WILL TRY TO REUNITE

DIFFERENCE IN VIEWS

Agnus and Carrington are of Same Opinion

BONAPARTE WILL HOLD OUT

A Big Meeting to be Held at Middlesex Club in Boston Tomorrow Night at Which Many Prominent Men Will Give Their Views.

Tomorrow night at a big meeting to be held in Boston at the Middlesex Club an effort will be made to reunite the Republican party. Among the speakers on that occasion will be former Gov. Hadley of Missouri, and Nicholas Butler of Columbia University. General Felix Agnus will also be present to give his views on the proposed plan for amalgamation with the Progressives.

One of the most unyielding of the Progressives is former Attorney General Charles J. Bonaparte who goes so far as to say that he will remain outside of the Republican Party if any attempt is made to merge with the Bull Moose faction.

"According to tradition," says the General, "a vessel which contains a nasty mess is not satisfactorily cleaned by rubbing its outside and for perhaps the same reason, my very limited experience in politics leads me to doubt whether a party, still controlled by the influences and the men now controlling what is left of the Republican party and responsible for what happened at Chicago last June, can be made to look like the party Abraham Lincoln helped to found, by speeches and proceedings on the part of a few men overlaid with a thin veneer of personal respectability."

"None of the persons mentioned in the clipping as sponsors for the regenerated party is in a position to put the party in any better light before the people than it was before. All of them are involved as participants, beneficiaries or apologists or else by condonation in what was done at Chicago and, if I rightly understand the views of the American people, when that fact is remembered, further discussion of the project becomes altogether superfluous."

National Committeeman and State Chairman of the Progressive party—Col. Edward C. Carrington, Jr.—is in favor of doing anything to beat the Democrats and his plan for Democratic defeat is a union of Republicans and Progressives.

"Some things happened in Chicago, at the Republican National Convention," he said, "that were not right, and I registered my protest then and there. I don't want to be harping continually, however, on the 'Crime of Chicago.'"

"I was a Republican before I joined the Progressive party, and there are cardinal principles in the Republican party in which I have always believed and do still believe. I do not think we should blame all Republicans for the action of some of the men who caused the split in the party. Any reorganization of the party, to be successful, must be conducted on fair and impartial lines, with the primary consideration to be the will of the people."

General Agnus holds the same view. He believes in co-operation and expresses his views in these words:

"The Republican party is a party of wonderful achievements in the nation. It is not dead yet by any means, and I believe it can again be wielded into a tremendous influence for the good of the country. We will be glad to have the aid and co-operation of all our Bull Moose friends in reuniting the party, for our strength is in standing together. It is our hope that the party will be made stronger than ever."

Nothing at this time comes from the Big Bull Moose himself but it is to be expected that Colonel Roosevelt will have at least one word to say on this occasion.

As to whether or not Colonel Roosevelt will again be a candidate on the Progressive ticket Col. Bonaparte said, "Principles, not men, are the questions under consideration at the present time. Our party will conduct an active campaign of education, its organization will

First Paragraph of Morgan's Will.

"I commit my soul into the hands of my Saviour, in full confidence that having redeemed it and washed it in His most precious blood, He will present it faultless before the throne of my Heavenly Father; and I entreat my children to maintain and defend, at all hazard, and at any cost of personal sacrifice, the blessed doctrine of the complete atonement for sin through the blood of Jesus Christ, once offered, and through that alone."

In An Uphill Game The Locals Turn Defeat Into Victory In Last Inning.—Costello, Rice and Higgins Do The Trick With Heavy Batting.—Score 6-5.

Down they came,
Those braves from Villa Nova;
Flushed with fame,
With courage running over.
They came, they fought,
They went down for the count—
Knocked all to naught
By the champions of the "Mount."

Malloy Stood Up in His Shoes and Pulled 'em Down.

That's the history of Saturday's game in a nutshell.

Flushed with victory and overjoyed at defeating the Catholic University the day before, Villa Nova came to Emmitsburg last Saturday prepared to "put it all over" Mike Thompson's Wonders at Mt. St. Mary's.

Proposed New Game Law for Maryland.

A synopsis of proposed law for Maryland which will be introduced by the Maryland State Game and Fish Protective Association in the Legislature of 1914, and which will provide at least $30,000 for game protection and propagation.

Makes it unlawful for any person to hunt, kill or pursue game in Maryland without a license to be obtained from the clerk of the Circuit Courts of the counties and the clerk of the Superior Court of Baltimore City. A resident of Maryland pays $1.00 and a non-resident $10.00, including clerks fees. Following the form adopted in 24 States owners of farm lands, their children or tenants, are exempt while gunning on their own or leased lands; provision is also made for a non-resident tax payer to assessed value of $500 to be classed as a resident. The license is not transferable and expires June 1st.

Provides the manner in which licenses shall be issued, by mail if desired; safeguards the handling of the funds so that no portion of the money shall be used except for protection and propagation. Provides a penalty of not less than $10.00 nor more than $25.00 for violation, exempts the Susquehanna Flats and any country which already has a resident hunting license.

One of the safeguards that the Gettysburg semicentennial commission has devised for the use of every one who takes part in the veterans camp at Gettysburg in July is an identification tag which every man in camp will be expected to carry in his pocket at all times.

well deserves the name; the title, however, would be equally appropriate to the boys from the "Mount," who in Saturday's game began with a cipher and ended with the figure six, the same being just one more tally than that of their opponents.

But Mike stood this as long as he could and then he began handing out bifocals to his bunch with the order for each man to remove his blinders and "go to it." That settled it. From this moment Mt. St. Mary's saw everything that Dougherty had on his menu and they ate it up as fast as it came.

They saw something else too as did also Villa Nova's coach—everybody saw that Monsieur Dougherty was all in.

They sent him to the bench and put in Herr Minnich, who from the time the game started had been "amusing" the spectators with an exhibition of what he couldn't do if called upon.

"Sox" Sebald Took Them Any Way They Came.

With stately stride Herr Minnich took his stand amid loud applause. With his big right hand he mopped the cabbage leaves from his brow and "wound up." But he overdid it, for his mainspring burst and the Dolly Varden pellets that he started toward

GETTYSBURG'S GREAT CAMP

PLANS FOR JULY 1 to 4

To Commemorate Fiftieth Anniversary of Battle

REUNION OF WAR VETERANS

Quarters and Food Will be Supplied to Men Who Fought for Union, and Their Foes.—Forty Thousand Expected.

To explain the plans for the great reunion of civil war veterans at Gettysburg, Penn., from July 1 to July 4, to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the battle there, the Chairman of the Battle of Gettysburg commission, Col. J. M. Schoemaker, has sent a circular letter to the 40,000 veterans who have been invited to attend the celebration.

The State of Pennsylvania will provide all the entertainment at Gettysburg for the veterans, and that State and the National Government by appropriations of $150,000 each will maintain a great camp around the battle field, equipped with all possible conveniences for the comfort of the old soldiers.

The camp will be established on a field which embraces some 280 acres. This is in the vicinity of the High Water Monument on the Battlefield of Gettysburg. It lies to the southwest of the town and includes part of the tract covered in the first day's fight. There will be 5,000 tents, intended to accommodate twelve men each, but only eight veterans will be assigned to a tent. Each veteran will be supplied with a separate cot, blanket, and mess kit. The mess kit will become his property.

