CARNEGIE REAL BAR TO BIG POOL

Schwab Says Ironmaster Feared the Trust.

GOT $100,000 ON A BLUFF

Declares Carnegie Company Was Not In a Position to Compete For Certain Trade and They Put Up a Good Front.

Andrew Carnegie stopped a proposed rail combination because he feared the formation of a "trust."

So testified Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, and first president of the United States Steel corporation, when he was questioned by Judge Jacob M. Dickinson, government counsel in the suit in New York to dissolve the United States Steel corporation.

Judge Dickinson read a minute of the Carnegie Steel company, of which the witness was president before it was absorbed, tending to show that the Carnegie company had entered a pool agreement with the Illinois company and the Cambria Steel company on rails in 1887.

"I have no recollection of that specific agreement," said the witness. "I think it likely, because we did have agreements of that kind. I cannot say that this specific agreement was consummated, but my recollection is that we did have such an agreement with the Illinois and Cambria companies."

The government attorney then read a minute which set forth that English rail manufacturers proposed to allot 100,000 tons of rails to the Carnegie company in England and Canada.

"You say you never heard of an international steel rail pool. What was that?" he asked.

"That didn't appeal to us," said Mr. Schwab. "It was not big enough. I never considered the proposition. Russia, Germany and France all made rails and would have to be dealt with in making such a pool."

"There were pools going on all the time, weren't there?"

"Yes, all the time."

"But when the United States Steel corporation was formed they stopped?"

"They started to stop." There was a laugh at this.

Another minute read by Judge Dickinson indicated that the Carnegie company had agreed to stay out of the girder rail market for one year for a consideration of $100,000.

"We stayed out chiefly because we were not in a condition to compete," said Mr. Schwab, "but we put up a good front and got the $100,000."

Judge Dickinson spent considerable time in reading to the witness minutes of meetings of the Carnegie Steel company and asking Mr. Schwab, who frequently attended, what they meant. One such minute referred to the plan to form the Empire Rail company. This company was to sell all the rail products, but the scheme was abandoned by direction of Andrew Carnegie, who declared it would be a trust and therefore open to attack. The presidents of the main companies had agreed to the plan to have the Empire sell their goods. All had assembled in Jersey City to sign the necessary papers, but when Carnegie withdrew the pool fell through.

Wins $416,253 For Finding Silver Mine

Charles D. Flynn, a mining engineer, won his suit in New York city against the King Edward Mining Syndicate to recover $416,253, on the ground that he discovered the company's silver mines in the Cobalt region in Canada, and under an agreement was entitled to 10 per cent of the company's profits.

Bank Official Stole Cigars.

Grant Stafford, vice president of the bank in Winfield, Kan., accounted one of the wealthiest men in Winfield, was convicted by a jury on five counts charging the theft of cigars from local dealers. Testimony was that Stafford on seven occasions took more cigars than he paid for. Sentence was deferred.

Grief Kills Boy Pitcher.

"Had I pitched my school would have won the pennant, but it's too late now; we've lost." Willie Lieser, fourteen years old, champion pitcher of the St. Paul, Minn., grade schools, sobbed these words, buried his face in the bed clothing and died of a broken heart.

Rushing Work on Canal.

It is said that unless slides interfere to a greater extent than is expected the great canal will be finished by Oct. 1. More laborers are to be brought from the West Indies and the work of completion is going forward under full steam.

HENRY M. FLAGLER.

Noted Capitalist Who Died at Palm Beach, Florida.

HENRY M. FLAGLER DIES IN FLORIDA

The Oil Magnate and Railroad Builder Succumbs.

Henry M. Flagler, builder of the over-sea railroad on the east coast of Florida and an important factor in the oil business, died at his home in West Palm Beach, Fla., after an illness of several weeks. He was eighty-three years old.

Several weeks ago the multi-millionaire tripped on a rug and fell, breaking his hip.

Mr. Flagler's second wife, who was Miss Mary Lily Kenan, daughter of a Confederate soldier, was with him when he died. Flags are at half-mast throughout the state as a tribute to the benefactor of Florida.

More than $50,000,000 was spent by Mr. Flagler in building the railway and developing hotel and other properties in Florida.

At the time of his second marriage, Aug. 24, 1901, the millionaire was seventy-one years old. Mr. Flagler's first wife had been incurably insane for years and was maintained in a New York sanitarium at a cost of about $25,000 a year. The Florida legislature passed a law making Mr. Flagler's divorce possible. His fortune is estimated at $100,000,000.

ROSES SIGN STRIKE ENDS

Flowers Dropped From Skyscrapers In Place of Missiles.

From the uppermost floors of a skyscraper in Cincinnati, Ohio, where on last Saturday strike sympathizers had bombarded a street car manned by imported men by tossing braces of steel, bags of cement and barrels of plaster upon it, the strikers and sympathizers took a unique way of announcing to the citizens that peace once more reigned.

Thousands of roses and carnations supplanted the steel and plaster and fell upon the heads of thousands of those who had gathered to see the display, as well as the hundreds of passersby.

It is even said that the very men who a few days ago were the hurlers of the agents of destruction worked for fifteen minutes scattering flowers from the dizzy heights. Street car traffic was resumed, pending arbitration.

John Mitchell to Take Place.

John Mitchell, former president of the United Mine Workers of America, has decided to accept a so-called recess appointment as state labor commissioner of New York.

Mitchell was nominated twice for this office by Governor Sulzer, but was rejected by the senate. The governor holds that he has the power to name Mitchell for a term to expire twenty days after the convening of the legislature next January.

With a view to reorganizing the labor department, Mitchell conferred with the governor.

Accused of Killing Wife and Daughter

James L. Bacon, member of the Colorado legislature from Teller county, was arrested in Cripple Creek on a warrant charging him with the murder of his wife, Ida Bacon, and his stepdaughter, Josephine Davidson. The women were killed in an explosion that wrecked the Bacon home on April 12.

ACCEPT LIPTON'S YACHT CHALLENGE

Races For America's Cup to Be Held Here Next Year.

NEWS GIVEN OUT IN LONDON

Rules So Long Objected to as to Measurements and Style of Craft Will Govern Contest.

The New York Yacht club cabled to the Royal Ulster Yacht club in London, Eng., definitely accepting Sir Thomas Lipton's challenge for the America's cup.

The races will take place in September, 1914, under the New York Yacht club's present rules as to measurement, time allowance and racing rules.

Sir Thomas considers that the conditions of acceptance of his challenge by the New York Yacht club are a great victory for him. He says they will enable him to build a good sea-worthy boat.

It is still a question whether Sir Thomas will be allowed to tow his yacht across the Atlantic. "It doesn't really matter much," he said, "whether I am allowed to tow or not. Anyway, I should not want to tow except in the case of a head wind or a dead calm."

Asked whether he thought the defender would meet him with a larger boat than the challenger, he replied: "That does not give me the least worry. They have always treated me in the most generous and sportsman-like spirit."

Charles E. Nicholson, the yacht designer, of Gosport, Eng., is already working on the plans of the boat.

The New York Yacht club's acceptance of the challenge says:

"The races are to be sailed as suggested in your cable under our present rules of measurement, time allowance and racing rules, it being understood that the rule requiring a yacht to rate at the highest limit of her class in certain cases, shall not apply to this match."

To Probe Wage Cuts Under New Tariff

Manufacturers of the United States had painted for them by Secretary of Commerce Redfield a word picture of what they might expect in cases where the federal government felt obliged to "walk into their offices" to inquire into wage cuts under the new tariff bill.

This was disclosed by Secretary Redfield before the National Association of Employing Lithographers, now in session in Washington. This association had warned congress that the lithographers would have to reduce wages if the Underwood bill became a law.

Secretary Redfield told the lithographers that he had spoken thus frankly because he had received from their association a circular referring to the reduction of duty on goods in which they were interested as producers. He warned them that statements based on averages would not be accepted as final. "We should want to know," he continued, "the best and the worst, for averages may be misleading."

Four Cornell Students Drown.

Four Cornell students, two men and two women, all members of the sophomore class, lost their lives in Cayuga lake, at Ithaca, N. Y., according to all the evidence, when a canoe upset somewhere between Willow Point and the Renwick pier.

The students were: Miss Mary C. Mollett, of Middletown, N. Y., a student in the college of arts and sciences; Miss Martha McCormick, of Troy, N. Y., a student in the college of law and editor of the Cornell Sun, and Reinhart C. Zimmer, of Rochester, a student in the college of mechanical engineering.

All four put out in a canoe from the C. B. Stanion cottage, at Willow Point, intending to paddle to Ithaca. Nothing has since been seen of any of them. The canoe was found upside down in the middle of the lake about eight miles north of the cottage. Near the canoe floated the paddles and not far away were the two cushions.

Banker Commits Suicide.

Isaac Hecht, forty-eight years old, president of the Havre de Grace, Md., Bank and Trust company, reputed to be one of the wealthiest men of that place, committed suicide by hanging. His body was found suspended from one of the rafters in the garage of the Havre de Grace Taxicab company.

Railroad Raises Wages.

An increase in wages of from 4 to 5 per cent has been granted by the Southern railway to several thousand employes of its shops.

MENOCAL GOES IN AS CUBAN PRESIDENT

New Head of Republic Was Educated in America.

