ONE HUNDRED AND THIRD COMMENCEMENT HELD AT SAINT JOSEPH'S COLLEGE AND ACADEMY.

The one hundred and third annual Commencement of St. Joseph's College and Academy was held last Thursday morning, June 20th, at nine o'clock. Right Reverend Owen B. Corrigan, D. D., V. G., Bishop of Baltimore, presided. The exercises marked the closing of one of the most successful years the College has ever enjoyed. A more favorable day could not have been selected. All day Wednesday the sky was overcast and rain fell intermittently and it was feared the following day would result in a downpour of rain; but Thursday broke forth wonderfully fair in contrast with the day previous. A cloudless sky and cooling breezes made it delightful for the hundreds who witnessed the exercises. Early in the morning automobiles and carriages filled with persons desirous of getting favorable seats, were hurrying to the College and by the time the programme was begun the spacious Exhibition Hall was filled to the doors. An unusually large number of alumnae, together with the parents and friends of the young students were present.

The opening number of the programme was the Entrance March by Bendel, which was beautifully rendered.

The Salutatory was delivered by Miss Mallie Floyd Miller, who took as her subject, "The Golden Morn of a Perfect Day."

The next number, a spirited semi-chorus by Schubert, "Awake! Welcome the Day," was interpreted in a pleasing manner by the vocal class and showed the result of thorough and diligent training. The other musical numbers, both instrumental and vocal, were exceptionally fine and reflect a great deal of credit upon Prof. Fritz Gaul, the leader.

Miss Ruffin's Paper.

Miss Ellen Randolph Ruffin, of Mobile, Ala., who had just received the Baccalaureate degree, delivered the following dissertation, the theme of which was "He That Rideth on the Hurricane is Pilot of the Bubble on the Breaker."

"A famous Russian scholar of the last century writes: 'There can be no little things in this world seeing that God mingles in all. My inventory of the universe is soon made out—I believe in Him who created it.' This profession of faith, so full and entire, surely finds its echo today in every sincere Christian heart. The act most certainly includes a firm belief in all the divine attributes, and this belief compels our worship of the Supreme Being, obliging us to bear witness that the more impenetrable the designs of the Almighty, the more omnipotence, goodness, and mercy will finally be revealed in the visible guidance of a tenderly loving Providence.

"The little one lisping its prayers at the mother's knee, already begins to solve the stupendous problem of human existence. The child is being initiated in the grandeur of the marvelous destiny that awaits it, whilst striving to grasp the early lessons taught by that sublime Code of Ethics which, gradually unfolding our royal prerogative, offers for our acceptance the true and profound philosophy of life. Meanwhile, the youthful mind soon grows with the ever-recurring thought that, in joy or sadness, in calm or storm, in prosperity or adversity, an omnipresent, all-wise Ruler is appointing or permitting whatever happens. Cardinal Manning tell us: 'The Providence of God is the will of God directed by His wisdom and His love.' How clearly is this magnificent truth illustrated by the admirable harmony of order displayed in our Maker's works! There is about this care that God takes of all His creatures, more especially of His rational creatures, an irresistible attraction that charms whilst it instructs. Unlike the mysterious handwriting on the wall, this consoling message may readily be interpreted by the simplest mind, for it inspires not dread, but filial love and unwavering trust in that Heavenly Father who hath numbered the hairs of our head, without whose permission a sparrow falls not to the ground, who knows what is best, and who does what is best for all and each of His children.

"If the firmament is His work, so too is the ocean which Byron calls boundless, endless and sublime, . . . the throne of the Invisible. In the joy of his youthful sports it was his delight to be borne like the bubbles on its breakers. Now, as the Creator is not bound by His own laws, and as all physical laws depend upon His will, He may when He sees fit suspend, modify, and even abolish these laws, releasing the elements and allowing them at intervals to exceed their established limits. In this disturbance of order we are strongly impressed, awe-stricken, by the manifestations of the divine power, nay, it may be of retributive justice; we can, therefore, only bow down and adore where it were impious to question. 'We recognize the action of God in great events, but we are apt also to exclude Him in lesser ones. We forget that the Lord of eternity is the Lord of the hour!' Yet in any instance, however fraught with peril, mercy is near at hand to sustain our courage and restore our confidence. We find a thrilling description of a storm in one of the voyages of the great Portuguese Navigator:

In the fierce tornado's path,
The ocean waves went up among
The thunder spirit's choir.
Stern Albuquerque that hour
Showed horror on his brow;
While conscience in her power
Made his haughty heart to bow.
Then from a mother's bosom blest,
He snatched her infant care,
And clasping it before his breast,
Defied the lightning's glare!
'Hurl down, O Heaven, thy worst,
For innocence now shields
A trembling bosom cursed!
He stood—the tempest fell asleep,
The Hurricane passed o'er,
His arm, who rules the mighty deep,
Showed mercy and forbore."

"We have heard the Redeemer's mild rebuke to His terrified Apostles, when a tempest arose in the sea and covered their boat with waves; in their earnest faith they cry: 'Lord, save us, we perish!' With His wonted goodness and that majesty of gentleness, all His own, the divine Master, reproving, reassures them with these tender words: 'Why are you fearful, O ye of little faith!' And when at His command there comes a great calm, men wondering ask: 'What manner of man is this, for the winds and the sea obey Him?'

"Out of the greatest evils God always knows how to bring the greatest good. 'Man marks the ruin of the earth, his control stops with the shore.' Perhaps, to the recent unparalleled tragedy of the unsinkable Titanic, 'the Queen of the sea,' may be applied what had been said of a similar disaster in the sixteenth century: 'Why did the Invincible Armada perish, despite the beauty of its vessels, and the long-tried experience of its mariners? Probably that it called itself invincible, had some share in its defeat. God allows us the epithet only after the fact.' Ah! but the most adverse evils have their compensation. True, the dread narration grows more pathetic, more overwhelming, as each melancholy detail is added to the sad history of that ill-fated morning of April fifteenth. Yet, who shall duly estimate the swift action of the marvelous graces vouchsafed—graces inspiring the heroic self-sacrifice recorded? Whilst life itself with all its prospects and possibilities still hung in the balance the more numerous, the powerful, the vigorous, relinquishing their chances, stand aside for the weaker, the more helpless, thus obeying the unwritten law of the sea: 'Women and children first!' To the Catholic Church are all indebted for this chivalrous courtesy of Medieval Knighthood. 'God fulfils Himself in many ways,' for, first among the twenty five improvements of that period of the world's advance, comes the elevation of woman's character, until, thanks to Christianity and the Middle Ages, she has become the ornament and refiner of society. This honor was reflected upon her from Mary, the Immaculate Mother of the Saviour-God, the peerless type of all loveliness and perfection.

"Divine Providence, from whom nothing is hidden, had prepared for that distressed multitude, to console, encourage and bless, unspeakably glorious examples of unselfish fidelity to duty, in His own chosen and exceptionally favored representatives, the four Catholic priests. Companions of their people's misfortune, without even a thought of safety for themselves, what fortitude and submission must have been gathered from the solemn presence and Christ-like influence of those self-doomed men of God! Their hands fragrant with the sacred Host, it was the crowning excellence of their ministrations, whilst exercising for the last time the tremendous power with which they had been invested, to avail those immortal souls, so unexpectedly summoned to their account, far more efficaciously than could all home comforts with the most affectionate solicitude of devoted relatives and friends. A non-Catholic survivor, from one of the lifeboats at the distance of half a mile from the sinking vessel, compares the Titanic to an enormous glowworm, for she was alight from the water line to her stern—electric lights in every cabin, lights on all decks, and lights at her mastsheads. Raised above the kneeling crowds upon the decks could be clearly discerned the tall figure of Father Byles, who had climbed upon a chair or a coil of rope. His hands were outstretched, as if in supplication and benediction. Indeed there is positive assurance that those zealous priests stood blessing, absolving and leading the passengers in prayer, until all disappeared in the waters. To the little colony that looked for rescue to the noblest of vessels, the Carpathia, long and wearily dragged the hours. Yet those lifeboats rested upon the bosom of no storm-swept sea: no hurricane had lashed its waves into fury, the zephyr had not agitated its waters, nor were they rippled by the breath of the aurora; smooth and placid was the surface of that broad expanse and deep. Have we not here another and most striking manifestation of the Providence of God?