Each tent will be furnished with water buckets and candles. Towels, soap, and toilet articles will be provided by the veterans themselves. Meals will be served to them at tables adjoining the kitchen at the end of each company street. The veterans will be restricted to hand-baggage. To aid in prompt delivery, all mail matter and telegrams must be plainly addressed to the individual veteran, with the additional designation of "Maine delegation," or "Mississippi Delegation," or whatever State delegation he may be with. The control of the grounds and camp and the movement of troops and marching bodies will be in charge of the Secretary of War, under such officers as he may detail for that purpose.

Each state through its representative must advise the Battle of Gettysburg Commission how many veterans it will send, and that State's delegation will be assigned to a section of the camp with sufficient tents for its veterans. The subdivision of tents will be left to each State representative.

To avoid, as far as possible, congestion on the railroads at Gettysburg, the camp will be ready for the reception of the old soldiers on June 29. Supper will be the first meal served that day. The camp will continue open on through the celebration until July 6, when the last meal served will be breakfast.

Under acts of the Pennsylvania Assembly and Congress, only veterans of the civil war will be provided with food, shelter and entertainment within the camp around the battlefield. Women and children accompanying the veterans cannot be taken care of within the camp. Veterans, therefore, are advised that they should not bring any member of their families, for whom they will have to obtain food and quarters outside the camp without first making arrangements for them. Before a veteran is admitted to the camp he must produce credentials such as his honorable discharge, pension certificate or a certificate of service from either the Governor of the State in which he enlisted; or if a veteran of the Regular Army, from the United States War Department; or if a former sailor or member of the Marine Corps, from the United States Navy Department, or a certificate of identification from a commander of a Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, or from a Commander of a Camp of the United Confederate Veterans.

It will be left to each Commonwealth, State and Territory to discriminate in the issuance of free transportation. The Never Discussed Fear of Graft at Ball.

The report from Paris that Mrs. Anna Wilson Howe, sister to the President, has declared that the inaugural ball was called off by the President-elect on account of petty graft incident to former functions of this kind was formerly denied at the White House Monday.

Secretary Tumulty authorized the statement that Mrs. Howe has denied making any such declarations and that the story is without foundation upon facts.

Bartholdt Plants the Peace Tree.

Representative Bartholdt, who will be president of the American Peace Congress to be held at St. Louis, May 1, 2 and 3, Tuesday, planted a peace tree on the Capitol grounds.

Those present at the ceremony were a number of members of Congress and Dr. Benjamin F. Trueblood, a director of the American Peace Society, and Secretary A. D. Call, of the society. The last peace tree was planted in Washington by Gov. Crittenden, of Ohio, about fifty years ago, but was done away with the Grant Monument. The tree planted Tuesday takes the place of the old one.

At Tuesday's ceremony a peace flag, an American flag with a white border around it, was unfurled and a streamer with the words "Peace Among All Nations."

State of Pennsylvania will furnish free transportation to only her own veterans or the veterans now living in her borders. The National Government will not furnish any free transportation.

The Trunk Line Passenger Association, with a territory embracing Gettysburg, has granted a round trip excursion rate, good from the time of starting, June 25, to the time of returning to the original point, July 15; a 20-day ticket good only on the same route going and coming, at the rate of 2 cents a mile. The railroads at Gettysburg, for lack of space will not put any cars there on side tracks.

The programme for the four days' exercises and entertainment has not been perfected in detail, but the tentative suggestions are:

July 1, Veteran's Day—Appropriate exercises under the joint direction of the Pennsylvania Commission and the Commanders in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate Veterans.

July 2, Military Day—Under the direction of the Chief of Staff of the United States Army. Special detachments of each arm of the regular service to participate as directed.

July 3, Civic Day—Under the direction of the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, presiding, and participated in by the Governors of the several States. Orations, sermon, and music.

July 4, National Day—The Chief Justice of the United States presiding. Forenoon: Oration by the President of the United States. High noon: He to lay the corner stone of a great Peace Memorial. Evening: Fireworks.

A great tent to seat between 10,000 and 15,000 veterans will be erected immediately adjoining the camp, and therein will occur the exercises; except the military parade and fireworks, and there, also, save for the hours set apart for the exercises, the veterans may hold reunions. The tent will be subdivided into separate inclosures. All organizations desiring to hold reunions must address, before June 1, Lieut. Col. Lewis E. Beitler, Secretary, Pennsylvania Gettysburg Commission, Room 500, Capitol, Harrisburg, Penn., stating explicitly the name of the organization or association, the day, date, and hour for which reservation is desired, and, as accurately as possible, the number of veterans who will participate therein.

All veterans of the civil war, North and South, are urged to wear their army, corps, division, brigade, and society badges, as a means of identification to their comrades in like commands in the expectation that it will assist in imparting information as to when and where their different organizations, meet, and in bringing together comrades who would otherwise, by reason of lapse of time, fail to recognize each other.

WILL TRY TO REUNITE.

be strengthened in every State in the Union, and the members of the party in Congress will act in harmony and will embrace every opportunity presented to enlighten the country regarding the principles and reforms for which we stand.

"Many members of the regular Republican party predicted that the progressive party will go to pieces, and declare that its highest vote was polled at the last election. I take no stock in such predictions. The progressive party is unlike the other new ones that appeared and, after making one campaign, their leaders and followers merged with the older parties. Our party stands for vital principles and for reforms that are badly needed. It will live for many years, will be vigorous during its life and will be productive of much good for the people during its existence.

"It devolves upon the next national convention to determine who will be selected as the standard bearer, and I do not know whether Colonel Roosevelt will again consent to lead the party for which he has performed such excellent service."

ANTI-WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS SAY

"Women Do Not Want to Vote."

Should all men be disfranchised because some men "do not want to vote?" Or should all women remain unenfranchised because Anti-Woman Suffragists say they "do not want to vote?"

Women in equal suffrage states vote in the same proportion as men.

In 1895 the Opponents of Equal Suffrage in Massachusetts had an amendment passed providing for a straw vote to ascertain the wishes of the women. Knowing that straw votes do not count, the Suffragists did not urge the women to vote. In spite of this the women who did vote favored equal suffrage 25 to 1.

More and larger petitions have been sent to legislative bodies, asking for votes for women than any other single matter in the history of this country.

"Such shipments mean Studebaker has the confidence of the farmer"

Every year over one hundred thousand horse-driven vehicles are sold by Studebaker. Over a million Studebaker vehicles are always in use. Stop and think what that means.

This enormous output means that Farmers—the men who know—depend upon Studebaker wagons to do their work.

And a Studebaker wagon never fails. It is always ready to do a big day's work—and to keep on doing it. There are thousands of Studebaker wagons that have been in service from 20 to 40 years.

A Studebaker wagon is a real business asset. Wheels, body, frame, axles and running gear have been tested and retested by experts. You can buy cheaper wagons but they're not Studebakers, nor will they last like Studebaker wagons.

Whether in city, town or country, for business or pleasure, there is a Studebaker vehicle to meet your requirements. Farm wagons, trucks, contractors' wagons, buggies, surreys, runabouts, pony carriages, business and delivery wagons—each the best of its kind. Studebaker harness also, of every description.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scotch-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Lingular Hills and the Catoclin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.—Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE, MISDIRECTED ENERGY.

