretary Nagel, who sustained the ruling of Commissioner Williams. The father, unwilling to be separated from his son, returned to Germany.

Continuing his remarks Mr. Weissman said, "I have been a Republican all my life, but I announce that if Commissioner Williams is not removed I will vote for no Republican candidate for President. The Alliance should act as a unit to secure the removal of this arbitrary and undesirable official."

WILLIAM E. CURTIS WHO FOUND JESSE JAMES IS DEAD

When Chicago Reporter He Interviewed Jesse James in Desperado's Hiding Place in Wilds of Missouri.

William E. Curtis died on last Friday night in Philadelphia. Mr. Curtis was one of the most widely known newspaper men in America. One of his earliest "scoops," and one which greatly added to his reputation was that of getting an interview with the James boys while they were in the midst of their war with the authorities.

While detectives were endeavoring to locate the desperadoes Curtis, then a reporter for a Chicago paper, went out to Missouri, found their hiding place and calmly announced he had come for an interview with the bandits.

"We know what you're here for; you're a spy," was the reply of Jesse James. "What's more, you won't get away from here."

But the aggressive reporter talked to the James boys about his trip out there to see them so that he might put the truth about them before the public, and finally convinced them he was there for the purpose he stated.

"Well, I'm going to give you anything you want, just to satisfy you," Jesse James finally agreed.

And he did. He gave Curtis the most vivid interview anybody ever had had with him. Having accomplished his purpose the reporter returned to the nearest telegraph station and wired his "scoop" to his paper. But he kept faith with the men who had taken him at his word. He did not reveal any of the secrets of the rendezvous of the desperadoes, and he did not tell the detectives, who were searching for them, the location of their hiding place.

Englishwoman's Unique Suggestion.

Deploping the position and condition of her country politically Miss Peplow, in the London Standard, would have the women take up arms. She proposes compulsory military service. Miss Peplow's first suggestion as to how to bring about this consummation was to take a vow of celibacy for a period of five years, "or until such time as England shall be placed in a posture of defense commensurate with its wealth and responsibilities and worthy of its history."

The next suggestion is the formation of a "home defense army of women." "The men of England," she says "are too cowardly or too fond of their own ease and pleasure to fit themselves for defending their country and too greedy to pay specialists for doing it for them. The men of England do nothing. Apparently they are content to busy themselves with trifles, while the nation drifts toward disaster."

ITALIANS AND TURKS TO QUIT

THIS IS THE RESULT OF GERMAN DIPLOMACY

Suspension of Hostilities Announced in German Capital and Peace Negotiations Follow

NO CORROBORATIVE OFFICIAL STATEMENT HAS BEEN GIVEN OUT

Turkish Forces Try to Regain Tripoli But Accurate and Rapid Fire of Small Italian Force Scares Them Off.—Army of Occupation Lands on African Shore.—Some of the Benefits of the War Already Attained.—Slavery Abolished and Commercial Interests Protected.

It is believed that the armistice between Italy and Turkey, so earnestly sought by German diplomats, has been concluded and that peace negotiations will follow. This has not yet been announced officially.

The transportation of the Italian army of occupation will not be interfered with, but that hostilities in all quarters will cease. This is considered in Berlin as equivalent to the ending of the war or at least the warlike movements, which will now be succeeded by negotiations looking to a settlement.

It is regarded as probable that as soon as the strong Italian Army has once disembarked at Tripoli, even the Young Turk irreconcilables will begin to recognize, as apparently the Ottoman Government already does, that there is no hope of holding Tripoli from Italy. Then it will be possible for Turkey to enter into peace negotiations with the prospect of reaching a less unsatisfactory conclusion than would result from a continuation of the conflict.

Tripoli, which was taken by the Italians after several hours of bombardment, is still in their hands although an attempt was made by the Turks to surprise the garrison. The attack was made after night fall, the Turks sneaking up by taking advantage of every covering. The small force of Italians were aware of the advance but held their fire until only a few hundred feet separated them from the foe. Then, at a signal, a rapid fire was kept up and the Turks scampered for the desert.

The first division of the army of occupation arrived at Tripoli at noon Wednesday. The troops were safely landed without incident.

The fast transports were escorted by warships and accompanied by the hospital ship Regina d'Italia.

The disembarkation of the troops began immediately, the greatest enthusiasm prevailing.

The batteries of the fleet all through the night shelled the surrounding hills, which were swept by the searchlights. Tripoli has nothing more to fear from Turkish attacks.

There is a feeling in official circles at Berlin that Turkey and her sympathizers, as well as those elements which are antagonistic to Italy, are doing everything possible to engender opposition among the powers to Italy's plans, and it is believed that certain reports which have been circulated aim chiefly to play on Anglo-German antagonisms.

With this object, it is supposed, the report has been spread broadcast that Germany, having planned to obtain Tripoli from Turkey prior to the beginning of hostilities, will end by obtaining this important strategic point from Italy as a base for operations in the Mediterranean against British supremacy.

Advices from Tripoli sent by Rear-Admiral Borea d'Olmo, the Governor, and Captain Cagni, the commandant, say the sailors who have been in possession of the city have given splendid proof of their powers of resistance and endurance. Their numbers were small, and in addition to the great amount of work they have been compelled to do they had to guard against an attack by the enemy.

It is believed, however, that the Turkish troops were thoroughly disheartened, as, otherwise, being only one day's march from Tripoli and twice outnumbering the Italians, they might have attempted to recapture the place, or at least inflicted serious losses.

With Italian rule in Tripoli slavery has been abolished and the last African market on the Mediterranean Sea has been closed. Religious freedom is given all, and commercial concerns are given protection. The Arabs of the city have welcomed the change.

Hassund Karamanli is now Mayor of Tripoli by decree of King Victor Emmanuel. He sent a message of loyalty and devotion to the Italian sovereign, and the communication was also signed by other notables of Tripoli. It expressed their satisfaction at the Italian occupation of Tripoli, which they said represented the resurrection of their beloved country, which aspired to be once more, as at the time of the Romans, a source of prosperity and pride for the metropolis.

DECISION DIRECTLY AFFECTING DEPOSITORS

Your Money Deposited in State Savings Banks Can Not Be Taxed.—Millions of Dollars Involved.

An important decision affecting savings banks in the state was handed down last week by Judge Brashears, of the Circuit Court of Carroll county, at Westminster in the celebrated bank tax case. By it the savings banks have won a signal victory. The decision means that individual depositors are not liable to taxation on their deposits placed in the savings banks of the state. Millions of dollars of deposits were involved in the case.

Some months ago the Attorney General of Maryland asserted that individual depositors in the savings banks of Maryland could be taxed under the bank tax law, independent of the tax of one-quarter of 1 per cent. which the savings banks themselves paid to the state under the law.

The officials of the savings banks in Baltimore and the State of Maryland took issue with the Attorney General. The commissioners of Carroll county attempted to impose the tax on Mr. Henry Eck, who resided in that county. Mr. Eck appealed from the action of the commissioners, and the case was heard before Judge Brashears, in Westminster last month.

Priests With Portuguese Royalists.

The latest royalist expedition in Portugal which attacked an express train carrying troops is said to have been led by a priest. The expedition was a failure. Priests are taking an active part in the organization of guerrilla bands, and are leading them in the combat with uplifted crucifixes. The Monarchist flags are flying over the churches at Castallo Branco and Santo Thyrese. The Government is finding difficulty in handling the cavalry and infantry in the mountainous districts.

The Catholic party in Mexico decided to continue their campaign for Francisco De La Barra for vice president.

CONSUMPTIVES NEED NOT BE STUFFED

Journal of the Outdoor Life Points Out Errors in Tuberculosis Treatment.—How Much One Needs Eat.

Many traditions with regard to the feeding of tuberculosis patients and with regard to food in general, are given severe blows in a series of articles published in the October number of the Journal of Outdoor Life, the official organ of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Dr. John R. Murlin, of New York, Assistant Professor of Physiology at the Cornell University Medical College, holds in an article entitled "The Dynamic Principles of Nutrition," that a consumptive will gain weight and do well on three pints of whole milk, eight ounces of cream, five ounces of milk sugar, six eggs and two slices of buttered toast, as a ration for each 24 hours. The entire diet with the exception of the bread and butter could be prepared in advance and served for a cost of about 50 cents for the day. Miss Cecilia Flick of the Henry Phipps Institute of Philadelphia, also offers some sample diets which the ordinary family can prepare for even less than 50 cents a day.