With the inauguration Tuesday in Havana, Cuba, of General Mario G. Menocal as president, in succession to President Jose Miguel Gomez, and of Dr. Enrique Jose Varona as vice president, the Cuban republic entered on a new phase of its existence in a spirit of high hopes for the preservation of peace and the establishment of the prosperity of Cuba.

President Menocal on taking office contented himself with the declaration that he would devote all his energies to giving the country a clean business administration which will foster the industries of the island and develop its splendid resources, which will welcome foreign capital and immigration and maintain friendly relations with all nations, especially with the United States, to which Cuba is so closely linked by bonds of mutual affection and interest.

The new president of Cuba was educated in the United States at Cornell and speaks English as perfectly as the Spanish tongue of his native land.

Mine Blast Kills Fifteen.

Fifteen are dead as the result of an explosion of gas in the Imperial mine of the Gates Coal company at Belle Valley, near Zanesville, Ohio.

Superintendent Dudley and fourteen men had entered the mine to lay an extension of some tracks into the mine after the regular day's work was over. They were about one and a quarter miles from the entry when there was an explosion and the workmen were blown in all directions. Some bodies were found over 300 feet from the spot where they had been working.

Rescuers entered the mine and found Roy Yeager about 300 feet from the scene of the explosion. Yeager, who was alive, was unable to rise on account of a broken leg, and he probably owes his life to the broken leg. Lying on the floor, he did not inhale the fumes of the afterdamp.

The party carried him to a mine car and started toward the entrance. One of the rescuing party, Henry Fiarhourst, was overcome by afterdamp. He was placed in the car with Yeager, while the others in the party crawled on their hands and knees to the entrance, pushing the car ahead of them. Fairhurst died a short while later.

Yeggmen Blow Wilmington Safe.

Dynamiting the safe at the plant of the Union Macaroni company, in Wilmington, Del., "yeggs" made away with $3000 worth of loot in currency and jewelry.

The loot included $1000 in American money, $800 in Italian currency, $50 in Canadian cash and numerous checks for large amounts, together with jewelry valued at $1000, the property of Mrs. Raffaele Julian, wife of the president of the company, and of her daughters. The jewelry included ten gold watches, diamond earrings, diamond rings, necklaces, lockets and bracelets. The jewelry had been placed in the safe about a month ago.

The fact that the safe contained such a large amount is explained by the fact that Mr. Julian did not go to the bank on Saturday, and on Saturday night he received large sums from Italians for whom he had secured drafts to be sent to relatives in Italy. All of this was stolen.

The thieves were probably "yeggmen," judging from the nature of their work. On the office floor were found steel drills, a cold chisel, strips of fuse, percussion caps, a hand flash light and two extra batteries.

Parents Mlamed For Social Evil.

"Three hundred thousand babies a year is the sacrifice laid on the altar of parental ignorance," said Mrs. Frederick Schoff, of Philadelphia, president of the National Congress of Mothers and Parent Teacher Associations, in her opening address at the seventeenth annual meeting of the congress in Boston.

Proper education of mothers and fathers would save more than 60 per cent of this infant sacrifice, Mrs. Schoff estimated.

"At the root of the white slave traffic and the social evil," the speaker said, "is the absolute neglect of parents to educate their children in the laws governing life and the proper use of their God-given functions. The present condition is but the result one can properly expect from such neglect."

In referring to a need for change in the administration of justice in the cases of the wayward and erring children, Mrs. Schoff said:

"The sacrifice of infant life is nothing in comparison to the lives of children to a life of crime by mistaken methods of dealing with child offenders." She added that "inefficient homes are largely responsible for bringing children into the courts."

BISHOP DOANE.

Noted Episcopal Prelate Who Died In Albany.

80,000 LOADED CHICKENS DYING

Crops Were Stuffed With Sand to Make Weight.

Twenty carloads of live chickens, 4000 chickens to the car, were being held in Jersey City because angry jobbers in New York city had refused to receive them. Hardly a live chicken was handled by dealers.

The trouble arose over a recent complaint of jobbers that receivers were stuffing the chicken's crops with weight producing sand and gravel to make up for shrinkage sustained in transit. Until receivers agree to abandon the practice the dealers say they will boycott all live poultry. Ordinarily about 125,000 live fowls are handled daily.

Hundreds of chickens were dying in their crates and it was said the attention of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals had been called to the matter.

The situation is blamed by the wholesalers on the jobbers and by the jobbers on the western shippers of live poultry.

"The shippers are the guilty parties," said one of the leading receivers. "They send caretakers along with their stock with instructions to keep the birds hungry all the way to Jersey City. Most of the poultry comes from as far west as Missouri. The day the chickens are to be sent across the river to our market the caretakers feed them great quantities of bread and meal, mixed with sand and gravel."

"Each chicken gets about a quarter of a pound of additional weight stuck in its crop, and when you figure there are 4000 birds to a car you can easily see what a big proposition this feeding up process is."

FIND AGED HERMIT DEAD

Gold, Silver and Paper Money Found Stuffed In Craves of Hut.

When John C. Kratz, a hermit, d'd not appear at the bi-weekly service of the Mennonite church at Franconia Square, north of Norristown, Pa., on Sunday, a search was instituted and the aged man was found dead in his hut.

In his clothing was found a roll of bills. Besides this money other paper money, as well as silver and gold, were found tucked away in crannies and crevices, in all a couple of hundred dollars.

Emma Goldman Arrested.

Emma Goldman and her manager, Dr. Ben Reitman, were arrested in San Diego, Cal., and lodged in the county jail. They were taken from a Santa Fe train at 4 o'clock in the morning when they arrived from Los Angeles.

Held For Poisoning His Baby.

Accused of poisoning his five-week-old baby girl, while its mother was out of the room, Abraham Waldman, of Philadelphia, was held without bail for the coroner by Magistrate Gorman in the central station. The child died in Mount Sinai hospital.

Police Guard Jewels Rescued From Fire

Fire swept through the Park avenue mansion of Mrs. Charles T. Barney in New York, widow of the former president of the Knickerbocker Trust company, and licked up paintings and other art treasures valued at $75,000. Mrs. Barney escaped with part of her jewels—enough to call for a guard of four patrolmen as she stood outside in the street—and firemen recovered the others.

JOHNSON SIGNS ALIEN LAND BILL

Brings Negotiations With Japan to More Definite Basis.

REFERENDUM MAY DELAY

Reply of the United States to Protest Made by Japan Has Been Delivered.

Governor Johnson, of California, signed the Webb alien land bill in Sacramento, aimed to restrict the ownership of land by Japanese and other aliens not eligible to American citizenship.

The approval of the measure, against which the Japanese government has made vigorous protest and in an effort to sidetrack which Secretary of State Bryan traveled across the continent, will place on a more certain basis the negotiations between Japan and the federal government.

It is understood that President Wilson and his advisers, although informed of Governor Johnson's intention of signing the Webb measure, had intended to await the actual approval of the legislation before delivering the government's reply to the Japanese ambassador in Washington.

Governor Johnson had said he would wait a suitable length of time before signing the bill to give the president time to outline any further objection to the measure. As no communication from Washington was forthcoming, he gave his executive approval to the bill.

The next step, so far as California is concerned, probably will be the circulation of petitions for a referendum vote by the people on the act. If 20,000 signatures are obtained the petition will hold up the law till it has been passed upon at the polls a year from next November.

Unless held up by a referendum the act will go into effect ninety days from date, or on Aug. 17.

Governor Johnson, after signing the bill gave out the following statement:

"I repeat what I have before said: That California for the first time in its history has an anti-alien law. Any man who wishes another kind of law may consistently invoke the initiative. No man who really wishes an anti-alien law will sign a referendum as to this law."

"If another law is sought it may be presented by means of the initiative and in the meantime the present law will be in operation. To tie up the present law means no law until November, 1914."

Lad Nearly Drowns in Bucket.

John Talure, a boy of Germantown, near Centerville, Pa., fell headfirst into a bucket containing several inches of water.

His head stuck fast. His mother found him several minutes afterward. When released he had no pulse and was declared dead.

A young man who had received first aid instructions at the mines applied restorative methods and after working five minutes was rewarded by seeing the boy begin breathing. A physician finished the work of producing artificial respiration and the child was later pronounced out of danger.

Killed by Crossed Wires.

Paul Acken, a mine foreman, is dead, and Dr. C. B. Jones is dying in a hospital in Johnstown, Pa., as the result of an electric feed wire crossing a telephone line.

Acken went to the telephone to make a call and was instantly killed. Dr. Jones was called when Acken's body was found, and, unaware of the cause of death, went to the telephone to summon assistance.

The physician was knocked senseless, and, failing to regain consciousness, was taken to a hospital, where it is reported he cannot live.

Steel Workers May Get More Pay.

Ten thousand men employed for low wages in the sheet mills of the United States will receive a substantial advance in wages if the new scale submitted to the national convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Tin and Steel Workers, in session in Fort Wayne, Ind., is accepted.

JUVENILE COURT NEEDED IN FREDERICK COUNTY

Children Should Not be Put "Behind the Bars" With Hardened Criminals or With "Regulars."

Every county in Maryland should have a Juvenile Court. Only one—Allegany. Baltimore City has had such a court for a number of years, but it does not consider county cases.

