After leaving the grounds his machine went still higher, affording the thousands of spectators who had gathered on the streets, an excellent view of the flight. Several other successful flights were made and they proved the most interesting feature of the conclave.

In the evening the hall of the Woman's College was packed at the complimentary concert by the Grand Lodge Choir, assisted by Beauseant Commandery. It was given by special permission from Grand Master Shryock and was intended as a complimentary event to all Masons and Knights and their ladies of Western Maryland. THE SITUATION IN OHIO

ROOSEVELT VS. TAFT

Hot Campaign

REALIZE THE CRISIS IS AT HAND

No Let Up in the Fight Until Day of Primaries. - Both Sides Disgusted With Mud Slinging Tactics.-Politicians' Views.

President Taft finds it expedient to extend his campaign in Ohio. Both he and Col. Roosevelt foresee that a campaign crisis is imminent in that State. and both will wage a hot fight up to the very day of the primaries.

In one speech Mr. Taft blamed his opponent for the weak treaties with Great Britain and France, and charged that Perkins prevented the trust suits. Politicians in Washington are utterly disgusted with the mud slinging campaign being conducted by the Taft and Roosevelt publicity bureaus, and the followers of the President are of the opinion that his lack of success in carrying state primaries in many of the commonwealths has been due to a superabundance of oratory and a lamentable scarcity of business sense and organization. Regular Republicans are openly perturbed over Mr. Taft's failure to carry Maryland, not so much because of the strength the Maryland delegation would give him numerically, as because of the moral effect and the great weakness the failure indicates in the Taft ma-

Baltimoreans of Prominence and Other Well-known Men Indicted by Federal Grand Jury.

The Federal Grand Jury yesterday indicted the five officers and directors and the general counsel of the Potomac Refining Company, and presented A. B. Young, of New York, advertising agent for the concern. On the strength of false representations the company is said to have made, it has taken from the public already over $120,000, and the investigators of the scheme and Major John Philip Hill, United States district attorney, declare that goodness only knows how many more blocks of stock were contracted for when the authorities fell upon the scheme. The grounds upon which the charges are made are: Securing money under false pretenses, conspiracy to defraud, and using the government mails for fraudulent purposes.

Taft Speaks Feelingly of Maj. Butt. "Archie Butt's character was single; it was simple; it was straightforward,' said the President at the memorial services in memory of his recent aide. "He was incapable of intrigue. He had a clear sense of humor, and it lightened his life and the lives of those about him; but he was single-minded; he was loyal; he never had any doubt about what he ought to say. Life was not for him a troubled problem. He was a soldier, and he was appointed to serve under another and to that other he rendered the completest loyalty. I very much doubt whether I have ever known Breaking loose on political upstarts a man-I have known women-but I as Archie Butt had.'

NEW YORK TIMES COMMENT ON "THE MARYLAND MUDDLE"

The reports that the negro voters in various parts of Maryland, who largely supported Col. Roosevelt in the primaries on Monday, have been wearing new clothes lately and have had more money than usual to spend, were old stories some time ago, says the New York Times of Tuesday. There is no particular reason to believe that bribery greatly influenced the result of the primaries. Col. Roosevelt has split the Republican Party. The Republican vote in Maryland Monday was almost evenly divided. It is, however, a fact worth noting that not half the voting men to act together in order to secure strength of either party was called out. The inference that with a full vote at act together are a party, at least for the primaries the result would not have been materially different is easy, but not necessarily true. In fact, it is more than probable that if all the voters who it is the invarible vice of all organizarefuse to vote twice had turned out Mr. tions to drift into the support of the Roosevelt's proportion of the total vote

INDEPENDENT VOTING

Tendency To Break Away From Partisan Politics

RESULT OF INDIVIDUAL THOUGHT

Machine No Longer Able to Control Vote.—Candidates Must Measure Up to Peoples Standard,