Dr. David R. Lyman, of Wallingford, Conn., and Dr. Paul B. Johnson, of Washington, D. C., both agree that the ordinary person eats too much, and that the old notions about stuffing a tuberculosis patient at all times and seasons have been proven false. Dr. Lyman holds that eggs are not a necessary article of the consumptive's diet, and that a tuberculosis patient should eat anything that agrees with him that is nourishing. He thinks that a tuberculosis patient should eat only a little more than a person in ordinary good health.

Dr. Murlin compares the food we eat to the fuel used in furnishing steam and power for an engine. In selecting our food he says that we should eat enough to furnish energy for the day's work, but that much more than that is not needed. He holds that the appetite is not a necessity for good digestion. "There is no fallacy of nutrition," he says, "greater than that which supposes that a food cannot be digested and utilized without appetite." Most of the food we eat, fully four-fifths, goes to supply energy for our everyday tasks, while less than one-fifth goes to supply building material.

SEVENTH CONFERENCE CHARITIES AND CORRECTION

Some Startling Revelations in Paper on Maryland's Annual Typhoid Epidemic Are Promised.

The Seventh Maryland Conference of Charities and Correction will be held in Baltimore, November 27th, 28th and 29th, General Lawrason Riggs, of Baltimore, presiding. This year the program of the conference is divided between three committees: "Health and Sanitation," State, County and Municipal Philanthropy," and "Children, Families and Neighborhoods."

The committee on Health and Sanitation has gone into the matter of Maryland's annual typhoid epidemic and promises some startling revelations both for Baltimore city and for some of the counties.

The committee on State, County and Municipal Philanthropy will discuss the policy of Maryland in granting subsidies from the state treasury to private institutions, and the committee on Children, Families and Neighborhoods will discuss a number of topics related to the welfare of the poor in their various family and neighborhood relations. The associated boards of trade of Maryland will be asked to co-operate with the committees of the conference in securing a large attendance of county people and a wide publicity for the discussions of the delegates.

Panama Canal May Be Open in 1913.

At Bellingham, Wash., President Taft predicted that the Panama Canal would be ready for use on July 1, 1913, if nothing untoward happened. "The canal," he said, "is the greatest construction work since the Christian era. It has been promised for July 1, 1915, but I'll let you into the little secret when I tell you that you may see the first ship go through that canal on July 1, 1913."

Navy Needs $129,000,000.

It will cost, in round numbers, $129,000,000 to maintain the United States Navy and provide for suitable increase during the next fiscal year, according to the estimates just completed by Secretary Meyer. This includes a provision for two super-Dreadnoughts, probably of about the size of the projected Nevada and Oklahoma, which will displace about 23,000 tons, and a suitable number of auxiliaries.

WORD OR TWO ON ROADS

THE WAY NOT TO DO IT

And a Suggestion As to One or Two Ways To Do It

SPLIT-LOG DRAG IS EFFICIENT

It Takes a Rich Community To Be Able To Afford Luxury of Poor Roads.—Proper Treatment Will Be Found Most Economical.

The following, taken from the Star Farmer, was brought to this office by a subscriber with the request that it be published. It is headed "The Way Not To Do It."

The world is already afflicted with people who think they know it all. Furthermore the reputation which the "know it alls" enjoys is none the best.

So it hardly behoves a person to be constantly telling other folks what they should and should not do. If you were to tell the road overseers of the country how to make a road they would probably tell you to go to a warmer region, laugh at you, or give you a "cold eye of scorn," according to their mood at the time.

It happens, however, that many of these township or local road overseers are the very ones who think they know it all, when it comes to road building. At least no one but a person supremely confident of his own ability would be content to work a road and leave it in the condition usually found at this time of year when the overseers have finished.

Friend, it's possible that the roads in your part of the country are an exception to those found in the majority of communities. Let's hope they are.

After the usual road gang have "finished," the road, you will find that they have cut some beautiful ditches on each side of the roadway. Apparently their sole purpose is to make these ditches. If so, they succeeded fairly well if they provided an out-let as they so often fail to do.

Bus what about the road? The road? There isn't any.

It's been plowed up, shifted around until there is nothing left where the road should be but a long ridge composed of fine earth (the remnants of road ground up) and large clods. Nobody drives upon this ridge. Instead all drive along the two slanting sides which the grader left. Buggies will continue to slide and slide along these slides, (skidding the motorists call it) until their wheels have ground up several inches of nice fine dust.

Then some time this fall it will rain and this beautiful ridge of clods will absorb and hold this rain like a sponge.

Result—There will still be no road. Instead of the hard, well-packed road-bed which all summer has been getting hard and impervious to water, just like so much rubber or asphalt, we have a delightful series of mud holes, filled with the water supplied by the fine spongy soil that the allwise road boss, overseer, or whatever he calls himself, has made for us, in order to conform to tradition and draw his pay.

Now don't say these roads do not exist, for it was my extreme misfortune to ride over one just last week. The dust was three inches deep, on the sides which were so steep that the vehicle occasionally slid into the ditch. The clods and soft earth in the center were so high and loose that no horse would willingly walk on them. It had not as yet rained on this masterpiece in road building, but years of experience with similar roads easily enables one to forecast the result.

Woman Suffrage Lost.

The Supreme Court of the United States has convened, after a four-month recess, with over 800 cases awaiting its consideration.

WORD OR TWO ON ROADS

an improvement, so here is the suggestion, which of course, will never be heeded:

If roads simply must be torn up at the time of year when they have just become well packed, all the loosened earth which is raised to the center of the roadway should be packed down again with a roller, until it will shed water.

But you say heavy steam or horse-drawn rollers are expensive.

"True, but so are impassible roads. Some farm communities, not necessarily rich ones either, are up to date enough to use them. Besides it takes a rich community to be able to afford the luxury of poor roads.

Better still than tearing up a road-bed and grading it every season or so is the habit of dragging it with the road drag of the eminent Mr. D. Ward King. When such treatment is properly administered the crown of the road will remain well packed, the sides sloping, and folks will be able to go to town at all times of the year with happy faces.

Perhaps the money which the county pays the road boss to tear up the road could be expended in hiring an old man and a team to drag the roads all the time, thus obviating the neglect so apt to be accorded during the busy farm season.

The Girls as They Used to Appear.

Backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight, and give us a maiden dressed proper and right. We are so weary of switches and rats, Billy Burke clusters and peach-basket hats. Wads of jute hair in a horrible pile, stacked on their heads to the height of a mile. Something is wrong with the maidens, we fear. Give us the girls as they used to appear. Give us the girls we once knew of yore, whose curls didn't come from a hairdressing store. Maidens who dressed with a sensible view. And just as Dame Nature intended them to. Give us a girl with a figure her own and fashioned divinely by nature alone. Feminine style's getting fiercer each year—oh, give us the girls as they used to appear.—Sterling (Kan.) Journal.

Not in Favor of Treating.

With a royally festive "Kommers," at which old German songs were sung and the Fatherland as well as America praised in speech and toast, the sixth biennial convention of the National German-American Alliance came to a close at St. Louis on Monday. A resolution offered by Philip Rappaport, of Indianapolis, and adopted, called for the presentation to the next convention by the Executive Committee of the Alliance of a practical plan to do away with the custom of treating at public bars.

Baltimore's Fire Chief Hurt.

Fire in a candy factory in Baltimore on Tuesday besides causing considerable damage, was indirectly responsible for injury to Fire Chief Horton and resulted in a general scare in the neighborhood and the speedy desertion of School No. 21, at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Robert street, which is only a few yards from the burning building. The street was filled with people—mostly mothers of the hundreds of children in the school. The teachers assembled the pupils in fire drill and formation and all marched out in perfect order. All the employees of the candy factory escaped.

Fire Chief George W. Horton was seriously, but probably not fatally, hurt in a collision between his automobile and an ambulance, both speeding towards the blaze. He was thrown to the street and suffered numerous cuts and bruises, and probably internal injuries.

EACH METHODIST GIVES 80 CENTS A YEAR TO MISSIONS

Income of Missionary Societies in 1910 Was About $7,000,000.—Other Interesting Figures of Church.