Cardinal Gibbons, expressing his individual opinion of Woman Suffrage, says:

"Since it is beyond dispute that the most representative women are getting what they want indirectly, I believe that society cannot afford to risk the safety of the family and the destruction of the home. What would be the value to our national life of votes obtained by the rag-tag tactics that disgrace the name of womanhood?"

Can society, indeed, "afford to risk the safety of the family and the destruction of the home?" Is not the home the very beginning of government? Is it not in the home, where influences that in the end shape the course and public conduct of those who comprise the family? And when all is said and done, is it not the influence, and the poise of woman that mellows the judgment of man? that checks his hasty act, that draws back the curtain that so oft obscures one part of his mental vision and keeps him from seeing things from every side, from seeing them as they really are?

The desire for woman suffrage would seem to arise from the fact that some women either fail to exert their influence in the home or that some men fail to be guided by that influence. Why then should the overwhelming majority of satisfied women be, —as representative womanhood—subjected to the will of the restless few?

"The impression does not fade," says the New York Times, "that the great majority of women do not care to vote at all, and that all the rumpus about female suffrage is made up by a very few of our discontented sisters."

Let women keep within their proper sphere; let them not forfeit that which gives them man's homage. Let them not rob womanhood of the lustre of its fruit by rubbing elbows with the rabble.

Man, like the sun, may exert his power out in the garish day of passing events, but it is for woman, like the moon, to influence—in her own proper sphere, the home,—the tide of man's actions.

THE PROPOSED INCOME TAX.

According to a conservative estimate the number of persons who will be required to pay a tax on their incomes in accordance with the proposed law is about 285,000. Over against this comparatively small fraction of the population set the remainder of our 90,000,000, and it will be evident, as has already been stated in these columns, that the proposed law is class legislation of the most unfair and inequitable type.

Accordingly it is not a matter of surprise that in some quarters there is a tendency to call into question and discount the patriotism of the vast bulk of our people in this land of the free and home of the brave, who are enjoying the advantages and blessings of a great and glorious country but have neither the pride nor the fairness to contribute their share to its maintenance despite the primary law of equality and equity that should obtain in every Democracy worthy of the name, and who are ready to go the length of foisting on the shoulders of an infinitesimally small number the immense burden of taxation.

Again when it is recalled that the tax-paying gentry are so few comparatively as to be a negligible quantity in our elections, that the number of those who are infected with socialistic antipathy to capital and wealth increasing, and that the demagogue is ever ready to appropriate and champion popular policies at whatever expense to perpetuate himself in power, conservative thinkers fear that the present bill is only an entering wedge to further legislation that will inevitably be perverted and abused in attacking prudence and thrift and in rewarding discontent and envy, waste and neglect.

It has been stated by an ordinarily conservative paper in summing up the arguments for and against this measure that it is justifiable because the wealthy are better able to pay than those who are not so fortunate. If such a mischievous, un-American, socialistic principle is ever translated into a Federal statute, how long will it be before the majority come to the conclusion that other methods of raising revenue are superfluous and cumbersome and that the men who have accumulated certain money must pay the expenses of government simply because they are well able to do so. A principle like this once admitted into our policy and polity will justify any degree of spoliation, plunder and confiscation, and who will then feel secure that the rewards of his brain or brawn are his own, securely protected from the itching fingers of envy, avarice or hate?

Hence it is that careful students of our political situation maintain that the proposed measure is in a way an approval and encouragement of the principle of Karl Marx that capital is theft, that it is something to be penalized, that anyone who rises above the level of competency is a menace to the common good, and should be restrained by rigid taxation.

The monarchical and highly centralized governments of Europe come nearer to realizing democratic equity and fairness in this respect than our own projected legislation. The following table taken from a speech delivered by Mr. Bryan some years ago shows the scale of taxable incomes in the principal nations of Europe:

In England the amount exempt is $750, with an additional $600 on incomes of less than $2,000.
In Prussia incomes under 900 marks ($225) are exempt.
In Austria the exemption is about $113.
In Italy incomes under $77.20 are exempt.
In the Netherlands at present incomes under $260 are exempt.
In Zurich, Switzerland, incomes under $100 are exempt.

Te Salutamus, Baseballists.

Let Woodrow Wilson, if he will, Make speeches from the throne until He talks a lung out and the Flag Becomes a despot's rotten rag—Let Mrs. Pankhurst and her crew Beat Mr. John Bull black and blue, And with her loud resounding breath Declare she'll starve herself to death Unless she gets an equal right With man to exercise her might—Let Mayor Gaynor run amuck Among the lobsters and get stuck At 1 A. M. or 5 P. M. And bust his moral diadem—Let Murphy or let Sulzer be The boss of things at Albany To do with truly statesman skill The Tiger's or the People's will—

Let—let—aw, let the heavens fall! Say, what's the odds? We've got baseball!!!

Lest You forget.

Your home newspaper heralded to the world your birth. It told of your entry into school. Mentioned your birthday party when you were sweet sixteen. Applauded your graduation from the high school, started you to college, and when you returned mentioned the first job you secured. Told of your marriage to the sweetest girl in town and also mentioned the advent (or event) of your firstborn. Told of the visits of pa and ma, sympathized with you in your sorrow, laughed with you in your joy, and when you die it will do its best to get you through the pearly gates at only $1 a year.—Warrenton Banner.

The Actor's Clothes.

Our principal actor of whims was Mr. Mansfield, as has been made known variously. One whim of his is related by Fritz Schoultz, the costumer.

When it came to the staging of "The First Violin" Mansfield was keen to get garments with "character" in them and found that of all places Schoultz's was the one that could supply him with redingotes. He was delighted with them, introduced them and at the end of the Chicago engagement absolutely declined to return them.

The matter of getting stage clothes with character is interesting in itself. Secondhand shops supply the most, although on occasions an actor has been known to approach a laborer on the street and make him an offer for his weather beaten coat.—Chicago Post.

Gladstone's Speech For Irving.

Gladstone was a great admirer of Sir Henry Irving, and this admiration was shown one day in the house of commons. Irving was under the gallery in the house when suddenly, with out apparent reason, Gladstone leaped to his feet and delivered an impassioned speech, set off with all the expression and dramatic gesture for which he was so famous. The house seemed surprised. Members looked at one another and murmured, "What is the old man now up to?" They thought it was some deep political game. But a week or two later a friend of Irving's, encountering Mr. Gladstone, mentioned the actor's visit to the house, and Gladstone eagerly inquired: "What did he think of my speech? I made it for him."

Editorials From Maryland Exchanges.

Jump on the Fly.

Now is the time to begin the fight against the housefly. For every fly that you kill this month you will reduce the fly population in the summer by several billions.

It is said that one fly on an average lays in a season twelve sets of eggs. At the lowest estimate sixty flies are hatched from each laying. It is fair to say that fifty per cent. of the eggs hatched will be females. Each female will beget others, so that in one season a single fly will, by a most conservative count, produce seven billions of flies.

Just as the bee gathers pollen from the flowers on its legs, so does the fly collect germs. Typhoid fever, tuberculosis, and many other diseases are carried in this way from the sick room to your home. Wherever there is filth there the fly swarms. The fly which lights upon your lips may menace your life with disease germs. The flies that buzz about your kitchen or your dining room may literally be poisoning your food.