It is a good augury that in both the great parties there is a disposition to break with the coterie of men who have been in control of the organizations, says tne Philiadelphia Record. Doubtless, it is neccessary for a great many results in election, and the men who that occasion, and that may cooperate constantly enough, to give their party a certain cohesion and individuality. But organization interests, or to degenerate into associations for the advancement of the managing men therein, instead of devoting themselves to the causes for

The only remedy for this is independence among the voters. Just so far as the party leaders can depend upon the voters to support them regardless of their courses and the candidates they put bribery, even stating that a "well- forward, just so far they will use their known" Roosevelt leader exhibited in power for their personal advantage, and Washington Sunday a large roll of small for the maintenance in power of the bills to be used in Maryland. But it organization to which they belong, rather than for the promotion of the more substantial show of success might public policies the parties profess to

If the voters, however, retain their independence, and support or oppose the Mr. Taft's supporters in the Maryland candidates of their parties according to their own judgment of what is a sound nearly as strong as his opponent in a policy and the promotion of the public State where a Roosevelt victory was good, the party managers will find theminterest, or at least the conception of it which is entertained by the voters whose dent voter is the salvation of the country and the only salvation, from systematic boss government, which is always for a little more puzzling than the new private advantage and usually for States. The indications are that Taft past year there have been many evidences, in both the Democratic and the Resound as that of the party managers, and is far more often respectable and and in the interest of the country.

All Coins Are Not Gold That Glitter.

Twenty-four coins were recovered from the sea bed where the supposed Spanish Armada treasure ship lies off Tobermory. Two are dated 1579 and 1582 respectively, and are clearly marked "Phillipus." These are the first Spanish copper coins of the period of which their is any record. It had been believed that Spain, then by far the richest kingdom in the world, handled money imperially and did not deal in small copper coins.

These coins came up shining like burnished gold, and the staff of the salvage ship were sure that the long-expected gold had been reached at last, and greeted the glittering coins with cheers but the coins turned green under the

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scoth-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.-Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

JANE CARTER'S CONTRACT

By HELEN ROSS

Jane Carter rushed up the steps leading to the tiny apartment which she shared with two artist friends as impecunious as herself, and burst into the living room. Her flushed face and sparkling eyes were pleasant to see. "Oh, girls," she cried, "I'm so sorry to be late when it's my night to

"Yes, you cruel creature, I'm starved," joked Miss Mason. "But what is the excitement you're trying to keep from bubbling over?"

The other occupant of the room,

Miss Day, anticipating pleasant news, closed her desk. "I'm too high in the clouds to fry potatoes, but hungry enough to eat them," cried Jane, "so come out with me and I'll treat to a real dinner." "My, but you're rash! You'll not be able to buy new shoes this week," warned Miss Day. "Be merciful and tell the news!" implored Miss Mason.

Jane swept aside a number of packages and perched on the cleared space of the table.

"I can't believe my good fortune," she began a trifle unsteadily. "Just as I was going out for lunch a stranger, all togged up in stunning motoring costume, asked if I could direct him to Miss Jane Carter, the interior decorator. I hated him to see that shabby hole of a studio, but there was no way out of it. He was awfully nice and didn't look around a bit, and said I was recommended highly as having excellent ideas and good taste. Isn't that lovely? He is the big banker, Daniel Lord, and wants his country home decorated. He took me there in his motor this afternoon and the house is magnificent."

"You deserve it, dear," exclaimed Miss Day. "I can't tell you how glad I am that luck is finally coming your

"Really, girls, it will take months to do it as he wishes it done, and while we were out there he suggested one innovation after the other, and is retaining me a great deal longer than necessary to oversee details. Before I left, he made me sign a contract as if I would balk half way!"

"It's as well to have all that settled," commented the business-like Miss Mason.

"Is he young, old or indifferent?" chimed in Miss Day. "Married?" "About thirty-eight and unmarried!

Now I'll die if I don't get something to eat. If you love me, come!" groaned Jane, jumping off the table.

