Great Philanthropist Makes Public the List of Those Who Have Done Things and Improved Conditions for Others.

In a speech delivered a few days ago to the John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Sunday School in New York, Mr. Andrew Carnegie referred to a list of twenty-one men who, he said, had moved the world condition of mankind.

On Saturday last Mr. Carnegie celebrated the seventy-sixth anniversary of his birth, and after being solicited, made public his list of world movers. Carnegie's twenty-one great men are here given:

"Jack! Very well-Come tomorrow evening if you have nothing better to do," and decidedly out of temper Helena hung up the receiver, cutting off Jack Henshaw's words with clicking abruptness.

Up in her own pretty room Helena locked the door and sank into a big chair beside the window. It was bad enough that Jack should have set aside her special invitation for that evening-it was her birthday and he did not know it. Her mother had asked Bridget to make a birthday cake, and it was to be brought in during the evening decorated with spun sugar and candles.

Helena's married sister, Dorcas Wade, and Frank Wade, her husband, promised to bring his 'cello. Jack Henshaw's violin occupied a permanent place now on Helena's piano and she had planned an impromptu concert. This was all to be a surprise to Jack.

Now Jack had spoiled it all by begging off from the invitation. Helena felt positive that he was going off somewhere with that horrid Ned Speedle, who had a little place down on Long Island where he maintained kennels of which he might well be proud, for they bore a national reputation. Ned Speedle also owned a low, vicious-looking gray matched Helena's lovely hair. racing automobile in which he was won't to tear around the countryside.

Helena Brooke was positive that Jack was going off on some mad ride before. with Ned Speedle. Why he should do this she could not understand, be cause Speedle was not at all to Jack's motorist several times lately and had expressed a desire to visit the kennels at Dogwood.

The birthday evening was not entirely a successful occasion, although Helena herself was bright and gay. Dorcas and Frank came and played Jack practically. and sang, but Helena sat mutely thoughtful while the music drifted through the rooms.

Bridget's entrance with the cake they had eaten of the cake, the you did last evening." Wades went home, and Helena was free to seek her chamber and weep into her pillow.

It was not so much his not being he had deliberately put another pleasure before the delight of being with her.

The next day she nourished a bitter resentment toward Jack Henshaw but whose until she believed that his indiffer for effect. ences had killed her love.

Late in the afternoon she rummaged through her writing desk and gathered all of Jack Henshaw's precious letters into a pocket. One letter she kept out—that, in spite of her jealous anger, she decided to keep; she could burn it after one more perusal. Its tender words would then reveal anew to her the perfidy of man—and emphasize the fortunate escape she had had from a man who preferred the dubious company of Ned Speedle to that of the girl he was engaged to!

So Helena tied the letters in a fresh sheet of pink tissue paper, tied local mean solar time. Now, every the square package with a bit of day, just before noon, the tick of the pink ribbon, and tucked the letters clock at the United States naval obaway in a drawer in her desk ready to give to Jack Henshaw when he every Western Union wire throughout should come that night. Helena was not listening to him. She was bracing herself to meet a tragic moment. "Jack-Mr. Henshaw—I am sure we have made a great mistake. I know I have, and I am sure that I shall never be happy with you-I-I-am sorry, but-Helena's voice faltered and was still. A great silence fell upon the room Helena stared at the mass of glowing coals in the grate. Jack Hen-

"I have some letters I wish to return to you." She rang the bell and when a servant appeared she said: 'Nora, bring me a package wrapped in pink paper from my desk; you will find it in the second left hand drawer."

The maid departed and Jack drew from his coat pocket a small box of white ivory. From the box he took a small alabaster urn, delicately carved with flowers in relief, while on the lid there was poised a dove with outstretched wings.

'You asked me to bring your letters with me," he said, quietly placing the vase in her hand. "They are in that little vase.

"I do not understand," faltered Helena, all her anger and jealousy suddely dissolved in a great terror of losing him forever. She lifted the lid of the vase and saw within a pile of grayish-black ashes. "I do not understand," she repeated.

