DYNAMITE FOUND UNDER STEEL RAILROAD BRIDGE

Watchman Sees Men On Structure and Gives Chase. -- Was It Intended For President Taft?

President Taft's special, in which were the President and many California state official, narrowly escaped being dynamited on Monday near Santa Barbara. Two men were discovered by a watchman employed by the Southern Pacific, acting strangely on a nonunion built steel bridge. They were chased away and afterward 36 sticks of dynamite were found under the piers. It is said here that there is no doubt that the dynamite was placed to destroy the bridge and that a probable accident to the President did not enter into the calculations of the plotters.

Railroad officials as well as the police authorities tonight say they believe the idea of the would-be dynamiters was to destroy the bridge in order to delay the passage of the President and throw discredit on the widely printed assertion notified the American Legation at Pek- of the Southern Pacific that it was runthe strike of the shopmen.

furnished house, the owner of which went to the country. The lady of whom we rented asked us if we would object to keeping her parrot. I told her I would make myself personally responsible for the bird, called Gip, and she need feel no anxiety about him whatever. She was much relieved at this, for it would have given her a great deal of trouble to take him with her, and he was a very valuable bird.

Two or three days after the owner's departure and our entrance to the premises a young man called at the house and asked for Miss Barrows, a young lady member of the family of whom we rented. The maid told him that they had all gone away, but could not tell where, so I went downstairs to give him the information.

He told me that he was an old friend of the Barrows family; that he had been out of town and was much disappointed that they had gone away, because he had counted on having them in the city to visit when most persons were away. As it was, he should be very lonely. He had especially counted on using the library. He said all this so promptly that I felt it incumbent upon me to say to him that he would be welcome to use the library whenever he liked. He thanked me very much and departed.

There is an unwritten, unspoken language between the sexes, and Mr. Blinder was talking it all the while, especially with his eyes. I knew perfectly well that he cared nothing about the books, but wished to make my acquaintance. And I doubted not that he knew I understood his real purpose. Had I not felt toward him something akin to what he felt toward me there would not have been any such understanding between us.

Several days later when I was dress ed for the afternoon Mr. Blinder called and asked for me. I went down to see him, and he told me he had taken advantage of my kind permission to read in the library. I knew very well that he had called to see But I told him to make himself at home among the books and returned to the upper floor. As I expected, he soon called for the maid and told her to ask me if I would kindly come down and help him find a book he wanted. I consented, but the book was not in the library. He had made sure that it wasn't there before send-

He began to talk about books so interestingly that I sank into a seat and listened to him. I was charmed with his knowledge of any subject he touched upon or I suggested. The result was that the afternoon passed without his reading a word, devoting it all to conversation with me, though I confess he took the first opportunity to switch off from literature and had the art to set me to talking. In other words, he was not only a good talker, but a good listener. And I sometimes think that a good listener is more entertaining than a good talker.

Mr Blinder called three times dur ing the first week to use the library. Two of these visits were taken up with me. Then one day he said that my kindness to him, a stranger, needed some acknowledgment and asked me to go with him to the theater. I accepted, of course. During the evening he read to me a passage from a tenants in my behalf for permitting you to use the library, but I hope Gip will not be disturbed from his customary habitation.'

The meaning of these words about Gip was that his cage usually hung in the library. I told Mr. Blinder to as-

The result of Mr. Blinder using the library was what might have been expected from the first-a love affair between him and me. And I confess it was a very strong love affair. He told me that the moment ne had seen me at the time of his first call he knew that I was the woman he wanted for a wife. And he blessed that meeting because he had intended to marry a woman whom he supposed he wanted and had not known what love was till he met me

That was the summer of my life. I gave myself up to the enjoyment of a new born love, and when the season drew to a close and our lease was about to expire I mourned our anticipated departure.

The library was used for the living room and the day the Barrowses arrived we all went in there together. Why she did it I don't know, but Miss Barrows asked Mr. Blinder if he couldn't call that day for a 5 o'clock tea. He came and before he left I was made aware of her object in asking him. While we were all in the room together Miss Barrows went up to Gip's cage. Gip was delighted to see her and made a great flutter.

"Hello, Gip," she said; "have they been good to you while we have been

"Kiss me, Ethel," squawked the My name is Ethel.

as red as a couple of beets. Meanwhile the parrot was ruffling up his feathers and dancing about on his perch. Miss Barrows gave Mr. Blinder a withering look and swept out of the room. They had been on the eve of an engagement.