Under the present law, children less than sixteen years old taken into custody for any reason may be put in jail. It matters not whether they be offenders or offended against, young thieves or neglected children without proper care or guardianship.

The Juvenile Court system aims to do away with the necessity for detention, but where, because of coming from a distance or other valid reason, the child must be held, it will be cared for in a suitable private home until the case is disposed of.

It is a cruel thing to put a child in jail. The stigma of having been "behind the bars" is hard to live down. Then there is always danger to the child in association with adult criminals, even the brief intercourse of the jailyard.

Every county has cases of youthful offenders and neglected minors to deal with, and, lacking a Juvenile Court, it must be left to the discretion of the individual magistrate how to handle cases where a boy or girl faces a charge that seems too serious to dismiss offhand.

In one county five boys robbed a bakeshop and had a feast. They were committed for court, the five of them bundled off to the county jail together.

The above list does not comprise all Maryland descendants from Charlemagne, but only includes those families about whom I have information. Not all branches of the families named are descendants from the Emperor of the West, but only those branches who have intermarried with families whose ancestors can be traced to a period three centuries prior to the Conquest.

This is a sample of the kind of case that comes up in the counties. These should not be jail cases. Children under 16 should be tried as children, not as adult criminals.

Gettysburg Wants Cooks, Bakers and Kitchen Helpers.

It has been announced that Gettysburg wants 500 cooks, 100 bakers and 400 kitchen helpers, for the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg, to be held from July 1 to 6.

It may be a mistake of the publisher in thinking he has been done a favor, but as a rule whenever a newspaper loses one subscriber on account of pique there are usually two or three others gained for the very reason that the one feels aggrieved.

The Farmer in Congress.

According to their own autobiographies there are in the Sixty-third Congress these men from the soil: born on a farm, 5 Senators, 30 Representatives; raised on a farm, 8 Senators, 12 Representatives; worked on a farm, 1 Senator, 8 Representatives; financially interested in farming, 7 Senators, 8 Representatives; totals, 21 Senators, 58 Representatives.

Letters To The Editor.

[The Editor would have it understood that he is not responsible for the views expressed in communications addressed to him and published in THE CHRONICLE.]

Baltimore, Md., May 16, 1913. To the Editor of The Weekly Chronicle, Emmitsburg, Maryland.

Dr. David Starr Jordan, in his recent publication entitled "Ideal Eugenics," asserts that only four Maryland families are of royal descent. It may interest your readers to scan the following list of names of Maryland families who are descended from Charlemagne:

Abbott, Appold, Archer, Armstrong, Boone, Brandt, Bond, Buckler, Brooke, Brown, Browne, Baldwin, Boorman, Beall, Brent, Beatty, Bowie, Belt, Berry, Bradford, Capron, Chambers, Coe, Clarke, Contee, Carroll, Carmichael, Carter, Claggett, Chesley, Chew, Cushing, Davis, Davidge, Denison, Darnall, Dawkins, Dent, Duke, Dorsey, Elliott, Ellicott, Eversfield, Edmondston, Estey, Fendall, Fenwick, Fitzhugh, Forwood, Gray, Gough, Gardner, Gant, Goldsborough, Grahame, Gunnell, Godwin, Goodwin, Gaither, Giles, Hopkins, Harrison, Hall, Howell, Howard, Hodgkin, Hill, Harper, Hanson, Heighe, Hollyday, Holland, Hollingsworth, Hamell, Hunter, Janney, Jenkins, Johnson, Jamison, Knight, Kent, Key, Kerr, Kell, Lee, Laurens, Lawson, Lloyd, Magruder, Marshall, Marriott, Mackubin, Milligan, Mackenzie, Mackall, Monmonier, Morgan, Myer, Morris, Mitchel, MacTavish, Marbury, Martin, Murray, Maynadier, Mason, Muliken, Moore, McCormick, Nelson, Neale, Norris, Owings, O'Donnell, Partridge, Poultney, Pleasants, Pennington, Preston, Rawlings, Ridgely, Riggs, Reynolds, Robertson, Richardson, Snowden, Stabler, Stinson, Schley, Semmes, Sollers, Spence, Smith, Sewall, Sim, Skinner, Steele, Stuart, Shipley, Sprigg, Thomas, Tasker, Tucker, Tyler, Taney, Turner, Taylor, Trippe, Williams, Wallace, Walton, Woodward, Warfield, Warden, Webster, Wilson, Willson, White, Wood, Wooten, Wyson, Yates, Yellott.

The above list does not comprise all Maryland descendants from Charlemagne, but only includes those families about whom I have information. Not all branches of the families named are descendants from the Emperor of the West, but only those branches who have intermarried with families whose ancestors can be traced to a period three centuries prior to the Conquest.

Mere Man on Votes For Women.

"Mere Man," in a communication to the New York Times cannot understand why women should want more homage than man has always paid her by his vote.

"Why our votes have always been for our women, and not only on behalf of, but distinctly for them," says the writer, "Have we not always voted them higher than ourselves; voted them the noblest, prettiest, and most charming women in the world? And what is more, have we not always worked for them, and when necessary fought for them, and more often made fools of ourselves for them—in their own estimation?"

Our mothers exercised a suzerainty over us in our boyhood, our sweethearts kept us on the jump in our youth, and our wives dictate to us in our maturity, and now they want something more."

ENGLISH MILITANT SUFFRAGISTS HAVE A LARGE FUND

Thousands of Pounds Safely Guarded From Police, are Available for Their Use.

Discussing the problem of the whereabouts of the Suffragettes' militant fund, the London Daily Mail points out that it is apparent from the fact that the work of the militants has continued after the recent police raid on the headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union that funds are still available. It is clear that the suffragists must have many thousands of pounds which they receive somewhere.

Votes for Women, the organ of the militants, announced in March, 1912, that the contributions to the "250,000 pound fund" had amounted to 117,019 pounds, ($585,095.) The balance sheet for 1912 shows a total income of 28,502 pounds. Apparently, the 117,079 pounds is considered as capital. Whether interest on it is included in the income is not known.

The balance sheet shows that an income of 500 pounds a week is necessary to maintain the propaganda at its fullest activity.

The Management of Lamps.

Some one has written a few directions for treating lamps, and it so accords with the experience of another that we present them herewith. To insure good light, the burners of petroleum lamps should be kept bright. If they are allowed to become dull, the light is uncertain, and owing to the absorption of heat by the darkened metal, smoke is the result.

Many Work Way Through College.

Statistics just compiled at Cornell University show that 1,069 students partly support themselves through college and that their earnings amount to $184,000 a year, or 32 per cent. of their expenses. Of this number of students, 124 earn more than their expenses for room and board.

The slate production of the United States is practically confined to the northeastern part of the country. Although scattered deposits, more or less developed, occur elsewhere, the eastern slate is shipped to supply markets on the western coast as well as in the central and southern parts of the country. Cancel Their Visits to the Vatican.

Half a hundred Catholic priests of New York and vicinity have altered their plans for the summer because of private advices received from Rome. They had prepared to go on pilgrimages partly to see Rome and partly to take part in the Constantine celebrations there.

The advices from Rome are to the effect that Pope Pius X, is little likely to be able to receive any pilgrims, much less to take any part in the Constantine services, and that visits to Rome this summer are not unlikely to be interrupted by the holding of a conclave. It is known that the three American Cardinals are making summer plans in such a way as to be in readiness to start for Rome on the shortest notice.

Congressman Lewis, of Western Maryland, says five years will end the express companies. The parcels post law will give them their quietus in that time. What a pity Congressman Lewis was not at Washington ten years earlier! Grandfather Clause Unconstitutional.

The Frederick County Circuit Court last Friday declared unconstitutional the "grandfather clause" qualification for voters. The court held that voters possessing the usual qualifications may not be debarred from voting because their ancestors did not vote prior to Jan. 1, 1869, a qualification in the law for Frederick elections since 1904.

T. R. TO HUNT IN ARIZONA.

Colonel's Libel Suit Against Michigan Editor Starts Monday.

Theodore Roosevelt announced in New York that he expects to spend his vacation this summer in Arizona. He will leave New York early in July, taking with him two of his sons, and will hunt four or five weeks in the southwest, most of the time in Arizona. The trip is to be purely a pleasure trip.

Colonel Roosevelt expects to leave New York on Saturday for Michigan. The purpose of the Michigan trip is to attend the trial of his libel suit against George Newett, publisher of the Spelling Iron Ore. The suit is scheduled to come before Judge R. C. Flannigan, of Marquette, Mich., on May 26.

It Happened in China.

An American commercial traveler who was in China soon after the downfall of the empire was approached one day by a Chinaman, who told him, in fairly good English, that he had a brick of pure silver, weighing thirty pounds, which had been looted from one of the government treasuries during a riot. The Chinaman explained that to only an American would he trust the secret and said that he would sell the silver for a sum which amounted to $5 in our money.

Not being one who would look such a gift horse in the mouth, the American promptly paid the $5 and took possession of the silver bar.

Soon after, being in Hongkong and wishing to test the value of his purchase, the American took the silver bar to a Chinese assayer and asked for its weight.

The pigtalled savant of the scales carefully tested the metal, weighed it and then remarked laconically, "He weigh lead." - Chicago Record-Herald.

A Queer View of Education.