Jack Henshaw turned his eyes away from the delicate beauty of her face 'Your letters to me since we have been engaged—in fact every word you have written to me-were too prec ious to leave carelessly around, but J wanted to keep them in some form and so I burned them. The ashes of your letters to me are in that little vase. They are as dead as the ashes of your love seem to be.'

Before Helena could utter a word Nora returned with the package, somewhat breathless, but her honest were coming over and Frank had face wearing a triumphant expression. In her hand she held a square package wrapped in pink tissue paper "Give the package to Mr. Henshaw," said Helena. And as Jack took it he weighed it in his hand with a smile. "Rather light reading," he commented wryly. "I suppose you have no objection to my putting them on the fire now?"

Helena nodded assent and he tore off the pink paper, disclosing a white pasteboard box. In a trice the lid was off and there, rippling over his fingers was an alluring mass of au burn puffs and curls that exactly

"It's the funniest thing that ever happened," laughed Helena.

"How about the original pink pack age-that is yet unharmed?" asked

"I shall keep that after all," said Helena, "because-oh, Jack, I am sc wicked and jealous and everything; just to punish me you must never tell was a welcome intrusion, and after me about where you went and what

"That same—but he's not wrapped in pink paper," grinned Jack as he opened the door to admit Helena's delayed birthday present.

Extraordinary Bird.

The capture of a specimen of the 'takahe," or flightless rail, of New Zealand, has ever been accounted an event in ornithology. So far as is known, only four specimens of this bird has been obtained.

The takahe (Notornis hocnstetteri) is about equal in size to a goose, but its wings are very small, and, unlike all of his relatives in other lands, it cannot fly. FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scoth-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.—Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

EGGS, MEAT AND MILK SHOULD NOT BE EATEN TOGETHER BY CON-SUMPTIVES.

Dr. David R. Lyman holds that eggs are not necessary in the diet of the tuberculosis patient. This we think should be apparent from the fact that there is nothing in eggs which can not be obtained better in the average case from milk, which, however, should not be taken in its sweet form, in which the curd of cow's milk is extremely indigestible for the adult. The whole milk should be converted into buttermilk, in which the curd is so broken up as to be much more easily digested. The purpose in feeding the tubercular person is to furnish the amount of fat, albumen and carbohydrate hat can be assimilated, in the form requiring the expenditure of the least energy for digestion and assimilation, and with the least risk of leaving an indigestible and unassimilable remnant, especially of eggs, meat or milk. Albumen uncoagulated by high temperature as in uncooked eggs, milk and raw meat, is much more easily assimilated than that of bread or baked beans or boiled or fried eggs, and the fat of eggs and milk is much more easily assimillated than beef fat or of pork or roasted peanuts, but the mixture of eggs and milk with beefsteak or even bread, as is customary in the ordinary feeding of the tuberculous, is a violation of a fundamental principle of the monodiet and is counter to the suggestion in the circular of information on the feeding of the tuberculous issued by the State of Illinoisthat as far as possible those foods should be eaten at the same meal that digest in about

More Than Gratuitous.

Apropos of the custom of some hostesses to invite professional artistes to their house in the expectation that they will amuse their guests free of charge, a story is told of Mme. Berthe Bady, the famous Parisian artiste, who was invited to a social gathering and asked by the hostess to recite. She consented, and then, in order that there might be no mistake about the matter, the hostess said:

"How kind it is of you to work for us in this friendly manner!"

The emphasis on the word "friendly was so marked as to show clearly enough that the service was to be gratuitous. After the recitation was over Mme. Bady took a silver card tray from a footman, and, imitating the musicians in the cafes chantants, she made a tour of the drawing room and collected whatever contributions were offered, and they were substantial ones. Then she handed them to her hostess and left the house.

Brevity.

Robert Louis Stevenson was a close student of style and has left more than one interesting discussion of the technique of writing. In a letter to A. M. Stevenson, dated October. 1883, he says:

"There is but one art-to omit! Oh, if I knew how to omit I would ask no other knowledge! A man who knew how to omit would make an 'Iliad' of a daily paper.'