They left the apartment and started towards an Italian cafe, all takling at once. The sudden change in Jane's fortunes delighted the older girls. Jane was to start water-color drawings of the rooms the following day for Mr. Lord's inspection.

When the drawings were delivered Mr. Lord returned them personally and declared himself delighted, insisting upon paying a liberal retain-

"I hated to take that money," confided Jane, blushing a rosy red at the Lord. "Mr. Lord declared that it was only good business to accept it."

"When your time is taken for that length of time, you should be compensated," declared Miss Day.

"All the same, it seems so material," sighed Jane.

"You little dunce," scolded Miss Mason; "all the big decorators do it.

What have you to live on while this contract is on deck? It requires your exclusive attention and all other work must be dropped.' As the decorating of the huge house progressed, Mr. Lord found it of such absorbing importance that he frequently called in the evenings to discuss details. His great motor took Jane to any country houses of his friends which possessed unusual features, and the great banker always found time to go along and satisfy his thirst for decorative knowledge. These spins through the gorgeously colored October country were fairyland to Jane. As they were frequently late returning to town, they dined at queer inns or picturesque farmhouses. Jane's frequent lateness seemed to pass unnoticed by her friends, and as her financial affairs improved, certain luxuries, hitherto unknown, appeared in the apartment.

"Isn't she the darling?" remarked Miss Day. "Just think of her trudging all the way to the market for persimmons because she knew I liked them. Most girls would be too much taken up with their own affairs to think of others. She's wonderfully

"Indeed she is," agreed Miss Mason. "Do you know I have an idea that she is very fond of Mr. Lord in a delightfully friendly way, so let's be careful not to spoil her innocent pleasure in his kindness and consideration for her. She is such a sensitive little goose, and if she got the idea that his interest is more for her than her work it would be a shock." "He can't help admiring her work," answered the loyal Miss Day. "Neither can he help admiring such an earnest little worker. Jane is too sensible to misunderstand his kind-

She got up to answer the doorbell and returned carrying a long box. "That's the third box of American Beauties this week," she observed.

"I hope he doesn't overdo it," began Miss Day, anxiously "If-But Jane returned from the country never completed.

"It's just too wonderful!" sighed Jane. "I seem to be living in a "I hate to look around and see how little there is to be done. Two more weeks and I'm through."

"Maybe you'll get Mr. Lord's town house to do over," suggested Miss Mason, the practical.

"No, Mr. Lord means to sell that town house and live exclusively in the country. Personally, I can't understand why anybody should desire such an enormous mansion."

"Very likely he means to announce his engagement," observed Miss Day, holding a sketch at arm's length and inspecting it critically. Jane gave an odd, hysterical giggle and jumped up quickly. "Good night, girls, I'm going to

But on the threshold she turned. "Is there anything I can do for either of you?" she asked.

"That was brutal of you!" exclaimed Miss Mason, severely.

"It was rather raw to say that and I could bite out my tongue now," answered Miss Day, regretfully. "It's like Jane, too, to forgive a person the second after a nasty dig and offer to do something for her. I never dreamed that she cared about him. Looks as though she does.'

Miss Mason nodded slowly. "In that case I suppose it's better that the house will be finished so soon,' she said moodily.

The rapidly progressing work did not inspire Jane with any great amount of regret. Her pleasure in it was suddenly gone.

"I'll be happy when it is all over and done with," she told the girls. The last two weeks seemed to cause her considerable restlessness. "She has something on her mind as sure as anything," observed Miss Mason. "If this contract is going to make her unhappy, I, for one, am sorry that she ever got it."

"Here too!" replied Miss Day. "One can easily see how she avoids discussing the house or Mr. Lord, and that's not natural when a task has been well and speedily accomplished."

One evening Mr. Lord brought Jane home in his motor, as the slush was unspeakable. He stayed some little time talking about his plans for the future. Jane was noticeably silent, but it seemed an effort for her not to enter into the conversation.

