AGAINST COAL RATE CUT

RAILROADS OPPOSE IT

Declare Lower Tariffs Would Impair Service

FACILITIES HAVE BEEN IMPROVED

Much Time Required to Lay a Sound Foundation for the Solution of the Rate Problem. — Carriers Willing to Obey the Law.

The interstate commerce commission in session at Philadelphia brings out the fact that, although during the past two years traffic conditions have improved greatly and coal is being handled more advantageously, in that time no reduction in the freight rate has been made.

The attorneys for the commission explained that their purpose in submitting the railroad officials to a careful and detailed examination was to lay a sound foundation for the solution of the rate problem and the proper interpretation of the commodities clause of the Hepburn interstate commerce act. At least a week will be consumed in establishing this foundation.

It is upon a great mass of technical evidence that the commission expects to recommend to congress legislation dealing with conditions in the anthracite coal fields. The investigation, although promising to be prolonged, is expected to arrive at a final adjudication of the interests of the consumers, the independent coal operators and the coal carrying roads.

The main point the railroads have at stake is that of rates. It is upon this point that their attorneys are prepared to make a big fight. The railroads profess a willingness to conform to the commodities clause as interpreted by the interstate commerce commission, but say they will make a strong stand against any reduction in rates, holding the position that a cut will necessarily impair the service.

Whipping Post Defended.

Quoting the Bible and many legal works and former President Theodore Roosevelt in favor of corporal punishment for criminal offenders, Representative Brockson of Delaware, in the House defended Delaware's whipping post.

"The practise of making martyrs of criminals is a craze, the curse of modern society," said Mr. Brockson. "I have little patience with any man who permits his sympathy to run with the current so far as to forget the rights of law-abiding citizens of the State. No State undertakes to inflict penalties that will be approved by the criminal."

NEW HILLEN STATION GREAT IMPROVEMENT OVER OLD SHED

Western Maryland Terminal Made Up-to-Date in Every Respect.—Larger Waiting Room.

Embracing every feature which is to be found in any modern passenger terminal, the improvements which have been in progress for the past six months at Hillen Station, Baltimore, have been practically completed, thus giving the Western Maryland Railway Company splendid facilities for the proper handling of its increasing passenger business.

Under the improvement plan, additional waiting-room space has been provided by a rearrangement of the interior of the building and a re-location of the ticket office. A new wing has also been erected to the west of the building, which gives better facilities for the handling of parcels and baggage. Part of the wing, which is twenty by fifty feet, will be utilized as a smoking room.

The old train sheds, which were a fixture at Hillen Station for years, have completely disappeared, and have been replaced by up-to-date umbrella sheds, which are connected with the station proper by means of a concourse of glass and concrete. Each shed is about 400 feet long, and the foot-ways under them are paved with brick.

TURKEY A TRUE AMERICAN BIRD

Its Title a Misnomer.—Might Have Been the National Emblem Instead of the Eagle.

It is odd that a bird indigenous to America should have been named for another country far away. The turkey is a true American not known in Europe until the discovery of Mexico in 1518. It received its name through a misapprehension as to its place of origin. Better so, however, than if it had been named for its birthplace. It would seem awkward to talk about feeding the Americas or to send some one to chase the Americas out of our neighbor's buckwheat.

The turkey came near being the national emblem of the United States, too, and would have been had Benjamin Franklin's wish been carried out. But although a better behaved fowl than the eagle, its habits seem to many people too humdrum to type a young country rejoicing in national aspirations: its flights are too low, its resting places too near the ground.

ABOLISHMENT OF SING SING FOR PRISON FARM URGED

Prison Reform Association Wants an Industrial Farm to Supplement Penal Institution.

When the next New York Legislature meets, state-wide pressure will be exerted upon that body to abandon Sing Sing prison and to build an industrial farm. The prison reform association has written to Governor Glynn saying that the proposal that the rebuilding of the cell block at Sing Sing would suffice, is based upon false economy and is unwise from the standpoint of penology. At Sing Sing even with the rebuilt cell block, prisoners would be locked in their cells for half the twenty-four hours or more. At the Great Meadow prison farm they are locked in their cells only in sleeping hours.