The Rev. James Lewis of Cambridge, England, addressing the Ecumenical Methodist Conference in Toronto, stated that last year there were 2,528 Methodist foreign missionaries, of whom 918 were ordained ministers and 110 physicians, 53 of the latter being women. Native workers number 20,347, and there were 6,762 missionary stations and sub-stations. These missionaries represented 708,105 baptized Christians and 1,444,292 adherents, of whom 453,165 were Sunday school teachers and scholars.

The ordained ministry of Ecumenical Methodism at the beginning of 1910 was 52,678, of whom but 2,322, or 5 per cent., counting foreign and natives, were in the mission fields.

"Taking the average throughout the world," said Mr. Lewis, "there is one minister to every 174 Methodist church members. In heathen countries the ratio is one minister to every 303 members. The income of our missionary societies in 1910 was about $7,000,000 which represents a contribution of about 80 cents from each of the 8,751,434 Methodists."

Columbia with these figures steps into the top position for university attendance, occupied last year by Berlin.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

The Equal Franchise League of Emmitsburg assumes responsibility for all statements, facts and arguments published under this heading.

The Equal Suffrage Association, of Kansas City, Mo., has introduced in the city council an amendment to the city charter for recognition of women's votes in local Missouri politics. It provides that the matter be submitted at the next general election.

The Antigo Journal says: "If woman suffrage does not win out at the Wisconsin election in 1912, it won't be because the women didn't work hard enough. They are better politicians than the men. They are conducting a campaign of education before the heat of the campaign is upon them."

Six governors appeared before a large audience in Cooper Union, New York, on the night of September 16, and publicly advocated the principles of woman suffrage. Five were from the states where women vote on an equality with men and the sixth was the chief executive of South Dakota, who said he was there to express his sincere hope that his state would adopt the measure at the next election.

The Boston Equal Suffrage League
for Good Government is to have an authors' reading the last of this month for the purpose of raising funds to help in the California campaign. Mrs. Josephine Preston Peabody, Mrs. Inez
Haynes Gillmore, Will Irwin and Witter Bynner are among the authors who will read from their own works.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt and Dr.
Aletta Jacobs, who are travelling in South Africa, were the principal speakers at an immense suffrage meeting held in the city hall at Cape Town, arranged by the Women's Enfranchise-ment League. Sir James Rose-Innes, acting chief justice, presided. Lady Innes gave a luncheon party in their honor the next day, followed by a large at home. A week's festivities were brought to an end by a public reception given by the mayor of Cape Town, Sir Frederick Smith.

A mother has been judged in New York as not next of kin to her own son.
A case in hand was a young man killed in an accident. The father brought suit and would have been allowed damages, but he died and the mother could not collect damages, as by law she is not "next of kin" to her own son.

Equal Franchise League of Emmitsburg met at the home of the president, Mrs. E. L. Annan, Friday, October 6th.
Talks on various subjects were given by different members. Books sent out by the State Equal Franchise League have been a source of great benefit, and means of knowing just what the most prominent women of New York, and other cities have accomplished.
Next regular meeting, November, 3rd.

Under instructions from the Secretary of the Interior the Commissioner of the General Land Office released from withdrawal 560,765 acres of land

Nevada.

A discrepancy of over $2,288,271 between the material on hand and that

BOULEVERSEMENT

By SADIE OLCOTT

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

On a train from a great city to Lakeside, an aristocratic aggregation of suburban residences, a couple of ladies dressed in the height of fashion sat together and chatted.

"What do you think, Mrs. Runion," said one, "of the admission of Mrs.
Whitely into our set at Lakeside?"
"I don't see anything the matter with her, Mrs. Dugan."

"Of course there's nothing the matter with her; but, laws a mercy, just think of a woman who is making her own living trying to move among people with fortunes!"

"What does she do? Nothing disreputable, I'm sure."

"She's forewoman at Sturdevant's—in the cloak department, I reckon."
"She seems very ladylike. I've been told that she's better educated than any woman in Lakeside."

"What's education nowadays? I tell you, it's money that does the business."

"I'm sorry to admit that."
"How's Mrs. Whitely going to return the invitations she gets, I'd like to know?"

"I have understood that she hasn't accepted any of them yet. Mrs. Barbour and Mrs. Trask have been trying to get her "out" because she is so intellectual. They say we need more of that kind in our circle."

"That would be all right, but if you're going to bring in shop people you're not going to keep the circle very select, you can just bet on that."

When the train reached Lakeside, each of these ladies entered her automobile and proceeded to her home.
Mrs. Dugan picked up an open letter, addressed to her husband, lying on his desk, and read it. The following paragraph brought a pallor to her cheeks.

"It is only lately that I have learned through my wife that you are living in Lakeside. She recognized Mag Bunker, whom you married, as one of the leaders of fashion in Lakeside. I have instituted proceedings against you for obtaining money under false pretenses, in that the goods you sold to me in Wyoming were spoiled when you delivered them and received pay for them."

"I have not before this had the means to prosecute you, even if I had known your whereabouts. But I have just made a big sale of land to a railway corporation, on which my commissions are a couple of hundred thousand. This shall all be spent, if necessary, in landing you in jail."

Mrs. Dugan flew upstairs and found her husband in his bedroom in deep dejection.

"Well," she said, "I see that Whitely has found us. I smelt danger as soon as I saw his wife."

"Yes," he replied. "And it will take all we've got to settle and keep out of jail."

"Can't you make a bluff?"

"No."

"Well, brace up. We must go to the Turners' tonight. It won't do to give up our position in society till we have to."

"All right, Mag. I haven't seen Whitely yet. I don't know what I can do with him. I may save something. He'll probably be here tomorrow."

The couple "braced up" and went to the Turner reception. They received a shock there. Who should enter but Mrs. Whitely on the arm of her husband.

"Hello, Pat," said Whitely. "Hello, Mag. When did you drift east?"

"I'll see you in the morning, Mr.
Whitely," said Dugan obsequiously.

"Where shall I find you?"

"I have no place for talk. Suppose I come to your house?"

"Say 10 o'clock in the morning."

"Ten o'clock it shall be. You're looking well, Mrs. Dugan. I saw you yesterday in the train. I was sitting in the seat behind you."

Mrs. Dugan turned as red as a boiled lobster.

Neither Mrs. Whitely nor her husband interfered during the evening with the social standing of the Dugans, but the latter left early. The next morning Whitely called at Du-gan's residence and was admitted by a butler in livery. Introduced into Dugan's library—the books had been selected for him by another—the two sat down for a conference. Dugan offered $50,000 in settlement. Whitely said his loss had been $100,000 and he must have every cent.

"I can't raise the cash for a long time to come," replied Dugan, but I'll tell you what I'll do. This house and lot cost me $40,000. I give you $50,000 in cash and throw in the property."

Whitely accepted the proposition and the matter was closed.

The very next day the Dugans left their residence and the Whitelys took possession. Mrs. Whitely gave up her position. Pat Dugan was obliged to go to work bossing a gang of laborers, and his wife took in sewing. But Pat never recovered the grip he had lost, and his wife was thenceforth unknown
in society.

When it was announced that Mrs.
Dugan had left Lakeside and the Whitelys were in possession of her home, the village was agog. Every one knew that Mrs. Dugan had opposed Mrs. Whitely's entrance into society, which increased the interest in the change. But the reason for it never became known. Mr. and Mrs.
Whitely kept the secret.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scotch-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Lingular Hills and the Catoclin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.—Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

LAWS TO REGULATE EVERYTHING.

There is a law for this and a law for that. About the only things not regulated by law are a horse deal and religion. Each year a new batch of laws are hatched out and the death rate does not show a corresponding growth. We are blessed and cursed with laws. Ordinances grow like weeds and the legal libraries groan under the weight of calf-bound tomes. The printer thrives, it is true, and the paper maker smiles, but others grow batty trying to dodge the law in every day life. And this does not apply to the wayward and the unrighteous alone. It was not long ago that Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, of Princeton University, preached on this very subject. In part he said:

"We are living in an era of extensive and intensive law making. The books are crowded with statutes which keep every one busy interpreting them. We are living in an age where an attempt is being made to regulate everything by maxim. Nowadays a man hardly dares to buy a newspaper or blow his nose without first consulting the statute books and learn if there any laws regulating these affairs.