"The Angels of the Titanic, the Invisible Crew, with the Guardian Angels of those two thousand ransomed souls were hovering near to plead for their charges ere the time of mercy be past. Beautifully and reverently has it been said: 'God's wisdom was present when He compassed the sea with its bounds, and set a law to its limits. His mercy is over all His works, and the Angels, to whom He has given charge over man to keep him in all his ways, will, surely, when these ways are perilous give wings to His mercy.' That mercy will com-through the unfailing protection and all-powerful intercession of her whom, at the twilight of the dawn and of the evening, it is the mariner's privilege to salute as Ave Maris Stella! Along life's voyage, whilst we also hail the Angels' Queen, our Star of the Sea, be this our prayer:

'Star of our hope upon the wave,
When by the tempest tossed,
With thee, life's dangers we will brave,
Without thee, we are lost!'

After the awarding of the honors, Very Rev. P. McHale, V. C. M., of Germantown, Pa., addressed the graduates.

Address to the Graduates.

It is a matter of keen disappointment that the address of Very Rev. P. McHale, C. M., Superior of the Vincentians, cannot be given in full. Of this discourse, so enthusiastically received, only a partial and most imperfect outline can be furnished. Pardon is asked for its insertion; but it was felt that its valued points could not be entirely omitted.

At the opening, the Very Rev. speaker said: We have one regret amid our joy to-day, the absence of His Eminence. We miss his kindly smile, and his timely words; but we have with us his best representative in the Rt. Rev. Bishop Corrigan. The orator then announced that a telegram from Buffalo had just been received from Very Rev. J. P. Cribbins, C. M., Superior and Director of the Sisters of Charity in the Eastern Province of the United States, conveying message of regret for unavoidable absence, with best wishes to be shared by the graduates with all the students of the college. Father McHale then extended tribute of thanks to all, especially to the graduates; then continuing, he said in part: Some have grown grey, not from attending such exercises, but after many years have passed and, therefore, have occasion of renewing their youth. He told the graduates they had been accustomed to pass through two gardens; the one the Garden of Science, the other of Religion, but bearing in their hands a torch lighted at the fire of Faith, they could still pass through these gardens without losing their way. The brow of beauty wreathed and made more attractive by simplicity; their ornaments were the fringes of knowledge, and their garments were fragrant with the scent of many flowers. Religion is the Guardian of Science, therefore are they more truly Vestal Virgins than were those of old Rome, who watched the sacred fire.

Many say that science is agnostic, needs no assistance; but science is not independent, not agnostic. Science is the knowledge of things as they are in their causes. We have order and law in our garden. We have order because there is unity and our central sun is Almighty God, "who beholdeth the ends of the world, places weight on winds, makes way for rain and sun." These are household truths for us. Reason needs a guide to keep us from going astray. Our guide is faith. Where there is perfect civilization, there is perfect adjustment. Where there is reign of law, there is the highest civilization. Civil and religious organizations, here is the city of order. The Church never theorizes; she speaks with the infallible ring of authority. Outside the Church there is confusion, half truth, or truths separated from system, therefore they are useless. You have been disciplined according to law and order; see the effect of this discipline on your lives up to the present time. Going forth now, carry your torches with you, keep them trimmed and burning brightly, that you may see your way; for outside there are snares to be avoided. The Church is a kind, good mother; severe at times, like the skilled physician she must cut to cure. This wise mother is waiting for you outside, to wrap you in the mantle of protection and rebuke. God and yourself alone know the vocation to which each one of

DEMOCRATS CONVENE

Alton B. Parker is Elected Chairman

CONVENTION BREAKS UNIT RULE

No Candidate Controlled by Financiers to be Nominated.—Clark and Wilson are the Likeliest Nominees.—Platform Later.

The long anticipated Democratic National Convention opened on Tuesday, June 25, with William Jennings Bryan as the central figure. The convention was called to order at 12.16 P. M., and Cardinal Gibbons delivered the invocation and prayer. On the previous day the subcommittee had nominated Alton B. Parker for temporary chairman. This choice was announced and Bryan immediately nominated Senator Hern of Indiana, as the progressive candidate in a forty minute speech. A little later Senator Kern took the platform and asked Judge Parker to unite with him on a compromise candidate, naming, among the others, Senators O'Gorman, Culberson and Clayton. Judge Parker made no reply whatsoever to this, thereupon Senator Kern withdrew his name and nominated Mr. Bryan who accepted the nomination.

In his speech against Judge Parker Mr. Bryan said: "I assume that no friend of Judge Parker's will contend that he was satisfied in 1908 with all the candidates or all the plans and purposes of our platform. This is no time for a campaign of pleasant words and sweet phrases. We are writing history to-day, and this convention is to announce to the country whether it is to take up the challenge thrown down at Chicago by a convention controlled by predatory wealth, or answer it by ourselves submitting to predatory wealth, and give the country no party. The people well know the influences that dominated the Chicago convention and made it a farce; that these interests are here and more brazenly at work than they were in Chicago. At the end of 16 years battle I find the things I have fought for triumphant not only in my party, but in the Republican party as well."

Then the rollcall on temporary chairmanship was held. Mr. Bryan was defeated and the chairmanship given to Judge Parker. In the voting Maryland gave Parker 14½ and Bryan 12½ of the 27 votes that were cast. The next day of the convention brought out some important results. The decision was made by the convention that the nomination would be made first and the platform would be made up afterwards. A great ovation of 33 minutes in length was given the mention of Gov. Woodrow Wilson's name.

The convention then passed a resolution to restrict the unit rule to delegations from those states, alone, which have mandatory laws on the subject. This was a victory for the Wilson supporters. Although the platform for the Democratic party has not been made up as yet, several important and beneficial planks are known. The progressive ideas predominate. The tariff plank calls for an immediate downward revision on necessities of life and on those commodities which the trusts force to be sold at a higher rate here than abroad. The banking plank declares for the revision of the banking laws so that it will be impossible for a few men to control the banks and the finances of the country. At the session Thursday night, Bryan proposed a resolution that no candidate having any connection with the Morgan-Belmont forces should be accepted. The resolution was passed by the convention.

Mr. Bryan has had the control of the convention from the first, and has so wisely used this control that he plainly shows that he is striving for the best interests of the party and the nation.

VESPERS IN THE VALLEY.

(Published by Special Request.)

From the "Valley," just at twilight,
On the sweet Spring-scented air,
Floats the chant of holy voices,
Breathing forth an evening prayer.

O'er the meadows wafts the cadence,
Rising, falling with the breeze,
Like the forest hum at evening,
Nature's anthem, through the trees.

Up to Heaven, high ascending,
There o'erheard by martyr, saint—
Rises to the Blessed Mother
This appealing sacred plaint:

"As the dewy shades of even,
Gather o'er the balmy air,
Listen, gentle Queen of Heaven,
Listen to my vesper prayer."

"Holy Mother, near me hover,
Free my thoughts from aught defiled,
With Thy wings of mercy cover,
Safe from harm Thy helpless child."

Then from tower, old and sacred,
Chimes the sweet-toned evening bell,
Bearing in melodious measure,
Benisons o'er hill and dell.

Soon the darkness falls and silence
Reigns. The "Valley" now in sleep
Calm reposes, and God's angels O'er it tender vigil keep.

Note.—Just as the "Mountain" is the familiar and endearing term for Mount St. Mary's College, the "Valley" is the kindly name always used by her alumnae when speaking of St. Joseph's College and Academy.

TAFT RENOMINATED

Roosevelt Cries Fraud In Convention

REFUSES TO ABIDE BY DECISION

Severs His Connection With Convention and Forms a Third Party Whose Nomination He accepts.—New Party To Hold Convention.

At the closing sessions of the Republican National Convention there were many important and unlooked for developments. The National Committee seated the delegates, which Roosevelt contested, for Mr. Taft. Mr. Roosevelt, thereupon claimed it to be the biggest fraudulent act that has ever been committed in the political history of the country and refused to abide by the decision of the Convention. The Convention after a very stormy session nominated President Taft with Vice President John F. Sherman as his running mate again. In the voting Taft got 561 Cummins 17, La Follette 41, Hughes 2; Roosevelt, as soon as he made his decision not to abide by the Convention's choice, instructed 399 not to vote. The delegates obeyed. President Taft's and Senator La Follette's names were the only ones formally presented to the Convention. The votes for the others were cast by delegates who insisted on following their instructions and two who favored Justice Hughes. While this nomination was made Col. Roosevelt had declared himself a candidate for President and announced the organization of a third party to meet in convention in August. The Grand Old Party is for the moment smashed to pieces.