CORNUCOPIA FOR THANKSGIVING

Horn of Plenty Apt Expression of the Sentiment that Prevails.—How to Make One.

The cornucopia, or horn of fruitfulness and abundance, always used by the Greeks and Romans as the symbol of plenty, is an apt expression of the sentiment that prevails on Thanksgiving day. Filled with fruits and flowers, it makes one of the most charming of centerpieces for the Thanksgiving dinner table. The contents should be arranged so that the cornucopia is overflowing, the fruits and flowers running out of the horn and over the table.

A cornucopia may be made of wire covered with silk, or again with linen, or it might be made of cardboard on which vines or autumn leaves are sewed. The leaves of galax, which do not fade, could be used, although one should prefer the beautiful blackberry vine, which at this season is always at its best in color. The leaves of the vine should be made to run up toward the mouth of the horn and trail about its edges, suggesting a horn being wound about them. Flowers, too, should fall about the brim so that fidelity to the original idea might be preserved.

Turkeys by Parcel Post.

Under a ruling of the Post Office Department, the Thanksgiving Turkey may be shipped by parcel post if it does not weigh more than twenty pounds and is not more than seventy-two inches in length and circumference. Being in the nature of perishable goods, it may not be sent further than the limits of the second zone, a distance of 150 miles from the starting point.

"They got me," declared Spencer as he heard the verdict read by the foreman of the jury. "At last, they got me."

THE MEXICAN SITUATION

WEEK'S DISCLOSURES

Huerta Justifies His Action In Message

DOES NOT REFER TO OUTSIDERS

Three British Cruisers Proceed to Vera Cruz.—Foreigners In Capital Plan Defensive Programme In Event of Hostilities.

The past week has witnessed very little real change in the Mexican situation. At first dispatches stated that Huerta had fled; latest reports tell of his message to Congress yesterday afternoon, in which he quoted Napoleon in justification of his arbitrary dissolution of the old congress, and served notice that he will ask the new congress to grant him a political bill of grace.

Not even a reference to international relations was made in the draft prepared.

The President confined himself entirely to a review of the incidents leading to the dissolution of the old congress and justification for his act.

The foreign colonies in the Mexican capital are preparing to defend themselves in the event of disturbances in the city, and particularly should the final settlement be left to the Mexicans themselves.

News that three big British cruisers had been ordered to proceed from West Indian ports to Vera Cruz created some comment in official circles, where it was recalled that recent London dispatches had indicated that the British Government would intrust the interests of their subjects in Mexico to the United States. It was pointed out, however, that the Washington Government had welcomed the appearance of foreign warships in Mexican waters and that the gathering of British, German Japanese and French vessels off the coast might indicate to General Huerta a growing lack of confidence on the part of the powers in his ability longer to maintain himself and insure the safety of foreigners in Mexico.

Conferences between William Bayard Hale, personal representative of President Wilson and the Mexican Constitutionalist chiefs were terminated abruptly because General Carranza refused to answer certain questions propounded by President Wilson and not as a result of the Mexican's demand that Mr. Hale present his formal credentials.

Governor Glynn for Economy.

The latest chief executive of New York will ask the next Legislature of that State for $71,020 for expenses of the executive department for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1914. This amount is $71,497 less than William Sulzer obtained from the present body. A similar cutting down in appropriations throughout the State is planned by Gov. Glynn.

PRESIDENT'S THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

THE season is at hand in which it has been our long respected custom as a people to turn in praise and thanksgiving to Almighty God for His manifold mercies and blessings to us as a nation. The year that has just passed has been marked in a peculiar degree by manifestation of His gracious and beneficent providence. We have not only had peace throughout our own borders and with the nations of the world, but that peace has been brightened by constantly multiplying evidences of genuine friendship, of mutual sympathy and understanding, and of the happy operation of many elevating influences both of ideal and of practice.