"We are living in a democracy where the new ruler has not the prerogatives of an Emperor of a

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Having accepted the nomination by the Democratic party of the State Senatorship of Frederick county, I feel that the due observance of a practice, entirely ethical in its character, constrains me to withdraw from the active management and editorship of THE WEEKLY CHRONICLE during the active campaign. Throughout that period Mr. E. L. Higbee, who has long been associated with me, assumes both management and editorial control.

Should there be any occasion for me to make a personal statement, however, it will appear over my own signature.

CONCERNING MR. GALT'S CANDIDACY.

Considers It Fortunate Opportunity to Vote For Such a Candidate.

Frederick Citizen:

Messrs. Editors:

Ask anybody in Emmitsburg or in Emmitsburg district for his opinion of Mr. Sterling Galt. That is the way to get a line on a public man—go to his home district. You will hear but one voice. You will be told that Emmitsburg has not had a better citizen in this generation than Mr. Galt. He has been progressive, leading in all public improvements, always alive to the interests of the people. Such a man should be called to a wider field of political activity and we feel confident that the voters of Frederick county will not be blind to the opportunity of securing his services as a faithful public servant at Annapolis. The nomination came to him without solicitation and he accepted it at a considerable personal sacrifice from a sense of duty to the people.

new house in other countries. There the new Emperor can wipe the new law slate clean and then establish his own laws. In a democracy the new ruler must by means of legislation establish the laws which are deemed desirable by him. Thus the change in the politics of our Government accounts for a great deal of legislation.

"Personal liberty has been restricted by laws, but it is right, and we all appreciate the right, of such laws. Perhaps there are laws on the statute books that are foolish and futile. Perhaps a great many laws ought to be changed or dropped altogether. But there is only one way to live. Abide by the laws as they are, no matter what we think of them. The loss of outward liberty is compensated by the gain in inward freedom.

"Our customs official is still busy, but the censor is gone with the ages, and free speech is much more important than free trade. It is far better to live in a State which prohibits you from carrying a gun than one which restricts your religious liberty. With religion we can live under any law."

PANKHURST OR SPANKHURTS.

The militant women of England stand forth in a new pose. Represented in the person of Miss Peplow they plan to do things. Miss Peplow, in this week's news, thrills the hearts of patriotic Englishmen and with the same voice speaks to their shame. She has made a proposition and it is something on this order: The formation of an Amazon guard. She and her

While he is a type of the new men that are rapidly coming to the front in American political life, Mr. Galt possesses the qualifications that especially fit him for the State Senatorship.

It has been written of him by one of his preceptors:

"Self-control, genial manners, thorough knowledge of human nature, and genuine kindness of heart guided by sound judgment and perfect integrity are qualities which united in one man endow him with the charm of personal magnetism. This Mr. Galt possesses. Wise, tactful, resourceful in adjusting conflicting interests and in settling difficulties, his abilities are of that order that will render his services invaluable in any position of trust and responsibility."

We consider Frederick county fortunate in having the opportunity to vote for a man who combines so many admirable qualities as does Mr. Galt.

A DEMOCRAT.

friends are willing to deny themselves husbands for a space of say five years, during which time they will grace the militia, and "England shall be placed in a posture of defense commensurate with its wealth and responsibilities and worthy of its history."

Will it work?

No, not under any circumstances.

If this army is of comely ladies it would be an incentive to the enemy to surround it, take it home; an irresistible attraction it would draw enemies as a light does the moth. If, on the other hand, it were homely, it would be an irritant to the foe and battles would be to the death with never a thought of surrender.

The cause of this startling proposition by the ladies who are enamored of the strenuous is the lack of spirit in the men. With shame they view the torpor of the English male and inspired by the forceful example of Mrs. Pankhurst they think they have hit on a plan to correct the condition. There are others, and by far more numerous, who rather follow Mrs. Spankhursts, and the plan they have hit on is the boy, by which process they think to irradiate the weak man.

THE man who played the piano continuously for twenty-seven hours has nothing on the girl who wears a hobble skirt and stilt-heeled shoes when it comes to endurance.

THE Wrights are trying to fly on wings like a buzzard's. Why not get on a bat? It's safer and cheaper.

Men Who Never Unveil.

There is a wandering tribe of the Sahara called the Tuaregs, a strange people, supposed by some to have descended from the crusaders and distinguished by the wearing of veils, a custom that has occasioned much discussion. The Tuaregs guard their eyes against the glare of the desert by two veils, one rolled round the temples and falling down in front of the eyes, the other reaching from the nostrils to the edge of the clothing, covering the lower part of the face. All manner of learned arguments have been adduced to explain this custom, but hygiene is obviously the only motive. This is shown by the statements of the Tuaregs themselves and by the sobriquet "mouths for flies," which they apply to all who do not wear the veils. It is said that the Tuaregs never remove their veils, even at meal-times. Indeed, they are so much a part of their wearers that any one deprived of such covering is unrecognized by his friends and relatives.

"Losing the Drop."

"When a man whips out a gun and get the drop on you there's nothing else to do but throw up your hands and let him have whatever he wants."

"That's where you fool yourself," said the man from the southwest. "If a man has the nerve he can face a gun and get away with it—sometimes."

I remember seeing in a border saloon an Englishman pull a gun on a Mexican whom he had caught cheating in a game of cards.

"You give me back the money you've won from me or I'll blow your head off!"

"You will?" said the Mexican, looking calmly into the muzzle of the Englishman's revolver. "Well, you won't do it just now; that gun's not loaded."

"What's that?" exclaimed the Englishman, turning the revolver toward himself to look into the chambers. And on the instant the Mexican drew a knife and planted it to the hilt in the Englishman's stomach.—New York Times.

A Styrian Peasant Superstition.

A lawsuit for libel brought by an apothecary in Pollau, in Styria, against a young peasant reveals an extraordinary superstition prevalent among the country people. They believe that apothecaries and doctors have the right to kill at least one man and one woman every year in order to make medicines out of their bodies. An accidental movement of the apothecary at Pollau, Herr Kobermauser, when giving medicine to a boy named Putz led the latter to believe he was going to be killed. He ran away, but got such a fright that he fell ill. The inhabitants believed his story and boycotted the apothecary, who was at length compelled to prosecute. Putz was sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment, but his parents, who had spread the story, were acquitted on the ground that they had acted in good faith.—London Standard.

One Use of the Eel.

It is difficult to exhaust the uses of the eel. Experts in top whipping pronounce a dried eel skin an admirable lash, and tops are by no means the only victims thereof. There is that affecting passage in Mr. Pepys's diary: "April 24, 1663. Up betimes, and with my salt eel went down in the parlor and there get my boy and did beat him till I was fain to take breath two or three times. Yet for all I am afraid it will make the boy never the better, he is grown so hardened in his tricks, which I am sorry for, he being capable of making a brave man and is a boy that I and my wife love very well." "Salt eel" appears to have been a nautical term for a rope's end, and it is not certain that Pepys's instrument of chastigation was actual eel's skin. But the original "salt eel" laid its mark.—London Chronicle.

Wild Parrots Are Fighters.

Parrots when in their native wilds live in flocks and guard themselves by a complete police system which enables them to marshal their collective force quickly when any animal or bird attacks one of their number. They seem to be disciplined and trained in fighting together, and all other birds and animals are afraid to attack a parrot unless the bird can be caught alone. Even then a shrill call summons the parrot army to the rescue. It is said that in the forests all parrots die of old age and that none is ever killed by birds of prey or other wild animals.

St. Martin and the Dictionary.

St. Martin when he divided his cape with a naked beggar at the gate of Amlens gave also two words to the English language. The oratory in which this torn cape was preserved as a sacred banner acquired the name of "chapel" (from the French "chape"), the custodian being termed "chaplain," and thus our English words "chapel" and "chaplain" are derived.—Westminster Gazette.

Occupation.

Let every man be occupied, and occupied in the employment of which his nature is capable, and die with the consciousness that he has done his best.—Sydney Smith.

Not Much.

Jack—Would you like to live your life over again? Tom—And owe twice as much as I do now. No, sir!—Boston Transcript.

More Useful.

Bride Elect—What would you have thrown instead of rice? Brutal friend—A few grains of common sense.—Judge.

Awed by the Servant.