FADS AND FANCIES.

Characteristics of the New Side Frills of the Season. Side frills will be one of the important items in fall neckwear and are made in two effects-those for wear with tailored suits and those of a more dressy character. Little bonnets of silver yace with ruffles of fine lace falling over the hair are very dainty and attractive.

High stiff collars are numerous despite the popularity of the Dutch or low neck.

A pretty way to do over a last year's jacket is to add a deep square collar of some light material and partly cover this with a collar to match the suit cut in three deep points. This is more dressy if the points are finished with tassels and more up to date for all kinds of fringe and tassels are the height of style.

Checked materials trimmed with plain goods are to be just as fashionable this winter as they have been during the past summer. The gown illustration shows this combination. The blouse is a very simple affair made in peasant style. The skirt is six gored, with the new slit front width. JUDIC CHOLLET.

WHAT IS WORN.

The Autumn Bridesmaids Are Wearing Lace Caps—Outing Hats.

For bridesmaids lace caps are in vogue. They drop over the hair in soft plaited frills and are trimmed with rows of silk or mousseline flowers.

Soft felt hats for the mountains come in all the lovely shades of the present letter from Miss Barrows, "Thank our fashion. Some of these felts are so soft and beautiful in texture that they look almost like velvet.

Some of the handsomest costumes are reversing the usual order of putting the light fabric above the heavier one and are making skirts of coarse heavy lace and tunics of satin. The sure Miss Barrows that Gip had not Russian blouse effect is liked for such purposes, All trimmings are put on as flat as possible, unless they are in the shape of ruffles or puffs, and then they are scanty.

The new skirts are to be narrow and straight. All waists are still high, as high in fact as they ever were.

Simple loose coats are the best for tiny tots. Illustrated is a model that may be made either with or without a cape, and it includes sleeves that are comfortably loose though smartly cut. JUDIC CHOLLET.

This May Manton pattern is cut in sizes for children of six months, one, two and four years of age. FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scoth-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.-Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

AGAIN GOOD ROADS.

Mr. Edison, the electrician and inventor, returning from Europe told the reporters that met him at the dock, that among other things he found worthy of comment was the fact that the roads in Europe were magnificent. "That is where they have the best of us," he said. "After spinning along over the French and German roads you have to admit that when it comes to roads America is pretty raw."

We imagine that this confession was not pleasing to this American and that his purpose was not to "knock" but rather to arouse an interest in this important question of good roads. ANNOUNCE MENT.

Having accepted the nomination by the Democratic party of the State Senatorship of Frederick county, I feel that the due observance of a practice, entirely ethical in its character, constrains me to withdraw from the active management and editorship of The Weekly Chronicle during the active campaign. Throughout that period Mr. E. L. Higbee, who has long been associated with me, assumes both management and editorial control.

Should there be any occasion for me to make a personal statement, however, it will appear over my own signature.

CONCERNING MR. GALT'S CANDIDACY.

CONGRATULATIONS.

To Sterling Galt, editor and proprietor of the Emmitsburg CHRONICLE, the congratulations of the Compiler are extended for having secured the Democratic nomination of Frederick county for State Senator. Mr. Galt is well known to many Gettysburg people who will be delighted to learn of his triumphant election. Mr. Galt is a man of ability. He has made of the CHRONICLE a paper of which Emmitsburg can be proud. He is doing his community an invaluable service in standing for what is best and progressive for his community. Every one has a good word to say for him and the work he has been doing for his town. Mr. Galt is the grandson of Sterling Galt, who represented Carroll county in the Constitutional Convention of 1867, which furnished the present constitution of Maryland. Mr. Galt will bring to the discharge of the duties of the position an ability, a hustling

FROM WESTMINSTER.

We note with great pleasure that our friend and neighbor, Sterling Galt, is the candidate on the Democratic ticket in Frederick county, Maryland, for the State Senatorship.

