SMITH PLAYED SKILLFULLY

KEPT MUM AND WAITED

President Sends for Him For Conferences

HAS BEEN LOYAL TO HIS PARTY

He Declares That He Has Tried to Serve His Party and His Country in the Senate as Faithfully and as Well as He Could.

Democrats, and many who are not Democrats, who have been watching the game acknowledge that Senator John Walter Smith has played very skillful politics all through the Marbury campaign and upon close examination of every move he has made they have found that Senator Smith has been right with his party on every question and in every move.

Senator Smith's friends, says the Sun, feel that since Mr. Marbury is out of it the opposition to him will be unable to centre behind any one man and that no formidable fight can be made against him. They realize that the city machine people are not overly friendly to him, but say that part of the organization would be with him anyway, even if certain of the leaders got behind some one else.

Anent Mr. Marbury's retirement from the field Senator Smith stated:

"I do not know whether there will come forward some other candidate to take Mr. Marbury's place in the field against me or not. I hope not, but if one does, why, I will just have to give him the best fight I can. When this fight started months ago I told my friends that if I was beaten for re-election I was certainly going to be on hand to see how it was done, and I still feel that way.

"I have been fighting political battles all my life. I have had to fight and fight hard for everything I ever got, and I had rather hoped that this time I would be allowed to get something without fighting for it. In fact, I felt I was entitled to it. I have tried to serve my party and my country in the Senate as faithfully and as well as I could. There are probably plenty of men who could fill the office more brilliantly and who are gifted with greater oratorical powers and ability than I, but I do not think any of them can serve his State more earnestly, his party more loyally or his people more willingly than myself.

"I have felt for some time that Mr. Marbury's candidacy had not met with that response from the people that his friends had expected. I believe the people are with me in this campaign, and I want to keep them with me. I have no idea whether anyone else will enter the field or not, but regardless of whether there is any one in it or not I intend to proceed with my campaign along the lines I have been conducting it. If I have an opponent I shall treat him with the respect due to him. If I do not have one I shall be very glad of it."

Over in the Senate, where he is constantly on the job and rarely misses a roll call, there is no Democratic Senator who more regularly supports Wilson policies and Democratic pledges than Senator Smith. The President seems to realize this and as a consequence is conferring with him on all matters having reference to Maryland, as well as consulting him on other important questions.

President Wilson Knows the Game.

The visit of the United States Supreme Court to the White House, Monday, recalls an incident that occurred during Mr. Taft's administration:

Mr. Taft, when he received the grave justices, was uncertain as to whether the etiquette of the visit required him to give the signal for the departure, or to await it from the members of the court.

Conversation dwindled in this uncertainty and soon the assemblage was in a state where mentally they were twiddling their thumbs. An attendant whispered something in Mr. Taft's ear, and with a happy smile he arose and stretched out his hand to the Chief Justice.

President Wilson was posted and after chatting for a brief period gave the signal for their departure by rising.

ANOTHER NONAGENARIAN IN THIS COMMUNITY

When Called Upon by Her Friends to Congratulate Her, Mrs. Neck Was Interestingly Reminiscent.

Yesterday was the ninety-first birthday anniversary of Mrs. Dorothy Neck, of this place. Those who called upon her to extend their congratulations found her just as young in spirit as she was many years ago when she came to this country from Germany.

It was in 1847 that Mrs. Neck, then Dorothy Bats, sailed for America in a ship which encountered many a storm and was eight weeks in crossing the ocean. When the vessel reached the port of Baltimore, all the provisions were gone and the passengers nearly starved. In those days, by the way, the cost of passage on a sailing vessel was one hundred dollars.

Mrs. Neck was quite reminiscent yesterday and referred to many of the customs that obtained in her younger days. She alluded to the fact that in Germany all children were required to attend school from their eighth to their twelfth year and Sunday school from their twelfth to their eighteenth year. Wages in the old country were very meagre, the old lady said, ten cents being the compensation for a day's work, except in harvest time when the more liberal sum of fifteen cents was paid.

The fashions in Germany were very pretty when she was a girl, Mrs. Neck declared. The sleeves were long but rolled up above the elbow, fold upon fold, giving a very pretty effect to the arm. With waists full and skirts pleated and a cap made almost entirely of ribbon, the German girl was a very comely miss.

Mrs. Neck alluded to the fact that most of the games indulged in by the young were played with cards.

Before she left Germany Mrs. Neck became engaged to the late John Neck, but as every man in the fatherland must serve six years in the army of the King. It was not until the expiration of that period that they were married. This event was celebrated in Baltimore, the service being performed by Father Rorlando in St. Alphonsus' church. At that time the young bride could not speak a word of English. Mr. and Mrs. Neck lived in Baltimore for six years prior to coming to Emmitsburg in 1853. At this time there was no railroad between the two places and the journey was made in an omnibus.

One little incident of the Civil War made a vivid and lasting impression on Mrs. Neck's mind. It referred to the time of the Battle of Gettysburg. Mrs. Neck baked many a loaf of bread for the hungry soldiers, and so eager were they for it that it was almost impossible to prevent them from taking the dough out of the oven before it was baked.

When asked to what she attributed her health and long life, Mrs. Neck gave this formula: good plain food, plenty of exercise and no unnecessary dissipation. Four of Mrs. Neck's children entered religious communities, two as sisters and two as priests. One of the latter, Rev. James Neck of the Immaculate Conception Church, Baltimore is a frequent visitor to Emmitsburg, where he has many friends.

BIGGEST IN THE WORLD TO BE DEDICATED TO-MORROW

Monument Costing $1,500,000 on Battlefield of Leipsic Commemorates Defeat of Napoleon by Allied Armies.