The amusing mistake once made by two Abyssinian delegates of the Emperor Menelik to France is narrated by the Paris Gaulois. Awed by the splendor of his gold lace uniform and the solemnity of his imposing manner, they mistook the usher at the door of the foreign minister's office for M. de Selves himself. As they were brought into the anteroom the usher was standing with his hands on the door handle ready to announce them. But at the sight of his silver chain his medals, his sword, his gold topped cane and his three cornered hat the Abyssinians could not be expected to know they were in the presence of a mere servant. So bowing low repeatedly, they approached him slowly and with great respect until they were within reach of his contails, which, one on either side, they seized in their hands and kissed. The usher did not know what to do, but the appearance of the minister relieved the situation.

Bathing In Gold.

A Parisian journalist who had speculated in railway shares won 200,000 francs as the result of a lucky venture. Drawing it in gold, he proceeded to a hotel, emptied the bags of gold in the bed and went to sleep literally in the sands of Pactolus. The man was so crazed by his good fortune that he found indescribable pleasure in reveling in a golden bath.

Paganini, the violinist, when he received the proceeds of his concerts (he insisted upon being paid in gold) used to wash his hands in sovereigns.

A French novelist, Soule, wrote a book called "The Memoirs of the Devil." It was successful. The publishers paid him for the first volume $10,000 in gold. The author carried the gold to his bedroom, poured it into a foot bath and enjoyed for half an hour the excitement of moving his feet to and fro in a bath of gold coins, smoking meanwhile the biggest of Havanas.

Old Leather Bottles.

Leather bottles, or blackjacks, were common in Europe two centuries ago. The bottles were often made of one skin doubled up and closely stitched together, leaving an aperture for the neck. The thick piece between was inserted for the slip. It was meant to be slung at the back, a leather thong passed through two loops placed on either side of the neck, and it was sufficiently flat at the base to stand when put down. The stopper was made of wood, horn or old leather. A good deal of care was required in the preparation of the leather, which had to be oiled and worked with hammers to make it supple and then washed with a lye so that all the impurity was entirely removed, leaving the leather clean and dry. No moisture or air had any effect on it. Blackjacks were, in fact, dragons made in various sizes. They were sometimes pitched inside.

A Hair Trigger Constitution.

"Some one has said that animals have a hair trigger constitution, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. They go off on the slightest provocation, because they act from impulse. They do not know how to control themselves. The animal instinct dominates."

Self control is the first condition of all achievement. It is said that the first sign of insanity is the loss of self control. When a person is no longer the master of his own acts he is not only in danger, but any degree of achievement is impossible to him.

Every thought tends to result in an act, so that thought always leads. The mental attitude at any moment is the pattern which the life processes weave. The lives of many of us are grotesque crazy quilts.

Lung Capacity of Corset Wearers.

The lung capacity of the average woman who does not wear corsets is about 2,800 cubic centimeters, or 171 cubic inches; of one who is in the habit of wearing corsets only 2,200 cubic centimeters, or 134 cubic inches, so that the capacity of the normal and unrestricted lungs is about 27.3 per cent more than that of those which have been compressed by the corset.—Scientific American.

A Technical Mind.

"What in the name of common sense are you arresting me for?" asked the motorist who had accidentally violated a regulation.

"I ain't arrestin' you in the name of common sense," replied the rustic sheriff. "I'm arrestin' you in the name of the law."—Washington Star.

Self Educated.

"But don't you think you could learn to love me?" he inquired of the beautiful heiress.

"Pa always said I was hard to learn," she replied tantalizingly. "But I am not a book," he protested. "Oh, I can read you all right," she answered.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Longevity.

"Longevity? I should say longevity did run in the family," said Mrs. Spriggins. "Why, John was six foot two, Bill was six foot four, and George had more longevity than any man I ever see. He was six foot seven if he was a foot."—Exchange.

Consideration.

Kindly words, sympathizing attentions, watchfulness against wounding men's sensitiveness—these cost very little, but they are priceless in their value.

From the Fountain.

Nell—Maude always uses a fountain pen. Belle—Her letters are rather gushing, aren't they?—Philadelphia Record.

Embryonic Ones.

They had been at school together. They had fought both shoulder to shoulder and face to face. Now, after the passing of years, they met again.

"How's the world treated you?" asked the long, thin one.

"Like a lord," said the short, fat one. "Got my own business, wife and three youngsters, two thousand a year. And how are you?"

"How?" replied the thin man. "Oh, anyhow!"

"Dear me! Sorry to hear it. Let me think. You went on the stage, didn't you?"

"Yes. But I had to give it up."

"Why was that?" asked the city man.

"Oh, I thought it best," said the other. "I had a few hints that I wasn't quite suited to the profession."

"Oh, I see," nodded his friend knowingly. "The 'little birds' told you, eh?"

"Well, not exactly," answered the exactor, with a painful smile. "But they would have been birds—if they had been allowed to hatch."—London Answers.

French Schoolboy Knowledge.

It does not seem to be a difficult matter for the pupils of primary schools to obtain certificates, if one may judge from some specimens of their answers at examinations published by the Paris Journal. Here is a sample, among others, of a written answer to the question: "Which period of French history do you prefer, and why?"

"The period of the history of France that I prefer is the war of 1870. Bismarck said to Napoleon III., 'Es-tu pret?' 'Yes,' says the other, 'I have not a galter button wanting.' Then Napoleon III. tells McMahon to come. But McMahon, who was on the tower of Malakoff, replies, 'J'y suis, j'y reste.' I detest war because it is a barbarism."

As the Paris Journal remarks, it is sad to think these lads, who are on the point of becoming apprentices, will probably never open a book again and in a few years will be electors.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

Origin of "Plagiarist."

One who appropriates—that is, steals—the literary work of another to use it as his own thought, the child of his own brain, is guilty of plagiarism, as everybody knows, yet few are acquainted with the derivation of the word or know that the plagiarist is literally a child stealer. Among a certain class of criminals in Rome in the time of the earlier Caesars, there existed the damnable custom of stealing children and selling them as slaves. According to Roman law, the child stealers, when detected, received as a part of the penalty for their crime, a severe flogging. As the Latin word plaga signifies a stripe or lash, the ancient kidnappers were termed "plagiarist"—that is, deserving of stripes. So both the crime and the criminals received their names from the castigation inflicted.

The Coup de Monserrat.

The history of the sword stroke the Parisian fencers call the "coup de Monserrat" is romantic. The hero of the story was a young Parisian musician engaged to be married to a young lady of Bordeaux. Quarreling with a cousin of his fiancée, he got his ears boxed at the Bordeaux club. Ignorant of fencing, he dared not resent the insult and renounced his engagement. But he also took fencing lessons from one Monserrat, a maitre d'armes of Toulouse. Monserrat taught him one trick only, and he practiced it for a year. At the end of that time he returned to the Bordeaux club, slapped his man's face and, being called out, instantly ran his opponent through the body with his cunning lunge.

Grease Versus Gravity.

A professor in Yale university delights in telling of his experience with an inventor of the unlettered genius type who came to the professor with a model of a perpetual motion machine.

"H'm; looks plausible," observed the professor, "but it won't work. What are you going to do about gravity?"

"Gravity?" said the visitor scornfully. "Tell wit' gravity; I'll use plenty of grease."—Cosmopolitan.

The Good Time Coming.

Hop Sing is a Chinese laundryman with a cheerful though somewhat unusual philosophy. After bewailing the hard times and lack of business he added smilingly, "Bimeby everybody be rich, velly rich, bimeby." "How's that?" "Alla poor people got no money; no can eat. Then alla poor people die."—Argonaut.

Carried to Extremes.

"She is simply mad on the subject of germs and sterilizes or filters everything in the house."

"How does she get along with her family?"

"Oh, even her relations are strained."—Stray Stories.

Correct.

Defeated Candidate—You encouraged me to run for office. You know you did. You said you thought I wouldn't make a bad alderman.

Trusty Henchman—Well, the returns seem to show that I was right.—Hartford Times.

A Stickler.

"Well, what?"

"What is the difference between seeing your own finish and drawing your own conclusions?"

FASHIONS ON THE WING.

Colors and Materials That Will Be Popular in the Fall.