"The nation has been not only prosperous, but has proved its capacity to take calm counsel amidst the rapid movement of affairs and deal with its own life in a spirit of candor, righteousness and comity. We have seen the practical completion of a great work at the Isthmus of Panama, which not only exemplifies the nation's abundant resources to accomplish what it will, and the distinguished skill and capacity of its public servants, but also promises the beginning of a new age, of new contracts, of new neighborhoods, new sympathies, new bonds and new achievements of co-operation and peace.

"Righteousness exalteth a nation" and "peace on earth, good will toward men" furnish the only foundations upon which can be built the lasting achievements of the human spirit. The year has brought us the satisfaction of work well done and fresh visions of our duty which will make the work of the future better still.

"Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do hereby designate Thursday, the 27th of November next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer and invite the people throughout the land to cease from their wonted occupations and in their several homes and places of worship render thanks to Almighty God.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the City of Washington this 23rd day of October, in the year of Our Lord, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Thirteen, and of the Independence of the United States of America the One Hundred and Thirty-eighth.

(Signed)

"WOODROW WILSON.

"By the President:

"W. J. BRYAN, Secretary of State,"

(Seal)

A THANKSGIVING PRAYER.

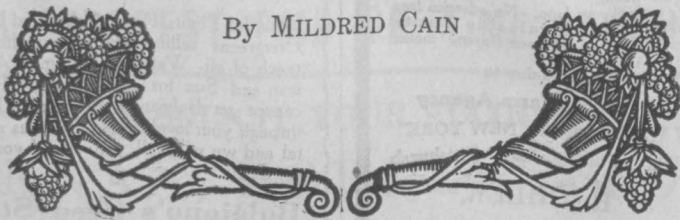

For the world, with all its brave achievements,
For the golden, the moonbeams pale,
For the rosy dawn, the nightly shadows;
For the mountain high, the hill, the vale;
"Oh, Lord! we give Thee thanks."

For the waters in their calm and tempest,
For the land, the fruit, the tree, the flower;
For the human hearts replete with fervor,
When Thy heavenly kingdom is their bower;
"Oh, Lord! we give Thee thanks."

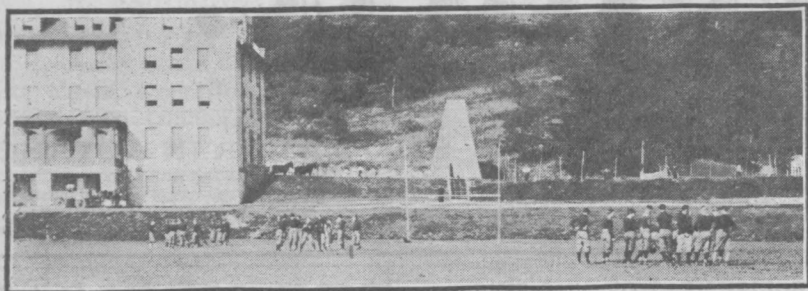

For the gifts of mind, for love and kindness,
That of happiness is made the goal;
For the strength of will, for noble lessons;
Leading man to profit for his soul;
"Oh, Lord! we give Thee thanks."

Last for friendship's ties that make life worthy,
For rejoicing day and sorrowing night;
For the carolling bird, the murmuring zephyrs;
For all thy gifts that lead Truth and Right;
"Oh, Lord! we give Thee thanks."

MOUNT SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

Terrace Talk

Only 27 days till Christmas!

The Freshman class has been courting the muses. The call for some verses on November has had the boys at their wits ends for rhymes.

In scrimmage work this week Coach Day laid special stress on blocking and tackling and on having the line men charge their opponents much lower than hitherto.

Last Saturday's lack of Joe McManus was unfortunate and keenly felt, and it is hoped that so valuable a warrior will be in shape for the contest with Albright.

Basketball practise started on Tuesday in the gymnasium. Prospects for a good team are decidedly favorable. Six of last years "M" men are on the squad.

Swinburne bids fair to go to Congress some day. It is difficult to tell, nowadays, whether he is visiting the College when he's here, or spending a few days at home when he's there. At present he is month-ending somewhere.

The Senior Class has been devoting considerable time to the writing of a Latin dissertation on Juvenal. The time limit for submitting manuscripts to Monsignor Tierney, who will pass on the boys' Latinity, expires tomorrow.