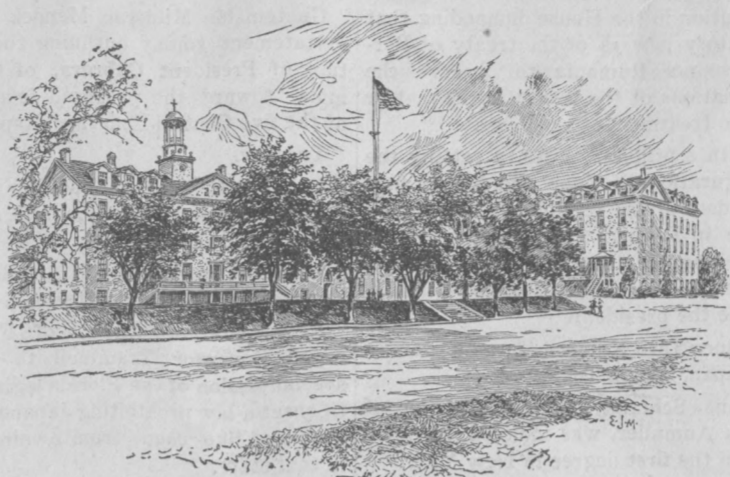

A monument which is to commemorate the centenary of Napoleon's defeat by the allied armies of Prussia, Russia, Austria and Sweden, will be dedicated tomorrow on the battlefield of Leipsic, in the presence of the Kaiser and other German rulers.

This monument which cost one million five hundred thousand dollars to build is the biggest monument in the world. It is two hundred feet broad at the base and is forty feet higher than the statue of the Goddess of Liberty in New York Harbor.

The unveiling of the monument will be the climax of the round of centenary festivities held in the Fatherland throughout the year. One unique feature will be a great Marathon race in which 38,000 athletes will participate. They will carry messages from a dozen different points in and outside of Germany bearing patriotic messages to the Kaiser and his fellow-sovereigns. The runners will cover a total distance of over 4,000 miles. Messages from Germans in the United States and Brazil will be carried from Bremerhaven to Leipsic.

MOUNT SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

Terrace Talk

The sophomore class in Mathematics was so large that a division of the class was found necessary. This is one of the largest classes in the House.

Among the clergy who visited at the College this week are: Rev. Charles A. Murray, Minnook, Pa., Rev. Patrick F. Cayley, Towanda, Pa., and Rev. Emmet B. Kennedy, of Bayou la Batre, La.

The popularity among certain Seniors of the song, "There's a Girl in the Heart of Maryland," has been explained by Mr. Joseph McGee, '14. This gentleman says "It's the 'local coloring.'"

John J. Walsh, '15, familiarly known as "Fats," returned to the Mount on Saturday. Rumor had it that "Fats" did not intend to come back. He received a hearty welcome when he appeared on the campus, and swelled the number of the Junior class which is close to forty.

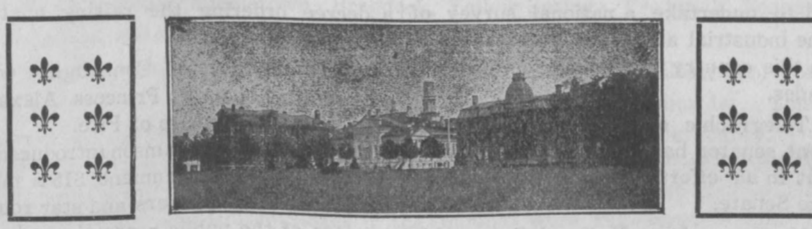

The supporters of the Champion Athletics, especially the Philadelphia contingent, are loud in their expressions of joy because of the victory over the Giants. However, the New Yorkers remain true to their colors, and although they hand it to the Mack men, they have strong confidence in McGraw's hired help, especially "Big Six," and contend that the Giants will be back again next year when victory surely will be theirs.

Great preparations are being made for the entertainment of the "old boys" at the annual Alumni reunion and banquet at the College on November 5th next. No efforts are being spared by the Senior class to give the returning sons a royal celebration. The tentative program of events is as follows: Wednesday, Nov. 5th, A. M.,

Track Meet, Minim Department. 2 P. M. Alumni Banquet. 4 P. M. Football Game, Gettysburg vs. Mount St. Mary's. 7.30 P. M. Senior Class Play. Thursday morning, Nov. 6., Track meet for Collegiate Classes and Preparatory Department. A large number of entries have already been received and great enthusiasm is being shown among the classes. A handsome silver loving cup has been presented by A. G. Spalding & Sons which will be awarded to the highest point man in the class scoring the greatest number of points. There will be eight events, as follows: 100-yard dash, 220 yard, 440 yard, running high jump, running broad, shot put, half mile and class relay.

The football team has had a strenuous week of practice. Long scrimmages have been held daily and there is a marked improvement in the showing of the candidates. Some of the scrub men who made such a creditable showing in the Waynesboro High game last week have been shifted to the 'Varsity and there is a battle royal for berths on the eleven. Coach Day has laid special emphasis on accurate forward passing as he found that the men have been weak in this department all season. In scrimmage work this week the linemen have shown much better form than in previous games and it will require a strong set of backfield men to plow through these warriors. The backfield men have been drilled in body blocking also in diagnosing the opponents' forward passes. Frequent fumbling which marred the game at Annapolis has been remedied and during the past week but few fumbles have been made by either side. All the first string men are in splendid condition, with the exception of Sheridan, the star halfback who is bothered with a sprained wrist. He will undoubtedly be in shape for the game with Catholic University on Saturday. The followers of the Mountain team are looking forward to a victory over the Washingtonians to-morrow.

Many interior and exterior views have been taken during the past week for a proposed souvenir booklet.

The pupils were taken in groups on the lawn and they make charming pictures in the beautiful setting of the autumn foliage.

Special preparations and practice for the October concert and tableaux, "Bernadette" filled every spare moment recently.

A Leitz microscope and other apparatus have been added to the Laboratory equipment and Prof. Rauth makes the work interesting and a pleasure.

Congressman Clayton will remain in the House.

SECOND SISTER TO ENTER ORDER WITHIN A YEAR

Miss Ellen Randolph Henry-Ruffin Becomes Sister of Charity a Few Months After Her Sister.