Brown—a brownish red—is going to be the new color in the fall for street suits, with dark green running it a close second. Cobalt, or raven's wing blue, an exclusive color of last winter, forges to the front this season.

A new veiling has a cobwebby background, upon which are large flower designs outlined in small chenille dots the size of a pin head. They are meant to be worn loose, after the fashion of the present popular soft meshed white and black veils, and the effect of the dots standing out apparently in space with no support is quite startling.

Sailor collars of satin or silk are now veiled with black or white chiffon.

Satin and velveteen are predicted as the leaders in suit materials for the fall.

A novel and pretty conceit from Paris is colored sashes with shoes to match.

The skirt with separate panels is a favorite one just now and is utilized in a number of ways. This one may be made of one material throughout or of one fabric for the skirt and another for the panels.

SCHOOL DRESSES.

Dainty and Practical Clothes For Young Girls.

School dresses for girls of eight or ten years of age this fall are wonderfully pretty, though simple in treatment. The Peter Pan and middie suits depart a little from type this season.

SMART COAT FOR YOUNG GIRL.

The skirts are plaited, but the blouses are less "blousy" and odd trimming effects are used.

A new feature on school dresses is the dark guilpe of chiffon cloth or silk that is replacing the white yoke. The color used matches the dress material or trimmings.

Challie, serge and panama in checked and striped designs are the fabrics most employed for everyday gowns. And the challie is particularly recommended this year as a material for school dresses.

Close fitting felt hats with ribbon or bands of wool embroidery is the best looking school hat.

The half fitting coat with a big collar is exceedingly smart. One of the latest models is pictured. It is buttoned over in double breasted style and serge is the material used.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

This May Manton pattern is cut in sizes for misses of fourteen, sixteen and eighteen years of age. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, 7108, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage, which insures more prompt delivery.

AN ARISTOCRATIC CIRCLE

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Tom Tomkins, the son of a rich packer, having no occasion to work, went abroad. He landed at Naples and took a train for Rome.

The railway coaches over there are built in compartments, and in a compartment with Tom was a lady traveling with her maid. The mistress appeared to be a highborn dame, and her maid treated her with unbounded reverence. The two conversed in a foreign language, though Tom, not being a linguist himself, couldn't tell whether it was Italian or French. It might have been Latin for all he knew.

Tom tried to get some information from the conductor, but failed, and the lady kindly came to his assistance in broken English. This started a conversation between her and him, during which it came out that she was the Princess Bobbeloni and that he was Mr. Thomas Tomkins of the United States. Furthermore, Tom let out during the ride to Rome that his father was an American millionaire. He didn't tell it in so many words, but managed to get it in so that he might show something to make him seem worthy of the notice of an Italian princess.

And here it should be explained that princes and princesses in Italy don't necessarily belong to the royal family. Italy formerly was broken up into small tracts or principalities. They are now united in a kingdom, but their princely families retain their titles.

Before reaching home the Princess Bobbeloni became very gracious to Signor Tomkins, as she called him, and invited him to visit her in her villa on the outskirts of Rome. But he was not to call for a week, since the place had been closed and needed to be opened. She took his address and promised to send him hers later. From something she said Tom gathered that she desired time to ask the American minister something about him.

The week passed, and Tom waited impatiently at his hotel without receiving any word from the princess. But a couple of days later a liveried servant called and presented a little note with a crest on it containing an invitation for 5 o'clock English tea at her villa. Tom presented himself at the hour named and found the lady in a sumptuous home.

"Ah, Signor Tomkins," she said in charming broken English, "I am glad to see you. I confess that having met you as a stranger I thought it prudent to make inquiries about you. And I am happy to announce that they have resulted satisfactorily. If there were titles in your country you would be at least a baron."

"Thank you very much," said Tom in bad Italian.

"How quickly you are picking up our language," replied the princess. "You will soon speak it like a native."

Tom drank tea with the princess, spending a delightful hour with her; then she dismissed him, saying: "I will be happy to have you meet some of my friends. Let me see—this evening there is a court ball; tomorrow I dine with the Duchess of Chevrin; Thursday I am free. Have you any engagement for that evening?"

Tom said he had, but he would break it for the inestimable privilege of meeting the princess' friends. His evening was free, but with true American instincts he didn't propose to cheapen himself.

On the proposed evening Signor Tomkins presented himself at the princess' villa and was introduced to several princes, an English duchess, who was found useful as an interpreter, and other magnates. They were all very civil to Tom, considering that he was a titleless American, and he was delighted at mingling for the first time in his life with a real aristocracy.

Card tables were set, and the princess proposed bridge whist. Tom was honored by being placed at the hostess' table and especially so by having her for a partner. One of the gentlemen proposed to make the points 5 francs, but the princess would not consent to more than a franc.

Tom did not wonder that she objected to a sizable stake, for she proved a very poor player. She and Tom began to lose with the first game and lost steadily. Then the princess figured that she had lost 2,500 francs, or $500. This seemed to trouble her, and she proposed to make the points stand for 10 francs each in order to recoup. Tom was a loser equally with her, but did not object. Meanwhile refreshments were served, including wine.

As the princess lost she kept proposing to double the stakes, and at midnight Tom found himself playing for $20 a point and had lost $7,000. His partner was plunging desperately to regain her losses and raising the stakes with every plunge. At 3 in the morning Tom and the princess were losers each to the amount of $25,000, and Tom, who usually could drink as much as any one, found himself affected by the wine. At daylight he gave checks on his bankers for his losses, and, as the princess begged him to do the same for her, he consented.

The next afternoon Tom woke up and went to his bankers, to find that he had given checks for $75,000.

This didn't trouble him, but when he went to the princess' villa to leave a card he found it deserted. It had been hired for the occasion. His introduction to aristocratic European society had been costly, and the society had been swindlers.

RARE MUSICAL OPPORTUNITY

Gifted Pianist To Give Recital in Emerald Hall Next Monday, Oct. 16.

On Monday evening Mrs. W. S. Russell will give a piano recital in Emerald Hall. It has been sometime since Emmitsburg has been given the privilege to hear an artist and never a more skilled one than Mrs. Russell.

Her musical education was completed in Europe under the eminent Moszkowski and her particular talents have been recognized both here and abroad.

Emmitsburg is very fortunate to have this opportunity and a representative audience should be present.

New Reservoir For Thurmont.

For some time the Thurmont water company has had trouble with the dam across High Run and to better conditions it was decided to have a more up-to-date means of storing up water. The new reservoir will be made much larger than the old, it being 43 feet across the breast, the wall rising 6½ feet at the spillway. Retaining walls 80 feet long and 8½ feet high have been built on the sides of the stream. This dam is said to have a capacity of 156,500 gallons of water.

Emerald Hall, Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Piano Recital—Admission 25 and 35 cents. Tickets on sale at CHRONICLE Office and Zacharias' Store.

Monster Radish and Sweet Potato.

During the week there has been exhibited in THE CHRONICLE window a monster radish and a huge sweet potato. The radish was grown in Mr. E. Moser's garden and is about 6 inches in diameter. It looks like a six inch shell. The kind they use in the navy.

The sweet potato was grown by Mr. H. F. Maxwell and weighs six pounds. If there are any larger specimens of either radishes or sweet potatoes grown we have not seen them.

MOUNTAINEERS SCORE

ON CARLISLE INDIANS

Fullback Flannery Injured in Collision With Tackling Dummy.—Locals Improving Under Thompson.

Last Saturday Mount St. Mary's football team was defeated by the Carlisle Indians 46 to 5. But the fact that the Mountaineers scored on one of the best teams in the country compensates for the overwhelming defeat.

Good, cold weather and a big crowd greeted the contesting teams. Carlisle won on the coin's flip, and Thorpe kicked off to Loughran, who fumbled. Thorpe secured the ball, and after a brief period of play was thrown across the line for a touchdown. Both teams fumbled and kicked alternately in the first quarter, and the Indians pulled off nice inside kicks and end runs in the second. Malloy secured an Indian fumble near the end of the contest and raced 60 yards, followed by a string of Redskins, for a touchdown.

Flannery, the visiting fullback, went out of bounds on a tackle and hurt his back by bumping a tackling machine nearby.

What promises to be one of the best football games of the season will take place on Echo Field Saturday when Washington College of Chestertown will be the guest of the Mountaineers.