Mr. Galt comes from an old Maryland family several members of which, in years past, served in the Legislature, Mr. Galt's grandfather, for whom the present candidate is named, having been a member of the convention (of 1867) that framed the present Constitution of Mary-

When They Fined the Servants. There must have been a servant problem even in the specious times of Elizabeth, if we may judge by a list of rules drawn up by a baronet of that era for the guidance of his domestic helpers and recently brought to light by an English writer: The baronet evidently liked his house kept in order, and if it were not made absolutely spotless on Friday after dinner everybody responsible had to pay threepence. He liked punctuality, and sixpence was the fine for meat that was not ready at 11 or before for dinner and at 6 or before for supper, while the table had to be laid half an hour before those times, on pain of twopence. Oaths were a penny each, and it was equally expensive to leave a door open which was found shut. while to teach any of the children any "unhonest speech" was fourpence The fines were duly paid each quarter day out of the wages, and with fine vagueness the baronet winds up. "They shall be bestowed on the poor or other godly use."

The Doctor's Revenge. It is always a pleasure to hear or read of arrogance rebuked; hence this little tale, which might be headed "The Doctor's Revenge." An elderly lady whose characteristics entitle her to the present name of Mrs. Portly Pompous had a pet monkey which suddenly became ill. She had the assurance to send for a prominent physician to treat the little beast. When the doctor was introduced to his patient he was very much enraged, but he did not betray himself. He took the sick monkey's pulse and asked the usual questions. Now, in the room was a little boy, Mrs. Portly Pompous' grandson. The doctor approached the boy, examined his pulse also and then said solemnly to the lady: "Madam, your two little grandchildren are suffering from

Why They Died. Naturally applicants for life insurance may be expected to put as good a face as possible on the reports concerning relatives and the causes of their deaths, but they sometimes make rather amusing statements. Some one has collected a few of these which were originally published in the Britsh Medical Journal:

"Mother died in infancy." "Father went to bed feeling well and the next morning woke up dead." "Grandfather died suddenly at the age of 103. Up to this time he bid fair to reach a ripe old age." "Applicant does not know cause of mother's death, but states that she fully recovered from her last illness." "Applicant has never been fatally sick." A fireman was up for examination for promotion to the position of engi-He passed a fair test on the rules and machinery, but during ali of it the examiner was constantly lecturing him as to the need of economy in the use of fuel and oil, so that by the time he finished his examination it was pretty well on his nerves. Having finished the technical part, the examiner thought he would put the man in a critical position to see what he might do in an emergency. So he put this question: "Supposing you are the engineer of a freight train on a single track, and you are in danger of a headon collision with a passenger train, and you know that you could not stop your train-that a collision could not be averted-what would you do?" The man, unstrung by the vigorous instruction he had received as to econ omy, replied in this way: "Why, would grab the oil can in one hand and a lump of coal in the other and jump."-Atchison Globe.

Candle Making In China.

The manufacture of candles in China is no new thing. Years before the advent of the foreigner the na tives made them by crude methods and used them in home and temple. Even today millions of candles are made by the old process of dipping, at which the old Chinese are very expert. A mixture of tallow and castor oil is first prepared and the operator, placing a straw to serve as a wick between each of his ten fingers, dips them into the preparation as many times as necessary to give the candles the desired thickness. After this they are set up on end against a board to harden and the straw wicks clipped to a proper length. The finished product burns well, gives a fair light, is consumed slowly, and, best of all, in native eyes, is very cheap. These candles are usually made by small factories for sale to storekeepers, but many individuals still manufacture for family and temple use.

Buddist Priests of Burma. Every morning after sunrise the Buddhist priests of Burma go out in Indian file, preceded by a boy with a bell, which he rings at intervals. This warns the people of their approach. and it is wonderful to see with what reverence the people regard these priests. Immediately the bell rings a Burmese woman runs out with her offering of rice, bananas, eggs or the best that her house can provide. No words of greeting are exchanged. The offerings are made and received in silence. The Buddhist priests may not receive money. This is why they have

A discussion on appointments to the Most Noble Order of the Thistle gave rise to a caustic saying on the part of Disraeli. Plarse Versus Passport In Russia. Should a citizen of the United States attempt to enter Russia without a passport he would be turned back at the frontier. Should he arrive in Russian waters he will not be permitted to disembark until he has produced the necessary document, properly vised by a Russian consular or diplomatic offieer. Indeed, the mere possession of an American passport is not sufficient, for the regulations of the Russians prescribe that the credential must be vised before the frontier is crossed. Better to lose one's purse than one's passport in Russia. Funds may be cabled for and received in the course of a few hours, but it is a question of weeks where a passport is concerned. Russian officials are usually courteous to American visitors who do not display too much curiosity about certain unspeakable Russian institutions, but let them find a traveler in the interior without a passport and the luckless one will speedily see the inside of a Russian jail, and sooner or later be conducted to the nearest point of the frontier.-Travel Magazine.