Absolute cleanliness around houses, stables and outbuildings seems to be the only solution of the fly problem offered by those who have made a study of it. The fly question seems to be in reality a dirt question. "No dirt, no flies," is what sanitarians tell us. Flies spread disease. Therefore, anyone who makes an effort to reduce their number performs a distinct service to humanity.—Democratic Advocate.

Hearst Democracy.

It is amusing to the student of current political history to read William Randolph Hearst's criticism of President Wilson and his policies. He says Wilson is a Federalist because he read his first message to Congress as Washington and Adams did, and an English Free-trader because in obedience to the Baltimore convention that nominated and the people who elected him he advocates lowering custom duties on foreign imports that the American people liberally consume. Mann, the Republican leader in Congress, was so much pleased with the Hearst effusion that he wanted it printed in the Congressional Record.

And yet Hearst claims to be a Democrat after seeking and failing to get a presidential nomination from every party, faction and ism in the country. There are a number of such Democrats. The Sugar Democrats of Louisiana—Wool and Lorimer Democrats of Ohio, and Illinois and Lumber Democrats from the Carolinas and elsewhere, all of whom would sacrifice the party that honored them and the people who elected them, to serve the private interests they represent.

Hearst is evidently bidding for the support of this band of selfish malcontents, like himself masquerading under the cloak of democracy.—Harford Democrat.

Noble Aim and Purpose.

Let us say for the information of those who may not know that, whilst the Boy Scouts Movement is fundamentally ethical and religious, it is non-sectarian and inter-denominational. It does not interfere in the least with the prerogative of parents or pastors by giving religious instruction, but it insists on the observance and practice of whatever form of religion the boy professes, so that it should make him, if he is a Roman Catholic, a better Roman Catholic, if he is a Protestant, a better Protestant. Whilst it aims to develop the soldier-qualities of obedience, courage and loyalty, it is a strictly peaceful and non-military organization. Emphasizing in the plastic life of the growing boy practical righteousness and the elemental virtues of service to humanity, alertness, resourcefulness, self-control, self-reliance, respect for authority, kindness to animals, courtesy to women, surely in setting before the lad these pure life ideals and saving him from sympathy with low ideals, it has a noble aim and purpose which should command the active sympathy and support of all who have at heart the interest of the boys and of the community.—Denton Journal.

Last by Legislature.

The present United States Senate has the distinction of being probably the last that will ever be elected by Legislatures, as the constitutional amendment for the popular election of members to the upper house of Congress has been ratified by the necessary number of States to make it a fundamental law. Consequently United States Senators will be elected hereafter by State-wide balloting, just as Governors are elected. There will be no Winter campaigns before the Legislatures, no deadlocks, disgraceful deals and dickers, such as have been common in the past. The roster of a new Senate will be known pretty accurately within 48 hours after the votes have been cast.

It has been a long fight against the political bosses, who have for years prevented the adoption of the popular vote amendment, but the reform steadily grew in popularity, until the opposing forces were finally completely overwhelmed.—Midland Journal.

CURRENT COMMENT FROM LEADING JOURNALS.

Railway Accident Intervention.

Supreme Court Justice Benton has ordered the reopening of the indictment of the engineer who caused the Corning wreck, the incident which seemed to Gov. Sulzer to show that he was right in signing the full crew law. It is fair to say that the engineer caused the accident, for the Public Service Commission found that the accident was due to the engineman's "entire failure to observe signals." His indictment followed, but he was not tried because the indictment was dismissed at the request of the District Attorney.

No better way could be found to invite accidents than to fail to hold to responsibility those who cause them. No enlargement of the number of employees can make up for the laxity of discipline.

The same point is illustrated in the New Haven accident now under trial. The crossover was taken at excessive speed in violation of orders, and the remedy was thought to be to order the lengthening of the crossovers. Any crossover is safe if the speed is not excessive, and crossovers cannot be lengthened so that it is safe to take them at speeds above those ordered. Among the regulators of railways discipline seems to be despised because it costs nothing, and apparatus is ordered regardless of cost apparently because it is the property of the railway, and its defects real or alleged, can be imputed to the railways for fault.

Last year 290 railways carried 332,000,000 passengers without causing a single death. Fourteen more railways carried 58,000,000 more passengers with the loss of a single life each. The Lackawanna itself had not killed a single passenger in the twelve years preceding the Corning accident, but the Lackawanna is blamed rather than the engineer. In the last decade the traffic on American railways has increased 66 per cent., and the fatalities to passengers have fallen from 345 to 318.

Not one accident in twelve is due to mechanical causes, and, in official language, "nowhere in the world have appliances for safeguarding railway transportation been so highly developed as in this country."

If the records of accidents are searched with attention it appears that human feelings are the chief cause. The remedy is caution in the individual, and discipline by the railways. There should be short shrift for the railway employee who disobeys, and no pity for his punishment. Gov. Sulzer's signature of the full crew law or rather his reasoning in excuse of his signature, had one good result in reviving the cause of the Corning accident, and in giving hope that punishment for it would help to prevent others like it.—New York Times.

Do the Women Want to Vote.

Connecticut women have long had the right to vote at school elections. The Hartford Courant estimates that there are 18,000 woman of voting age in Hartford. Only 1,040 were registered, less than 10 per cent. of these voted. In other words, more than 90 per cent. of the women who registered did not vote, while only 6 per cent. of the women qualified to vote took the trouble even to register. The number of registered voters who fail to vote in general election averages about 6 per cent. of the total.

If women have a strong interest in any branch of public affairs it should surely be the educational branch. Yet Hartford's experience in the school elections is not exceptional. Mr. Chester A. Reed contributes to The Sun a summary of the results of woman suffrage at school elections in the town of Dedham, Mass., since 1892, when the right to vote for school committeemen was first granted to women. In 1893 no woman cast a ballot, in 1894 26 women joined 1,554 men in indicating their preference at the polls. The number of male voters for school officers in the twenty years has ranged from 1,423 to 1,948. The highest number of woman voters was in 1896, when 101 voted with 1,665 men. The lowest number was 11 in 1895. This year 49 women voted.

Perhaps the agitators for women suffrage will say that it is not worth while for women to vote when they are privileged to have a voice only in the selection of school committeemen. But that is a weak argument. Dedham, Mass., and Hartford, Conn., are fair examples of enlightened New England communities, and it would certainly be rash to say that the educated women in those places are not interested in the schools and exert no influence in their government. On the contrary they have a large share in school control. The impression does not fade that the great majority of women do not care to vote at all, and that all the rumpus about female suffrage is made by a very few of our discontented sisters.—New York Times.

Morgan's Faith in Co-Workers.

J. Pierpont Morgan's will, as published by The Washington Herald yesterday, is a remarkable document, but in nothing more remarkable than in its expression of absolute confidence in his business associates.

A man wielding such powers as did Mr. Morgan had necessarily to know the accurate measure of men. He had almost as much need of other men as of himself, and for his allies he required men true, loyal, steadfast, unfaltering in their devotion to their leader and his cause.

And at the end of that splendidly victorious career, Mr. Morgan, as he cast up his last accounts, found that the largest factor in the final disposition of his mighty fortune was his confidence in the smaller, but not petty, men who had fought the fight with him.