At last Mr. Lord arose. "The day Miss Carter says my house is finished, you must all come out to a celebration dinner. Now don't forget. I'm keeping a big surprise for that Isn't that so, Miss Carter?" he asked, smiling enigmatically. The second he was gone, Jane hurried off to her room. "I know what the surprise is," announced Miss Mason. "He has fixed up this house for his wife, and perhaps told Jane this evening coming into town."

"I don't know what ever I would do if he were to announce it that night," groaned Miss Day.

At last the house was completed. Mr. Lord called for the trio in his motor, but scarcely a word was spoken on the way out. The tour through the fresh, beautiful rooms filled the girls with sadness. Jane was unusually quiet, and even the lavish praise bestowed upon 'her failed to lift the veil of quiet which seemed to envelop She presided at the dinner tabl in an equally silent mood. At last Mr. Lord stood up, a glass of light wine in his hand.

"Now for the surprise!" he cried, gayly. "We must drink to the future mistress of this house!" Miss Mason and Miss Day choked down a sip of the wine, and dared not look toward poor Jane. There was an awkward pause. "Won't you give me your good wishes, girls?" asked Jane, in a wee. small voice. "You don't know how many times I have nearly let the cat out of the bag these last few weeks. The only safe course was not to talk Then the astonished girls saw Mr.

Lord put his arm around Jane's waist and draw her towards him. "Ladies-now drink it this time-to the future mistress of this house!" he exclaimed joyfully.

Dominion Fisheries Important.

Those who know the extent and importance of the Canadian fisheries are not surprised that the Dominion guards her fishing interests so jealously. In 1908 the fish catch in Canadian waters was valued at $25,451,-085. That included all fish products and seals. The capital invested in the fisheries in that year was $15,508,-275. The value of all vessels, boats, fishing implements, lobster plants, freezers and fish houses was embraced in that total. A fishing fleet of 1,414 vessels was employed. Nine of the fleet were engaged hunting for seal. There also were 39,965 boats, manned by 71,070 men. It was noticed in that year that gasoline boats were being used more and more, and that the fishermen were profiting by it.

British Cavalry Lack Horses. The British army on mobilization will require 132,000 horses, and no one has the slightest idea where they can be found. Good authorities tell us that this number of animals of the military age does not exist in the country. With the growth of mechanical transport the necessity of taking steps to secure a supply of horses in war grows more and more urgent. We can not, unfortunately, mount our cavalry on taxicabs. We still breed the best horses in the world-but they are bought up for the use of foreign armies, while the British war office is counting its pence.-London Mail.

An Inducement for Country Boys.-Matter Not Yet Taken up by Board. -Movement Backed By Farmers.

There is a movement on foot to establish a course of Agriculture in the Boys' High School, Frederick, when the new building is occupied next term.

The course as outlined, takes up soil formation, drainage, irrigation, making of home made fertilizers, value of commercial fertilizers, for the first year of study. For the second year the various plants are studied, how they grow and feed, and what ground is adapted to the various plants or crops. The second half of this year is devoted to cereals, Readings from The CHRONICLE Stand- forage and fiber crops, root and tuber ard Thermometer for week ending crops and wood crops and plant breeding. The next year the breeding, care and judging of farm animals is taught, together with barn construction principles of dairying in all its branches, and the construction of poultry houses and the care of poultry. TREATING WOUNDS OF HORSE

Leg Injuries Are Rather Serious Matter, Since They Are Likely to Leave Blemish.

Bruised wounds do not require a great amount of attention, since they are usually protected by the skin, and germs cannot find their way in to cause much trouble. To keep down inflammation, it helps to bathe the skin with quart of water.