Miss Ellen Randolph Ruffin, daughter of Mrs. M. E. Henry-Ruffin, of Mobile, the well-known Southern writer, was recently received in the Order of the Sisters of Charity, at the Mother House, Emmitsburg, following closely upon the example of her sister, Miss Mary Henry-Ruffin, who last summer became a Sister of Charity. Miss Mary Henry-Ruffin is now Sister Mary, and is teaching at St. Aloysius' School, Littlestown, Pa. Miss Ellen Randolph, now known as Sister Rita, has been assigned to duty at St. John's School, Baltimore.

In their home city of Mobile these young ladies were very popular socially, and while many friends congratulate them upon their noble choice, great regret is felt at their departure. Nellie Ruffin, as she was known among her friends, was only a few months out of college, having graduated with the degree of bachelor of arts in June, 1912. Returning home, she was expected to take her place in society. She had been already entered as a daughter of the American Revolution, having been before going to college a charter member and officer of the Virginia Dare Children of the American Revolution, and also a charter member and secretary of the Mobile Bay Children of the Confederacy. Five months after graduation she returned to enter the novitiate at Emmitsburg.

INTERESTING MEETING OF SUFFRAGE LEAGUE

Mrs. Annan Entertains Prominent Speakers from Baltimore and Washington.—Various Features Discussed.

Last Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Edgar L. Annan, president of the local Suffrage League, there was a large suffrage meeting of exceptional interest. Mrs. Annan presided and introduced the prominent speakers of the evening, among whom were Mrs. William J. Brown, of Baltimore, president of the State Equal Franchise League; Miss Ida Neepier, secretary of the Equal Suffrage League and Miss Elsie Hill, of Washington, daughter of Representative Hill of Connecticut.

Miss Hill, who is president of the College Suffrage League of the District of Columbia, spoke at length of the suffrage movement, with particular reference to the growth of the woman's rights feature.

The temperance movement in connection with woman's suffrage was outlined by Mrs. Brown, and Miss Neepier had for her subject the need of the ballot for the home-maker—woman. Rev. L. B. Hensley, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of this place, took the opposite side of the question, arguing that the ballot, if given to woman, would destroy her influence, not only in the home, but in political life.

General discussion was indulged in after the formal speaking, closing with some interesting musical features. In the future this association, which was organized several years ago by Mrs. William M. Ellicott, president of the Equal Suffrage League of Maryland, will hold regular meetings on the first Friday of every month.

Fraud by "Tapping" Wireless.

Nearly everyone is familiar with the methods whereby telegraph wires are tapped, but perhaps few realize the possibility of performing a similar trick with the wireless system.

The recent stock exchange frauds carried on in Paris by means of machinations over the telephone are causing German wireless experts to discuss how far similar deceptions may be available by means of wireless telegraphy.

Count Arco, one of the inventors of the German Telefunken system, admits that it is technically possible to intercept and tamper with wireless messages, and that ingenious swindlers could conceivably imitate or outdo the Paris telephone girls who helped a gang of Bourse crooks to execute a number of shady transactions.

Teach Children Self-Protection.

Realizing that a large proportion of the accidents which occur are directly traceable to a lack of attention to the ordinary precautions which all those who use the public streets and roadways should take for their own protection, the Automobile Club of Maryland has started a campaign to educate children how to take care of themselves amid traffic. In its endeavor the club has asked the co-operation of the city and county school authorities and to every district a copy of resolutions adopted by the club has been forwarded.

MARBURY NOT A CANDIDATE

DROPS FROM THE RACE

Cannot Afford Expense of Long Campaign

HIS DECISION NOT UNEXPECTED

Pledges Himself to Aid the Democratic Ticket in Maryland.—Smith Makes Comments—Glad if None Other Enters the Campaign.

"I have decided to withdraw from the contest for the Democratic nomination for the office of United States Senator."

This is William L. Marbury's formal and not unexpected statement.

It is understood, according to the Baltimore Sun, that Mr. Marbury had made his mind up to withdraw before he went to Europe and a few days after his return two weeks ago sent to President Wilson, whose sympathy he was known to have in his candidacy, a letter laying before the President the reasons why he desired to do so. It is known that Mr. Marbury would have remained in the fight had he felt that by so doing he would have been aiding the President or promoting the Progressive Democratic movement in the State. It is believed President Wilson is in accord with Mr. Marbury's decision, and that while he would still like to see him in the Senate he feels that it is not necessary for him to make the sacrifices involved in the fight.

"The first, and I am bound to confess, the controlling interest to me," said Mr. Marbury, "is that I cannot afford to carry on the kind of campaign which would have to be carried on in order to be successful for so long a period as a year and a half."

"I have always felt a great deal of uncertainty as to how far, in case I were elected to the United States Senate, I would be compelled to abandon the practice of my profession. I could not possibly abandon it altogether, and it has been a source of serious anxiety to me. For that reason my withdrawal involves no personal sacrifice whatever.

"I want to say further that my ceasing to be a candidate for office does not mean the least diminution of my interest in the question of who shall govern and who shall represent this State. I shall render all the aid in my power to the Democratic ticket."

Commenting on Mr. Marbury's withdrawal Honorable Senator John Walter Smith said:

"I did not know that Mr. Marbury intended to retire, but I cannot say that I am very much surprised, although I had no intimation from any source that he would do so. I cannot say, either, that I regret his retirement, as I am a candidate for re-election, and naturally want as little opposition as possible. While Mr. Marbury was my opponent, I had no harsh thing to say of him. He is a gentleman of good character and fine ideals, although he has never been a regular Democrat. I think his candidacy against me and his fight against me was made upon a misapprehension of my record and purposes and a misunderstanding of myself.

"I do not think had Mr. Marbury been in the Senate in my place during the last eight months he could have given the policies of this Administration or the platform pledges of the Democratic party any stronger or more consistent support than myself. Nor could he have been more constantly in his seat."