To men engaged in editorial writing (which in America is the art of ing condition. making ideas effective before a vast audience) and to young men and women in college who are planning to enter journalism we recommend that the above few words of Stevenson's be committed to memory and put into 1774, at the time of Oliver Goldsmith's practice.-Collier's Weekly.

Sheep are put to double use in the northern part of India, in the Himalayas. They are driven from market to market with the wool still growing, and in each village the owner shears as much wool as he can sell there and loads the sheared sheep with the grain he receives in exchange. After his flock has been sheared he turns it homeward, each animal carrying a bag of grain.

The Moors.

Morocco is not so hot as it is often supposed to be. The greater part of the country is near either the sea or the mountains, often both, and it is only about as far south as Georgia or Louisiana. The sun is hot, of course, at midday, in a dry region where the sky is usually cloudless and the latitude is about like that of the gulf coast of the United States. But the temperature in the shade is seldom extreme-that is, in the parts of the country where the bulk of the people live. South and east of the mountains, on the border of the Sahara desert, the conditions in respect to heat are altogether different, but there the population is small. The people of Morocco are fanatical Moslems, and they resent bitterly any kind of pressure to change old customs or give up old ways, but they are much less formidable than they used to be in the prime of Moorish power, especially in comparison with the conditions in the advanced countries of the earth.-Cleveland Leader.

Poor Hand In a Bible Class.

A woman of Louisville, Ky., who enjoys a game of cards, recently visited a friend in Indianapolis. Sunday morning came, and the hostess invited her visitor to accompany her to Sunday school. It is the practice of the teacher of the Bible class of which the hostess is a member to ask each member of the class to read a verse from the Bible and comment on it. The visitor from Louisville had not been informed of the teacher's custom. However, the teacher seemed to think that visitors as well as regular members should participate, and when the member next to the visitor had read her verse and made her comment the teacher smilingly looked toward the visitor. The visitor appeared to be disconcerted for a moment, and then she hastily said, "I pass."-Indianapolis News.

> Loss of Weight In Rowing. A well known physician in New York city who has long been identified with aquatics, says that the average individual loss of weight in a four mile pull, whether in a race or a row against time, is two or three pounds. Under peculiarly trying conditions of heat the individual loss may reach five or six pounds. On the other hand. says this physician, many oarsmen go through a four mile pull with the loss of only about a pound in weight. This lost weight is fully recovered by the next day. Proper training is so arranged in these days that a four mile race comes only when the oarsmen are thoroughly rested and at the top of their training weight, so that the loss of weight rarely indicates that the individual is "stale," or below good train-

DISTRIBUTNG THE

Some Novel Ways That Will Please the Recipients and Add to the Occasion.

Should one wish something more original than Christmas gifts awkwardly thrust into one's hands by the giver; should the time-honored stocking pall, here are several new ways that may cause excitement in present distribution.

Some member of the family or one of the maids can enter the breakfast room, where the table is prettily decorated with greens, but no gifts are displayed. She should be heavily veiled, dressed in a long rain coat and carry two or three cotton umbrellas,

Her appearance will excite surprise, particularly if the sun shines. She will insist that it is going to rain and try to get her umbrellas raised.

Some of the children will offer to assist and from the umbrella will fall the packages, gaily tied and clearly addressed. Anything that may suffer from a tumble should be tied to the

At close of breakfast the next morning-Christmas-the door bell rings and a maid brings in an immediate delivery letter. This is gaily decorated with the season's stamps and seals.

When opened, it is found to be a letter from Santa Claus, saying his pack was too heavy, so he has forwarded by express all his gifts. In a few minutes a huge box is delivered in the kitchen which when opened is found to contain packages addressed to each one.

Another easier way is to pass a tray covered with a number of small keys with red ribbon and a Christmas tag attached. On the tag is written the child's name and the information that somewhere in the house is concealed a bag the key will open. Then begins a hunt into all sorts of out-of-the-way places to find great bags of turkey red muslin, draped with greens and fastened at the top with a padlock. Each bag holds the gifts for one member of the family.