A man of such vast powers as was Mr. Morgan a man set apart from other men by the very forces which made some fear and others hate while all admired him, is difficult to judge. Only these intimately personal thoughts and deeds that held his mind and heart when he was making ready for death can make known the human qualities of this genius of wealth.

Mr. Morgan's life can teach many lessons, but none more cheering and helpful than this, that this wielder of other men and other men's money, knowing perforce the gauge of human strength and frailty, of human steadfastness and inconstancy, of human greed and generosity, of human good and evil, yet knew at the end when the Great Captain of All the Hosts beckoned him from the battlefield that the men who had served him best and whom he had served best were true and faithful, never failing in their loyalty to him and in their honesty to their trust.—Washington Herald.

A Definite Policy.

A republican paper, in discussing the president's message, pays this high compliment to the president: "Even the opponents of the measure, or of the arguments advanced in its favor will candidly admit, however, that the president and his party are endeavoring to redeem their pledges, to relieve the consumer, to open new channels to industry and commerce, and to promote national prosperity. There may be room for amendments and compromises no rate is to be considered final; a full and searching discussion of the bill is assured. The administration will not wobble; it knows what it wants and will accept responsibility for the consequences of its policies; but it will welcome light and honest data from those who regard the proposed reductions as too radical."—Chicago Record Herald.

A Libel on the President.

We are astounded to read in reputable newspapers that President Wilson is opposed to the exemption of coastwise bottoms from the Panama Canal tolls "because he is in thought and sympathy alien with his own country and that in opposing free tollage he exhibits himself as an Anglomanic."

Of course, all that is veritable rot. No self-respecting newspaper, no matter how much opposed to the Democratic administration and its new standard-bearer, should so far forget its dignity as to make such a public charge, which it would be mighty difficult for it to prove if called upon to do so in a court of justice. No doubt Mr. Wilson places the honor of this country above all other considerations. He proposes, if his policy is stated correctly, to stand up for the validity of American treaties.

It has been reported repeatedly that Mr. Wilson favors the abolition of the toll exemption clause, and that he is willing to settle the dispute between this country and Great Britain amicably. One of the reasons given for his attitude is that he, on principle as a consistent Democrat, objects to subsidies, and that he considers the granting of free passage in effect as a gift of something like $1,250,000 a year to coastwise shipping. It is also said that he has a second reason for his opposition. This is the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, in which the United States entered into an agreement with England pledging this country to permit the ships of all nations to go through the canal on equal terms.—Washington Herald.

Well, if the newspapers are "poison to the public mind," as Senator Works asserts, there is Senator Works, an emetic to relieve the public mind.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

That is a cool proposition of Senator Chamberlain, backed by Senator O'Gorman and other ship subsidy leaders, to abrogate the Hay-Pauncefote and Clayton-Bulwer treaties in order to make sure of the toll exemption of American coastwise ships through the Panama Canal. That there must be no further question of the violation of national honor the scheme is to abrogate the treaties which are held to be violated by the toll exemption provision of the Panama Act. There is scarcely any extreme to which a subsidy will not go to secure a subsidy, but if the Democrats at Washington are true to the principles of Democracy they will save these gentlemen the trouble of abrogating the treaties by abrogating the exemption.—New York Times.

An Arrest

By JAMES B. BARSTOW

Mrs. Burrage (Mlle. de Fou and Signorina Tarantola, with a number of other aliases) was the most accomplished swindler I ever had anything to do with in all my term of service on the police force. She must have belonged to a well to do family or had a talent for languages, for she could pose as a native of any civilized land.

One day my chief told me that he had reliable information of this accomplished confidence lady; that she was living in apartments and he wished me to go and arrest her. "Go in plain clothes," he said, "and keep your wits about you. She is very slippery and will elude you if you give her the slightest opportunity."

I started out with the intention of being thoroughly on my guard. I knew that flat houses are apt to be convenient for those who wish to light out suddenly and took with me sufficient force to watch from every direction.
Having stationed a man in front, in rear and on the roof of the adjoining building, I rang the bell at Mrs. Burrage's door. The summons was answered by a maid dressed in uniform —a black dress, apron and cap. She held a silver salver in her hand for a card.

But I was not there for a call, nor did it suit my purpose to send in my name. I brushed past the maid and passed through the living room to a bedroom, where I found a lady in dis-habille.

"What are you doing here?" she asked, betraying a foreign accent.

"I have come, madam, to ask you to make a call upon the inspector."

"The inspector! What does this mean?"

"That you are under arrest."

She pretended for awhile to be bewildered at the idea of being arrested, but when she found I would listen to her no longer she agreed to accompany me without urging if I would permit her to put on a costume suitable to the street. After examining the outlets and seeing no possible way of her making an escape I consented. The room was at the end of the suit, on the fourth floor, and no fire escape within reach. There was no possibility of her getting out except through the living room. So I retreated to that apartment, but insisted that the door between the two rooms should be sufficiently ajar for me to hear, though not to see.

There was but one door opening from the suit to the hall, and at this door I had stationed a man with orders to let no one pass. On one side of the flat passageway was the living room, on the other the dining room and kitchen. But what interested me was the bedroom in which I had the prisoner cornered. I could not for my life see how she could escape me.

Mrs. Burrage, or whatever her name was, took her time about dressing. I listened for every move, and she made enough of them for me to know by the sound that she was still there. This was gratifying, for, though I saw no way for her to escape me, I would have felt uneasy at any lengthy silence.
When a quarter of an hour had passed and she did not appear I asked her if she was not ready. She replied that she had no one to hook the back of her dress. I told her that I had often performed that service for my wife and if she would come into the living room I would accommodate her. She said she would prefer that I come in to her.
Resolved not to grant anything she proposed, I told her to come out to me, which she did with evident reluctance.

I hooked her dress for her, and when she went back to her bedroom to put on her coat and hat I flung the door wide open, so that she could complete her toilet under my observation. She was so slow about it that I finally told her that I would give her five minutes by my watch to finish. She got into her wraps within the time and said that she was ready to accompany me.
But she must ask me to go through the rooms with her—if I would not permit her to go alone—to see that they were in order for locking up. I consented, and we passed through the other bedrooms and finally entered the dining room. My prisoner passed through it to a pantry between it and the kitchen and, opening a door, looked down a lift used for sending up supplies. Thinking she would attempt to escape through it, I caught her skirt.

She turned toward me and smiled.
"You may take me to the inspector if you choose," she said, "but I am not the person you are after. I am the maid. My mistress you passed at the door. She got word of a visit by the police and immediately changed clothes with me. When you came to me she made up for a man, went down on this lift to one of the apartments below and has doubtless passed out through the main entrance. I have been delaying you in order to give her the needed time. Here," pointing to the servant's room, "are her maid's clothes."

I did not take her to the inspector.
I went back to him myself and got laughed at.

Some years later I went to arrest the same woman and succeeded. I asked her how she got wind of her intended arrest, and she told me that she happened at the time to be looking out of a window down on the street and saw me posting my men, she having had time to change costumes with the maid.

Moors and Morocco.