Astronomical Facts.

The diameter of the sun is reckoned at 882,000 miles. This diameter, owing to its loss of heat and the consequent condensation, is steadily being shortened, though at a very slow rate, of course. The whole solar systemthe sun and all of its planets-is moving through space at a pace estimated at about 150,000,000 of miles annually. Those who are supposed to know about the matter assure us that, owing to certain causes, too numerous and complicated to be dealt with in this place, the planet on which we live receives only the 2,250-millionth part of the heat that is thrown off by the sun. Even as it is the earth receives annually from the sun an amount of heat that exceeds by a million times the heat producible by the combustion of 280,000,000 tons of coal.—New York

Thackeray's First Poem. Thackeray's momentous first appearance in print was a satirical poem, published in the Western Luminary during one of the happy holiday times which he spent in Devonshire when still a scholar at the Charterhouse. A certain Mr. Lalor Sheil was to have delivered a speech upon Penendon heath, but the crowd refused to hear him. He had taken the precaution, however, to send copies of his intended oration to all the leading journals before leaving town, and these, of course, printed it. This ludicrous incident inspired Thackeray to write a little jeu d'esprit entitled "Irish Melody," telling how "Mister Sheil" when the men of Kent "began a grievous Cats In Ancient Wales. An ancient statute ascribed to Howel the Good, a Welch prince, who ruled in 948, regulated the price of cats. A penny was the price of a kitten before its eyes were open, twopence until it had caught its first mouse and fourpence when it was old enough for combat. He who stole a cat from the royal granaries forfeited either a milk ewe, with its fleece and lamb, or as much wheat as would cover the body of the cat suspended by its tail, with its nose touching the ground. A penny was a coin of great purchasing power in the tenth century.

AN AFFAIR OF HONOR

By THOMAS R. DEAN Copyright by American Press Asso-

The civil war gave those who parwanted for many a year to come-in- trimmed. deed, for the rest of their natural lives-but it left its effects in a different way on many boys who were too young to fight for the Union. Peter Briton was seventeen years old when the Confederacy collapsed, and he ever after regretted that the fight hadn't been kept up long enough for him to get a smell of powder. When Peter was twenty-one this spirit developed with a desire to take part in a duel. He maintained that affairs among gentlemen would better be settled by the code than by bloody noses, though why blood coming from a place where there is little or no danger rather than one where death may be instantaneous did not appear in Peter's logic. He mistook himself. The reason he believed in dueling was because he rather fancied getting into

When this fad with him was at his height he went abroad. Dueling has always been more or less in vogue in all the countries in Europe and is so on the continent today. Peter went to London, but no one insulted him there, and he continued on to Paris. Even in the French capital he saw no chance to participate in his hobby, so he went on down into Italy.

The middle class Italians are a peaceful people, and Peter found himself as far as ever from a duel. Fearing that he would be obliged to return home without a scrap, he resolved to pick a quarrel with some one. In a restaurant in Rome he saw a man at a neighboring table eating macaroni in a manner displeasing to a well bred Americn. Peter signified his displeasure by calling to the man not to make a pig of himself. The man, instead of giving a verbal reply, tossed the contents of a tumbler of wine in Peter's face and went on eating his macaroni. Peter wiped away the wine with his napkin and laid his card on the macaroni eater's table, receiving one in re-

Picking up the man's card, Peter took it to an American friend of his, Gunter, and told him the circumstances. Gunter looked at the card and ex-"Good gracious, man, you've challenged Castelli!" "And who is Castelli?" "The principal of the fencing school."

Peter's face fell. "He's not only that," Gunter went on; "he's a noted duelist." Peter turned very pale. "He's not only a noted duelist, but he kills his man every time. There is a great deal of prejudice against him in Rome, but he finds all the pupils he cares to have among the young Roman swells who may possibly some time need to use his instruction. They find him a splendid teacher."

"But can't we use pistols?" asked Pe-"I've done a lot of good work

"You, having challenged the follow, will have to fight with any weapon he may select.'

"That's so. I didn't think of that." "Of course he'll choose foils or rapiers, though he is a dead shot with the pistol.

"I don't like this fix," said Peter, givin the position of a coward, I suppose." "No," said Peter, "I don't wish to "Well, stay here till you hear from

Peter passed a terrible half day: then the door of his room was thrown open and two men entered and bade him go with them. They placed him in a car riage and took him to a large building that he thought was a hospital. It was a lunatic asylum. He was put into a room by himself with an iron grating on the windows and locked in.