Opposition to state education in the past was due largely to a belief that too much learning was not good for the masses. The worthy Hannah More even, who was one of the most earnest supporters of the movement for the establishment of schools for the poor in England, had very definite ideas as to how far the children should be educated. The curriculum, she declared, should comprise only reading the Bible and the catechism, and "such coarse works as may fit the children for servants," adding decisively, "I allow of no writing for the poor." - Chicago News.

Jeff Davis' Captor Tries Suicide.

With a gold medal, awarded to him by congress, clasped in his hands, Caspar Knobel, seventy years old, the last of the band of fourteen cavalrymen who captured Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, was found unconscious in his room in Philadelphia.

Gas was flowing from several jets. Knobel was rushed to the hospital, and after surgeons had worked over him they expressed the belief that he might recover.

Only last Saturday Knobel was the central figure in the celebration of the forty-eighth anniversary of the day he called upon the Confederate president to surrender. He was believed to have become despondent on account of lack of money.

She Raised All Her Fresh Vegetables.

"My wife raises all her fresh vegetables," remarked the professional funny man as he helped his guest to string beans and tiny young tops. As the apartment was on the top floor of a high building, the guest had visions of hotbeds and greenhouses on the roof. No window boxes producing fresh vegetables were in evidence, and the matter of fact guest was speculating as to the agricultural methods of the funny man's wife when the buzz of the dumbwaiter called her from the table.

"More fresh vegetables?" queried the funny man as she resumed her seat at the table.

"Yes," she responded wearily. "You see," she explained, "we're up so high that the market boy never sends the dumbwaiter high enough. It stops about two-thirds of the way. If I don't raise all we eat the people on the fifth floor'd get it, I'm afraid. That's the funny man's 'raising my own vegetables' joke, but it really isn't much of a joke, after all!" - New York Times.

The Child.

The most sacred thing in the commonwealth and to the commonwealth is the child, whether it be your child or the child of the dull faced mother of the novel. The child of the dull faced mother may, for all you know, be the most capable child in the state. At its worst it is capable of good citizenship and a useful life if its intelligence be quickened and trained. Several of the strongest personalities that were born in North Carolina were men whose very fathers were unknown. We have all known two such who held high places in church and state. President Elliot said a little while ago that the ablest man that he had known in many years' connection with Harvard university was the son of a brick mason. The child, whether it have poor parents or rich parents, is the most valuable undeveloped resource in the state. - Walter Hines Page.

The Sunflower.

"The sunflower," said a naturalist, "is the most deceitful of all plants, for it has fooled six nations. Six nations believe that the sunflower turns toward the sun, and so thoroughly are they deluded that they call it by a name which bears witness to their error. Thus the French call the sunflower tournesol; the Spanish call it girasol; the Italians call it girasole; the Hungarians call it naptaforgo. Each of these words means 'turn to the sun.' The English and Americans don't go quite that far in admitting themselves to be the plant's dupes. They only call it sunflower. They mean that that name, though, quite as much as the other names imply. The belief is general among six nations that the sunflower turns with the sun and always faces the luminary. As a matter of fact, there is only one flower that turns or keeps with the sun--namely, the sun spurge."

Ancient Mural Decorations.

It is probable that the earliest wall paintings were those of the Egyptians. Those people employed a distemper containing dissolved gum, and their principal pigments were white chalk, a vegetable yellow, ochers, Ethiopian cinnabar, blue powdered glass stained with copper and charcoal black. The walls of Assyrian and Babylonian dwellings were treated in much the same way, and the practice of painting on walls coated with plaster was certainly in vogue in Assyria. It has been believed that the Greeks understood true fresco work, apparently on the strength of a phrase occurring in Plutarch, "to paint on a wet ground." Vitruvius also speaks of a wet ground and says that colors placed upon a surface so prepared are permanent, which certainly is characteristic of true fresco work. - Harper's.

Caustic Whistler.

Most Whistler anecdotes are the inevitable caustic note. One day an English student was smoking a pipe when Whistler entered the academy. "You should be very careful," he observed. "You know you might get interested in your work and let your pipe go out." Then there was a Scotch student who succeeded in getting Whistler to examine his sketches. One of which was an old peasant woman, whose face was illuminated by a huge candle. He examined all the sketches carefully and then remarked: "How beautifully you've painted the candle! Good morning, gentlemen."

His Close Call.

"I had a narrow escape yesterday noon." "How's that?" "Four of us ate lunch together and each of us insisted on paying the check." "Well?" "For a minute or two it looked as though I had overdone the thing and the others were going to let me do it." - Detroit Free Press.

Foreign French.

"Learn to speak French. Then things won't cost so much in Paris." "Oh, you can't make 'em think you are a Frenchman." "No, but sometimes you can make 'em think you are a Russian or a Spaniard." - Washington Herald.

By the Card.

Gibbs--I say, old chap, what is meant by the expression "to speak by the card?" Dibbs--Oh, one does that when one explains, "The deuce!" - New York Telegram.

Only Safe Way.

Criggs--Can you keep a secret from your wife? - Briggs--Not unless I keep secret the fact that I have one. - Boston Transcript.

Iduna Gave Her Apples Away.

Daddy's Bedtime Story

Iduna and Her Wonderful Apple Tree.

THE apple tree had lost its blossoms, and in their places were the little round, green things that some day might be fruit.

Jack and Evelyn were wondering whether there would be many apples that year.

"Let's hope so, for apples are quite as good for boys and girls as any food I know, though perhaps they won't do so much for them as the stories say the apple tree did for the old Norse gods."

"Who were the Norse gods, daddy?" Evelyn asked.

"They were the gods of the people who long ago lived way up in northern Europe in the countries that are now Norway and Sweden and Denmark. These people had strange stories. One of them was about the apple tree."

"The story goes that there was one goddess by the name of Iduna. She had a beautiful garden, and in it grew a magic apple tree."

"The fruit on this tree was of the most wonderful kind. Whoever ate of it became young and beautiful. To stay young, though, one had to keep on eating the fruit. The gods and goddesses were all very nice indeed to Iduna, so that she would be their friend and never refuse her wonderful apples to them."

"But the dwarfs who lived in the dark, cheerless mountains on the other side of the beautiful land of the gods were always jealous of them. Iduna's father had been a dwarf, and perhaps it annoyed them that she should like to live in the lovely, sunny land of the gods and care more for them than for her relations, the ugly, ill tempered little dwarfs."

"So the dwarfs got Loki, one of themselves, to steal Iduna and her apple tree and hide them in a deep forest where the gods could not find them."

"After that everything went wrong with the gods and mankind, as well as with the dwarfs. The latter began to be sorry that they had meddled with the tree."

"When they no longer had the apples to eat the gods began to grow old and weak just as human folk did. They lost their interest in everything, and because they could no longer do their work well there was much trouble on earth and in the sky where the gods lived."

"Things went from bad to worse until at last Loki was sorry for having done so much mischief and took Iduna and the apple tree back to the land of the gods. Then you may be sure the gods begged for apples. Their friend Iduna gladly gave them, but it was a long time before all the harm which Loki's prank had caused could be forgotten."

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county.

CHARITY WITH AN EYE TO BUSINESS.

The dispensing of charitable gifts and the relief of suffering in certain quarters seems to be based on the old adage that "charity begins at home."

The investigations of a legislative committee of Illinois inquiring into the condition of a woman dependent on the charity of the city of Chicago, reveals a state of things which is most revolting.

babies. The children died; since their death, Mrs. Ustich had the care of her three surviving children thrown entirely on herself, as her husband was ill in a sanatorium.

Let us see whether we have overstated the facts. Here is the record of the case submitted to the Rev. E. J. Lloyd, a member of the executive committee of the United Charities.

At the end of the statement Rev. Mr. Lloyd says "this is one of the abuses we are trying to correct."

The Reverend gentleman's sermon that calls for the correction of "this abuse" is not as appealing as the lay sermon which is drawn from the act of the outcast who, finding a poor helpless woman prowling about the streets of the dark city in search of food and shelter, at once supplied the sufferer with both; and when next morning the nameless one, against whom all hands were turned, Samaritan-like, took the sufferer to the street and putting a five-dollar note into her hand, bade her go back home and lead a straight life, warning her not to get into the path which made herself an outcast, she preached by deeds a more effective sermon than that of the Reverend who promised to "correct abuses" without helping the swift hand of Justice to strike the merited blow.

HERE'S TO YOU, MR. CAPLES. The patrons of the W. M. (Worst Managed) R. R. are no doubt overjoyed that President Fitzgerald has appointed a general traffic manager for that road and that this important office will be filled on June 1st.

Welcome, Mr. Caples! Get on the job. Likewise welcome this: It is the desire of the management of the Western Maryland Railway Company that the traveling public be given correct information regarding delayed trains. When regular train service is interrupted, each employe named above should ascertain promptly the cause and probable extent of the interruption and courteously give this information to their patrons and passengers, refraining, however, from any expression as to responsibility.

The company has nothing to conceal in such matters, and it is the right of passengers on trains and waiting at stations to know what has caused the deviation from the schedules, and what service has been provided.

All of which is earnest of an intention on the part of this road to rid itself of the soubriquet "Worst Managed" and become the "Well Meaning" R. R. Prospect!

A SEA LYRIC.