Before it proceeded to its final business Col. Roosevelt informed the convention through Henry J. Allen of Kansas that his delegates would not vote on any proposition that came before it. The reason given was that robbery and fraud controlled the convention and that it was not a Republican convention any more, but an illegal and unofficial body. These unpalatable things were said to the convention in so many words. It howled and protested, but not for long, and the amazing thing about it was that such statements could be made without evoking more of a fight.

On Saturday the birth of the new party occurred in Orchestra Hall. It was a stirring spectacle to witness. Governor Johnson was chairman and presided, Governor Stubbs, of Arkansas took an active part. Mr. Roosevelt was tendered the nomination of the third party by the 344 delegates who abided by his command and didn't vote. Colonel Roosevelt accepted the nomination and thanked them for their support. He advised them to go to their homes and arouse interest in the third party and prepare to convene in August at a "mass convention." A part of his speech follows:

"This has now become a contest which cannot be settled merely along the old party lines. The principles that are at stake are as broad and as deep as the foundations of our democracy itself. They are in no sense sectional. They should appeal to all honest citizens, East and West, North and South; they should appeal to all right thinking men, whether Republicans or Democrats, without regard to their party affiliations.

"I feel that the time has come when not only men who believe in progressive principles, but all men who believe in all those elementary maxims of public and private morality which must underlie every form of successful free government should join in one movement.

"If you wish me to make the fight I will make it, even if only one State should support me.

"The only condition I impose is that you shall feel entirely free when you come together to substitute any other man in my place if you deem it better for the movement, and in such case I will give him my heartiest support.

Big Music Festival in Vienna.

Music lovers from all parts of Europe and the United States have journeyed to Vienna to attend the great festival of music that is being held there. The festival is to last two weeks, and during that time the most important symphonic creations of Beethoven, Haydn, Brahms, Bruckner and Mahler, all of whom lived in Vienna, will be performed by the world famous orchestral and choral organizations of that city under the direction of Nikisch, Winigartner, Bruno, Walter and Schalk. A special concert will be devoted to Austrian folk songs and the classical dance music of Lanner and Strauss will be represented. Mozart's and Smetana's operas will be sung at the Imperial Opera House.

President Lowell, of Harvard announced that the college had received $1,365,000 in gifts the last year outside of regular endowment incomes. One hundred thousand dollars was from the class of '87. It was customary for the class of twenty-five years graduated to make this gift. But there was surprise when it was announced that the class of '02, only ten years old, had given $200,000 of the total.

Byrd Jackson, a negro, was electrocuted at Richmond, Va., for a crime of burglary, assault and robbery. It was the first time in 60 years that a death penalty had been exacted in this state for such a crime. Clarence Nixon, another negro, was electrocuted for murder.

Ten thousand women, including many prominent society women and several duchesses, all of them dressed in white and wearing white hats trimmed with garlands of wild roses, sold flowers on the streets of London, in honor of the Queen Mother. The proceeds are to be given to the metropolitan hospitals and convalescent homes in the name of Queen Alexandria, who originated the idea.

A series of mysterious disappearances led to a raid upon a house in the village of Kurdie in Novogeladopa, Poland, tenanted by a woman and her daughter. The raid disclosed the corpses of 17 human beings. All had been tortured to death. The bodies were mutilated almost beyond recognition. Upon rigid inquiry the mother confessed that she was at the head of a murderous gang which, in the past five months, had slain 40 persons. She gave the names of others in the gang and within a few hours 30 were under arrest. The motive in each case was robbery.

China has rejected the $300,000,000 loan from the banking group of the six powers, probably because of the stipulation for foreign supervision of its expenditures. The proposal for foreign administration of the salt monopoly also has been declined. Four cabinet officers of the Lang Shao Yi have offered their resignations. These advances were received by the state department.

A notable celebration was begun at Geneva, Switz., of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of the famous philosopher, Jean Jacques Rousseau, who was born in Geneva, June 28, 1712. ## FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scotch-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Lingular Hills and the Catoclin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.—Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

IDEALS AND THEIR ACHIEVEMENT.

The founders of an institution naturally have, upon its inception, the noblest and highest ideals which are to be fulfilled as the years go on. In what manner these ideals are fulfilled and realized rests wholly with the persons who have been intrusted with the guidance and maintenance of the institution. The ideals which venerated Mother Seton and her co-workers conceived over a century ago were the highest and noblest possible: that the institution which they founded might be the cradle of an order which would be a power for good and an assistance to suffering humanity, that it might do an inestimable service to the country at large by so instructing and guiding its pupils that they would achieve perfect womanhood.

Has St. Joseph's College and Academy realized and fulfilled the ideals that were set for her? There is no uncertain answer in the magnificent work that the Sisters of Charity of the Order of St. Vincent de Paul have done and are doing, as is attested by the almost countless letters coming from far and wide, from dignitaries and leading clergy of the church written in terms of the highest praise and commendation for the good Sisters; in the prominent and capable women who have always been proud to own Saint Joseph's as their Alma Mater.

Ideals such as these have not been achieved in one or two years' time, but by over a century of heroic and patient endeavor, by thoroughness without ostentation, by ardor and enthusiasm for the great work, by self-devotion, self-sacrifice and piety, which qualities have always been closely associated with the "Valley." The highest ideals, the noblest precepts and principles which have been inculcated in the minds of her pupils at the impressionable period of youth have been a sure means of guidance through life and have become manifest in the deep and abiding love felt by every member of the alumnae for her Alma Mater.

St. Joseph's College and Academy has made a record of which she may well be proud; for over a century she has increased and prospered. From an humble beginning, growing stronger, year by year, she now possesses a group of beautiful buildings of the finest equipment and architecture and owns as her friends many of the highest and most influential.

Too much praise cannot be given to the good Sisters who have made this possible, and the sincerest hope is that in the future the "Valley" may grow and prosper as she has in the past.

THEORIES ONCE, POLICIES NOW.

It has been noticed, in these stormy days of political crises, that in the cases of certain candidates for the presidential nomination for the second or third terms, that their respective platforms are composed of many planks which did not appear before when they ran for office; so many planks, in fact, have been added that the platforms have a totally different aspect. These planks are supposed to be new and original with the respective men in whose platform they appear, but at a little closer range, isn't there something familiar about them? As, often times, a man who conceives an idea which is original and which he thinks will confer a benefit on humanity, is scoffed at and called crazy; just so it is with the planks in question. At a closer glance we recognize many which were conceived some time ago and which were loudly proclaimed impracticable by some of the very men who have recently adopted them. Secretly and without ostentation, these policies have been taken over, and represented in a different light as entirely new and original. Such actions in business with some patent or copyright would be called illegal, but they seem to go alright in politics.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH BASEBALL?

For many years past it has been the custom in Emmitsburg to support a baseball club; the clubs that have represented the town have, in most cases, proven a credit, winning from many strong teams of the vicinity. Why should this year prove an exception? Is it because of the lack of material? Surely not. There is as much and as good material as there was in former seasons, perhaps better. Is it just because of lack of interest on the part of the townspeople? One doesn't like to think that. It is now the latter part of June and neighboring towns and old rivals have played several games, while no steps have been taken to form a club here. There is no better advertisement for a town than a snappy ball team, and isn't that what every Emmitsburgian wants? That the town may become widely known and prosper let's get to thinking on this question and see what can be done in this line.

A COMMENDABLE VETO.

President Taft has courageously vetoed the Army Appropriation bill because of the Hay "rider" legislating the present Chief of Staff, Gen. Wood, out of office, and defeating by measure of dubious utility the comprehensive plan of army reorganization upon which the War College and the General Staff, with the co-operation of Secretary Stimson, have been engaged for a long time. For this reason alone the veto is justifiable. "The Army of the United States," says the President, "is far too vital an institution to the people of this country to be made the victim of hasty or imperfect theories of legislation."