Speaker Clark Will Not Spout.

Speaker Champ Clark has very positive ideas as to the duties of government officials and comes out openly on the subject. Mr. Clark was invited to lecture in San Francisco and the reason he will not be heard there is couched in these words: "It is not right, as I see it, for a man to take the government's money for discharging the duties of an office and then neglect the duties of that office. Twice the Democrats of the House have bestowed upon me the highest honor in their gift, and I don't propose to neglect the duties of that office to go on the lecture platform and lecture for money. It does not seem fair to them or to the country. It's very hard to keep a quorum here, and I cannot expect to have other members stay here unless I set them the good example of staying here and attending to business myself."

PLATFORM OF PRINCIPLES.

The Progressive Party of Frederick County has adopted a platform of principles and submits the following brief extract for the careful consideration of the voters of the County, before casting their ballots on Tuesday, November 4th, 1913.

The purpose of the Progressive Party is to elevate the standard of political ideals and to establish the rule of the people.

The party pledges itself to use its utmost endeavors to eliminate the boss system, and all the evils that fall in its wake.

We believe in the initiative and referendum and recall and the achievement of reform. We believe the people should rule themselves.

We believe in nominating efficient men for state and county offices, and who shall give their whole time and personal attention to the duties of said offices.

We favor a reduction of the number of County Commissioners from five to three at a stipulated salary large enough to secure men of first-class ability.

We declare for the Road Engineer Bill as passed by the Legislature of 1912 and vetoed by the Governor. This modern system of road building has been in operation in Caroline County since 1905 and is acknowledged to be the best in the state.

We favor a law abolishing the board of Charities and corrections and transferring their duties to the Board of County Commissioners, who are directly responsible to the people.

We pledge ourselves to a just and equitable assessment and taxation of county property.

We declare for an unpaid commission of Auditors for County finances, with authority to employ an expert accountant and render annually a complete itemized statement of County finances to be published in pamphlet form, for free distribution.

We believe in home rule in County Legislation as proposed by the Maltbie Bill in the last Legislature.

We pledge ourselves to a business administration in County affairs.

Unhampered by tradition, uncorrupted by power, undismayed by the magnitude of the task, the new party offers itself as the instrument of the people, to sweep away old abuses, to build a new and nobler commonwealth. And in support of these reforms, we appeal to all Progressive Citizens of Frederick County, without regard to their past political affiliations.

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING HERE

Lee, Magruder and all the County Candidates on Whirlwind Tour

PLEASED WITH RECEPTION IN EMMITSBURG.

FOR U. S. SENATOR, BLAIR LEE OF MONTGOMERY COUNTY.

At 6 20 P. M., precisely, the hour set for the arrival of the Democratic whirlwind-tour party, four motor cars filled with candidates and newspaper reporters drew up at the Spangler Hotel.

The party was met by reception committee composed of: Dr. J. McC. Foreman, Chairman; Sterling Galt, Joseph C. Rosensteel, Enoch L. Frizell, Francis S. Kreitz, Dr. E. I. Jamison, Daniel F. Roddy, James McGreevy, J. Rowe Ohler, Mahlon Stonesifer, John L. Zacharias and George J. Althoff, and a once sat down to a fried chicken supper to which all did full justice.

In the party that left Frederick at 10.10 A. M. were: Blair Lee, candidate for the United States Senate; Caleb C. Magruder, candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals; Markell H. Nelson, George H. Bussard, McGill Belt, Eugene Wachter and Christian Smith, candidates for the House of Delegates; John W. Humm, Thomas G. Mohler and Frank M. Stevens, candidates for county commissioners; John D. Conard, candidate for Sheriff; Frederick W. Cramer, candidate for County Treasurer; George M. Hett, candidate for county surveyor; Colonel E. Austin Baughman and Edward J. Smith, treasurer of the County Central Committee.

The Emmitt Cornet Band gave a concert on the hotel porch, much to the delight of the large crowd that had assembled, and the candidates lost no time in mingling with the people, and they met with a warm reception wherever they went.

Speaking was not contemplated on this trip and no arrangement had been made for a formal meeting. However, so insistent did the crowd become that Senator Lee was led to the hotel porch and introduced to a large assemblage by Prof. Ernest Lagarde, of Mount St. Mary's College, who praised his Democracy and individual worth and invited all to meet him after the speeches. Senator Lee argued strongly for support of the entire Democratic ticket. The Democratic party, he said, is the one party which is proving itself capable of constructive government and of protecting the masses against the trusts and special interests.

After spending the night here the party left in the morning at 8 o'clock and will continue the tour through the county. They will go to Sabillasville, Foxville, Myersville, Middletown, Braddock, Yellow Springs, Frederick, Feagaville, Jefferson, Petersville, Burkittsville, Knoxville and Brunswick.

Great preparations are being made by Col. Baughman, Chairman, for the monster mass meeting in Frederick on the night of November 1st. This will probably be the biggest political meeting ever held in Frederick county.

ADVANTAGES OF LANDSCHAFT

A Form of Rural Credit System Urged
 For Adoption In United States.--- Farmers of Germany Have Profited By It.--What the System Means.

A pamphlet, "The Landschaft," issued by the Southern Commercial Congress is of timely interest just now that the administration is sending money to different parts of the country to market the year's harvest.

The following statements and arguments taken from the paper, which is written by David Lubin, Delegate of the United States to the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, Italy, favor the adoption of the Landschaft system of rural credit in the United States:

There was a time in economic history when there was a strict subdivision between the functions of farmer and banker; the farmer farmed and the banker financed. But from the end of the nineteenth and the beginning of the twentieth century a new economic situation has been evolved. The banker may still finance, but the farmer, though he must still farm, must also do some financing; not to a very great extent, but to some extent, for, if he does not, the banker and his bank will run clean around him, and under him, and over him, and finance him into his vest pocket. The German farmers saw that, and so they took hold of their share of financing, and are doing it, and as a result there is not even a sign of an agricultural product trust in Germany, unless it be the trust of the farmers themselves.