Made of Handkerchiefs

Dainty Holiday Gifts That Are Easily Made and Inexpensive By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

(Copyright, Western Newspaper Union)

In casting about for gifts that are inexpensive but attractive and worth while, nothing will be found more satisfying than handkerchiefs. They are made in the greatest variety in size, decoration, quality and style. Manufacturers design them for many uses and consider the needs of those who convert them into accessories of dress and furnishings. Any number of the personal belongings of women and children are easily made from them, and, what with the real beauty of the handkerchiefs and the hand work involved, these little gifts embody the essentials of tasteful Christmas gifts; no matter how small the cost.

Handkerchiefs for fancy work and dress accessories may be bought for less money than other equally attractive articles. They will cost from five to fifty cents each. The average for pretty, daintily finished linen ones will be in the neighborhood of twenty cents; good designs may be had for fifteen cents, showing printed borders, and a quarter will buy a good grade of linen with some embroidery. Narrow hemstitched edges or small embroidered scallops are decorative, figuring in the designs in neckwear and other accessories made from handkerchiefs.

Turn-Over Collar and Jabot.

Val of Cluny lace and narrow ribbons are used with them. Lace-edged handkerchiefs are inexpensive and are especially adapted to making the neckwear fashionable at present.

A turn-over collar and jabot is shown here, made of a sheer lawn handkerchief edged with a narrow Cluny insertion and a Val lace edging, It is very simply constructed.

Cut off from one side of a lace-edged handkerchief a strip three inches wid and divide this strip into two equal parts. Make a straight band of mull three inches wide and of the required length and hem it all round with a quarter-inch hem. Sew to one edge of this strip the two short lace-edged strips cut from the handkerchief, turnng the corners to the middle of the strip. Allow the lace edges to overlap at this point. Turn in all raw edges and hem down. Lay the remainder of the handkerchief in small side plaits, forming a jabot, and sew to the lower edge of the neck band at kerchief with narrow hemstitched hem and a little embroidery. Use a threeinch strip from one side, sewed to a straight band of mull, for the collar. Two remaining edges will make the cuffs. They should be cut a half-inch wider than the collar to allow for turning over the sleeve. Finish the raw end of each cuff with a narrow hand-sewed hem.

For a jabot, select a lace-edged or embroidered handkerchief in sheer lawn of linen or cotton. Cut the handkerchief in two pieces on a diagonal line extending from a point three inches in from one corner, to a point three inches in from the opposite corner. Sew one or both of these pieces in a scant ruffle to a straight band of insertion or fine embroidery, with Those on which lace and ribbon are Beading may be used instead of insertion, or ribbon 11/2 inches wide laid in fine plaits as shown in the net and

Aprons are easily made. The simplest is shown here, with one corner cut away for the waist line. This corner is used to make the pocket. Sewing aprons are made of larger handkerchiefs gathered to a waist band. The bottom is turned up and stitched dened, dreaded period. In modern life the gift load has increased along with other complexities, has become in the majority of cases almost too weighty to be borne, hanging heavy on the consciousness from midsummer to December 25th. Desperation drives us to seek solution of the painful riddle, and at least a glimmering of light seems to come our way. In desperation we resolve, seeing no other help in this so urgent need, to use a little new thought, mental healing, or whatever you call it that is supposed to make hard things easy.

And this glimmering of light we would have penetrate the darkness of others. Hence these lines.

Suppose you have a list of half a hundred "expecting" from you. In which case, we make bold to advise, don't knit your brows over the disjointed combination of your flat purse and their expectations and give it all up as hopeless or at least bungling; just put on a new thought, or mental healing expression and hope. Declare to yourself: "I am not going to worry, come what may; for the first time in these many distraught years I'm going to make a stagger at enjoying Christmas, every bit of it—the survey of that army of expectants, the survey of resources, the study of fifty diverse tastes and wants, the heroic endeavor to minister to these wants with purse lean as shrunk shanks of Shakespeare." Just force smile-mental healing, or new thought-and drive ahead. Inwardly affirm, and outwardly express, "All's well, all's coming out right," then go on down town for the test.