The rebuke to the promoters of personal legislation, who have used their power as lawmakers to inflict insult upon an officer who has fairly won the respect and esteem of the Army and of the people will be cordially approved by fair-minded men of all parties. The "riders" affixed to appropriation bills for political purposes, or, as in this case, to satisfy personal feeling, are legislative abominations, which should be avoided in an enlightened era. The President clearly intimates his objection to them, and it is naturally inferred in Washington that he will also veto the Legislative, Judicial, and Executive bill, which by the same means abolishes the Commerce Court. But this is a mere conjecture. The veto of the Army bill, however, is an established fact, and is creditable to the President's courage, sense of fairness, and steadfastness in the face of strong and boisterous opposition.—N. Y. Times.

Big Profits from Cuban Sugar.

The present negro uprising in Cuba has occurred when the industries were never so prosperous and promising. Consul Sterrett, stationed at Havana, has attributed this prosperity to the reciprocity treaty made between the United States and Cuba, allowing a preference of 20 per cent. in the duty of Cuban sugar entering this country. Americans at the present time have so much as $54,000,000 invested in sugar lands, mills and estates; they control thirty-six mills, and own completely several more. The impetus given the sugar industry by the recent high prices and the favorable outlook for a continuance of at least a very remunerative price in the future has drawn the attention of many American capitalists to the profits in this field.

Thirty shots were exchanged between police detectives and four alleged robbers on lower Broadway, on Friday, as the latter were making off in an automobile with $10,000 worth of feathers and plumes taken from the African Feather Company Building. No one was wounded, but the detectives succeeded in halting the automobile in front of Grace Church and arresting the four men. The police had received advance information that an attempt was to be made to rob the feather store and detectives, who were stationed in the vicinity, discovered the men leaving the building with suit cases and bundles. Entrance had been effected boldly by blowing a hole through the wall of the adjoining building with dynamite. In Police Court the prisoners were held without bail. They gave their names as Morris Fishman, Joseph Goldstein, Harry Cohen and Joseph Earle.

Brown University graduated 172 students, the largest class in many years at its 144th commencement. Ten honorary degrees were conferred and 38 students received advanced degrees. Of the graduates 34 were from the women's college. The $750,000 fund which the university has been trying to raise before June 30 to obtain a gift of $250,000 from the General Education Fund established by John D. Rockefeller, was practically assured to-day. President William H. P. Faunce announced that the $16,000 needed to complete the fund had been pledged by a number of the alumni.

According to special information the Russian Minister of Commerce, Timiraseff, is going to demand the appropriation of a hundred million roubles from the Douma toward the extension of cotton plantations in Turkestan with the object of making the importation of cotton from America unnecessary.

It cost Los Angeles County upwards of $175,000, to prosecute the cases against John J. and James B. McNamara, according to figures ascertained by the County Auditor. This sum does not include the expenses of the trial of Clarence Darrow, now in progress, an outgrowth of the McNamara case.

ONLY THROUGH SUFFERING COMES GREATNESS.

Of genius it has been written that such a quality of the mind is an infinite capacity for taking pains. This is only one of the thousand true things which are told about the super-man, the individual who rises above others, the man who is the exception among many millions and ever remains a mystery to all of us just as he is a mystery to himself as well. But to say that great carefulness will bring genius is begging the question, unless the individual has that temperament of the creative order. There must be not alone infinite capacity for painstaking, but, with it an unbounded will not to be swayed from the central purpose; and a patience such as lesser men never possess. And above all there is a marvelous capacity for suggesting, out of which comes that lofty character, giving to the world a Dante, a Beethoven, a Michael Angelo. They were tested in the fire; had they failed never would the world have known them. We look upon creative minds like theirs with awe and then place the men on pedestal. The only pedestal they ever know is that upon which they slowly toil, having first built the pedestal, having earned it a thousand times over and not gained it by some trick or accident as a multitude fondly believes. The world is choked with men, and women, too, who are running about shouting over their "rights." Have you not seen that the men who have meant the most to society, who have revolutionized the world of art, music, and literature, were far more concerned over their duties than their "rights?" To follow the straight line of their duties has often brought long years of sorrow and misunderstanding; they have been ridiculed and scoffed at by the very society which later called them the benefactors of mankind. Suppose they had prattled much about their "rights" and thrown their duties overboard, what then would their lives have been to their brothers in all generations? Many are those who would become great; but few are ready to pay the price, ready to learn that only through the most grievous suffering rises any greatness worth the name. The path is hard; but it is the only path that leads to the blessed life. For so has the Creator ordained it.

THE UPRIGHT JUDGE.

We do not think it necessary for Justice Hughes to inform his well-intentioned friends who are pressing for his nomination at Chicago that his name must not be used. His previous statement was conclusive, in the light of the character of the man and his known standard of public conduct. But we are not sorry that a still more emphatic statement has been issued.

In these days, when a studied attempt is being made by an ambitious politician of National importance to bring the function of the courts into discredit, to change the tenure of Judges, to subject their decisions to revision at a popular election, it is a good thing that a distinguished Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States should take the course that Mr. Hughes has taken. He has declared in effect that a seat on the bench of that Court is not to be exchanged even for the president's chair. And what is still more important, he has made it plain that personal ambition, however justified by the consciousness of recognized merit, cannot honorably be cherished by a member of the Court. Here is a practical concrete contribution to the purity, impartiality, dignity, and authority of the Court that cannot be surpassed.—New York Times.

Capt. Arthur H. Rostrom of the Carpathia received the united thanks of the British Government and the court at the sitting of the Board of Trade inquiry into the Titanic disaster. Sir Rufus Isaacs, the Attorney General, said he wished to take the earliest opportunity the Government had been able to get of expressing to Capt. Rostrom "on behalf of his Majesty's Government how deeply grateful we are to you for your conduct and for the large number of lives you were instrumental in saving." Lord Mersey, the presiding Judge, and Sir Robert Finlay associated themselves in the congratulations to Capt. Rostrom, who was loudly cheered.

A plot to assassinate Archduke Joseph Ferdinand came to light through the talk of an intoxicated Italian peasant named Impavic. Impavic's maudlin talk about his mission to hurl a bomb through the young nobleman's auto during the Alpine endurance run led to an investigation, with the result that Impavic and an Italian priest named Cantinaro, who is charged with promising the former $100 if he killed the Archduke, were arrested. A shrapnel bomb was found in Impavic's house, near Gorice.

Word was received that conditions have again become so acute at Chefu that the American consul there has sent out an urgent appeal for assistance. He telegraphed for a warship to hasten to Chefu in order that marines may be on hand in case of an outbreak. Feeling against foreigners, which has grown alarmingly, prompted the consul to seek assistance.

Politics Of The Future.

There always will be two political parties and never any more, because there is a plain division line running through human thought. There may be other organized efforts that call themselves political parties, but they are only off shoots. The primary difference is psychological. It is seen in all arenas of thought—in science, literature, education, art and religion. The difference is plainly marked by the conservative on one side and the radical on the other.

In our politics, this difference is attended, or originated by one's view of constitutional construction, whether that is strict or loose, and one is in one party or the other, according as his mental attitude touches this simple matter of how you look at the constitution. That is what makes Democrats and Republicans, and will so make them till the crack of doom. It can't be helped. Names may change, but the distinction will remain.

Where controversy arises, whether inside or between parties, in is upon the issue of how much or little of conservatism or radicalism shall there be. And so policies arise which are transient and never affect the original difference, except in this, that the conservative party gets less conservative and the radical more radical.

This little analysis will show exactly how politics is going to adjust itself in the future. What is generally called radicalism in the Republican party will increase, it doesn't make any difference who the president is, for in that direction the logic of evolution tends. It is not in the nature of things to be any more conservative than we are. The only wise course is to safeguard the radicalism, so as to make it just, fraternal and uplifting.—Cumberland Daily News.

Insurgency and the Electors.

We are meeting with new situations, politically with a vengeance, and it is not strange that the conservatively inclined do not fancy them. The latest of these is the intimation, or the favored suggestion, that Presidential electors may vote for whom they please, irrespective of what candidate is nominated by a National convention.

It is true that there appears to be no law against an elector playing traitor to his National organization, in order to remain faithful to his state constituents but should this idea be followed, it means the death of National parties, and pure rebellion. It would represent the old fable of the bundle of sticks, which can easily be broken singly, but not when used as a whole.