This game is really a battle between the Eastern and Western Shores. The last-time these two teams came together was in 1908 during the centennial celebration. The game resulted in a draw neither team being able to cross the goal line. With this in their favor the Eastern Shoremen will come to the mountain just full of courage. The College although defeated by the Indians learned a good lesson in the great college game and vast improvement will no doubt be shown in their conflict Saturday.

The practice during the past week has been very hard, as Coach Thompson has been driving the boys to the limit. New plays and formations have been gone over and from the way the team has been going it looks as though the local collegians will take their friendly rivals into camp. The team will line up a little differently than they did in the Indian game, some of the second string men will be given a try-out. All the boys are in good condition and as Washington College have been putting up a strong game some good football should be witnessed. The game will be called at two o'clock.

The charge to Rev. Taylor was delivered by Rev. D. W. Woods, Jr., who served the congregation as pastor for fifteen years. The charge to the congregation was delivered by Rev. George F. H. J. Brinkerhoff, Sr., the oldest resident of Gettysburg, celebrated his 98 birthday at his home on Baltimore St. last Friday.

Gettysburg College football team was defeated by State on Saturday at State College by the score of 31-0. The Gettysburg team was weakened by the absence of Captain Brumbaugh at right end, Keller at guard and Beagle at tackle.

The Philadelphia Ledger of Sunday says:

"Captain Brumbaugh was missed at right end. The end missed tackle after tackle and were slow in following the ball. The first two touchdowns were made in six minutes, Barrett kicked off. Captain Very, by speedy work secured the ball on Gettysburg 45 yard line and ran 30 yards. Mauthe then went through centre for five yards. Berryman made three yards on a line plunge and Mauthe went over for the first score.

"Miller stirred the 4000 spectators often by his running back punts, often shaking off tackles. He carried the ball twice half the length of the field before he was downed. Mauthe kicked a splendid goal from placement, his first attempt falling short of the cross bar by a few feet.

"The Battlefield boys' line held State on their own five-yard line four times through the defense play of Lawyer, Dayhoff, and Leathers in the backfield. Miller, who took Beidelman's place at left half-back, made some brilliant tackles and banded punts in fine style."

The National Association of Railroad Commissioners recommends that the business of the express companies be taken over by the railroad companies.

BE WISE; STICK TO FARM.

It Stands For Everything Attractive, Wholesome and Profitable.

For the restless boy or girl who wants to go away from the farm and get out into the big world to do something, no better bit of earnest reading can be found than this extract from the New York Independent.

"The new farm children," it says, "live a third dispensation. The sciences began to take hold of the land at least fifty years ago, but there was an off-clearing necessary. The transition period was protracted, mainly because the land was already in possession of a race of farmers that must die off."

"The agricultural college applied the sciences to tillage and to crops and to animal life on the farm twenty-five years ago. It was slow work, not only to awaken the farmer, but to investigate, discover, and then to apply. The age is now rapidly falling into the hands of men who are alive to the great fact that production has never yet approached its maximum. The orchard has all this while, thanks to moths and caterpillars, become more and more an entomological laboratory. Gradually it has come about that not a thing can be grown on the land without a fight. This has not by any means been a permanent loss, but has awakened a spirit of scientific examination and determination to master conditions. The microscope and the crucible are as necessary today as the plow and the hoe. The farm boy is not without stimulus, nor is he without interesting conditions; rather it will now take the brighter boys to do the farming."

"The development of farm machinery and the application of new forces on the land have gone on at the same time. In every department of the home, in the house as well as in the barn, machinery takes the place of men, and the help problem is now driving us to a still more complete age of mechanism."

"There is no lot on earth so enviable today as that of an American farm boy or girl. They have room, fresh air, beautiful surroundings, while the arts and sciences are involved in their work, and isolation is absolutely abolished."

"Nothing can be gained any longer by quitting the farm. It stands for everything that is attractive, wholesome and profitable; but at the same time it stands for the new and the stimulating. Country life cannot be made dull, unless it wilfully severs itself from advantages that are freely offered."

WILD MUSTARD GREAT PEST.

Not Useful Like Its Eatable Cousins, but an Indefatigable Menace.

About as troublesome a weed as the farmer the world over has to deal with is the charlock or wild mustard. It is prolific in the extreme and, unlike its black and white cousins, is not only worthless, but harmful. About the only way to control it is to use a spray made up of either a 2 per cent solution of copper sulphate or a 15 per cent solution of iron sulphate. The quantity needed is from fifteen to twenty gallons to the acre, and American grain growers go after it with a sort of watering cart.

It is particularly obnoxious in wheat fields, not only choking growth, but making the harvesting of the crop a matter of great difficulty.

Creek an Ideal Farm Hand.

A wideawake farmer noticed that his creek, if dammed at a certain place, would produce a six foot waterfall. He built a dam and put in a water wheel—a $300 turbine that yielded twenty-five horsepower. Over the water wheel he built a powerhouse in which he placed a dynamo for the water wheel to run. The electricity was wired 1,700 feet to the farm buildings.

Then he put his electricity to work in every possible place about the premises. He heated and lighted the house, did the cooking and the washing and ironing, did the sweeping and dusting, beat eggs—and at three different speeds too—turned the ice cream freezer and in summer ventilated the house with fans.

Now with a vacuum milking machine he milks twenty cows, two at a time; drives the cream separator, churns, pumps water into every room in the house and into the stall of each horse and cow, drives lathes and drills in a workshop, drives a circular saw to cut cordwood and drives an ensilage cutter. It pays to be up to date.

THE MONEY MAKING MULE.

The mule is a slave animal. At two years he is ready to do considerable work and will from that age on make a profit over and above his feed and expense bill in the value of his labor and at the same time be growing more valuable until four or five years old, at which age he will command the top of the market in his age class.

FILLING THE SILO.

Many a farmer will be confronted in the course of a few weeks with the job of filling the silo for the first time. For such a few suggestions taken from an Iowa bulletin which gives the silo experience of dairymen and feeders in different parts of the country will be timely. As to the proper time for cutting corn for the silo there seems to be quite general agreement that it is ready to cut when it would be ready to shock—that is, when the kernels are dented and when the outer husks and lower leaves are turning brown. While the length into which the corn should be cut vary with different users, from one-half to three-fourths of an inch gives a finer silage which can be packed into the silo more closely, in which there is less waste in feeding and which increases the capacity of the silo considerably. Slow and rapid filling have points in their favor, but the latter method is followed by a majority, as it gives a more uniform quality of silage, obviates the necessity of putting up corn that is too green or too dry and is also the more economical way. With rapid filling a second filling is usually necessary about ten days after the first silage has been put in. The more uniformly and thoroughly the silage is packed down as it is put in the better the quality and the longer it will keep. In distributing the silage the outer edge should be kept about two feet higher than the center and kept especially well packed. The work of tamping may be done by foot, but cement tampers give even better results. This tends to make the silo more completely air tight and reduces loss from mold to a minimum. In the case of wooden silos any opening that would let air into the silage should be filled with soft clay. In case the corn used is overmature and dry the silage should be moistened as it is run in. In topping off the silo some use chaff or cut straw; others soak the top with water and seed with oats, which sprout and form a nearly air tight mat. The cost of filling the silo varies with different outfits from 40 cents to $1 per ton—that is, this is the total cost from the standing corn in field to the shredded product packed in the silo. The larger the outfit the lower the cost of filling, as a rule. The process of fermentation which converts the green corn into silage requires about ten days. If not used at once the top, which is likely to become moldy, should be removed and used as manure, as the feeding of it is often accompanied with serious results.

HOMESTEADING IN THE DRY COUNTRY.

Not with a view to creating prejudice against the vast country lying between meridian 100 and the Rocky mountains, but simply as a warning to some who have made entry on homesteads in the semiarid country and who have had no experience with dry farming methods, we would bring two or three things to their attention which may save them a lot of grief in the end. In the country referred to, where the annual rainfall is less than sixteen or eighteen inches per year, it is only practicable to raise a crop every other year, the land having to lie fallow each alternate season in order that enough moisture may be stored up to insure a crop the following year. This means that one must have considerable ready cash before starting out in such a dry country, not only for the purchase of necessary equipment for the working of a half section or more of land (it does not pay to work less than this), but a surplus to tide one over seasons when nothing is produced. It is well to remember, too, that in years of extreme drought, such as the last two have been, practically nothing can be produced. In one instance the writer knows of a homesteader who went to the country referred to who had just one decent paying crop in eleven years. A little was produced in three or four other seasons, but hard enough to furnish forage for the animals which had to be kept on the farm. This may be an extreme experience, but it is cited as showing what some men run up against when they cast their lot in the semiarid country.