Moor and Morocco are words unknown to the people of that troubled land. These people know themselves as Arabs and descendants of those valiant upholders of the prophet's green standard who swept like a flood across north Africa at the time of the heira.
The Morocco of the present day they found possessed by a sturdy race who claimed descent from the people who were cast out of Canaan by Joshua, the son of Nun. Their country, so far as its plains were concerned, was taken from them by the Arabs, and their fighting strength was made to serve the Arab cause in the conquest of Spain. They themselves gradually took to the mountains, to the great Atlas.
Here they have remained ever since, speaking their own language, maintaining their own customs and racial attributes and obstinately refusing to be absorbed by the Arab dwellers on the plains. These people are the Berbers.
Their tongue is called Shillah. Literature they have none, in the ordinary sense of the word, but they have a rich store of oral tradition, myth, legend and folklore.

Fees of the Lecture Platform.

"The palmy days of the lecture platform"—when were they? Most folks would guess before the war, when Ralph Waldo Emerson demanded $5 a night and a tip of four quarts of oats for his horse, or a little later, when Eli Perkins used to say all he asked for was F. A. M. E. (fifty and my expenses). Wiser ones will point to the time between 1872, when Henry Ward Beecher got his first $1,000 fee, and 1890, when Major Pond paid Henry M.
Stanley $100,000 for 100 lectures. They will cite Mark Twain, John B. Gough, P. T. Barnum and a long list of old timers that got from $500 to $1,000 a night in that period, and they will tell you that those times have gone.

Maybe they have, but the lecture platform hasn't. Individual fees are not so high, but the business never offered better chances to the would be entertainer than right now.—Detroit Free Press.

Of Course Not.

Mrs. Roby, the distinguished lady traveler and explorer, told some interesting stories of her experiences in central Africa.

In one of the villages through which Mrs. Roby passed a leopard which had killed several children was captured and appropriated by the chief, who kept it in his bed for several days. Mrs. Roby visited the chief and was shown the dead body of the leopard.

"Why do you keep it?" she asked.
"Because it is a king leopard," was the reply.

"What will you do with it?" was Mrs. Roby's next question.
To which the chief replied tersely,
"Eat it."

"But it smells most horribly," Mrs.
Roby objected.

"I shall not eat the smell," the chief assured her.

Pronouncing London Names.

It is by his pronunciation of the place names of London that a stranger may be detected. If he says Hol-born instead of "Hoborn," Mary-le-bone with the full pronunciation of each syllable or South-wark instead of "Suthark," we know at once that he is not of the town. And there is a pronunciation that is peculiar to cabmen and bus conductors, such as West-min-ster for Westminster, High park for Hyde park and, most peculiar of all, which the taxi driver has inherited from the old hansom cabman, the custom of calling the well known piazzas in Covent Garden the "pee-ches." And this reminds us that the garden, as salesmen and actors call it, is invariably styled by the market porters "Common Garden."
—London Standard.

A Perilous Business.

Taking young geese on the island of Rona, in the outermost Hebrides, is a most perilous business, though large captures are occasionally made. A crew recently returned with a bag of 2,200 birds, which found ready sale at Ness. The men were lowered over the face of the cliffs, which are 400 to 600 feet sheer to the sea. They then lassoed the birds out of their nests by means of a fishing rod with a noosed string at the end.

A Real Surprise Ahead.

"What are you doing, Polly?" asked her mother.
"I'm knitting, mumsie, dear," replied the young woman. "I heard George say the other day he was afraid he'd have to buy a new muffler for his car, and I thought I'd knit him one as a sort of surprise."—Harper's Weekly.

still the essential foundation for a life! It's the three "S's" nowadays.

Cub—Three "S's"? Editor—Yep. We've Cynical.

"So you are on your way to propose to Miss Pickelle?"
"You bet! Wish me luck."
"Oh, I wish you luck all right, but it won't do you a bit of good. I feel sure she's going to accept you."—Houston

ANOTHER BIT OF LOCAL CURRENCY COMES TO LIGHT

Former Emmitsburgian Has in His Possession a Corporation Certificate Dated 1837.

More Emmitsburg money, that is, money issued by this corporation has come to light. It is in possession of a former Emmitsburger, now a resident of Philadelphia who in a letter to this office says.

"I can go you one better on Emmitsburg Currency. I have a corporation certificate (shin plaster) for 12 1/2 cents, signed by G. Grover, Asst. Clerk and dated August 9, 1837. It has no engraving of the Conestoga team but it bears an excellent cut of a steam train. That was only eight years after the first steam railway in the United States, the Honesdale line of 16 miles, began operation; seven years after the first locomotive was built in this country. Even at that far day the corporation evidently dreamed of our present glory—the Emmitsburg Railroad. By a remarkable, perhaps prophetic, coincidence, the train on the 1837 certificate has the identical equipment of the train of to-day—one locomotive, two cars and some very impressive smoke. It looks just as safe too—even as safe as the Western Maryland.

Our fathers were not so slow after all. How many years must elapse before the United States government put an airship on its gold or silver certificates or even on its postage stamps?"

The writer evidently reads the CHRONICLE thoroughly as his postscript shows. "The locomotive on shinplaster has no whistle."

MRS. ADOLPHUS HARNER.

After a lingering illness of ten months Mrs. Adolphus Harner died at her residence in Emmitsburg, Friday April 18, 1913 at 12 o'clock.

Mrs. Harner before her marriage was Saphira Willson daughter of Julia and Charles Willson and was born near Liberty, Jan. 6 1849, but had lived in Emmitsburg the greater part of her life. In 1872 she was married to Adolphus Harner, of Littlestown.

She is survived by her husband, one son and one daughter Mr. Harry C. Harner, of this place, and Mrs. Walter S. Zeigler, of Frederick, two sisters, Mrs. Margaret M. Mitchell, of Emmitsburg, Mrs. Spalding, of Pittsburgh, three brothers, Mr. Walter Willson, of Hagerstown, Mr. Clayton Willson, of Altoona, Pa., and Mr. Lawrence Willson, of Manila, Philippine Islands.

The funeral services took place from St. Joseph's Catholic church, of which she was a devout member, on Monday morning at 9:30 o'clock. The honorary pall bearers were Messrs. Jong T. Long, David Guise, Brooke Boyle and E. L. Frizzell. The active pall-bearers, Felix Diffendal, J. M. Kerrigan, P. F. Burkett, James Elder, Anthony Wivell, and J. E. Payne. The services were conducted by Rev. J. O. Hayden, interment in the cemetery adjoining the church.

Dr. Stone Attends Important Lecture.

The meeting of Medical and Surgical Faculty of Maryland was this year a pronounced success. The attendance was unusually large, there being present over a hundred Maryland physicians. The physicians had the pleasure of hearing Dr. Simon Flexner, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research; D. L. McLane Tiffany, L. E. Neale, J. C. Hemmeter, Julius Friedenwald, of Baltimore, and many others. All the papers were on practical subjects to the practicing physician.

Dr. Friedenwald's paper was on the treatment gastric ulcers. Dr. Hiram Wood cited several cases of total blindness from the use of wood alcohol.

Luncheon was served in the faculty building in Osler Hall. The walls of it are covered with oil portraits of many of the prominent physicians of the State.

Dr. D. E. Stone, spent two days attending the meeting and speaks most enthusiastically of the benefit he received from it.

EMMITSBURG'S TELEPHONE PROGRESS.