There is no music that man has heard Like the voice of the minstrel Sea, Whose major and minor chords are fraught With infinite mystery,— For the Sea is a harp, and the winds of God Play over his rhythmic breast, And bear on the sweep of their mighty wings The song of a vast unrest.

There is no passion that man has sung, Like the love of the deep-souled sea, Whose tide responds to the Moon's soft light

With marvelous melody,— For the Sea is a harp, and the winds of God Play over his rhythmic breast And bear on the sweep of their mighty wings The song of a vast unrest.

There is no sorrow that man has known, Like the grief of the wordless Main, Whose Titan bosom forever throbs With an untranslated pain,— For the Sea is a harp, and the winds of God Play over his rhythmic breast, And bear on the sweep of their mighty wings The song of a vast unrest. —William Hamilton Hayne.

A Surprise For Joaquin Miller.

When London society after the publication of "Songs of the Sierras" began to lionize Joaquin Miller he was much puzzled at receiving three letters in quick succession from an admirer who signed himself "Dublin," without any initials. One of these contained an invitation to breakfast, which he accepted, and then discovered that his host was the archbishop of Dublin. After his return to America Miller wrote: "At Dublin's breakfast I met Robert Browning, Lady Augusta, a lot more ladies and a duke or two. After breakfast Dublin read poetry to me, with his five beautiful daughters grouped about him. When I went away he promised to send me his books. He did so. I put them in my trunk and did not open them till I got to America. Fancy my consternation as well as amazement and delight to find that Dublin was Trench, the author of 'Trench on Words' Ah, why didn't he sign his name Trench, for I knew that book almost by heart?"

Life Passion of an Artist.

"I do not believe in any real enjoyment outside of work, or interest belonging to it," G. F. Watts said. When he was young he used to forsake his bed, because sleeping in comfort robbed him of the first daylight hours, and he preferred to lie wrapped in rugs on the hard floor, so as to waken early and begin work. When he was old and frail—for he lived to be eighty-seven and painted to the end—the same spirit made him impatient of the dark winter mornings. "How I wish it was time to begin work again!" he would sigh.—Molra O'Neill in Blackwood's Magazine.

True Love's Trials.

"I'm afraid it will be some time before Tom and Belle make up again." "Oh, they are always quarrelling and forgiving each other." "I know, but the last time they had a spat Bella said, 'Leave me forever!' Tom was dunced enough to stay away two whole days, and that made her mad sure enough."—Birmingham Age Herald.

A Comparison.

"Nothing, it seems to me, looks as unimportant as a bridegroom at a wedding." "Have you ever noticed a governor when he was surrounded by the uniformed members of his staff?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Growing Brotherhood of the People of the United States.

The increasing readiness of the American people to respond to the call of moral and patriotic issues regardless of party lines and traditions is an inspiring thing to all who look for the secular salvation of the world through democratic institutions.

Carlyle has written eloquently of two armies that refused to fight on the command of their leaders because the soldiers recognized the fact that they were of the same blood and descended from the same stock.

So the voices of an awakened national consciousness inspired by common ideals of justice and humanity have been heard from camp to camp in America, and millions of men who, deceived by party names, have hitherto looked at each other as antagonists, are beginning to find that they have a common end in view, the restoration of free government and equal opportunity.

This is the explanation of the great movement that is thrilling the continent today and that has made possible an honest and serious consideration of issues that were before buried under party prejudice—woman suffrage, government regulation of the power of incorporated wealth, the control of laws and officials by direct vote of the people and what not of vital matters that only yesterday sounded so strangely and fearfully upon the American ear.

We have learned to listen to each other. That is the principal secret of the wonderful change that has come over us. That is why party lines have been broken down and the people are coming together to put the nation's affairs in order.

So in the long struggle to save the American republic from the corruptions and oppressions that have destroyed other attempts to make mankind free and equal, we are beginning to recognize our own music in whatever camp it is played; nay more, to recognize those whom we took to be enemies as friends and brothers working for a common cause and separated from us by party names and party cries that have ceased to mean anything.

And we are coming to see that we must make much of the things that unite us and make little of things that divide us.

After all, there can be no social unity without social justice, and it is that supreme thought that is bringing together in every part of the country the brave, intelligent and unselfish elements upon whom the present and the future of the best nation on earth depends.

Three-quarters of our troubles have been because we have turned deaf ears to each other. The rich have not listened to the poor; the poor have not listened to the rich; the east has ignored the voice of the west; the west has ignored the voice of the east. Patriotic multitudes in separate parties have been thinking the same things and seeking the same ends, but have been speaking in different languages. We have listened only with our ears. Now we listen with our minds. An through all the variations of details we are beginning to recognize the one dominant note in American thought—the desire for a return to the reign of the people and simpler ideals of justice and equal opportunity.—Daily News.

Need For a State Sanatorium Tubercular Colored People.

Maryland has a sanatorium for its tubercular white residents, but no place in which the tubercular colored may be cared for and restrained from spreading disease. It is high time the public awakened to the extent to which one colored family in which there are tuberculosis can infect a whole community, and followed up such awakening by demanding that it be safeguarded against this widespread danger.

In this State, and particularly in country districts, housekeepers are dependent upon colored help. Yet how few inquire into the home surroundings of the domestics who come to the backdoor asking for a place. On the contrary, they are put right to work, doing the cooking, the house cleaning, the washing and ironing, minding the baby and the other children, and coming into close daily contact with the whole family. No one takes the trouble to see what sort of homes these domestics come from in the morning and return to at night.

Not only colored women, but colored men, too, work about the place handling food products, driving the family carriage, tending the garden and the stock, doing a number of tasks, in fact that make it highly important for them to be healthy and their clothing free from germs. But do employers inquire what sort of places they stay in when they are not at work?

Here is a danger right in our very midst. The only solution is a sanatorium for the tubercular colored people, for their shelter and the protection of the community. The matter should be urged upon the next Legislature, but the public will have to rouse out of its present apathy and work for their own present and future protection of the tubercular colored with protection of the congested neighborhoods in which they now live, infecting those who leave these neighborhoods to labor among the white.—Catonsville Argus.

Inspired Patriotism.

The late Senator Hoar was once importuned to lend his influence in behalf of a chronic office seeker. It was not a difficult matter to gratify the applicant's ambition by securing for him a place as consul at a Guianian port, which was not considered a highly desirable office. The newly appointed official had served but a short time, however, when his wife, unable to withstand the malignant climate, sickened and died. Disheartened and discouraged, he resigned his post and returned home.

Some years later the senator was mildly surprised at being again approached by the ex-consul, who asked for reappointment to his old berth "Perhaps I can do something for you," said Mr. Hoar; "but, considering your tragic experience there, your request seems a little strange."

"I know," explained the aspirant, a trifle ruefully, "but, you see, senator, I'm married again."—Judge.

The Uses of Talc.

Talc, derived from soapstone found in various quarters of the world and in many states of our Union, is as a general thing marketed as rough from the mine. It is sawed into slabs, from which are manufactured various objects, or it is ground into powder. A great deal of the ground talc is employed in the manufacture of paper. It also enters into the making of molded rubber forms and foundry facings and paints, but the form in which it is most familiar is the toilet powder. Not only is talcum dusted into gloves and shoes to obviate friction, but it is also blown into conduits to ease the introduction of electric wires or other conductors. Soapstone is largely employed in the manufacture of laundry tubs and similar articles. The very best grades of talc free from flaws, are sawed up to make pencils or crayons. Gas tips are also made from talc.—Harper's.

An Artist's Slip.

Sir John Gilbert was once commissioned to illustrate a short story for a London weekly. When he had finished the work the editor remarked, "Why, Sir John, the story says an escort of infantry soldiers, and here on the block you have given us mounted ones." "Dear me, so I have," responded the artist, "but I haven't time to do another drawing now. Can't you make an alteration in the story to make it fit in?" The copy was handed to a subordinate to make the requisite alterations, but that gentleman forgot to edit the chapter describing how the soldiers had gained the summit of a steep mountain, parts of which they were obliged to scale with ladders. Horses could not have been got there unless by the assistance of a crane. Afterward shoals of letters from subscribers wished to know how the cavalry got there.

The Golfer's Wager.

A man who knows baseball, but never played golf, was talking to a professional golfer and remarked that the latter's pet game was at best only a piddling sort of affair. "Well," said the golfer, "I'll wager you that I can play around this eighteen hole course in fewer strokes than you can throw the ball, and you need not bother to put it in the cups, but throw as far as you can every time." Instantly the bet was made, and then the baseball enthusiast began to figure. The golfer could do the course in seventy-two strokes. To equal that the other would have to make seventy-two throws of an average length of 250 feet, the course being 6,000 yards. For an ordinary man this would be an impossible task.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Applause and the Stage.

In the Konzert-Taschenbuch is an article by Felix Weingartner on "Applause," in which the director says: "The relation between the public and the artist rests on what is rendered by both. The artist gives his strength, his knowledge and the fruit of his life's work. The public can give nothing but its recognition. As the individual has not opportunity to speak his approval, the logical way to show it is by applause." The writer says that he has never known a case where this form of satisfaction on the part of an audience has failed to please, all declarations on the part of modest stage folk to the contrary notwithstanding. Beethoven resented silence, and Wagner "loved applause."

Teeth of the Sperm Whale.