THE TORRENS TITLE SYSTEM.

If there is any one need more than another that is apparent in the realm of civil procedure it is that of a simpler system of transferring title to real estate. In numerous cases this matter of giving a clear title is a veritable bugbear, not only from the standpoint of a possibility that some flaw will be found in it, but also in the matter of securing an abstract of title. Cases are not infrequent in which such transcript of the pedigree of real estate will run from $50 to $200. It is apparent that if the welfare of land holders were considered a new system would shortly be adopted, but the system so generally in vogue gives a far revenue for lawyers and abstractors; hence it is kept up. The Torrens title system lately adopted in Canada gives relief from the expense and red tape of the American method. On the transfer of a parcel of land the seller surrenders to the purchaser his title. This is sent to the government department having charge of land records, together with a nominal fee. Thereupon there is made out and sent to the buyer of the land a title thereto, which, though not larger than half a sheet of newspaper, is evidence of absolute ownership, safeguarding the owner against scheming lawyers, clerical errors and pusillanimous technicalities of one kind and another.

THE PARTING.

Not a kiss, not a tear,
Not even so much
As an uttered word,
Not a touch.

Oh, the passion, the pain,
So coldly to part!
But I gave you one look—
And my heart.

You will pardon me then,
And you understand
That my soul is yours,
Not my hand.

A DISAPPOINTING STUDENT.

HAROLD'S through with college.
Father's disappointed;
Harold's filled with knowledge.

Brain is double jointed.
But that's not the oddest
Feature of our Harold;
He is very modest.
Quietly appeared.

Father's vexed completely.
He was fairly yearning
To deliver sweetly
Some remarks on learning.
He expected Harold
To come homeward bringing Books of songs he'd caroled,
Thinking he was singing.

He expected also
Harold would be yelling
Things the students bawl so,
Which defy all spelling.
Harold's big diploma
Simply threw his father
In a state of coma,
Causing lots of bother.

Father had some roasting Ready to deliver
To stop Harold's boasting
And to make him shiver—
Sentences sarcastic
Would his thoughts betoken
In a manner drastic.
They remained unspoken.

Harold's through with college.
House is in a pother.
He's come back with knowledge
More than that of father.
Still, he's very modest.
You would scarcely know it.
For, you see, the oddest
Thing is he doesn't show it.

THE SOUTHERN VOICE.

In the trees of the south there's a song tonight,
And their haunting and exquisite music I hear
As the tall pines swing in the wind and they wail,
And a voice that's as sweet and as soft and as clear
As a silvery flute or the sound of a lute Comes free through the years that forever have fled,
Comes free from the wonderful days
that are dead.

PHILOSOPHY.

Ever see a buzzsaw
Walk into your house?
Ever see the cheese bait
Walk to catch a mouse?

Ever see an ice hole

Ever see the powder
Walk to meet the brand?

Point of observation
Must be plain to view.
Don't you trouble trouble,
It won't trouble you.

"RULE, BRITANNIA."

WHEN Britain first, at heaven's command,
Arose from out the azure
main
This was the charter of the land
And guardian angels sang this strain:
Rule, Britannia, rule the waves;
Britons never will be slaves.

The nations, not so blest as these,
Must in their turns to tyrants fall,
While thou shalt flourish, great and free,
The dread and envy of them all.
Rule, Britannia, rule the waves;
Britons never will be slaves.

Mother Loon Teaching Her Children to Dive

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

When the Little Loons Learn To Swim

"DID you ever see a bird teaching its babies to swim?" asked daddy. Goldie, Evelyn's pet canary, was taking what seemed to be a good night bath before flying up on her sleeping perch.

"Do birds swim—any birds except ducks?" asked Jack.

"Well, I suppose the loon is not much more of a bird than the duck, but the loon is a better swimmer than the duck and can dive to beat any water fowl you can think of."

"Frankie Green can dive off the pier, and I guess he can beat any boy around here," said Jack.

"Well," daddy went on, "you can tell Frankie Green about the loon, for I am sure the loon can beat Frankie without half trying."

"You see, loons get their living in the water. They catch fish by diving under the water after them. Their homes are up in the north in Canada and around Hudson bay. In the winter when it is dreadfully cold they sometimes come as far south as the northern part of the United States. They are about as large as a goose and are checkered black and white. They have a white collar and white breast, and the head and neck are colored, sometimes violet and green."

"A friend of mine who went up to the lakes to fish told me of watching two loons teach their young ones to swim and dive. The father loon helps the mother care for the young. When they are ready to teach their children to swim he takes one out into the water on his back, and she takes the other out. My friend says it was amusing to see the youngsters cling to the parent birds' backs and at first refuse to go under the water. First the parents dived under the water to show the babies how. Fearful, the little ones would not follow, but floated about on the surface. Then the mother very firmly caught hold of her charge and dived under the water with it. Then the father bird took his little one down. After that the young ones went under themselves. In a few days they could dive beautifully."

"That might be a good way to teach Evelyn to swim," suggested Jack.

"Never mind; I'm afraid I couldn't reward Evelyn as the loons did their children. When the swimming lesson was over father loon dived down under water for about five minutes. He came up with a nice fish speared on his bill. He gave a flirt of his head as he came up to the youngsters, and they caught the fish and made a meal of it, while he went down after another for his wife. For Mr. Loon is a most polite as well as a clever bird."

still more majestic shalt thou rise,
More dreadful from each foreign stroke,
As the loud blast that tears the skies
Serves but to root thy native oak.
Rule, Britannia, rule the waves;
Britons never will be slaves.

The haughty tyrants ne'er shall tame;
All their attempts to bend thee down
Will but arouse thy generous flame,
But work their woe and thy renown.
Rule, Britannia, rule the waves;
Britons never will be slaves.

To thee belongs the rural reign;
Thy cities shall with commerce shine;
All thine shall be the subject main
And every shore it circles thine.
Rule, Britannia, rule the waves;
Britons never will be slaves.

The muses, still with freedom found,
Shall to thy happy coast repair;
Blest isle with matchless beauty crown'd
And many hearts to guard the fair.
Rule, Britannia, rule the waves;
Britons never will be slaves.

—James Thomson.

EXPLAINED.

"Out of sight, out of mind." Can the proverb be true?
'Tis a thing I can scarcely believe.
When you are away I grow fonder
of you.
And I fret, and I stew, and I grieve.

There is only one way I can make it sound right.
That is this: I most constantly find
That whenever, my dear, you are out of my sight,
Why, then, I am out of my mind!
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A SONG FROM FAR AWAY.

Of your day I claim no part,
Not a look, not a touch,
Not a beat of your dear heart.
That were joy too much.

Only let me take my place
In your dreams through the night.
I will pass and leave no trace
Ere the east grows light.

You shall waken with a smile,
Smiling still as you muse
Now you dreamed of love awhile,
But forgetting whose.

—Amelia Josephine Burr.

Where one wishes to keep chickens in town the Asiatic breeds are preferable to the lighter and more excitable breeds, such as the Leghorns and should not be allowed to serve as an excuse for not making them scratch

Ask the real estate agent representing any new section of the country if clover or alfalfa will grow there and not only have his word for it, but make him show you thrifty fields of the growing stuff. Human beings can stand any climate that alfalfa or clover can, while either one will mean forage for dairy cows or beef steers, and these will mean a living.

It is not an uncommon thing for the butter producing capacity of the offspring of a herd of common cows to be increased by from fifty to a hundred pounds per year over that of their dams as a result of the use of a pre-potent purebred dairy sire. In many cases this would be the difference between shining along on bare bones and profitable dairying, between the star boarder and the money maker.

Some little time ago a reader of these notes wrote, asking details of a method of making butter from skim-milk, which he claims he saw reference to in these notes. The writer wishes to say that no such hope has ever been held out in this department, however much he wishes such alchemy might be possible. It is impossible to make a whistle out of a pig's tail or butter out of milk from which the natural oil has been removed.