The Purcell Lyceum, devoted to the fostering of a literary spirit among the Sophomore and Freshman classes, held its first meeting last Thursday, under the generalship of Mr. Peter M. Stieff. The first debate of the season will be held shortly after Thanksgiving.

The representatives of the north have organized a football team. The southern contingent met them on Thursday in a hard fought game. Both teams however hail from the Minn Department and the fact that the varsity of the Juniors consists of a majority of men from the Sunny Dixie gave the Southerners a marked advantage over the Yankees.

The defeat of last Saturday was due principally to the weakness of the line on defensive work, especially in the second half when the Mountaineers relaxed to their detriment and undoing. The teams offensive work was exceptionally good and Mt. St. Mary's gained ground almost at will, but lacked the final punch when a score was needed.

What will doubtless prove a strong incentive to vigorous practice for the week to come is the game arranged for Thanksgiving Day between Fordham University and Mount. St. Mary's. Competition will be keen, the line-up being evenly matched. Not all the squad can go to New York but all are anxious to go and are working for the trip. The Mountaineers have a splendid chance to wrest the victory from their brother Catholics, and it is to be wished that so unique a contest will attract huge crowds of spectators to the Fordham campus.

Delaware, 20; M. S. M. 13.

In a drizzling rain, Mt. St. Mary's lost to Delaware, at Newark last Saturday, 20 to 13. The Delaware boys reversed even the home dope and played a snappy game. The feature of the game was a seventy-five yard run by Taylor, Delaware's halfback, who caught one of Mt. St. Mary's forward passes on his own 25-yard line and carried it within a foot of a touchdown before being tackled. The line-up:

| | |
|---------------------------|-----------------|
| Delaware. | Mt. St. Mary's. |
| Groff.....L. E..... | Hannan |
| Grievies.....L. T..... | Kelley |
| Foster.....L. G..... | Kane |

Substitutions—Connellee for Handy, O'Daniel for Huston, Rudolph for Linderman, Dean for Grievies, Huston for O'Daniel, Handy for Connellee, Linderman for Rudolph. Mount St. Mary's—Mulhern for Kane. Touchdowns—Huston, Handy (2), McManus, Keenan. Kicked goals—Taylor (2), Keenan. Referee—Thorn, Haverford. Umpire—Weimouth, Princeton. Time of quarters—Ten minutes.

M. S. M., 7; Albright, 7.

In the hardest fought game ever seen on Echo field, Mount St. Mary's and Albright battled to a 7-to-7 tie on Wednesday afternoon.

The Myerstown aggregation greatly outweighed the local team, but was far inferior to the style of football that the Mountaineers exhibited. Mount St. Mary's scored in the first quarter, when Captain McManus went through the entire Albright eleven for a touchdown. The visitors scored in the second period when Pannell intercepted a forward pass on the 30 yard line and raced for a touchdown.

In the second half Mount St. Mary's had the ball in the visitors' territory most of the time, and in the third period J. McManus tried a field goal from the 25-yard line, which fell short only a few inches. Albright never came within striking distance in the second half.

The defensive work of Albright was very poor and seldom did they make a neat tackle, while for Mount St. Mary's the offensive and defensive work was of the highest class. Carroll and Captain McManus, in the Mountaineers' back field, carried the ball for long gains and their open field running was a feature. Dowdle, Dwyer and Keenan, on the line, played a great defensive game for the local team. Quinn, Higgins and Pannell excelled for the visitors. The line-up:

|----------------------------|----------------|
| Albright | Mt. St. Mary's |
| Yost.....L. E..... | Hannon |
| Ritter.....L. T..... | Kelly |
| G. Shambaugh.....L. G..... | Mulhearn |

| Pannell.....Q. B. (Capt.) | McManus |
| Higgins.....L. H..... | Carroll |
| Quinn.....R. H..... | Sutton |
| Benfer.....F. B..... | Mahoney |

Touchdowns—McManus, Pannell. Goals from touchdowns—Carroll, Benfer. Referee—Porter, of Washington College. Umpire—Sparrow. Head linesman Leary, Mount St. Mary's. Substitutions: Mount St. Mary's—Haltigan for Hannon, Rogers for Sutton, Long for Captain McManus, Whittle for Dowdle, Cobb for Mulhearn. Albright—Baker for Collins, Collins for Shambaugh. Time of quarters—Two of 10 minutes, two of 12 minutes.