Instead of having plates of baleen the square nosed sperm whale carries a row of twenty-five heavy teeth on each side of the lower jaw. These fit into sockets in the roof of the mouth and assist in holding the enormous squid and cuttlefish on which the enormous animal feeds. The squid seldom gets away from the warm currents; hence the sperm usually remains in the tropics.

How to Look Young.

She—I sent a dollar to a young woman for a recipe to make me look young. He—What did you get? She—A card saying, "Always associate with women twenty years older than yourself."

Never.

She—We women are all misunderstood. He—Well, you never saw one who tried to make herself plain, did you?—Cincinnati Enquirer.

No, Indeed.

Silliness—Do you believe any man is rich enough to do absolutely as he pleases? Cynicus—Not if he's married. Philadelphia Record.

A coward never forgave. It is not his nature. French Proverb.

An Appalachian Door.

"Any one of tact and common sense can go as he pleases through the darkest corner of Appalachia without being molested," says a writer in Outing. Tact, however, implies the will and the insight to put yourself truly in the other man's place. Imagine yourself born, bred, circumstanced like him. It implies also the courtesy of doing as you would be done by if you were in that fellow's shoes—no arrogance, no condescension, but man to man on a footing of equal manliness.

And there are "manners" in the rudest community—customs and rules of conduct that it is well to learn before one goes far afield. For example, when you stop at a mountain cabin if no dogs sound an alarm do not walk up to the door and knock. You are expected to call out "Hello!" until some one comes out to inspect you.

None but the most intimate neighbors neglect this usage, and there is mighty good reason back of it in a land where the path to one's door may be a warpath.—New York Herald.

Lured to Destruction.

The inhabitants of the Scilly Islands in the old days looked upon the occurrence of a wreck as a blessing of providence, and stories are extant about thanks being offered for a wreck in various parts of the country.

Some of the stories told us by the islanders themselves, says Country Life, show that there was an almost diabolical cleverness in the way in which the storm tossed mariner was lured to destruction. For example, it was common to burn false lights, that were calculated to bring the ships on the rocks instead of warning them away, and worse, even than this was done.

There was at one time a gang of wreckers, who, when a storm was brewing, fastened a bright light to the horns of a cow and sent her to graze along the cliffs, to the bewilderment and deception of the sailors. Needless to say, this spirit has entirely changed now.

London's Destructive Atmosphere.

The smoke and soot that are always in the atmosphere (there are 6,000 tons of soot hanging over London every day) contain lots of sulphur, and this sulphur when it meets certain substances forms sulphuric acid or vitriol. It was the vitriol in the atmosphere that brought the great roof of Charing Cross station down with a crash a few years ago. The engine smoke had eaten away the iron, which was insufficiently painted. And some years ago, before the London underground was electrified, it was a great joke at one of the stations for passengers to go and poke umbrellas into a certain iron girder, which at one point was nearly as soft as putty. Paint is in such cases the engineer's great standby. In some ways paint is more powerful than iron. Many London buildings might be said to be practically held together by paint, particularly railway stations.—Pearson's Weekly.

Lang Willie's Retort.

A Scotch caddie is almost certain to be a shrewd observer of men and things, and he is frequently gifted with a sharp tongue of his own. Lang Willie was for many years a well known figure on the St. Andrews golf links. On the occasion of Louis Kossuth's visit to St. Andrews a public dinner was given in his honor, and Willie applied for a ticket to the ballie who was in charge of the arrangements. The worthy man curtly refused the application, saying to Willie that it was "no place for the likes of him to be at the dinner."

"No for the likes of me!" was Willie's indignant rejoinder. "I've been in the company of gentlemen from 11 to 4 o'clock most days for the last thirty year, and that's mair than you can say."

Blowing Out an Egg.

To blow out an egg make a small hole in each end, bore the holes with a large darning needle or hatpin, pressing steadily, but not too hard, and twisting the point round and round until a small hole has been punctured; then enlarge the hole slightly with the sharp point of your scissors, being careful not to crack the shell in doing so. Make the hole in the large end of the shell a trifle larger than the one in the small end. Hold the egg over a bowl, put the small end to your lips and blow steadily until all the egg has run out of the shell.

Hardly Ever.

"Other things being equal," she asked, "don't you think a girl has a better chance than a widow has to get married?" "Perhaps," he replied, "but a widow hardly ever gives a man a chance to consider other things equal."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Reason Why.

"You haven't many relatives, have you?" "Worlds of them." "I never meet any of them at your house." "No; they've all got more money than I have."—Judge.

Bound to Be Missed.

"Will anybody miss me when I'm gone?" "Plenty of people. There's the piano man with his dollar a week, the encyclopedia man with his dollar and the insurance agent with his 50 cents."—Kansas City Journal.

House of Quality.

People who in buying Groceries, make price and cheapness the standard instead of quality, will sooner or later, come to a realizing sense of the falseness of their economy. We stand for quality, first, last and all the time; and while doing so, we know that we can give you, intrinsically, better value for your money than the man who eternally talks cheapness. This is a House of Quality at moderate prices.

Billy Mudge's Surprise
By OSCAR COX

Billy Mudge was a strapping farmer's boy, ambitious of something more profitable than plowing, sitting all day on a reaper or tossing hay up into the second story of a barn with a pitchfork. Billy was trudging along through a wood one day when he came to a clearing. There was a small house on it, but no one appeared to be at home. Billy noticed the place before leaving the edge of the wood, and suddenly he saw something else that made him stop short. On the opposite side of the clearing a man emerged from the road and, taking position behind a tree standing alone, surveyed the house intently. Then he moved toward it stealthily, keeping his eye fixed on it, and on reaching it began to examine it for some place of entrance.

From a dream Billy had suddenly entered upon a reality. How much there might be in it for him he didn't consider. Apparently it was nothing more than an opportunity to prevent a thief from committing a depredation. Billy was unarmed and felt it necessary to proceed cautiously. The man he watched, after trying windows and doors, at last found an opening to the cellar, through which he disappeared.

Billy looked about him for a weapon and found a stout cudgel on the ground, which he picked up and clutched with a firm grasp. He had time to think while the man was in the house and realized that the robber doubtless had either a revolver or a knife, perhaps both, and to attack him would be to get worsted. He therefore decided not to enter the house, but wait till the fellow came out, follow him, steal up behind him and tell him with a blow from his club.

In a few minutes the front door was thrown open, and the thief emerged, carrying a long yarn stocking, full as after a visit from Santa Claus on Christmas eve. Billy knew the way that some country persons kept their money and recognized the stocking as the depository of the occupant of the house. He stooped and moved forward, expecting the robber to go the way he had come and intending to follow him. But just as the fellow was about to step down from the porch on to the ground there was a sound of breaking underbrush and a thud of horse's hoofs on turf, and a girl on horseback emerged from the wood into the clearing.

Billy paused and awaited developments. The man dropped the stocking, and the girl, pulling in her horse, rested the rein on his neck, covered her face with both hands and was shaking with convulsive sobbing. The robber, who had been caught in the act, hung his head. It was evidently not merely a case of a common thief being detected by a stranger, but a brother or a lover surprised by his sister or his sweetheart.

There were words—reproaches likely—which Billy could not hear. The girl, calling on the man to follow her, urged her horse on foot. They were out of sight when a posse of armed men broke into the clearing and, hearing the sounds of breaking bushes, ran after them.

Billy waited further developments; but, neither hearing nor seeing any more of the persons concerned, he emerged from his hiding, went to the house and picked up the stocking lying on the ground. He felt of it and concluded that it was full of bills and coins. Untying a string that held in the contents, he thrust in his hand and drew out a handful of loose pieces of paper and some small stones.

"Well, I'll be goldarned!" he exclaimed. Billy looked at the stocking, then at the house, then turned the stocking upside down and shook out the contents—bits of newspaper and stones—scratched his head and repeated: "I'll be goldarned!"

Going to the door, he tried to open it, but it had evidently been fastened, after the robber had gone out, by a spring lock. Billy tried to get into the house by the cellar door through which the robber had effected an entrance. This door, too, was locked, or, rather, bolted inside, for through a crack he could see the bolt shot.

Turning, he stood looking up at the house with his hands in his pockets, still wondering. "I wish," he said, "I'd known that stockin' didn't have no money in it, 'cause I could 'a' told the feller that, after all, he hadn't committed no burglary, and the gal wouldn't 'a' tuk on so. But what he was so keerkful fur about lookin' up after he'd tuk of thought he'd tuk all the funds in the house I'd like to know."

Hearing a titter, he looked to his right. There stood a man beside some sort of machine. A titter at his left drew his attention, and he saw the robber and the girl laughing at him.

"See here, you people," he exclaimed. "What does all this goldarned performance mean?" "It means," said the man with the machine, "that we've been making a moving picture play. I've got you in picking up the stocking and trying to get into the house, and it's the best part of the show."

Billy didn't say anything for a few moments while the true conditions were getting through his thick skull. Then the ire began to gather in his eye, and his eye was focused on the apparatus. Suddenly he gave a kick with his foot and lifted the machine in the air.