1912 was a year of activity in the Emmitsburg exchange. The young year 1913 found 65 more subscribers enjoying the benefits of telephone service, than 1912 met when he came into office. More than that, 1913 started out with 9 new orders on file.

Much construction was done to furnish several places with service, which were without it previous to 1912. 42,940 feet of iron wire and 2,250 feet of insulated wire were strung, while 110,000 feet of iron wire were removed and replaced by new.

Arrangements were made and fifteen year contracts entered into with three rural or connecting companies, whereby inhabitants of the following places were given service by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company: Liberty Mills, Zora, Territory to the northeast and west of Emmitsburg to a distance of five miles, territory to the southeast for the same distance, and through Hampton Valley for a distance of four miles.

The toll rate between Emmitsburg and Gettysburg was reduced from 35c. to 10c. A new switchboard and new exchange equipment were installed during 1912, and rural lines rebuilt and extended.

CARDINAL GIBBONS' PERSONAL VIEWS ON (WOMAN) SUFFRAGE

Says Catholic Church is Not Against Movement, Which His Eminence, Himself Opposes.

In answer to the recent utterances of Miss Inez Milholland that the Catholic Church is opposed to equal suffrage, Cardinal Gibbons the other day, declared that "the mission of the church is to define faith and morals; in other matters individuals decide for themselves; but emphatically expressed his own personal opposition to woman's suffrage."

"Personally I am opposed to female suffrage because I am in favor of perpetuating the real dignity of woman," said the Cardinal.

"The Christian religion has exalted woman to her present sphere. She is no longer the slave of man or the toy of his caprice, but the equal, the peer of man. She is the queen of the domestic kingdom and her proper sphere is the home. She is justly honored everywhere by reason of her sex. Now, if she were to embark on the ocean of political life it is very much to be feared that her dignity would be impaired, if not jeopardized.

"Observe the effect of this present agitation of many women. As soon as women seek to enter the arena of politics, they may expect to be soiled by its dust. And the grace and charm inherent in women would be very seriously impaired by her rude contact and contention with men in political life. Woman's sphere is the home and as wife and mother she will have ample occasion to engage all her time and faculties. The wife who absents herself from her home habitually, inevitably neglects her children and causes her husband to suffer by her absence.

"The country has already quite enough voters. Although women may not now exercise suffrage, the finest among them are voting by proxy. Their power is incalculable. We cannot exaggerate the influence of a good woman on the men of her circle. Let me illustrate by an anecdote:

"We read that Themistocles was on occasion approached by his son, who asked a considerable favor. 'I cannot grant what you ask,' said the great general, 'you must go to your mother. It is true that Greece rules the world; that Athens rules Greece; that I rule Athens; but, my son, your mother rules me.'

"Since it is beyond dispute that the most representative women are getting what they want indirectly, I believe that society cannot afford to risk the safety of the family and the destruction of the home. What would be the value to our national life of votes obtained by the rag-tag tactics that disgrace the name of womanhood."

Mad at Paint

25c a gallon for paint is about $2.50 on the average job, and lots of men waited last year for that; but they didn't reckon; they got mad; wouldn't pay it.

There are times to get mad and refuse to pay; but when one's property needs protecting is no time to get mad and not paint.

Besides, it costs more to get mad and wait than to paint.

Getting mad doesn't do any good to your property; paint does it good by keeping out water; no water no rot; no paint, some water and rot; and a little rot is more than enough to make a man liberal toward his painter and paint.

Paint costs not a cent. All the paint in the world, so long as it keeps out water, costs not a cent.

HOME COURSE IN SCIENTIFIC AGRICULTURE

SECOND ARTICLE — THE LIMING OF SOILS.

By H. J. WHEELER, Ph. D., Director and Chemist of the Rhode Island Agricultural Experiment Station.

THE recognition of the agricultural value of certain forms of lime is not new, and it appears from the writings of Pliny that liming was practiced by the Romans more than 2,000 years ago. In England, Germany, France and other European countries the application of lime in various forms has been and is still practiced extensively, but, as Roberts states, probably 99 per cent of the arable soil of the United States has never been limed, and indeed many large areas are not in need of it.

Authorities seem to agree that lime is necessary to the plant, and if it be wholly lacking in soils, even though an abundance of all the other essential elements is present, the plant cannot develop normally. The plant cannot grow if any one of the essential elements of plant food is lacking. Fortunately, however, many soils are well provided with lime by nature, and it is seldom or never necessary for those who cultivate them to resort to liming.

The method usually resorted to for ascertaining the amount of lime in soils is to treat them with some strong mineral acid (usually hydrochloric) and determine the amount of lime which is thus dissolved. Some writers state that if only one-half of 1 per cent is thus shown to be present immediate resort to liming is desirable; others set the amount higher, and some seem to prefer to have present as much as 1 per cent.

The fact that beets of all kinds make a ready response to liming on soils which are deficient in carbonate of lime may be utilized as the basis for a practical and reliable method of testing the lime requirements of the soil. For this purpose lay out two plats of land, each about 12 by 30 feet, manure each of the plats with like amounts of a fertilizer containing potash, phosphoric acid and nitrogen and apply lime to one of the plats at the rate of from one to two and a half tons per acre (forty pounds per plat would be approximately two and a half tons per acre). A comparison of the growth and yields on the two plats will furnish a safe means of judging whether the soil will respond profitably to applications of lime.

Liming Sometimes Injurious.

Excessive amounts of lime, especially on light soils, may have an injurious action. This is particularly true of freshly slaked lime and of ground limestone upon light sandy soils, which are inclined to be dry and which contain only small amounts of organic matter. It hastens unduly the decomposition of organic matter and thus renders the soil more open and less retentive of fertilizers and moisture than before. If either ground burned lime or slaked lime must be used upon such soils it should be applied in small amounts at not too frequent intervals.

The arguments in favor of the use of lime are summarized thus:

The use of lime as a soil improver is very ancient, and its value for this purpose is generally recognized. Its action as a fertilizer is both direct and indirect.

There are many soils in which lime is deficient, notably such as are derived from granite, mica schist and certain sandstones, slates and shales. On such soils lime is often of direct value in supplying a necessary element of plant food.

Indirect Value of Lime.

The indirect value of lime is perhaps more important than its direct action, because probably the majority of cultivated soils contain sufficient lime to meet the direct demands of plants for food. Lime is of indirect value in unlocking the unavailable potash, phosphoric acid and nitrogen in the soil.

Lime exerts a decided influence on the mechanical condition of soils, rendering heavy compact soils looser in texture and tending to bind particles of loose, leachy soils.

Lime is also beneficial in furnishing conditions in the soil favorable to the activity of the micro-organisms which convert the nitrogen of organic matter into nitrates which are readily assimilated by plants which decompose organic matter and which assist certain leguminous plants to assimilate the free nitrogen of the air.

One form of lime (gypsum) has been shown to be a most effective corrective of black alkali.

The continued use of lime unaccompanied by other fertilizers may prove injurious, especially on poor soils, since it converts the insoluble nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid compounds of the soil into such as can be rapidly taken up by plants or washed out in the drainage, thus hastening the exhaustion of the supply of these substances in the soil. As the German adage states, "The use of lime without manure makes both farm and farmer poor."

Behavior Toward Lime.