A careful review of cooperative rural credit as in operation in Europe warrants the conclusion that the most practicable plan for adoption in the United States would be the Landschaft system.

In my opinion, says the writer, there is no reason why the Landschaft cannot be adopted in the United States with the same safeguarding features operate in Prussia. The plan of the Landschaft is so simple that it may be explained and understood by any person of average intelligence. Given state and national laws enacted in the United States on the basis of the European safeguarding method, and the matter becomes quite easy. A body of citizens in a certain locality, presumably neighbors, form a Landschaft operating under state and national laws. As in operation in Prussia this Landschaft has limited functions, restricted in the main to the trusteeship of the mortgages given by its members on their lands. On these mortgages it issues the Landschaft bonds for amounts varying from one half to two thirds of the appraised value of the land.

The Landschaft transacts no business except that above stated—that is, it gives the borrower a bond for his mortgage; the borrower then proceeds to sell the bond in the open market and puts the money in his pocket, and that is the end of the money so far as the Landschaft is concerned. All it asks of the borrower is to hand in the interest and amortization on his bond until the debt is extinguished. If he does not do this, the Landschaft takes possession of his land, has it sold to the highest bidder, and returns to the borrower any balance left over and above the amount for which he was given a bond and the costs. The Landschaft can do this in Prussia without any resource to lawsuit.

It may seem that the Landschaft system would only be in the interest of the American farmer. This however, is but one phase of its benefits, and by no means the only important one. There is another section of the community of equal importance to the farmers, if not more so, to whom the benefits of such a system would go; I refer to the widows and orphans. Above all investors these require the greatest security and are at the same time by themselves the least capable of investors. Be it understood that making a safe investment of money is a perplexing and difficult task even for a man well posted in matters of finance. How much the more so for women, who have had very limited, perhaps no experience at all in the investment of money.

Now that the question of rural credits has been so fully placed before the American people, it might be presumed that the American farmer has been thoroughly awakened to its importance. This is, however, far from being the case. It is true that the farmers of America are learning more and more what it all means as time goes on, but at the present writing there are quite a number of farmers who are under the impression that any system of rural credits would be an evil; they are under the impression that the best thing for a farmer is to keep out of debt of any kind. These farmers fail to realize the fact that for business man or farmer to follow such a plan literally would require a surplus bank account subject to call, and therefore on deposit without interest. That is, quite a sum of money would have to be lying idle, doing nothing, and such a mode of procedure is not a gain but a loss. Moreover, but very few farmers have such surplus money, so what must they do? They must buy all they need and pay for their labor and raw material on time—on long time—and this means buying money of the storekeeper, which means paying the highest rate in the world for money instead of the lowest rate in the world.

The Landschaft is not a bank, nor does it deal with a bank, it is association of borrowers with the public for lenders. The Landschaft in the performance of its duties would have no responsibility of handling money at all, excepting the small amounts for its clerical expenses. It would simply serve as an important link in the safeguarding process for each of its members and for the Landschaft as a whole.

Under this system the task of each member of the Landschaft and the task of its Board of Directors would be normal and simple, and easily performed by the average farmer.

He would not be given the task of handling large sums of money, not even small sums, excepting it be the minor amounts for the expense of the clerical work of the Landschaft. Nor would this Landschaft require of him a knowledge of high finance. He would only need to perform simple routine duties assigned him by the Landschaft system; yet, for all that, these simple duties would do wonders for him. Through them the Landschaft would take him by the hand on the lowest rung of the financial ladder and lead him upward until he reached the summit in safety.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county.

HOBSON vs. UNDERWOOD.

How frequently we find in the history of men who though not measured by the standard of statesmanship, yet are, so to speak, in the "lime-light" and from that fact their failure to measure up to the standard shows their incompetence.

These remarks apply with singular fitness to one whom the hysteria of an insensate outburst of patriotic exuberance hoisted to an eminence which for years he has vainly sought to maintain.

A Connecticut reader of the New York Times takes that journal to task for publishing a story about a watch which lay at the bottom of a river for two years.

At the last Presidential election nearly 1,000,000 votes were cast in favor of an economic programme calling for a revolutionary transformation of society.

precate the attack made by Mr. Hobson on Mr. Underwood, the other day, in Congress, turning the Halls of Legislation to the uses of the stump speaker.

Hobson, without proof, charges the leader of the Democracy in Congress with being "a tool" of Wall Street; asserting that the late presidential campaign of the Alabama Congressman was financed by Thos. F. Ryan.

The opposition of Hobson to Underwood is clear now that Clayton has withdrawn from the senatorial contest. Hobson feels that with President Wilson's friendship for Underwood, the latter cannot but win.

THE Democratic Telegram, of Baltimore, is the latest paper to decry the multiplicity of holidays and is very much opposed to having a Father's Day.

THE loss of life and the destruction of property during the last week has been appalling. Storms, shipwrecks, mine disasters, railroad collisions, fires, and accidents innumerable have assailed even those who are accustomed to look upon occasional events of horror as "things that are liable to happen any time."

Sulzer's Anti-Climax.

The defense in the Sulzer impeachment proceedings closed with a singular anti-climax. Sulzer had proclaimed his intention of appearing in person, demonstrating his innocence and making an exposure of the iniquities of Charles F. Murphy which would entail the ruin of the Tammany leader.

Incidentally it will be noted, the woman is thrust to the front anyhow. Her alleged responsibility for the misuse of Sulzer's campaign fund has been studiously kept in sight since the beginning of the proceedings.

That the proceedings will end in the formal ousting of the man from the governorship is now a foregone conclusion. The political aspect of the affair loses all importance when its moral aspect is considered.

It Doesn't Sound Crazy.

Harry Thaw, discussing the effort to have him extradited from New Hampshire to New York on the charge of conspiracy, sums up his own case in this very effective observation:

"If I was insane I could not 'conspire' to escape; and if sane, I had no business in Mattawan and had a legal right to leave."