Seasick Fish.
Fish become ill and die from seasickness when carried long distances upon the ocean, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. For that reason many rare and interesting specimens captured in tropical countries cannot be brought alive to northern points for public inspection. In a recent shipment of 400 fish from Key West to New York more than 100 died on the way and the remainder arrived in a condition that required heroic treatment to save their lives. According to this it may be presumed that the agony endured by humans when the ship begins to pitch and roll is as nothing compared with the same sufferings of tank inclosed fish. As a precaution the fish are fed practically nothing for at least one day before being taken on board. The galvanized iron tanks in which the fish are carried contain from ten to fifty gallons of sea water kept at a constant temperature of about 60 degrees by steam from the ship's boilers during the trip.

Very Scientific Punishment.
Here is a charming description of corporal punishment as given in American schools and prisons. It is taken from one of the leading newspapers of Italy and will astonish some people here as much as it probably astonished the Italian readers: "The most incorrigible persons are led with eyes bandaged and hands shackled to a bath in which there is a little water. They are stripped and made to lie down in the bathtub. In the water is a wire leading from one pole of an electric battery. Another wire leading from the other pole is placed in contact with a sponge which is applied to the bare body of the prisoner. Each time it touches him he receives an electric shock that feels exactly as if he were being whipped."

"The punished youth, being unable to see whence the blows come, suffers all the more and is soon under subjection."—New York World.

A Legal Comedy.
The conservatism of the law as it is practiced in Philadelphia received an illustration recently in the loud summons by the clerk of the court to William Penn, Richard Penn and John Penn to appear in court in order that a certain title to land of which they were the original grantors could be cleared of an encumbrance.

No one suggested to his honor, the president judge of common pleas No. 4, that William Penn had been dead 200 years, and his sons Richard and John nearly as long. There was no need of such a suggestion. Every one within hearing of the clerk's voice knew that it was a vain show and an empty form that was proceeding before their eyes. Through the idle crying of the names of men two centuries dead the demands of the law were satisfied and a title was cleared.—Case and Comment.

When an Animal Chokes.
Few emergencies which arise on the farm are more easily dealt with than choking. In cases of this kind we have never known the white of an egg, when poured down the sufferer's throat to fail to give relief. To administer the egg quickly and surely it should be broken into a wide mouthed bottle. When such a bottle is not quickly available, however, any ordinary bottle can be used by using a funnel to get into it, and where a funnel is not at hand one can be made by rolling a piece of paper into the desired shape. When everything is ready the animal's head should be raised as high as possible, the bottle thrust far back in the throat and the contents emptied. The egg will immediately pass down and make the throat passage and the offending obstacle so smooth that it will pass on into the stomach.—Farm and Fireside.

KNOWLEDGE
Is a Better Guide Than Instinct When Buying ::

By HOLLAND.
KNOWLEDGE is more widespread today than ever before. Twenty-five years ago much buying was done by instinct—done in a haphazard way that is a thing of the past like the spinning wheel and the tall candle. Your grandmother trusted largely to luck—you depend on knowledge when it comes to spending money. What causes the difference? Advertising. Publicity has revolutionized business. It has increased business honesty, has advanced business ethics and has ended slipshod methods. To gain the advantage of these changed conditions you must have knowledge. You must know values. You can learn them only by studying advertising. In no other way can you learn what is best and what the best is worth.

CARELESS BUYING OFTEN MEANS DISAPPOINTMENT.
Equip yourself with the knowledge necessary for economical buying. If you have money to spend you owe this to yourself and to those for whom you buy.

PERSONALS.

It is the aim of THE CHRONICLE to publish as many personal and social items as possible, but it frequently happens that those who have guests visiting them, and those who entertain, fail to send a list of their friends, or an account of these events, to this office. Readers who live at a distance are always interested in what is going on 'at home,' and for that reason, if for no other, this column should be filled every week. It is of course understood that anonymous contributions will not be published. Names of persons furnishing items will be withheld.

Mr. John T. Gelwicks was in Baltimore this week.

Mr. George Ambrose, of New Market, England, is spending some time with his sister, Mrs. John Matthews.

Peace Day was celebrated at the local grammar school on Friday afternoon. Miss Mary J. Shuff, the teacher, in a brief discourse, told the scholars of the term "Peace," and also made some remarks, on the subject of what "Peace Day" meant and why it is celebrated. Then followed quotations, recitations and singing by the school.

As Mr. and Mrs. Warren Kugler and daughter were returning home Sunday afternoon after spending the day in town, the mule which they were driving frightened at two motorcycles and broke a wheel of the carriage. No one was hurt.

Miss Ruth Shuff was taken to the Frederick City Hospital on Saturday and operated on for appendicitis.

In a letter to the Chronicle Mr. Albert S. Gernand, of Thurmont, wishes to correct the statement that he killed twenty-one snakes this season.

At a meeting of the Burgess and Commissioners of Emmitsburg, Mr. Harry C. Harner was chosen by the board to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Q. G. Shoemaker. Mr. Harner who will serve a term of two years was also elected street commissioner.

Master Henry Troxell, while playing with a wire staple, used in making wire fence, was severely cut in the eye. He had driven the staple into post a short distance, when he happened to give it a blow on the side which caused it to fly backward, thus cutting his eye. The sight has not been totally destroyed, but the victim cannot see out of the injured eye. It is expected that the loss of sight in the left eye will result.

Mr. John J. Dukehart is making various improvements on his property on Frederick street.

Mrs. Edgar L. Annan gave a card party on Thursday.

Messrs. Quinn Topper and Vincent Florence made a trip to Thurmont, Graceham and Penmar on their bicycles.

The livery adjoining the Emmitt House is being remodeled.

Mrs. Louisa Constance brought to the CHRONICLE office this week a remarkably fine specimen of the South American Silk Moth, measuring six inches across the wing tips and very beautifully marked. Accompanying the moth, which has attracted a great deal of interested attention, was the cocoon from which it came. Mrs. Constance has raised many of these moths, as did her fathers before her, and is much interested in their culture.

The bowling alley at Matthew Bros. which has been under construction for sometime is now completed and in operation. Great interest seems to have been taken since its opening and already they have had many patrons.

HAGERSTOWN BREWERY NOW THE PROPERTY OF W. D. WILSON

The Purchaser, Well Known in Emmitsburg, Secures Valuable Plant for Eighty-Three Thousand Dollars.

Mr. W. D. Wilson, of Hagerstown, well-known in this community where he has many relatives, is now the owner of the Hagerstown Brewery. This valuable property was bought by Mr. Wilson last week at public auction after spirited bidding by prospective buyers from Pittsburgh, Reading, Latrobe and Hagerstown. The bidding started with $50,000 and finally reached $83,000 the price paid by the present owner.

Mr. Wilson has valuable experience and is one of the most sagacious business men in this section of the state. The names of the others to be associated will soon be known.

Mr. Wilson stated that he had bought the property for himself, but that it was his purpose to organize a new company of conservative business men and apply for a new charter. He also said that it was his purpose to have the plant thoroughly renovated and put into the best sanitary condition possible for the manufacture of first-class beer.

Continuing he said that the plant cost at least $250,000 and was one of the best equipped in the country, and that he would endeavor to conduct the business along proper lines in order to please the people and make a good product and a profit.

Among those whom the street says will be interested later on are: John Katzenmaier, a big brewer, of Altoona; Chas. E. Ochs, of Hagerstown; F. Abaticcio, of Pittsburgh.

The plant will employ about 28 hands at good wages.

Mr. Wilson, who was formerly an officer of the old company and at the only time in its history it made money, received many congratulations on his bargain.

The $83,000 received will cover the bonds and some of the debts but the stockholders have scored a loss, as well as had Mr. Herrman, the late president and majority stockholder.

Send to us for samples of anything you may need in silks, dress goods, trimming, etc., make your choice and goods will be sent to you free of delivery charges by parcel post. All the new things for spring and summer dresses. G. W. WEAVER & SON.

Father J. P. McDermott Dead.

Father J. P. McDermott formerly rector of the St. Andrew's Catholic Church, Waynesboro, died at the home of his mother in Danbury, Conn., Saturday night at eleven o'clock. He was aged 42 years.

The Rev. Fr. McDermott left Waynesboro about three years ago for the Steelton, Pa., church. Since that time he had been in declining health, having numerous severe attacks of heart trouble.

Father McDermott was educated at Niagara, N. Y., completing his studies at St. Charles Seminary, Overbrook, and from which place he was ordained.

Before his appointment at Waynesboro he was assistant rector at Conewago Seminary, near McSherrystown, Pa.

FOR COUNTY TREASURER.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for County Treasurer of Frederick County, subject to the decision of the Democratic voters of the Primary Election of 1913, and sincerely ask the support of every Democratic voter in trying to secure for me this nomination, promising that if successful in securing the position of County Treasurer, that I will not aspire to succeed myself for another term of office at the expiration of the same, believing in a one term of office, giving other men the opportunity to aspire for the office, if they so desire.

Very truly yours, ABRAM J. EICHELBERGER

FOR COUNTY TREASURER.

At the earnest solicitation of numerous friends throughout the county, I hereby announce myself as a candidate for County Treasurer of Frederick county subject to the decision of the coming Democratic primaries, and furthermore being very much opposed to two or more terms of office I promise if successful in securing this position I will not aspire to succeed myself for another term, thereby giving other men the opportunity to aspire for the office, if they so desire.

Hoping to have your favorable support at the Primaries. JONAS V. SUMMERS Frederick District No. 2.

FOR COUNTY TREASURER.