The removal of the moral obligation from the elector, removes also the honor. The proposition there there would be no dishonor attached to the act, if announced in advance, does not help the situation, so far as salvation of party is concerned. If a state can secede, at such a time, what becomes of the party as a country-wide power? What becomes of the Union principle? The whole present situation in the Republican party, which is responsible for the development of this new plan of party suicide, must be held to mean that personal ambition and dictatorship is of greater value to the country than the combined wisdom of a concentrated majority, and shows to what length the spirit of insurgency is prepared to go, in order to rule or ruin.—Carroll Record.

The Responsibility Of The Baltimore Convention.

No National Convention of the Democratic party which has assembled in this country in the last half century, had upon it the responsibilities which will rest upon the convention which meets in Baltimore next week.

This weighty responsibility largely grows out of the fact, that such an opportunity is now before the Democratic party, to elect its President, has not existed since the Civil War. And it is such an opportunity as must not be thwarted by any blunder upon the part of the Convention.

There has been for several years past a decided unrest among the people, in regard to the administration of our affairs by the Republican party. This condition of dissatisfaction showed itself in the past Congressional election, and gave to the Democrats the control of the House of Representatives. Some of the strongest and most constant Republican states were swung into the Democratic column at that election.

Then there never has been a time in the history of the Republican party, when it has been so torn and disrupted. So that the Republicans, with their internal dissensions and with their external weaknesses, are in poor condition to enter a presidential campaign, and will go before the people under the ban of a discredited party.

On the other hand, the Democratic party is in fine condition for battle, with its hosts buoyant, hopeful and optimistic, ready for the fray, and believing that there are leaders in sight, who, if if nominated, would lead them to victory. Now comes the responsibility of the Convention. The eyes of Democrats of all sections of the country will be on Baltimore next week, and the conduct of individual delegates will be closely scrutinized.

The Democratic party of the country is insistent in the demand, that the convention shall take up its work seriously and with a view of working out the highest good of the party and through it the highest good of the country. Give the the Democratic voters of the country a candidate and a platform that represent true Democratic ideas and principles and traditions, and these same Democratic voters will see to it that a Democratic President will go into the White House and Democratic laws will go upon our statute books.

Let the small politician, if he is in the Baltimore convention, be relegated to the rear. This is no time or place for him. It is a time for big men, unselfish men, patriotic men, in a word for Democratic statesmen.

Nor does the party want any exploitation of new and novel theories. Let the convention "inquire for the old paths and walk therein." Nor will the party tolerate, without rebuke, an attempt to play the "stampedee trick," or any other device that will prevent the convention from rendering a deliberate judgement, both as to candidate and platform. The Democrats all over the country are hoping for the best things from the Baltimore convention. Let the convention see that they are not disappointed.—Democratic Advocate.

The Bishop's Remarks.

At the conclusion of Father McHale's address, the Rt. Rev. Bishop Corrigan moved to the platform; for a moment he surveyed the audience, then in that amiable and direct style that commands attention, he said in part: If I live many years longer and go to a few more commencements, every one will know just what they are going to hear before I begin, for I say the same thing everywhere. However, as I am trying to drive home a lesson, I may be excused.

Problem! What is it? Woman's Rights! This is the only thing one finds to read in the newspaper. Women are making a great stir in Chicago. This is not a new problem, not a 20th century problem. No, only a refanning of an old idea, in no better form than expressed centuries ago. The question agitating minds of Catholic women today, is the same through nineteen centuries, to have woman take her proper place, especially the woman who allows herself to be conducted by the principles of the Catholic Church. Many think woman is a downtrodden creature without rights.

Woman was at the head of social order even before the advent of Christ.
Woman is a dominating power to-day, to-morrow, and such she will be to the end of time. There is only one thing to fear—losing position; but she will keep her position if she is faithful to Christ and His Church. Let her be pure and chaste in family life, true to instincts of Christian womanhood. Her most natural place is at the head of her family; let her not desert it. Be good mothers, and you will have good daughters, they in turn will be good mothers.
Be natural or supernatural mothers, whether in religion or in the married state, your maternal influence will guide to peace and happiness.

The church has made no decision as to whether woman should vote or not.
If she had this privilege she would not be happier, nor would she enjoy more peace than she does now. Remember, woman always has influence; even the youngest child is an influential member of society. The child bosses the mother, and as she grows older her influence widens. You have been fortunate enough to have St. Joseph's to direct you.
May it continue to teach without entering into the discussion of problem.
Teach in general terms the underlying principles of the church, and give rules to control action, and use influence to direct in proper channel. The Church is the strongest influencing power.

Besides the Rt. Rev. Bishop Corrigan who presided, there were among those present: Very Rev. P. McHale, C. M., Visitor of the Vincentians in the Eastern Province; Very Rev. B. J. Bradley, President Mount St. Mary's College;

Art and Handiwork Exhibit.

Among the most interesting features of commencements at St. Joseph's is the elaborate exhibit in the art room—a beautifully arranged display of work done by the scholars during the year in pastel, water color, oil and sepia. This year's exhibit also included rare specimens of hand carving on leather and wood and examples of specially designed decorations on China. While it would be quite impossible to note in detail each representation in this year's exhibit, certain pieces are deserving of particular mention. In the China painting department they are: A fish set in green and gold, by Anna Fesenmeier; almond set in silver and gold, by Emily Bishop;
cordial set in cream and gold, Clide Cary; delicate tea set, shaded in green, with delicate pink roses, by Oria Rodriguez; berry set and stein in green and red, Agatha Byrne; tea set in cream and gold, by Felisa Soler; vases with
many others. Among the pictures that attracted particular attention were one of a dead tiger by Emily Bishop; two pictures of Daniel in the Lion's Den by Clide Cary; "Harvesting Time," a tapestry by Hallie B. Parsons; "Vesu-vius," by Anita Goldsborough; screen a peacock design, by Margaret Vaughn;
a beautiful benediction veil, rose design
by Margaret Vaughn; set of vestments, roses and grapes, by Clementine Kelly;
stole in wild roses by Margaret Bresnahan, and charcoal work by Caroline O'Gorman, were also among the work most admired. All the young ladies received first honors in art.

In one of the spacious corridors were shown many examples of drawn work, laces, embroidery, crocheting, and plain sewing.

The Alumnae at St. Joseph's.

The late train on Wednesday evening brought the few remaining members who were to complete the list. The greater number "taking time by the forelock," had arrived by the earlier afternoon trains, a measure that lengthened out by several hours, the blissful sojourn at the Valley. They were quite at home, having taken supper with the students; so all were ready to welcome their less favored friends, whose coming had been delayed, these filling the line of procession to the refectory.

There had been plenty of time for meeting and greeting therefore as "coming events cast their shadows before," the thought of the momentous to-morrow, Commencement Day, when "the wee sma' hours of the morning" would find all true to the loved old traditions, mingling with the fervent congregation, reminded the guests that they ought to begin this day, of all others, with attendance at the Holy Sacrifice to receive Holy Communion; this sweet obligation reconciled even the lightest hearted to retire early. It was amusing to hear the whispered warnings that the electric lights would be turned off at nine o'clock.

The Alumnae present on this occasion were: Mrs. Mary Wade Kalbach, President, Lancaster, Pa.; Miss M. Stella McBride, Secretary, Emmitsburg, Md.;
Mesdames Mary Helen Scott Brown,
Baltimore, Md.; Elizabeth Keenan
White, Philadelphia, Pa.; Martina Burke
Kearns, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Margaret Reilly Brown, Lancaster, Pa.; Elizabeth McConomy Rathfon, Lancaster, Pa.; Alice Malone Galvin, Brookline
Mass.; Ella Sexton Starkey, Roanoke,
Va.; Clara Douglas Sheeran, Brooklyn,
N. Y.; Mary O'Brien Doyle, Lynchburg,
Va.; Mary Kearney Wolcott, Baltimore, Md.; Margaret Jarboe Rohrbach, Frederick, Md.; Fannie Hartman George, Baltimore, Md.; Katherine Clayton
Watson, Baltimore, Md.; Allie Grasselli

PERSONALS.

It is the aim of THE CHRONICLE to publish as many personal and social items as possible, but it frequently happens that those who have guests visiting them, and those who entertain, fail to send a list of their friends, or an account of these events, to this office. ## EYESIGHT TALK.