Which seems to present the essence of the situation in a fashion that requires attention by the New York lawyers. The peculiar sane tone of that remark moves a reopening of the famous inquiry:

"Who's looney now?"—Ellicott City Times.

After many months of the hardest kind of thought and the highest exhibition of statecraft, the Tariff Bill is the law of the land. To Oscar W. Underwood, we believe, will be due the thanks of the republic for the greatest economic measure that has been put upon the statute books since the Walker Tariff.

Don't be afraid to do your duty because some one ridicules or opposes you. A man who has opinions of his own and the courage to advocate them will be sure to have opposition in this world because he runs contrary to other people's opinions.

During the year woman suffrage bills have been considered in seventeen national parliaments, thirty-three States and other legislatures.

All over the country women suffragists are taking advantage of the State and county fairs to make converts. Nowhere, they claim, do they meet people more eager for information than those who attend the fairs.

The great danger that now threatens this nation is in the adoption of the initiative, referendum and recall.

The Democratic party in this State stands out clearly against it, and the Republican party and the Roosevelt party stand for it.

Discovery of a joker in the hosieries of the new tariff bill indicates that Miss Democracy wears a split skirt!—Aberdeen Enterprise.

SUFFRAGISTS—NOT SUFFRAGETTES.

The English-speaking world has become familiar with the doings of the war-like women of England, who in their effort to secure the ballot have resorted to all kinds of violence.

Fat and Fashionable.

According to the Moorish idea of beauty, the chief charm of a beautiful woman is that she can only waddle, not walk.

The Moorish shape—if shape it can be called—approaches the perfection of feminine beauty when it resembles, or rather exceeds, the circumference of a barrel.

What a paradise for the fat woman! There she can eat and drink and feast to her heart's content, denying herself nothing, living an easy, indolent, luxurious life.

Why Their Clothes Didn't Fit.

Long Lived Spaniards.

Though the average age of Spaniards is among the lowest in Europe—thirty-two years and four months, against fifty years in Sweden and Norway—yet Spain remains the land of hundred-year-old people.

South of the Sierra Morena there are fifty to sixty a hundred years old in every million inhabitants.

One of the famous long lived men of Spain was Dr. Manuel Barca, who lies buried in the Church of San Sebastian at Seville.

The Palmetto State.

The origin of the state arms of South Carolina is thus given in the histories: "On June 28, 1776, a force of less than 100 Carolinians, under command of Moultrie, protected by the rude fortification of Sullivan's island, in Charleston harbor, made of the trunks of the palmetto, repulsed the attack of a British fleet under command of Sir Peter Parker."

Overspecializing Specialists.

A technically trained engineer has constantly to combat a tendency toward narrowness of view point if he desires to cultivate a wide mental horizon.

Overspecialization often leads to undue emphasis upon the importance of individual tasks in given departments; to a lack of interest outside immediately vital responsibilities; to long continued employment at stated compensation perhaps, and not seldom to final replacement before middle age is past by men with less experience in single grooves, but with better comprehension of interdepartmental relations and the ability to make effective use of men with limited ideas.—Power.

Apropos of a marriage that threatened to turn out badly, a society woman uttered an appropriate and very true epigram.

A Story For Allhallow Eve
By ADELAIDE BURNHAM

Edward Dix was a sportsman from the crown of his head to the tip of his great toe. One October evening, when he had been hunting in the woods all day, he came to a little lake nestling among the hills, its surface covered with fallen leaves of every color from the lightest yellow hue to the deepest crimson. And looking down a valley he saw a landscape that filled him with delight.
"What a place for a summer cottage," he exclaimed. "Some day I'm going to build one here."
And he did. Now, I'm going to tell you how he came to carry out what was but a thought.
Looking to his right, he saw the deep red of a brick chimney against brown limbs of trees. He knew that where there was a chimney there must be a house and started to go and make an investigation. He came upon a very pretty cottage, with a broad plaza around it, a Queen Anne roof and dainty windows.
"And I'm jinged if I don't build a match to that," he added to his first assertion.

There was not a living thing in or near the cottage, and it was evident that it was intended only for summer use. Mr. Dix went up on the piazza and looked into the living room through a window. The apartment contained cottage furniture, but the chief attraction was a large fireplace.
"I've a good mind to sleep there tonight," he said to himself and tried the window to see if it were securely locked. It was, but Mr. Dix hunted for a place of ingress as energetically as he had hunted for game and found one by getting on the piazza roof—a window not well secured. Going downstairs, he opened a door from the inside, admitting him to the wood house, and in a few minutes had a fire blazing on the hearth. Then he settled himself down in an easy chair before it, and, looking at his reflection in a mirror on the mantel opposite him, he remarked:
"Your comfort is only equaled by your assurance."
And straightway he fell asleep.

Now, it happened that this was Halloween, and a party of girls were coming to spend it at this very cottage. Flora Stebbins, a daughter of the owner, was the hostess, and the others were her guests. Mr. Dix went to sleep about dark, which comes early at the last of October, and the young ladies arrived about 8 o'clock.
"My goodness gracious!" exclaimed Miss Stebbins. "There's some kind of a light inside. It looks as if there were a fire on the hearth. Wait a minute till I reconnoiter." She went to a window and saw the slumbering Mr.
Dix sitting before a fire that was still blazing merrily. She beckoned to the others. They came and saw the same sight.
"Girls," said Flora, "there is the best chance to celebrate Allhallow eve I ever heard of. Let one of us go in stealthily, make just enough sound to waken him so that he'll see her reflection in the mirror on the mantel and get away before he can catch her."