I hereby announce my candidacy for County Treasurer, subject to the Democratic Primary Election of 1913. Since taking charge of the office on July 1st, 1912 I have become personally acquainted with most of the taxpayers and gained an experience which should better qualify me to perform the duties of County Treasurer if I am renominated and elected. I have been giving the office my undivided personal attention and have tried to conduct it in a progressive businesslike way in the interest and for the accommodation of the people generally.

I shall appreciate the assistance of every voter and cheerfully abide by the decision of the voters as expressed in the primary election.

Respectfully, FREDERICK W. CRAMER.

SUFFRAGISTS AND ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS

The fundamental principle of our Republic is this: In deciding what is to be done, where everybody's interests are concerned, we take everybody's opinions and then decide according to the wish of the majority as expressed through the casting of votes.

In getting at the wish of the majority certain persons, whose opinions evidently are not worth counting, are passed over.

In Maryland these persons are idiots, lunatics, criminals (not pardoned) and women.

Maryland Suffragists believe women's opinions are worth counting and want to be promoted from a class made up of the offscourings of the earth to the dignity of citizenship.

Anti-Suffragists are not only willing to be ranked politically with the cursed and degraded, but publicly plead and petition against promotion. They do not want their own opinions counted and they are endeavoring to prevent other women's opinions from being counted.

FASHION HINT

By JUDIC CHOLLET

The low belted coat is a fashionable one for girls this summer, and it is most attractive. The illustration shows a coat of this kind that can be made either with or without a fancy collar and with a straight or cutaway peplum. It supplies all needs.

Wraps of this variety are made from ribbed silk and charmeuse satin, from serge, linen and pique. Black charmeuse satin would make a handsome coat with collar and cuffs of rose or blue satin.

For the twelve-year-old size the coat will require five and a half yards of material twenty-seven inches wide and one yard for collar and cuffs and two yards of platted ruffling.

This May Manton pattern is cut in sizes for girls from ten to fourteen years of age. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, 7875, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage. When ordering use coupon.

Unquestionably the two piece skirt is a pronounced favorite. The newest ones are gathered across the back in place of being dart fitted, and often the seams are left open for a few inches from the lower edge to provide freedom. The model illustrated is of this order, and the back may be dart fitted if the gathers are not liked. Linen, crash,

SIXTH ARTICLE — HOME
FRUIT GARDEN.

By L. C. CORBETT, Horticulturist, Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture.

THE possibilities in fruit culture upon restricted areas have been very generally overlooked, with the result that many persons who own a city lot, a suburban home or even a farm now look upon fruit as a luxury. This can all be changed, and much of the land which is now practically waste and entirely unremunerative can be made to produce fruits in sufficient quantity to give them a regular place upon the family bill of fare and at the same time add greatly to the attractiveness of the table and healthfulness of the diet.

In order to prove a source of constant pleasure and gratification a fruit plantation must claim the attention of its owner from early spring to late autumn. Its products, too, must be so planned as to cover the greatest possible portion of the seasons between frosts. For a commercial place on an extensive scale it would be out of the question to attempt to alter the character of the soil to suit the needs of the plant, but with a small area the case is quite different. If the soil is heavy it can be lightened with sand if it is not desirable to increase the proportion of humus which it contains. If it is lacking in organic matter the addition of leaf mold and well rotted manure or the turning under of some leguminous crop, such as cowpeas or

Canada field peas, will accomplish the desired result. If the soil is loose and sandy, losing its store of plant food readily, this fault can be remedied by the addition of retentive material, such as clay. The amount of clay to be added must be governed by the degree of stiffness desired in the soil. If, on the other hand, the class of plants to be generally grown is suited to a loose, sandy soil and it seems desirable to add to the collection a plant, such as plum, which naturally requires a heavy, retentive soil, it would undoubtedly be better to change the character of the plant by grafting it upon a stock adapted to sandy soil conditions than to attempt to modify the soil to suit the plant.

Such modifications in plants are not always easily accomplished, and with many plants there is no alternate but to use them on their own roots. In this latter case the soil itself must be made to conform to the demands of the plants. The soil, in addition to being heavy and retentive, may also be cold and wet.

If the soil be unduly moist the only safe and satisfactory remedy lies in thorough underdrainage. This can be accomplished in two ways. Drains may be dug and a stone conduit built to allow the superfluous water to escape, or, what is better, agricultural tile may be laid in the bottom of the trench. If the soil is very stiff and retentive the tiles should not be laid over two and a half or three feet deep and about one rod apart. If the soil is porous the drains may be placed farther apart and buried deeper.

At planting time all broken or decayed roots should be cut away, leaving only smooth cut surfaces and healthy wood to come in contact with the soil. A large part of the root area of the plant has been lost in transplanting the top should be cut back in proportion to the roots remaining.

The holes in which trees, vines or shrubs are to be set should be ample so that the roots of the plant may have full spread without bending them out of their natural course. The earth at the bottom of the holes should be loosened a spade depth below the line of excavation. The soil placed immediately in contact with the roots of the newly set plant should be rich top soil, free from soil or partially decayed or ganic matter. Firm the soil over the roots by trampling, as this brings the soil particles together and at the same time in close contact with the surface of the roots. A movement of soil water is thus set up and the food supply of the soil brought immediately to the use of the plant. When the operation of transplanting is complete the plant should stand one or two inches deeper than it stood in the nursery.

In the case of the apple and the pear the fruits are borne upon "spurs" of the previous year's growth only, these spurs appearing on wood one year or more of age. Heading in or shortening each shoot of the season's growth, therefore, must be done with care in order not to reduce the bearing wood beyond a profitable limit. The bearing shoots are usually obscurely located upon the sides of the branches.

With the peach, however, it is the wood of the last season's growth upon which the fruits are directly borne, and with them heading in may be successfully employed to limit the quantity of fruit borne by the tree. Japanese plums bear on both year-old wood and spurs. Pruning may therefore be used to thin the fruit, the same as in the case of the peach.

The grape bears its fruit on shoots of the season, which in turn usually arise from canes of the previous year's growth. Old wood on the grape is therefore of little value; hence the development of so many systems of training which maintain only a single permanent trunk, from the top of which the bearing canes are renewed each year.

By planting the vines closely and carrying up single trunks to a fixed height and from the top of the stalk carrying out horizontal arms along which "spurs" are maintained a short growth from each spur will be sufficient to give a uniform and sufficiently dense canopy of leaves for the arbor.

Raspberries and blackberries both bear their fruits on short shoots which arise from canes of the previous season's growth.

In the case of the currant and gooseberry the fruits are produced on both old and new wood. The fruits appear as axillary growths from the shoot itself, and wood three years or more of age is unprofitable and should be cut away.

Strawberries are rarely produced in profitable quantities by plants more than one year old. Plants over two years of age should be rooted out to give room for new ones.

The interest of a fruit garden may be greatly enhanced by growing therein plants not adapted naturally to the climatic region in which the garden is located. The most hardy sort should be selected, in addition to which the fruiting shoots may be wrapped in matting, covered with straw, and the fruits thus successfully protected, or, if it seems desirable, temporary sheds may be built over the plants and these thatched with straw or fodder sufficiently to protect them from frost. Then, again, semi-hardy sorts may be tipped over by cutting the roots on one side, bending the branches close to the soil, pinning them down and then covering the whole plant with matting and earth or a straw thatch and earth.

The fact that trees can be grown as dwarfs as well as standards will enable one to utilize a space which had previously been considered unsuited for the development of a tree. In proportion to size dwarf trees are more fruitful than standards, and they come into bearing sooner.

Dwarfing is accomplished by budding or grafting robust growers on slow growing stocks, and most tree fruits lend themselves to this treatment. Besides this method of modification, there are other methods quite as important to the owners of small areas. Standards may be grown as "bushes" or as "pyramids," thus making it possible to grow them much closer together. Pruning and training used in combination have shown the possibilities of restricting plants to the "espallier," "cordon" and other styles of training employed in growing fruits against walls. These methods, not only allow plants to be grown more closely than is common in orchard practice, but they allow the grower to take advantage of locations and conditions under which trees could not develop normally.

Besides the advantage of dwarfing, grafting may be turned to good account to enable the owner of few trees to increase his sorts beyond the limits of the trees he possesses. There are single trees known which bear as many as 150 varieties of apples.

In addition to the advantages to be gained from restricting the growth of plants by training and dwarfing, some of the methods of training offer adaptations which allow of combining plants of various habits of growth to the advantage of the grower and with little or no disadvantage to the plants. To illustrate this, currants may be combined with grapes, apples with currants or raspberries, grapes and strawberries.

The advantages of these methods become apparent at once when the object is the most economical utilization of a limited land area.

Besides the special adaptations afforded by dwarfed trees and by special combinations of low growing and bush growing plants, certain well known systems of pruning and training allow additional liberties to the skillful planter. The vine may be utilized as a cover for walks and drives or as a canopy over small outbuildings. A cozy summer veranda may be covered by grapevines, thus securing the double advantage of a cool, shady nook during summer and a supply of fruit in autumn.

Where there is more land at one's disposal there may be both a fruit garden and a vegetable garden.

For specific recommendations as to varieties of fruits adapted to the various fruit sections of the United States see farmers' bulletin No. 208, "Varieties of Fruits Recommended For Planting."