ST. JOSEPH'S COLLEGE-ACADEMY

Valley Echoes

We anticipate the honor and pleasure of a visit from His Excellency, the Most Rev. Msgr. John Bonzano, D. D., Archbishop of Militene, Pontifical Delegate, Nov. 27th, his first to St. Joseph's.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Alvarez, of Brooklyn, were most cordially welcomed at St. Joseph's College on Monday afternoon. Their visit, though brief, gave genuine pleasure to their friends. Mrs. Alder accompanied Mrs. Alvarez, her sister, both are members of the Alumnae. These two ladies are daughters of the late Hon. James McSherry, who for many years so nobly filled the office of Judge of the Supreme Court of Maryland. The visit recalled many delightful reminiscences.

An Evening With Shakespeare.

"After all, the old plays are the best plays," thus spoke the Shakesperian students at St. Joseph's when Miss Lydia Stirling Flintham, B. E. ended her first evening's Elocution Recital, Julius Caesar, the great political drama, was the subject chosen and so sharply did Miss Flintham discriminate between characters that Caesar, Brutus, Cassius and Mark Antony, Rome's four great representatives, actually were "mighty yet." Julius Caesar teaches an important lesson—beware of ambition. The interview between Brutus and Portia, that scene so charged with domestic glory, won words of admiration from all. And what shall be said of Lucius? Perhaps it would be better left unsaid if not comprehended in his words, "It is my duty, Sir." Azarias tells us he heard Mr. Henry Morley tell a class in London that it was only after thirty-five readings of Julius Caesar, the central thought of that masterpiece dawned upon him. Truly the vivifying principle maketh the master live in his works.

It is not given to every noted man to achieve fame before his death, but America affords us an exception to the general rule in the person of James Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier Poet, whose "Praise was not mingled with his requiem." The above assertion was proved by Miss Flintham during her second recital.

Among the many poems rendered we may number:

"There, Little Girl, Don't Cry," "That Old Sweetheart of Mine," "Run-away Boy," "Bumble Bee," "Rageddy Man," "Little Orphan Annie," "Knee Deep in June," "Out to Old Aunt Mary's," etc.

Riley's Juvenile Works show forth the spirit of boyhood tagging at the skirts of this weary old world of ours and begging it to come back to play. His verses in the Indiana dialect won for him instant success and the sobriquet of "The Hoosier Poet," by which he is generally known.

By request Miss Flintham delivered Thompson's "Hound of Heaven," a daring title when one reflects that it refers to God. The meaning is understood, that, as the hound follows the hare, so does God follow the soul. The soul seeks for happiness in creatures, human sympathy, science and nature, but alas, all is failure; happiness is found only in God. "Thou hast made me for thyself, O God, and my heart cannot truly rest until it rest in thee." Of this poem, comparatively unknown, a critic has said: "It is the sweetest, deepest, strongest song ever written in the English tongue."

ONCE A FAST, NOT A FEAST

Observance of Thanksgiving Not Fatal to Turkeys in Early Days.

Turkey did not figure in the original Thanksgiving feast, but it became a feature of that historic meal so long ago that the reason is lost in oblivion.

On the original Thanksgiving day the pilgrim fathers fasted and gave verbal thanks that they had been saved from the perils of the sea and permitted to find a home in the new land. Giving up every sort of occupation and spending the time in Bible reading and in prayer, the colonists regarded it as an annual occasion of much solemnity.

It was not until thirteen years after the settling of Massachusetts that Thanksgiving day received official cognizance, although it was generally observed by churchgoing and—after a few years of stern fasting—a better dinner than was served on week days. Thus by degrees the feature of the great day became the dinner that accompanied it.