Peter never experienced such joy of relief in his life as he now felt locked up in a madhouse, where the fencing master could not get at him. He recognized in his imprisonment a scheme of his friend Gunter, who had doubtless taken out papers to have him confined as a lunatic.

The next day Gunter came to see him and admitted the plan as his own. Gunter told Peter that he had seen Castelli and advised him that Peter was not responsible for his acts. Castelli was very much disappointed at not being able to add one more to the list of those he had killed.

Peter asked Gunter how long it would be necessary for him to remain a maniac and could get no definite response. But one day Gunter brought him a letter of apology from Castelli. Peter, greatly surprised, asked how he had secured it.

"I circulated a report," replied Gunter. "among Castelli's pupils that he had insulted a lunatic, and most of them left him. Meanwhile I had agreed to take lessons of him, and he asked me what he should do. I advised him to write you an apology, which he did.'

Peter smiled a sickly smile. He went home, but kept very quiet about his affair of honor. Fortunately for him, since it occurred in a foreign land he was able to keep it secret. But from that time he lost his taste for listening to stories of the civil war.

Great liberty has been taken, says the Dry Goods Economist, with the brims of the autumn hats. The great majority of brims are turned up either regularly or irregularly. Curious convolutions appear in many. They are frequently nicked up and then down several times at one side. It is the aim of THE CHRONICLE to publish as many personal and social items as possible, but it frequently happens that those who have guests visiting them, and those who entertain, fail to send a list of their friends, or an account of these events, to this office. Readers who live at a distance are always interested in what is going on "at home," and for that reason, if for no other, this column should be filled every week. It is of course understood that anonymous contributions will not be published. Names of persons furnishing items will be withheld.

LUTHERAN SYNOD HOLDS SESSIONS IN TANEYTOWN

Delegates Crowd Town.-Meeting Commenced on Wednesday.

The Maryland Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, comprising the churches of Maryland, the District of Columbia and part of West Virginia, held its first session at Taneytown on Wednesday night.

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Charles F. Steck, of Washington, president of the synod. The (a) Reinecke altar service was conducted by Rev. (b) Dubussy, Dr. John C. Bowers, of Catonsville, (c) Rubinstein, - -Rev. Hugh S. D. Rupp, of Frederick offered the opening prayer. The synodical communion was then celebrated.

More than 250 ministers and laymen attended the session held in the Lutheran church, of which Rev. L. B. Haeffer is the pastor. A large choir, under the direction of Edward E. Reindollar. of Taneytown, rendered special music.

The business sessions of the Synod commenced Thursday morning, and during them many important matters were considered, the most important of which was the formulation of a doctrinal basis for the general synod and the establishment of a newspaper organ for the Lutheran Church.

Largest Radish in the World.

Last week a radish from the garden of Mr. E. C. Moser seemed to be about the biggest thing in the radish line ever seen hereabouts. Mr. Olin Moser showed one early this week that was still larger, but both of them looked like peanuts along side the one brought here by Mr. Krise Byers. This one was a whale of a radish. It was 39 inches in circumference and weighed-well we won't say what it weighed for fear it might hurt our reputation, but it was the largest radish in the world.

ANOTHER TRIAL IN DECEMBER

Head of Closed Brunswick Bank Not Guilty of Exhibiting False Papers

With Intent to Deceive. William Schnauffer, former treasurer and head of the closed Brunswick Savings Bank, was tried Monday before the court, Chief Judge Urner and Associate Judges Motter and Peter, on charges of exhibiting false and fraudulent papers to Bank Examiner John C. Motter of I, and acquitted.

He was also indicted on the charge of embezzlement, but trial of this case was postponed until December. Bank Examiner Motter was the principal witness. The verdict of the court was to the effect that while the testimony showed that false papers had been shown by Schnauffer, there was no evidence of intent to deceive or defraud.

Schnauffer was greatly affected by the trial. He has only partially recovered from the nervous breakdown following the bank failure. The bank is still in the hands of receivers, who are settling up its affairs. Much sympathy has been expressed for Schnauffer, who during his business career did much to advance the interests of Brunswick.

MEN'S FALL UNDERWEAR OF UNUSUAL GOODNESS

The men's underwear business is a plain everyday business—but we have lifted it out of the rut by handling it in an unusual way.