I wish I could talk to you face to face and urge upon you the necessity of taking every possible care of your eyes. Certain symptoms of eye trouble may be grave disturbances of the general health of men and women. A searching and accurate examination will reveal to the eye of an experienced Optometrist what the causes are. Patronizing spectacle peddlers or door-to-door fakers is dangerous, as their work is always of the inferior quality. When it is a question of eyesight it will pay you to consult our Optometrist Dr. O. W. Hines' who has satisfactorily fitted many difficult cases where others have failed. Foreigners and their property were scrupulously respected by the troops. The women and children found refuge at the British Consulate.

SING SING CONVICT ATTACKS PRISON WARDEN WITH KNIFE

Official Stabbed By Italian With Keen Cobbler's Knife While Back Turned.—Inquiry to Reveal Conditions.

A murderous assault was made upon Officer William Mullen, at Sing Sing prison, by convict No. 61,559, Michael Barberis by name. Barberis was provided with a keen edged cobbler's knife with which he stabbed Mullen twice while the latter was standing at the telephone. At the first blow the knife was deflected from a plunge into the back and made a gash nine inches long down his shoulder and ended in a deep cut; the second blow went deep into the officer's arm. The guard turned and grappled with the convict and held him until assisted by the other guards.

There was intense excitement among the convicts while the struggle took place. Mullen was removed to the hospital at once and his wounds staunch, he is suffering greatly, but will recover. For some weeks past it is reported that there has been a decided spirit of insubordination in the prison. "Bad Bill" Monroe, a famous bandit, is said to be the originator of the trouble. A general investigation is being made by the prison authorities into the way that the man was able to get the sharp knife with which the deed was committed.

RIGID PROBE TO BE MADE; SMALL-POX INFECTION FROM LINER

The Haverford Carries Smallpox Into This Country.—Cases Not Reported By Quarantine Authorities.

The Quarantine regulations of the ports in the United States and Europe will soon undergo a severe investigation by the federal authorities and the American Steamship Line will have to make an explanation. The liner Haverford, which docked at Philadelphia on June 24, had two cases of smallpox on board which were discovered when she reached Liverpool. These cases were taken on board at Queenstown and were sent ashore at Philadelphia. Ten cases of smallpox in that city have been directly traceable to the liner. There is no evidence that the ship had been disinfected nor proper arrangements made to protect the passengers from the infection. There is also no evidence that the quarantine authorities at Queenstown made any report of the cases nor paid the slightest attention to them.

On the way from Liverpool a child died at sea, and the ship's doctor diagnosed the case as measles. The health authorities have employed fifty-two physicians to make an inspection of the city and try to trace the spread of infection, ten cases have been reported directly traceable to immigrants from the Haverford. This is the second time that the ship has brought smallpox cases to Philadelphia.

KILLED BY POSSE IN BANK

Robbers Were Expected and Sheriff's Men Opened Fire With Rifles.

Three masked men entered the Citizens' Bank at Mammoth Spring, Ark., and robbed the bank, while two others stood guard outside. Mrs. Sudi E. Wood, assistant cashier, was locked in the vault. The robbers took all the cash in sight.

For ten days the bank officials have known that an attempt would be made to rob the bank. Sheriff Caruthers and a posse were hidden in the back room of the bank when the robbery occurred. As the robbers were leaving, the officers opened fire on them with Winchester rifles.

One of the robbers, who was instantly killed, was identified as Ben Jones, son of Dr. H. M. Jones, a veterinary surgeon. Twenty-two bullets entered his body. The other robbers were captured uninjured. One ran into the Fulton County Bank, which was guarded by armed men, and was arrested. The other was caught on the street.

Three Olympic Men Suffer Sprains.

The American Olympic team arrived at Antwerp on June 24, where they spent two days training and left for Stockholm on June 26. The team is very much discouraged because of injuries to three star members. Melvin W. Sheppard, distance runner, is suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism and sprains; Michael J. Ryan, marathoner, has a severely sprained leg, as is the case of James Thorpe, the hurdler and high jumper. Unless there is marked improvement, it is very doubtful if the men in question can compete. This would be a severe blow to America's hopes, for Sheppard was considered a sure winner in the 800 and 1,500 meter events, while Thorpe and Ryan were counted as certain point winners.

The President promoted Brigadier General Clarence R. Edwards, chief of Bureau of Insular Affairs, to be brigadier general in the line; Col. George F. Chase to be brigadier general and Col. E. J. McClernand to be brigadier general. The appointments were sent to the Senate for approval.

STUPENDOUS ENGINEERING WORK TO OPEN IN WEEK

Bsrren Mesa of 100,000 Acres To Be Irrigated Thoroughly and Made Productive.—Giant Yuma Siphon Job Completed.

The most stupendous piece of engineering that has even been undertaken by the reclamation service of the Department of the Interior has been completed, and will be officially opened in a week.

The Colorado River, when flowing between the lower part of Arizona and California, carries a vast amount of water which might be used for the irrigation and fertilization of the Yuma Mesa which, at present, is entirely barren and sterile because of the lack of moisture. The Gila (pronounced Hila) River forming the northern boundary of the mesa is a fickle stream, seldom remaining in the same place for two consecutive months, and oftentimes shifting as much as five or ten miles in a single season, so it was impracticable to tap this stream with a view to conducting the water through canals to the mesa. For the same reason it was not possible to tap the Colorado above the Gila and run the water down in a canal under the Gila and thence to the mesa, for the Gila would not remain in one place long enough to be undermined.

The experts stated that the only way to accomplish this feat would be to canal the water on the west side of the Colorado (the California side) to a point opposite the mesa; then to dig a subway under the river, and by means of the principle that "water seeks its own level," to siphon it under the Colorado and upon the other side, where it could be disposed of at will.

The engineering feat which the Reclamation Service will celebrate the latter part of this month will be the completion of this siphon, the largest in the world, and an engineering project fit to rank in magnitude and magnificence of construction with the Roosevelt dam.

The reservoir is capable of holding 50,000,000 gallons of water and the tunnel has a capacity of 1,000,000 gallons of water a minute. The once barren plain is expected to be a veritable garden spot in less than a year.

NAVY CRUISES; ARMY MAY WORK

Programme For Summer Manoeuvres Will Be Carried Out Despite Cuban Situation.

The navy will not be as much disturbed in its programme for the Summer, manoeuvres of the naval militia as the army would be if intervention in Cuba were decided upon. The navy is going forward with its Summer programme as usual.

The exercises of the naval militia organizations, as planned, will be the most extensive yet undertaken, and will include a rendezvous for combined drill and target practice.

The organizations north of New York will rendezvous at Provincetown, Mass., from July 7 to 15; the organizations south of New York at Tangier Island, Chesapeake Bay, from July 15 to 22, and the organizations on the Great Lakes at South Manitou Island, Lake Michigan, from August 12 to 19.

As it is not practicable to arrange a rendezvous on the Pacific Coast, the organizations of the different States will make independent cruises, the naval militia of the State of Washington making a cruise on the Pennsylvania, that of Oregon on the Maryland, and of California on the Marblehead from July 6 to 21.

The Iowa, now in commission in reserve at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, will make two cruises with naval militia in July, taking out first the combined organizations of Pennsylvania and Maryland then, and the first and second battalions of the New York naval militia.

The California, South Dakota, and Glacier, of the Pacific Fleet, now in Philippine waters will leave for the United States about July 24, after making visits at Wonsung, Tsingtau and Yokohama, and will arrive at San Francisco about August 12.

After peaceful slumbers filled with happy dreams, emulating the promptitude of childhood's years, we rose at first signal, and were soon ready to make our way to the dear Chapel. We were to attend the commencement in a body, so the intervening hours were spent in bustling but quiet preparation, each one intensely, yet not unduly interested in her own personal appearance. The splendor of the morning performance was for us greatly enhanced by Father McHale's beautiful and impressive Address to the Graduates, and the Rt. Reverend Bishop's remarks so replete with wisdom. The remainder of the day was to be peculiarly our own; for on the program we noted that the Annual Reunion would be held in the old Play Room. Meanwhile we visited and admired the exhibit in the Art and Embroidery Rooms, then hastened to join the Reunion appointed for three o'clock. The idea of Commencement day seemed to invest everything with a special interest and importance, and the twilight had deepened before the novelty wore off.