But, so the smile will not rub off, the inward and outward serenity be strongest resolution, sturdiest effort, on trial in the maelstrom of afterluncheon Christmas shopping. The mad mob that at this time surges through aisles, jostles and tramples in elevators, bangs heavy doors on weak ones struggling in the rear, this mad mob might prove a successful serpent in that paradise of serenity enveloping you.

If you are calm and smiling in making your purchases, of course it may startle the girls behind the counters, cause no little agitation, but they'll recover and you'll have them fairly hypnotized, can get out of them almost anything you will. We tried it yesterday ourselves with marked success, got through a list of much length in miraculously short order. The shopping proved quite a social success, exchange of courtesies rather than mere exchange and barter; and, fooling aside, really not the deadly, deadening, nerve-racking, loathsome, unholy, un-Christian fight Christmas shopping has been with us this many a day. And, fooling aside, we really found quite a lot of fairly good things to be had at moderate outlay, believe the things came to view partly because we were not fussing and fuming about the matter,

By the way, does not Bernard Shaw declare that about the only folk that have manners nowadays are the folk that serve behind counters? To some the manners may spell mere servility, bespeak inferiority on the part of well-mannered; but there are still left a few people in this age of falling-down of every good old standard that cling secretly to a liking for courtesy and graciousness, are able to recognize it as the real thing though apparently presenting itself as something offered for sale, to be had for money. And there is no finer thing in this season of strike and illwill than the infinite patience and heroic calm of the girl behind the

After you have hopefully and smilingly made those hopeful purchases and the purchases have arrived at your domicile, without delay, set to work at doing them up; we beg of you for the success of the experiment don't wait till the eleventh hour for the sticking of the Christmas stickers, the tying of the everlasting Christmas ribbon, the endless addressing and weighing and stamping. There is nothing so calculated to make you hate this maddest, merriest season of Dickens' fancy as having to hunt around at the last moment for wrapping paper and string and appropriate boxes and tissue paper and cards and all the rest of the lumber essential to "getting things off." In gift-packing at glad Christmas time numberless not roughened, we beg you go early; brittle tempers are broken, number-

Complains of Neighbors.

Offence seems to be taken when I sit at my window with my eyes on the outside. I wish these kind neighbors who object to this luxurious privilege, to know that when I wish to see if that is a snow-drop I see, or a drop of rain, or a thousand other things-it is no neighbor's d- business. Nor is it my business to know, or care to know what is going on there. These windows are to look out of, as well as to let in blessed sunshine and light.

So far as looking out a window goes, our eyes are not prisoners. VERY DISGUSTING.

HOUSEKEEPING RUTS.

When are we to be emancipated from the old bugbear of Madam Grundy and the way mother used to do? Mothers ways were good ways, but conditions change. "The laws that in our fathers' days were good" are not the laws for us; so we must get out of the ruts and be able to swing along on high ground.

Is the old-fashioned Monday the best day for washing, or is it the day that has always been used and so we follow the procession? Tuesday is in every way a better day, for if the clothing must be picked up, looked over, mended or stains removed, Sunday is not the day for it. After the day of rest Monday comes full of the many things that were left from the week end. If the laundry work is added to all the rest, it makes too full a day. In homes where the day is used to get the clothing in condition to wash, the work is made much lighter.

Must we always serve potatoes with our dinner or every other meal? Can we not occasionally break away and get out of that rut? Serve hominy, fried bananas or boiled rice.

Do you have the same kind of dessert every week or two? There are simply millions of ways of preparing desserts. Have a variety, so that the family do not tire of the same one.

old friend in a new dress. For those who are fond of tripe, this recipe will be acceptable: Cut rounds of tripe with a pail cover in rounds four or five inches across. If it is pickled, add salt, pepper, olive oil and onion juice; and if it is not pickled, a little lemon juice. Let it stand an hour or longer in this marinade, turning often. Then broil delicately, lay on a plate and butter the rough sides generously. Garnish with chopped parsley or cress, and serve two rounds to each

Pour into buttered pans, let stand until cool enough to mark off in squares.

Taffy.—Cook together a cup of molasses, a cup of sugar, two-thirds of a cup of butter, an eighth of a teaspoon of salt, two-thirds of a cup of milk. When brittle flavor and pour into hot buttered pans.