First, we have an unusually wide range of styles at each price; and, second, we have the out-of-the ordinary sizes which most of the stores do not handle. So, if you are extra-tall or extra-short, or for any reason require underwear outside of the standard scale of sizes, you can be practically sure of finding it in the Hochschild, Kohn & Co. Men's Store.

As a result of our policy, our men's underwear business has grown steadily; and as a result of this growth, we can purchase in quantities sufficient to secure to us every possible price advantage. You are sure to get from us the best men's underwear that your money can possibly buy.

My Brother

By HUDSON C. EASTON

Gregory and I had been separated for seven years at an age when persons change very considerably. When we parted my brother was fourteen years old, I twelve. Now Gregory was twenty-one, I eighteen. Disagreements between our parents was the cause of our separation, I having lived with my mother abroad and Gregory with my father in America. Father died while we were in France and within six months mother died also. There was nothing for Gregory and I to do but to get together. So it was decided that I should come to Amer-

I had a vague remembrance of my brother as a boy, but as I had never seen him as a man I had no idea what he looked like. I wrote him to meet me on my arrival and as the ship was being pushed into the dock I looked for him among the crowd awaiting friends. Presently I saw a young man waving at me. I couldn't see any resemblance to the boy I had parted with years before, but he was looking straight at me and smiling. I threw him a kiss and waited impatiently for the ship to be docked. Next I saw him hastening by me.

"Here I am," I said.

He turned and surprised me by not appearing to know me. "I have some friends aboard I am looking for," he said hurriedly yet looking puzzled. "Will you join me after seeing them?" I asked. "Yes," he replied.

"In ten minutes he returned. The puzzled look had given place to a winning smile-the same with which he had greeted me from the dock. "You're Gregory, aren't you?"

"Gregory? And who may you be?" "I'm Fanny. I don't wonder you are not quite sure of me since you haven't seen me for seven years.'

"Are you sure of me?" "I wouldn't have known you if you hadn't recognized me first."

"How is that?" "Why, when you waved to me from the docks."

He took my belongings and carried them to the dock. Fortunately we had no trouble in getting my baggage examined, and Gregory and I soon found ourselves sitting side by side in a carriage rolling along over the thoroughfares of the city.

"This is a funny meeting between brother and sister," I said.

"How funny?"

"Why, we haven't even kissed." "So we haven't," he said. "That was because we weren't certain of each other, I suppose." And he drew me toward him and kissed me. I noticed that there was a good deal more zest to it than is usual in brotherly kisses, but thought very little of it at the time. "You're boarding at the same place, I suppose," I said.

"Where was I when you"- He stopped and looked at me inquiringly.

"At 45 Union street, where your let-"Certainly. That's where I am now."

"Didn't you tell the driver where to "Yes, but to be certain I'll tell him

He called to the driver, giving him the street and number. The driver said "Aye, aye," and, turning a corner, got on to another avenue.

"You and I will have to live together now, Greg," I said, laying my hand affectionately on his.

"Nothing would suit me better." "I won't marry. Neither must you." He looked at me kind o' funny when I said this, but made no reply

"It can't be," I said, much disturbed. "that you are engaged?" "No," he said, "but I'd like to be."

"Oh, I'm so sorry. I hoped that you and I might be inseparable. But if you love some one"-"I didn't say that some one loved

RIVER BOTTOM DRAINS.

Dean Raymond Shows That Tiles Must Be Used to Obtain Results.

The river bottoms of Iowa are usually broad, with little slope toward the river and almost universally with banks slightly higher than the land farther back, these banks forming natural levees to keep the river off the bottom lands except at very high water, but also serving to hold water on the bottom lands for long periods in the spring and after flood stages of the river. As a result of this formation many thousands of acres of the richest, most valuable land are wholly unproductive, says Dean William G. Raymond of the Engineering State university of Iowa city. They are covered by shallow ponds that dry out only late in the season or serve only for wild hay or inferior pastures.