Miss Phoebe Couzins aged seventy-three, the first woman to become a lawyer in America, the first woman to be a United States marshal, the first woman to be graduated from Washington University (where she received the degree of bachelor of law in 1871), author and lecturer on political and prohibition topics is in want, hungry, ill, and old, living out the dreary end of a once brilliant life in a squalid room on the second floor of a Pine Street boarding house, in St. Louis.

Miss Couzins is allowed to remain in her quarters because no other tenant has applied for the place, but if one comes she will have to move. She gets a precarious living by occasional donations from old-time friends.

Power of the Country Press

The country press does not need any defense from us, says the American Press. It stands on its own merits as the greatest power in the United States. It could, if organized, make or unmake a president of the United States. It is the most effective molder of public opinion in existence.

THE COUNTRY PAPERS AS A WHOLE REACH A VASTLY GREATER PROPORTION OF THE POPULATION OF THE UNITED STATES THAN DO THE METROPOLITAN DAILIES AS A WHOLE.

The country papers reach upward of 65,000,000 people, and the entire population, exclusive of the Philippines and Hawaii, is 91,000,000.

The papers reaching more than two-thirds of our population are, collectively, certainly more important than papers reaching only one-third of the population.

The National advertisers are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in space in the country papers. They are increasing their volume each year. They have learned that the metropolitan dailies and magazines do not reach an immense mass of people of purchasing power.

THE WEEKLY CHRONICLE

Is an important element in the power wielded by the country press and BRINGS RESULTS TO THOSE WHO ADVERTISE IN ITS COLUMNS.

Pete Fought the Snake.

Daddy's Bedtime
Story—Pete, the Plucky
Pet Rooster,
And the Snake.

"NOW," said daddy, "I am going to tell you about a little boy whose pet rooster probably saved his life."

Jack and Evelyn opened wide their eyes and settled down comfortably to listen.

"The rooster was a pet that belonged to a little three-year-old boy named Frankie," explained daddy. "Frankie fed the rooster and played with him when he was allowed to go out into the yard. Pete showed that he was fond of the little chap by following him about wherever he went."

"One morning Frankie went out to the yard with his little spade and pail. He was allowed to have Pete out of the chicken yard to play with him. They trotted around until Frankie got tired. Then the little boy sat down in the sand in one of the paths and began to dig."

"Thinking he was no longer needed, Pete wandered off by himself to pick up bugs and caterpillars from the grass. He was crunching a delicious green worm when he heard a little cry from Frankie."

"Pete turned quickly round, and what he saw quite startled him. There a few feet from his little friend was a big brown and black snake."

"Pete gave a squawk of anger. He knew that the snake meant to harm Frankie, and he rushed forward to chase it away."

"This snake, however, was not the kind to be afraid of a chicken. It was a copperhead, a kind of snake whose sting will kill people."

"As Pete rushed at it the snake raised its head threateningly. The rooster seemed to know that he must be careful lest the snake sting him, for he dodged carefully and gave it a sharp peck with his bill. After that the snake was mad. It began to fight in earnest."

"Frankie sat and watched them with amusement. He thought it was some sort of a game. He did not understand that the snake could hurt him."

"Frankie's mother was upstairs, and when she heard the noise in the yard she put her head out of the window. Then she rushed downstairs, seizing the broom on her way out."

"When she reached the yard Pete had just put the finishing touches to the snake by digging his sharp spurs into its head. Frankie's mother picked up her little boy and hugged him with joy. He was perfectly safe. The snake had not had a chance to sting him."

"Then she picked up the rooster to see if he had been hurt. So cleverly had Pete dodged the snake that not once was he struck."

"Pete is now the pet of the whole family. There is no danger that he will ever go the way of all chickens into the pot or frying pan."

How to Read the Moon.

Few people can tell at a glance whether the moon is waxing or waning. Here is a whimsical rule to remember by. It is very simple to those who know Latin and is not difficult for those who do not. The first thing is to notice whether the moon is like a D or a C—that is, whether the full semicircular curve is on the right or the left. If the moon shows a D that naturally stands for decreasit. "It wanes."