Leg wounds in horses are a rather serious matter, since they are likely to leave a blemish which will lower the value. It is important in treating them to secure a healing which will be so perfect that no one will suspect that a wound has ever been there. For such wounds one veterinarian suggests the following: Clean the wound with a wash composed of one tablespoonful of acetate of lead, one tablespoonful of sulphate of zinc, four tablespoonfuls of tincture of arnica, and one quart of water. This wash should be used every hour or so the first day and three or four times daily thereafter. The object is to keep the wound, while healing, lower than the surface of the skin. If it pushes up, bichloride of mercury, as much as can be put on the surface of a dime, should be placed on the sore. It is said that leg wounds thus treated will heal over, leaving no blemish.

Many farmers say they do not raise sheep because they are more subject to disease than other animals. Not so. More sheep die from damp, filthy quarters, exposure to rain and snow and from being kept on low lands than from disease.

From Lucile's

That Malcolm Cox, my erstwhile suitor, was married and to an eastern girl whom I had never even seen struck me as so droll that the moment I received the announcement of the wedding I determined to be the first one to entertain them when he brought his bride home to Chicago.

I decided to have them to dinner with just Uncle Bob and Betty to meet them, as I thought a small, intimate party would be the most friendly.

My invitation was answered by a rather stiff little note from the bride. I took it to mother, thinking she would be amused by its primness. She read it and then cast one of her reproachful glances at me.

"Why, Lucile," she exclaimed, "is it possible that you invited company to dinner Saturday night? Didn't you remember that we are all going out to your Uncle John's farm for the week end?"

"That's so; I had quite forgotten it," I said. "I'll have to stay at home, though."

"But I've promised Tilly a few days' vacation at that time and so even if you do stay at home I don't see how you can give a dinner party. I do wish you would consult me before you issue invitations."

"Oh, dear!" I sighed. "It seems to me that whenever I try to have a little pleasure something goes wrong."

"Well, dear, don't feel so badly," said mother, seeing the tears in my eyes. "Surely, you can postpone the dinner

"No, I can't; it would be too awkward, for I don't know Malcolm's wife at all. But if Cousin Fannie will only stay at home from Uncle John's she and I can get up a nice little dinner and maybe Betty would bring her maid to wait on the table.'

"Fannie is so fond of the farm that I hate to ask her to give up the outing," said mother, in her undecided

"Oh, I'll ask her, mother," I returned. "She would enjoy going to the farm just as much some other time I'm sure.'

Saturday morning when grandmother and father and mother were leaving the house father was greatly surprised to find that Cousin Fannie and I weren't going to the farm with the

If you'll Convenient Rack May Be Constructed just give me that amount, I won't have to ask you for anything extra on this week's allowance, as I was afraid I'd have to do.'

He handed me a $5 bill. "I can't quite understand your system of finance," he said as he kissed me goodby, but he laughed and I felt glad that his vexation had passed away. I think I understand father even better than mother does.

A few minutes after the family left, Betty telephoned me that she and Uncle Bob had just got my note asking them to dinner, but they couldn't come for they had promised to go out to the farm also. She said she wished that I had invited them earlier so they could have arranged to come, as she securely. A three-cornered piece of wasn't very keen on going to the Kern's Whiskers. Senator John W. Kern of Indiana recently gave a fairly satisfactory explanation of his whiskers. "It is a mooted question," said

Kern, "what comprises personality. Some say that the eye is the window of the soul. Yet a man who has lost his eyes may have just as much per sonality as anyone. It's the same if a man loses a leg or an ear. He is still the same man. But with whiskers it is different. A man who has worn whiskers all his life and then by ourselves late one evening for a suddenly ceases to do so is not the moonlight row and in our haste to get same man. He may be just as good into the boat, I fell into the water and a man, but he is a different man-just he carried me, dripping, back to the as much as if he were to change the house, where every one thought him shape of his nose or the color of his eyes. Therefore no man who has worn whiskers as long as I have should part a foot deep where I fell. We laughed with them entirely if he would retain heartily at the recollection, but she his self-respect.