Attempts to drain these lands by open ditches have sometimes been successful, but often have not owing to the very slight fall that can be had, the rapid choking of ditches by vegetation and the blocking of the mouth by river silt and sand. Moreover, this method wastes considerable quantities of this same most valuable land that it is sought to reclaim. An open ditch must have easy side slopes to prevent caving in of the sides, and the dirt taken from the ditch is deposited alongside, so that a properly constructed ditch only one foot wide on the bottom and four feet deep is likely to waste a strip of land twenty-five to thirty feet wide for its entire length. A mile of such ditch would consume over three acres of tillable ground. If Although I've been silent, the vi'let I've the annual profit to be earned on such land is only $7.50 per acre, this would represent at 5 per cent a capital account of $450 that could be added to the cost of an open ditch to build a tile drain, and if the annual cost of cleaning the open ditch be capitalized in a similar manner a sum possibly even larger could be added to the cost of an open ditch to build a tile drain.

An open ditch that will even approximate the drainage effect of a twelve inch tile cannot be properly built for less than from $700 to $1,000 a mile, depending on the soil, the labor market and the class of labor available, while the cost of a twelve inch tile well laid may be as little as about $1,400 a mile, as is shown by the following cost of 3,300 feet of such tile drain laid for Mr. H. R. Mosnat of Belle Plaine. The cost was $895.76.

As there were 270 acres directly benefited by this drain the cost was about $3.32 per acre. Half of this land had never been under cultivation and the other half only in dry years. About seventy acres were in two ponds, and various attempts had been made to drain these by open ditches, but without success. The result has been gratifying, and the owner was offered a 40 per cent increase on the cost of the land and tile as soon as it was demonstrated that the ponds could be drained. This particular line of tile averaged four to four and a half feet deep and opened into the Iowa river by a tide gate or flap valve that lets the water into the river at ordinary stages and keeps the river out of the tile at high wa-

THE LOW BACKED CAR. HEN first I saw sweet Peggy
"Twas on a market day.
A low backed car she drove and sat Upon a truss of hay.

But when that hay was blooming grass
And decked with flowers of spring
No flower was there that could compare
With the blooming girl I sing.
As she sat in the low backed car The man at the turnpike bar Never asked for the toll, But just rubbed his ould poll And looked after the low backed car.

The proud and mighty Mars With hostile scythes demands his tithes Of death in warlike cars,
While Peggy, peacetul goddess,
Has darts in her bright eye
That knock men down in the market town
As right and left they fly,
While she sits in her low backed car,
Then battle more depression for

Than battle more dangerous far, For the doctor's art Cannot cure the heart That is hit from that low backed car.

Sweet Peggy round her car, sir, Has strings of ducks and geese, But the scores of hearts she slaughters By far outnumber these. By far outnumber these.
While she among her poultry sits
Just like a turtledove.
Well worth the cage I do engage
Of the blooming god of love.
While she sits in her low backed car
The lovers come, near and far,
And envy the chicken
That Peggy is pickin'
Le she sits in her low backed car.

Oh, I'd rather own that car, sir, With Peggy by my side

Than a coach and four and gold galore
And a lady for my bride,
For the lady would sit forninst me On a custion made with taste,
While Peggy would sit beside me,
With my arm around her waist,
While we drove in the low backed car
To be married by Father Mahar.
Oh, my heart would beat high At her glance and her sigh Though it beat in a low backed car!

JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE. GREEN be the turf above thee. Friend of my better days!
None knew thee but to love thee Nor named thee but to praise.

TEARS fell when thou wert dying From eyes unused to weep.

And long where thou art lying Will tears the cold turf steep.

WHEN hearts whose truth was proven VV Like thine are laid in earth There should a wreath be woven To tell the world their worth.

A ND I, who woke each morrow To clasp thy hand in mine, Who shared thy joy and sorrow, Whose weal and woe were thine

IT should be mine to braid it Around thy faded brow, But I've in vain essayed it And feel I cannot now

WHILE memory bids me weep thee,
Nor thoughts nor words are free,
The grief is fixed too deeply
That mourns a man like thee.
-Fitz-Greene Halleck.

ALADDIN.

HEN I was a beggarly boy
And lived in a cellar damp
I had not a friend or a toy,
But I had Aladdin's lamp. When I could not sleep for cold I had fire enough in my brain And builded, with roofs of gold, My beautiful castles in Spain.

Since then I have toiled day and night I have money and power good store, But I'd give all my lamps of silver brigh For the one that is mine no more.

You gave and may snatch again.
I have nothing 'twould pain me to lose.

The chief objection to the grade sire lies in the fact that, while he may be an excellent animal himself, he is not likely to possess in a marked degree the established traits of his pure bred ancestor. With such sires there is likely to be an outcropping in the offspring of the unlovely traits or marks of some scrub predecessor.