Our highly esteemed and beloved President, Mrs. Kalbach, having called the meeting to order, Clare Isabel Cogan, A. M., introduced the class of 1912, thirteen in number. Then with her accustomed dignity, sweet and graceful simplicity, our President strove to have us share the sentiments of her own heart so truly loyal and devoted to St. Joseph's. We have been at some pains to secure the expression of her noble feelings, and have succeeded but in part:

Mrs. Kalbach's Address.

After a most cordial greeting and heartfelt welcome in the name of Mother Margaret to each and every member of the Alumnae, our President reminded her hearers of the peculiar charm of returning to the Vale at Commencement time, to live over again the memories of their own last days at Saint Joseph's. To mingle once more with dear old schoolmates and catch up an occasional strand of friendship as it threatens to slip away forever. To be assured that there are no girls like the "old girls" and no times like the "old times," and to find, too, that these same dear old times are keenly alive to the love and welcome of Alma Mater. Mrs. Kalbach's address was in part a reminiscence of the happy days of "long ago." A linking together of the past with the present, of the old with the young, from the classes of the '50's down to 1912. Assuring those who came from afar to be school girls again, that they would not be disappointed, for to-day in their womanhood, they were living over again their girlhood of yesterday.

A beautiful tribute was paid to the memory of Sisters Raphael, Lucia, and Madeline, three names most tenderly treasured by all the old pupils who call Saint Joseph's—Alma Mater. What a host of recollections their names recall. At every turn of memory's walk, we see in fancy the face, the smile of some beloved friend of our girlhood. From the treasured past with its hallowed memories, with its joys and sorrows so dear to all, let us turn to the present, so bright, so beautiful, for the scenes which greet our eyes these days are full of wonder and inspiration, when we reflect that almost within the space of a lifetime, a wilderness has blossomed into this garden of beauty.

The Saint Joseph's of to-day is progressive, its very atmosphere is stimulating. Our Alma Mater has broadened and developed, with the liberal culture of a liberal age, until to-day she stands rejoicing in the proud consciousness of a perfectly equipped educational institution. And you, dear Seniors and Juniors of 1912, what do you not owe to your Alma Mater? Turn to your devoted teachers, see the peace reflected on their faces, their constant devotion to duty, and ask yourself the meaning of their life, which has given to you, not of what it has but what it is very self. From you who have had all these advantages, we expect that you go forth and produce fruits worthy of your training. For upon whom should devolve the duty of spreading the fair fame of your Alma Mater and the influence of Saint Joseph's training, if not upon the graduates themselves; for the most convincing argument in favor of convent schools must ever be found in the conduct of those they send forth. Hence let me impress upon you with all the earnestness of which I am capable that, as graduates of Saint Joseph's, a trust has been reposed in you, to go forth and shed lustre on your beloved Alma Mater which has nourished, watched over and guarded you. Ties of loyalty are most tenderly entwined around the fibres of our hearts, and it was a happy occasion for Saint Joseph's to see her children thus gathered together. It was her joy and her pride to welcome so many noble women—women with lofty ideals—carrying on the good work begun in school days.

Loyalty could be read in every loving face and the keynote to loyalty to one's Alma Mater is to show love and appreciation.

Our President reminded us that the strongest proof of loyalty is to return from time to time, concluding her address with these words:—"Year after year with the return of each visit, we are weaving a thousand invisible threads of love and devotion around Saint Joseph's and my parting wish will be that after you have gone forth to your respective homes, may you long to return to this 'Haven of Peace.' May all these scenes fill your soul with an indescribable longing to return again, to taste once more, these delightful pleasures of Alumnae Days at dear old Saint Joseph's."

Our indefatigable Secretary, Miss Stella McBride, of Emmitsburg, then read the minutes of the last meeting.

The absence of the Vice President, Mrs. Nannie O'Brien Seamans, was deeply lamented; as was also the absence of Mrs. Alice McConomy Schaeffer of Joplin, Missouri, whose attendance distance prevented. Her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth McConomy Rathfon discharged her duties as Treasurer for this occasion. Mrs. Schaeffer's telegram was read. It follows: "Regret exceedingly that I cannot be at St. Joseph's these days to see you all. Love to all my friends and very best wishes for a successful meeting."

ALICE McCONOMY SCHAEFFER."

Our President, having invited any of the members so disposed to offer some suggestion, a motion was made by Mrs. Clara Douglas Sheeran of Brooklyn, New York, that it would be advantageous to the Alumnae to organize for its members a "Sewing Guild," one of the members in each city taking charge; her plan would be to encourage each member to contribute annually not less than two articles that might be used by the Sisters for their poor, in hospitals or asylums; an exhibit of said articles to be made at Saint Joseph's on occasion of the visit of the Alumnae at Commencement time. This motion met with spontaneous interest and approval and no one can see why the matter should not receive immediate attention, in order that the social advantages of the organization may create a new and strong bond of Union among the members, and thus keep alive their filial love and practical devotedness to the beloved Alma Mater.

Pressed by our President to speak in her turn, Mrs. Helen Scott Browne rose and with almost youthful enthusiasm referred to her memories of dear Saint Joseph's—memories which she repeated with something like the delicate flush of girlhood upon her brow. She mentioned the beloved Mother Euphemia, who as a little child had taken her in her arms, who took her to her heart; Sisters Raphael, Lucia and Sister Juliana, her classmates, who is now to her the lodestone. She will come to each reunion for they are the joy of her life, and when none of her old friends remain, she asked forgiveness for saying she would still come, for the sake of the loved ones gone. The training received at Saint Joseph's, she assured all, had been her light, her strength, and comfort in affliction. "My dear young friends," she added, "you do not know how immense is the benefit, the blessing you enjoy in your peerless, delightful Alma Mater."

After Sister Frances, the Directress, had in her happy way, commended the loyalty and affection of the old Saint Joseph's girls, and the young, the meeting was at an end. There was no election, no change of officers this year. Regret had been several times expressed during Alumnae week, that the visit of Mrs. Susie Thomas Ficklin, of Chicago, and that of Mrs. Nannie Yager Myer, of York, Pennsylvania, with Mrs. Williams, her daughter, and another friend, had not coincided with June twentieth. What a pleasure it would have been for all to meet them; but alas! where is the earthly festival from which no one is absent?

At seven P. M. came the entertainment so truly a delicious treat to all. Indeed the Senior Day Program, being the feature of these days, we reproduce it here entire.

The Angelus at Saint Joseph's Creek.

Aurora, glorious in her golden car,
In Orient splendor veils the morning star,
Whilenshadow's grey shadows yielding to her sway,
Blush rosy red, then float in light away.
The sun's gay smile on mountain, hill and glade,
Is bright as when in Eden first it played,
But here upon this lucid stream that flows
In quiet beauty, it more radiant glows.
How fair this spot, you azure vault how clear!
God's hand is elsewhere, but His smile is here.
The verdant bank where laughing childhood plays,
The leafy shade that sportive zephyr sways,
To hearts with more than Nature's voice here speak:
Religion hovers round Saint Joseph's Creek.

Her holy influence on each object's shed,
To holler longings are our spirits led,
Where'er we turn, some emblem fair we view,
Of that pure faith, the only and the true.
Behold Saint Joseph's, where grey turrets rise
In solemn grandeur to the skies!

But gaze around! How full of life the scene!
On yonder bridge the youthful anglers lean,
And faint would hush the merry laugh of those Whose mirth like music breaks on their repose.
Now glides yon fragile skiff along,
As if impelled by naught save the sweet song.

That bursts from lips whose joyous accents tell
The buoyant hopes young guileless hearts that swell;
Thus may their life barques o'er the world's vast sea
Glide safely, guided, Holy God, by Thee!

But hark! What sound falls on the listening ear,
'Tis loud yet plaintive and as silver clear,
And nearer yet the music seems to swell,
'Tis the sweet chiming of Saint Joseph's bell.

Hushed is the sportive laugh, the joyous song,
Quiet the oars that urge the boat along;
On the rude bridge the youthful anglers kneel,
While o'er their spirits holy visions steal,
The "Angel's Message" stirs the quiet air,
And each young heart is bowed in fervent prayer.

Oh, should dark clouds o'er their bright prospects lower,
In after years, may this calm holy hour,
Recalled by Memory, o'er their spirit, come,
And sweetly whisper of their childhood's home,
Where they were taught to place their hopes in one
Who alone remaineth when all else is gone.
Farewell, loved spot, to us too shalt thou be Whilst on we struggle o'er life's stormy sea,
As a bright star that gleameth from above
Ere telling of our Heavenly Father's love

Father McHale's Address.