It has been shown that even upon many upland and naturally well drained soils, apparently in good condition otherwise, the sourness (acidity) is so great that most varieties of plants will not thrive. Lime is the most economical and effective substance thus far used for correcting this condition. According to experiments made by the Rhode Island agricultural experiment station on acid soils in that state, the plants tested may be classified with regard to their behavior toward lime as follows: Plants benefited by liming, spinach, lettuce (all kinds), beets (all kinds), okra (gumbo), salsify (vegetable oyster), celery, onion, parsnip, cauliflower, cucumber, eggplant, cantaloupe, asparagus, kohlrabi, cabbage, dandelion, Swedish turnip, pepper, peanut, English or flat turnip, upland cress (peppergrass), martynia, rhubarb, common pea, pumpkin, summer squash (scalloped), golden wax bean, red Valentine bean, horticultural pole bean, bush lima bean, lentil, Hubbard squash, saltbush, hemp, tobacco, sorghum, alfalfa, clover (red, white, crimson and alsike), barley, emmer, wheat, oats, timothy, Kentucky blue grass, Canada pea, Cuthbert raspberry, gooseberry, currant (White Dutch), orange, quince, cherry and Burbank Japan plum; plants but little benefited by liming, Indian corn, spurry (it has been reported in England that spurry is injured by liming, but such results have not been obtained in Rhode Island), rye, carrot, chicory, Rhode Island bent and redtop; plants slightly injured by liming, cotton, tomato, cowpea (drummond), Concord grape, peach, apple and pear; plants distinctly injured by liming, lupine, common sorrel (Rumex acetosella), radish, velvet bean, castor bean, flax, blackberry, black cap raspberry and cranberry.

Frequency of Liming.

The frequency with which liming should be practiced depends, among other things, upon the character of the soil and the rate of application, the number of years involved in the rotation practiced, the plants grown and their order of succession. As a general rule, it may be stated that from one-half to one and one-half tons of lime per acre every five or six years is sufficient. Applications of two or three tons may, however, be advisable in cases of very acid soils which are to be seeded down and are to remain in grass for several years. The practice of applying small amounts of lime at somewhat frequent intervals is being generally accepted as preferable to the use of large amounts at rare intervals.

Lime combined as carbonate, as in marl, wood ashes, etc., can usually be applied with safety in the spring or at any other season of the year, but autumn is always the safest time to apply caustic or slaked lime. It is generally considered best to apply the lime to the soil immediately after plowing and harrow it in thoroughly. Lime which is already slaked may be spread upon the soil directly from wagons or carts or dumped into heaps and then spread with a shovel, although the most satisfactory plan in such cases is to use a lime spreader or ordinary grain drill with a fertilizer attachment. Where a lime spreader or similar implement is not available the burnt lime may be placed on the soil in piles of from forty to fifty pounds each, covered with moist earth and allowed to slake before being spread with a shovel.

In conclusion, it may be said, ascertain first whether lime is needed. If it is, apply it judiciously, and never depend upon lime alone to maintain the fertility of the soil, for all of the ingredients which plants need must be present in the soil to insure the profitable production of crops.

The Geologists' Clock.

Each fossiliferous rock bed contains characteristic forms or groups of forms that determine the period in which it was mud or sand. Former Director Powell of the United States geological survey once tersely explained to a congressional committee the value of paleontology by saying that it is "the geologist's clock," by which he tells the time when rock beds were formed. The economic importance of paleontology has been repeatedly shown in this country. In the earliest exploitation of anthracite coal thousands of dollars were fruitlessly expended in New York in search of coal beds until the New York geologists showed that the beds in that state could contain no coal. The fossils in the rocks exploited are devonian, whereas the fossils of the Pennsylvania anthracite coal beds belong to the carboniferous, a much later period. This discovery at once stopped a useless expenditure of money.—Argonaut.

A Fatal Sleep.

Hugh Miller, the Scottish geologist and writer, was one of the most illustrious of sleepwalkers. Miller, who had been addicted to somnambulism in his youth, found his restlessness return while he was engaged upon his "Testimony of the Rocks." He used to wake in the morning feeling, as he said, as if he had been abroad in the night wind, dragged by some invisible power and ridden by witches. On the night of his death he slept alone. In the morning they found him stretched dead on the floor with a bullet through his breast. He had written a note to his wife: "My brain burns. I must have walked, and a fearful dream rises upon me. I cannot bear the horrible thought. My brain burns as the recollection grows." So intense had been the poor fellow's anguish that to make certain his end he had torn back shirt and vest and placed the muzzle of the pistol to his naked flesh.—St. James' Gazette.

Turks Picnic at Home.

"Simple life" picnicking in the house is thoroughly understood by the Turk. The real old-fashioned Turk indeed, as Sir Charles Eliot shows, reveals his inherited nomadic instincts by treating a house merely as a place to camp in. Rooms are not assigned to special purposes. "You sit in a room and write on your hand. When you are hungry you call. A little table is brought in, and you eat. When you want to go to bed a pile of rugs is laid in a corner, and you go to sleep on it." Then a scene at Yildiz—secretaries working in a red plush room furnished in European style. "Some were sitting curled up in armchairs, with their inkpots poised perilously on the arms, the idea of having a writing table never having come into their heads. Some were squatting on the floor, eating with their fingers off broad dishes placed on a low table. One was taking a siesta in the corner."—St. James' Gazette.

Disabused His Mind.

At a London theater the "her night, when a well known actress was weeping bitterly on the stage, a sensitive countryman burst into tears and wept audibly. "What are you making that row for?" asked a neighbor. "I'm thinking of that poor creature's distress," was the reply. "What? Don't you know she's paid £20 a week to do that?" "Eh? Twenty pounds a week! Do you mean to say her crying's not real?" "Of course not." "Then all I've got to say is she's a deceitful busy." And up he got and went out. "Twenty pounds a week," he was muttering as he moved into the street, "and to kick up all that row too."—London Globe.

Diseases They Have in Scotland.

Has Scotland still its own word for measles? Dean Ramsay relates that in 1775 Mrs. Betty Muirhead, who kept a boarding school for young ladies in the Trongate of Glasgow, asked a new pupil whether she had had smallpox. "Yes, mem," replied the girl. "I've had the sma'pox, the mirls, the blabs, the scay, the kinkhost and the fever, the branks and the worm." "Sma'pox" and even the vague "fever" might not worry an English reader, but it needs a glossary to interpret the others in order as measles, nettlerash, itch, whooping cough, mumps and toothache.—London Tatler.

Counterthrust.

"A very good retort!" said a senator in an argument. "A very good retort indeed! It reminds me of Weeks." "Weeks and his wife were quarreling." "The night you proposed," said Mrs. Weeks, with a hard, scornful laugh, "you acted like a fish out of water." "Weeks sighed." "But a very cleverly landed fish," he said, in a musing voice.—Washington Star.

The Explanation.

"Why is it that some young men get on so much faster in the world than others? It must be pure luck." "No. I rather think it is because while some are always ready to accept positions, others go out and look up jobs."—Exchange.

Homer Indeed.

"You talk as if your friend was a greater poet than Homer." "Homer! Well, say, if Percy had tackled that Homer stuff he'd have made it rime."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Things don't turn up in this world until somebody turns them up.—James A. Garfield.