The idea was eagerly caught upon,
and Flora was urged to play the part.
The others returned to the vehicle that had brought them and waited for the play to be over and her to join them
in a retreat.
Mr. Dix was awakened by the falling of some article behind him and,
opening his eyes, saw a girl's face reflected in a mirror before him. But only for an instant. If he had been wide awake he would doubtless have arisen from his chair immediately and made an investigation. As it was, he delayed just long enough to allow the conspirators to make good their escape. He did not even hear the sound of wheels, for the carriage had gone far enough to prevent that. Flora getting into it near the gate.
When Mr. Dix got fairly around he did what he would have been expected to do. He went to the hall and out through the front door. He encountered nothing, and all he heard was a distant sound of laughter, but so distant that he was not sure whether it was or was not laughter. He was very much puzzled.

Mr. Dix had a job of hunting on his hands far different from following up game. He was a methodical chap and began by learning to whom the cottage belonged. Then he went to the winter residence of its owner ostensibly to peddle books. He could not be driven away until he had caught sight of Flora Stebbins, whom he at once recognized as the reality of the image he had seen in the mirror on Allhallow eve. She recognized him, but pretended ignorance of him.
"You are my fate," he said. "I saw your face in a mirror on what I have since learned was Allhallow eve. It will be useless for you to attempt to escape the husband that—"
"Nonsense!" she exclaimed, blushing very red. "It was you who saw my face in the glass, not I who saw yours. Allhallow eve does not count for men."

But it did count, for then and there, or rather on Allhallow eve, commenced a courtship which ended, if it ended at all, with marriage. And when it became evident that the Dix family needed a summer cottage of their own Edward Dix built an exact replica of the one owned by his father in law. But one article of furniture that was in the latter has been removed to the former, the looking glass in which Mr.
Dix's fate was revealed to him.

A WEEK OF HEAVY CASUALTIES

The Sea, Mine, Fire, and Storm Claim Many Lives.—Volturno Burns in Mid-Ocean.

Four disasters of unusual proportions have occurred within the week.

Last Friday the steamship Volturno took fire from an explosion in her hold, burned and was abandoned. The total loss of life was 136. Wireless messages from the stricken ship were picked up by ocean liners and ten vessels rushed to the rescue. Six small boats were launched from the Volturno. Two of them with 35 persons each got away, the other four were smashed against the ship's side and all their occupants perished. An oil steamer arrived on the scene early Friday morning, and sluicing hundred of tons of oil upon the waves, made the rescue of the passengers possible. Captain Inch of the Volturno was the last man to leave the ship. Survivors of the disaster arrived in New York and told thrilling stories of the captain's bravery and their peril.

In a terrific explosion which shattered the works of the Universal Colliery, near Cardiff, Wales, on Tuesday, more than 400 Welsh coal miners are believed to have perished. Fire soon followed the explosion and rescue parties were unable to make any progress.

Mrs. Rebecca Strauss and Miss Ida Yearly, both of Baltimore, were suffocated in a fire which broke out at Edgewood Sanitarium, at Govans, early on Tuesday morning. Twelve other patients barely escaped death, leaving the building in their night clothes. The fire was thought to have been caused by an over-heated furnace. The entire building was flooded with water before the fire was subdued. The loss will not exceed $10,000.

More than a score of lives are believed to have been lost at Solomon a mining camp of 300 inhabitants, in Alaska, which is reported to have been entirely destroyed by a tidal storm. Besides eight persons drowned at Nome, more than a dozen are thought to have perished in small vessels at sea. Nearly all gasoline boats in northern Bering Sea were demolished.

By MILLARD MALTBIE

How I found the celebrated Emperor diamond does not pertain especially to this story, but where I found it is important, for my effort to get it away from the region where it had lain ever since a lump of pure carbon was crystallized and became a gem as big as a walnut is what I am going to tell you about. When I was a youngster I ran away from home and a few weeks later found myself in the province of Minas Geraes, in Brazil, where the diamond mines are. I worked in the mines for five years and couldn't very well do that without learning something about diamonds.

One Sunday I was out on a tramp and, stopping to rest, noticed near me a stone that it struck me looked like a diamond in the rough. I took it up to examine it and found it exactly like the uncut stones I had dug up for the diamond company, only I had never seen one half the size. I was a good deal upset, for if the thing was a diamond I was rich.

But, as I have said, it was the getting away with it that I'm going to tell about. It was a diamond, sure enough, and one of the big ones of the world. While I was looking at it Jim Stivers came up, and I was fool enough to let him see it. He knew right off that it was worth the biggest part of a million dollars, and a stone like that is a great temptation for any one. He congratulated me on my find and began at once to plot to get it from me.

Jim had more sense than I in this. He didn't tell any one about my having it except three men whom he used to get it away from me. He knew I would go to Rio with it, and his plan was to have me waylaid and the stone captured.

Of course I didn't know just what he would do, but I did know that once I got out of the region of law and order—in other words, off by myself—somebody would try for my property. I concluded to endeavor to fool whoever suspected I had it with me by playing a part. The plan I adopted was this: I found a countryman who was going down with a load of wood and told him I would go with him. He said he was agreeable, and I slept the night before we started near his wagon, which was already loaded. During the night I took one of the logs—one that I would recognize easily—and, boring a big hole in it under a piece of loose bark, put my diamond in it. Then, plugging up the hole, I let down the bark, first putting a little glue between it and the wood to hold it in place. Then I threw the log back to the load.

We started early in the morning, and I, not wishing to be identified with the woodman, at times kept in his rear and at times in advance of him. Although I hadn't told any one I was going on the trip, I found the road picketed. I passed a man who looked at me searchingly, and it wasn't long before, hearing footsteps behind me, I turned and saw him coming with two others. They caught up with me, and one of them, who knew me by sight, said, "That's the man," and, addressing me, added:

"Young feller, the diamond company has missed a valuable uncut stone and, having been informed that it is in your possession, has sent us to demand it of you. Please hand it out."

"I haven't any diamond," I replied. "I'm as poor as poverty and don't know where I shall get a bite to eat."

They didn't waste any words, but two of them held me while the third went through my pockets, my hair, my beard—indeed, every part of me. Then he took off my clothes, leaving me stark naked, and examined every seam, every inch of cloth, even holding them up and looking through them to the light.