Molasses Candy .- Boil together until brittle in water two cups of molasses, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two cups of brown sugar, a cup of water and a third of a cup of vinegar. Pour into greased pans and pull when cool enough. Cut in lengths with a pair of shears. Wrap in waxed paper.

Pralines.-Boil together one and seven-eighths cups of powdered sugar, a cup of maple sirup and a half cup of cream until a soft ball is formed when tried in water. Remove from the fire and beat until of a creamy consistency. Add two cups of hickory nuts and drop on waxed paper in small patties.

Chocolate Carmels .- Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, and when melted add a half cup of milk and the same amount of sugar and a cup of molasses. When boiling hot stir in four squares of chocolate; cook until brittle when tried in cold water, stirring occasionally to prevent burning. Remove from the heat and beat three minutes. Add a cup of walnut meats and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Turn into buttered pan and mark in squares when cool enough, Wrap each in paraffin paper.

HIMALAYA BEST BLACKBERRY

Grows Anywhere, Is Coreless and Can Be Easily Shipped a Thousand Miles. The giant Himalaya berry, a far eastern branch of the blackberry genus, is coming into its own and achieving a great popularity after a setback of a dozen years because of its slow propagation. It has a strong root system and differs from the ordinary blackberry in that it does not readily sucker, the new cane growth starting at or near the root crown, generally from the main stalk or cane.

These canes, if permitted, will often reach a length of fifty feet in a season. Fruit laterals from three to five feet long are sent out from these canes and are gracefully pendent on the outside of properly trained vines. Rather late in the spring, after the frosts are over, these laterals become a mass of delicate pink bloom, which later gives way to an immense crop of very sweet, almost coreless blackberries. The fruit ripens from July to November, and through hanging in clusters on the outside of the vine it is amply shaded from sunburn by leaves of a beautiful olive shade, rather silvery underneath.

From three to five years are required for the Himalaya to reach perfection. so that growers should not be hasty in passing judgment. The vine should be considered a fruit tree and taken care of accordingly. It has always made good if given half a The Himalaya is adaptable to almost every variety of soil and climate, the former having more influence over prolificacy than the latter. The fact that New Mexico, California, New Jersey, New York, Michigan, Missouri, Montana and many other states speaks well for its future. It is a perennial to a marked degree, vines having ashamed to be such a baby. But a horrid spider got on my dress this afternoon, and I've felt creepy ever since." "I'm surprised at my bright little girl," said daddy. "Silly folks give all their sympathy to the fly, which kills more persons in the year than all the tigers and wolves and snakes and sharks put together. "But, while the fly is of no use to himself and in fact a danger to everything else, the spider happens to be of the greatest use to those greatest or scientific men, the astronomers. Do you know what an astronomer is, Jack?" "Yes, sir," replied the boy. "There's one that stands at the corner of the square every clear night with a long telescope on three legs and sings out: 'Here you are now! All the glories of Venus, Mars and Jewpeter, only one

"Well, you can hardly call your friend an astronomer," laughed daddy, "but he does the best he can to spread the wonderful story of the heavens. "Now, what do you suppose the little spider does for the big astronomers?" he asked.

Both children gave it up. "He lends them a little piece of the thread of his web," said daddy, "so that they may weigh and measure the sun." "Oh-h-h, daddy!" hooted the children.

"All right," said daddy, pretending to weep; "if my own little children won't believe me I'm going to run away from home and sell peanuts for a

"Oh, daddy," they exclaimed "stop teasing and tell us all about it!" "Well," said daddy, "astronomy is arithmetic. Not 6 times 8 means 48, but sums that would make me dizzy even to look at them. And to start these sums the first measurements must be exact. Where the astronomer puts his eye to his telescope there are two lines crossed exactly, but for hundreds of years nothing could be found fine enough and smooth enough for this exactness.

"But one day somebody tried a spider thread, and all the trouble was over. Just think, it takes 7,000 of these threads to make up the thickness of an inch, and yet each one is so strong that even when the fierce sunlight breaks the glasses in the telescope the threads are uninjured."