Would that we were able to reproduce the magnificent address from which we have striven to gather a few thought gems that will be treasured by the favored audience of the evening of June twentieth. Father McHale's portrayal of the valiant woman, amid music and song, was the crowning of this perfect day.

The restriction on knowledge as found in Genesis was explained to have reference to an idle curiosity which animates many women to the detriment of the true knowledge of woman's sphere. "Who shall find a valiant woman? far and from the uttermost coasts is the price of her."

The valiant woman has a nature akin to the angels; her knowledge is intuitive, while that of man is reached by a strenuous process of reasoning. Should not this thought make a lasting impress upon your lives?

Woman's proper place is the home circle; she may be called elsewhere for the common good. Many instances are recorded of women holding chairs in universities; the greatest mathematician I ever knew (and I have known many eminent men) was a woman; however this was not the normal character, and we that have only ordinary minds must look on and appreciate, while the true woman fulfills her mission and returns home.

The tendency to day is to take woman from her position; "Woman Suffrage" for example. A word here will suffice. If there is need to vote, let woman cast the ballot and then return where she belongs.

The valiant woman "sought wool and flax, and hath wrought by the counsel of her hands." This she could not do were she imitating the "Butterfly" or posing as a "Fashion Plate."

The Ideal Woman in imitation of the Immaculate Virgin and Mother "hath opened her hand to the needy, and stretched out her hand to the poor."

But where hath been her husband? Oh, he is honorable in the gates, where he sitteth among the senators of land. He trusteth the woman whom he hath left at home, and her children, they rose up, and called her blessed: Her husband, and he praised her.

May this grace and blessing be the lot of the favored members of the Alumnae of this time-honored institution.

Surely, the patron of our Valley Home, St. Joseph, lovingly smiled upon his cherished children as the hall echoed and reechoed with the sweet strains of Great St. Joseph!

Friday was a lovely, long day; all its hours our very own.—We could see all the Sisters, not as they flitted by, but they were with us within doors, strolled about the grounds, visited the loved haunts and shrines of old with us. What a joy, a full joy that day was! In the evening came the Lawn Party. Small tables and seats out on the grounds with the emerald velvet carpet under our feet, and the song birds splitting their throats to make their musical accompaniment to our words of greeting one to another, the matchless landscape and all our Sister friends around us, although they would not partake of our banquet, another illustration of the self-denial, they preach so eloquently by example more than by precept. The beloved Mother Margaret herself came to sit with us and smile upon these brief—too brief—happy hours. There were doubtless some snapshots taken, as a perpetual memorial, but the keepsake must have been stealthily secured, despite the suspicious kodaks that were visible now and then. Some few took that evening's late train. Reluctantly they went away; but their hearts were filled with the hived sweets they had gathered amid those heaven-sent enjoyments of innocent pleasure and friendship tried and true. The spirit too had been renovated in the physical rejuvenation. Holy Mass, evening Benediction—who will say the marvels wrought by these unspeakable favors. Let us treasure these memories until they lead us to repeat: "By Thine ordinance, O Lord, the day goes on, for all things serve Thee!" Let us cherish every reminder of the Immaculate Mary, come in spirit to visit her shrines in our loved Valley Home. We shall find in her the tender and amiable Mother of our childhood, the last gift of Jesus to the world. At the foot of the Cross we were represented by Saint John the Beloved Disciple, the first Child of Mary, and therefore our model in filial love and devotion toward the Queen of Heaven.

A CHILD OF MARY.

Unable to be with us on the twentieth, as a message of love from old St. Mary's, Marie Turner, L. H. D., shipped, for the decoration of the refectory, a barrel of holly gathered near the spot where our glorious pilgrims landed.

After this announcement the following beautiful letter was read:

June 7, 1912.

Miss Stella McBride,
Secretary St. Joseph's Alumnae,
My Dear Stella:—

The welcome "Invitation to the Alumnae Meeting" at dear Alma Mater, with your sweet, cordial, accompanying words, came like a rush of fragrance from the roses that climb on the old trees of the grounds. The memory of June, 1911, when my beloved School-Home honored me with my Doctor's Hood, will never pass away. It stands out in strong relief, even this moment as I write, as a landmark in my life, a stimulus to fresh exertion in God's service, with pen and brain and a new bond of love for all that belongs to dear, peerless St. Joseph's.

My visit, and the new friendships formed, especially with you and dear Mrs. Kalbach, will be a source of enjoyment in the retrospect, that will always remain keen and delightful. I never can thank you all enough for your courteous attention.

Please present my regrets to the members of the Association for my absence. They understand my heart is with them, and my thoughts will be "over the hills and far away," the momentous week of the Reunion.

My warmest love to dear Mother, Sr. Frances, Sr. Mary Vincent, Sr. Caroline, and my dear Sr. Juliana, and to your own self.

Ever affectionately,

SR. M. ANTONIO MERCEDES, L. H. D.

Garrick's Wonderful Face.

Garrick had a poor opinion of the French actors of his day, and when in Paris for six months in 1763 to show what he could do without the aid of the usual accessories of the stage he gave private performances to audiences that quickly succumbed to the spell of his art. He told stories, gave scenes from Shakespeare and acted dramas in dumb show. There are familiar tales concerning his wonderful mobility of features and body, of his power to "create a new physiognomy which his friends did not recognize." There is the story, for instance, that Garrick posed to Hogarth for the portrait of Fielding after Fielding's death. And there is the other story that in sitting to Reynolds Garrick so completely changed his facial expression three times in succession that the artist flung down his brush and declared that he believed "he was painting from the devil." His French auditors were subjected to the same sensations.

His Hold on Fame.

Sir Henry Irving was playing his annual London engagement once when Nansen, then in the height of his fame as an arctic explorer, came back from an expedition in search of the north pole. The curtain was just about to rise one evening when Stoker came behind the scenes with news that Nansen was sitting in the royal box. Irving received the news in silence.

A few minutes later one of the members of the company bustled up to the star to tell him the same thing. Irving merely grinned. And right on the heels of this up came a fluttering woman super and said:

"Oh, Sir Henry, did you know the great Nansen was out front?"
"Nansen? Nansen?" said Irving as though he were trying to remember who this person Nansen might be. "Oh, yes—the chap who stands the cold so well!"—Saturday Evening Post.

A Cook's Accidental Discovery.

One of the best ways of cooking potatoes was accidentally discovered through the unpunctuality of a train. When the line from Paris to St. Germain was opened the first train carried an official party for whom lunch was ordered. The meal was fixed for noon, and shortly before that hour the potatoes were put on to fry. A few minutes afterward a message came that the train would probably be delayed for an hour, so the potatoes were taken off the fire, but left in the pan. Then came a second message, "Train just arriving," and the potatoes were hurriedly put back to fry again. When the party sat down to lunch the potatoes were brought on with the steak. Each chip was then found to be blown out like a small, crisp, golden balloon, to the delight of the guests. The cook without knowing it had invented pommes de terre soufflées.

A Parable.

Two men stood watching a steam shovel at work. With a clatter and a roar the shovel bit into a steep bank, closed on a carload of earth and dumped it onto a waiting freight train. "It drives me wild," said the first onlooker. "To see that monster taking the bread out of good men's mouths. Look at it! Why, it's filling up those flat cars faster than a hundred men with picks and shovels could do it."

But the other onlooker shook his head and answered:

"See here, mister: if it would be better to employ a hundred men with picks and shovels on this job wouldn't it be better still, by your way of thinking, to employ a thousand men with forks and tablespoons?"—New York Tribune.

Boat Racing in the Old Days.

Boat racing was a very different affair from what it is now, when the first boat race between Oxford and Cambridge came off at Henley in 1829. Oxford won, wearing "blue checks" and sporting black straw hats with a broad blue ribbon, while Cambridge was in white with pink waist bands and high hats. The weights of the racing boats used at this time may be judged from the fact that when they were converted from eights to six oars, with seats for passengers added, they could easily carry twenty persons.—London Chronicle.

Her Busy Life.

"Aunt Martha spends all day long hiding her silver in fifty different places to defeat the burglars she is perfectly sure are coming here."

"Goodness!"

"And she spends all night hunting for it and gathering it into one pile in case of fire."—Harper's Bazar.