"I reckon he has either sent it on ahead or left it behind to come later," said the man who had done the searching. All would have gone well had not the woodcutter's wagon come lumbering down the road and he had to ask me in a familiar way what my appearing in my birthday clothes meant. The men pricked up their ears at this and asked him if he knew me, and he told them that we were fellow travelers.

He got a thorough searching for his pains, the men thinking that he was carrying the gem for me. Then they examined the horses, the harness, the wagon, looking even into the hubs of the wheels. One of them suggested that what they were looking for might be between the logs of wood, and they threw every log off on to the road, carefully watching for the diamond between them.

But it was of no use. The stone was not to be found.

They didn't like to give it up; but, believing that I had conveyed the treasure by some other method, they finally concluded to do so. They had instructions from Stivers not to hurt me. If they could get the diamond they were to do so, but they were not to commit murder or make a case against those implicated in the attempted robbery. So I was allowed to proceed.

When we reached Rio I took the log in which I had hidden the diamond off the load, paid the woodman for it and, putting it on my shoulder, went away with it.

I sailed for Amsterdam, that I might get my stone cut, and when it was in proper condition sold it for $650,000 to a Hanoverian prince.

FEATURES OF THE INCOME TAX LAW

Minimum Exemption Is Placed at $3,000 Annually.

$1,000 MORE FOR FAMILIES

Additional Taxes For Incomes Above $20,000, Increasing Until the Maximum of 6 Per Cent Is Reached on the Excess Above $500,000—Penalties For Failing to Make Reports.

The income tax feature of the new tariff law, made possible by the adoption of an amendment to the federal constitution, marks a new feature in tariff legislation. It is expected to yield an annual revenue exceeding $100,000,000, which makes possible the reduction of tariff duties.

Under the terms of the new law a tax of 1 per cent will be levied on all incomes in excess of $3,000 with certain exemptions. The bill provides that there shall be "an additional tax of 1 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $20,000 and does not exceed $50,000, and 2 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $50,000 and does not exceed $75,000, 3 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $75,000 and does not exceed $100,000, 4 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $100,000 and does not exceed $250,000, 5 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $250,000 and does not exceed $500,000 and 6 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $500,000."

Individuals to Make Returns.

Every person subject to the income tax must make a report of his income to the collector of internal revenue in the district in which he lives or in which his business is carried on.

In defining what shall be considered income for taxation, the bill says:

"Subject only to such exemptions and deductions as are hereinafter allowed, the net income of a taxable person shall include gains, profits and income derived from salaries, wages or compensation for personal service of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, businesses, trade, commerce or sales or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or use of or interest in real or personal property; also from interest, rent, dividends, securities or the transaction of any lawful business carried on for gain or profit or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever, including the income from but not the value of property acquired by gift, bequest, devise or descent, provided that the proceeds of life insurance policies paid upon the death of the person insured or payments made by or credited to the insured on life insurance, endowment or annuity contracts upon the return thereof to the insured at the maturity of the term mentioned in the contract or upon surrender of the contract shall not be included as income."

The provisions of the bill for exemptions as finally agreed on are:

"There shall be deducted from the amount of the net income of each of said persons, ascertained as provided herein, the sum of $3,000 plus $1,000 additional if the person making the return be a married man with a wife, living with him and being herself not taxable under the income tax law, or plus the sum of $1,000 additional if the person making the return be a married woman with a husband living with her and being herself not taxable under the income tax law, but in no event shall this additional exemption of $1,000 be deducted by both a husband and a wife."

Foreign Residents to Be Taxed.

The bill contains provisions for the taxation of the incomes of citizens residing in foreign countries on incomes derived from property owned or business carried on in the United States. The bill also provides:

"That if any person, corporation, joint stock company, association or insurance company liable to make the return or pay the tax aforesaid shall refuse or neglect to make a return at the time or times hereinbefore specified in each year, such person shall be liable to a penalty of not less than $20 nor more than $1,000. Any person or any officer of any corporation required by law to make, render, sign or verify any return who makes any false or fraudulent return or statement with intent to defeat or evade the assessment required by this section to be made shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not exceeding $2,000 or be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, at the discretion of the court, with the costs of prosecution."

The first tax is to be levied and collected on incomes from March 1, 1913, to Dec. 31, 1913. Thereafter the income shall be computed for calendar years ending with Dec. 31.

The bill also provides that the income of states, territories or political subdivisions shall not be taxed, and there shall be no tax levied on incomes derived by states and municipalities from the operation of public utilities, but this does not exempt the corporation operating the utilities from paying tax on the portion of the income due to the municipality.

The above named articles are to be entered in the house-hold department of the Frederick County Agricultural Society on Monday, Oct. 20th, and will be governed by the same rules as other articles. The 50 cent entrance fee will entitle you to a ticket of admission for each day of the Fair. When making the entry state that it is made of CHALLENGE FLOUR and is for the CHALLENGE FLOUR CONTEST. Not more than one article can be entered on the same ticket.

The judges will be appointed by the Fair Association and the premiums will be paid by the Frederick County Farmers Exchange on Saturday following the Fair.

Enter into this Baking contest and prove that bread baking is not one of the lost arts. CHALLENGE FLOUR will make equally good bread, biscuits, rolls or cake. When making the latter remember that CHALLENGE is a very granular flour, and requires more water and longer time to thoroughly dissolve each particle than a softer flour. A failure to heed these precautions is likely to result in the cake batter being too thick or heavy.

FREDERICK COUNTY FARMERS EXCHANGE, FREDERICK, MARYLAND.

N. B.—Three years ago when we held a similar contest at the Frederick Fair, we had positive knowledge that some loaves of bread entered were not made from CHALLENGE FLOUR. This fact however was withheld from the judges and when the nine prizes were awarded for the nine best loaves all went to those who used CHALLENGE. This baking contest will be conducted with absolute fairness on our part and in return we respectfully ask that the same consideration be extended to us.