But then comes the great principle—"The moon is always deceitful," and one has to understand the opposite of what the moon says, so that a moon which shows a D is a waxing moon, while a waning moon is like a C.

Those who have no Latin will no doubt look to see whether the moon says it is "decreasing," in which case they will understand that it is waxing, while a waning moon will deny that it is "decreasing."—New York Sun.

An Old, Old Question.

The servant question is not a new one, and were the wise Akiba still alive he might with right use his truism, "It has all been here before," in connection with the problem. This may be demonstrated by no less an authority than Goethe. In his "Wilhelm Meister," written in the latter days of the eighteenth century, there is a scene where the hero comes to the home of Therese, sent there by Lothario and Jarro. Receiving Wilhelm, Therese asks to be excused because of her scant board: "My cook," she says, "just ran away at a most inopportune time, and our man mangled his hand. I had to prepare all myself. Nothing bothers one more nowadays than servants; no one will serve, not even themselves."

A Queer Bargain.

Some young men from Boston applied to an old fisherman up in the country to see if he could get some bait. He thought he could and started off. Three hours afterward he appeared with a ten quart pail full of angle worms. The boys were alarmed lest there should not be money enough in the party for such a wealth of bait, but they put on a bold front and some one asked, "How much do we owe you?" "Well, I don't rightly know," answered the old man; "the ground is kinder solid and the worms is far down, and it's been hard on my back to dig 'em, but I've had a mind to go fishin' myself tomorrow, an' if you'll give me half the bait we'll call it square."

The Best Testimony.

I would rather hear the experience of a lifelong sufferer on the problem of pain or of a faithful lover on the mystery of love or of a poet on the influence of natural beauty or of an unselfish and humble soul on the question of faith in the unseen than the evidence of the most subtle theologian or metaphysician in the world.—Arthur C. Benson in "At Large."

Startling News.

UNDERSTUDY

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

A train of cars stopped at a station. A young man came aboard and looked about for an empty seat. There was but one vacant, and he sat down in it beside a handsomely dressed, middle aged lady, who moved aside to make room for him, changing at the same time the position of certain articles of hand baggage.

"You are very kind," said the young man.

"Not at all," replied the lady. "I am simply not especially selfish."

"It is a case of selfishness that causes me to make this journey," remarked the young man.

"Indeed!" said the lady in a tone that seemed to invite further confidence.

"Yes. My sister is an actress. She has been an understudy for the leading lady at the theater with which she is connected. My sister has a natural talent for the kind of acting required in the part and became understudy for it, hoping that she might get an opportunity to play it and make a hit in it. She has already done so in private theatricals. But the leading lady has not been obliged to give over the part to her understudy once during the whole time she has been the understudy. I didn't wish Bess to go on the stage, and now that she has become discouraged by her long wait I have persuaded her to give up trying to be an actress and come home. If the leading lady would but give her one opportunity to show what she can do it is quite possible that Bess might get an engagement at a fine salary."

The lady listened to this with considerable interest and at the end said: "You didn't say with what theater your sister is connected."

"No. I have no wish to openly accuse her principal of selfishness."

"It doesn't matter. I am acquainted with a number of theatrical persons and know that Elizabeth Twining is understudy for the leading lady at the National, who plays under the stage name Helen Wadsworth, but who is really Miss Stanforth. I'm glad you have told me of this case of your sister. It puts the matter of an understudy in a different light from the way theatrical persons see it. They consider an understudy some one who is prepared to take a part in case the actor or actress must be temporarily laid off. They are a selfish lot, and I don't suppose it has occurred to this Helen Wadsworth that by giving up one night's profit she might enable your sister to make her fortune."

"If you know her I trust you will not mention what I have said."

"I do know her and, I thought, very well, but from what you say I have not known her as well as I supposed. I shall suggest to her to give your sister one night in which to play the leading part. She doubtless receives something like $500 for each performance, and, though the amount is considerable, it would be only about a sixth of her weekly income. The only excuse for her not having given way in favor of your sister is that the purchasers of tickets pay to see Helen Wadsworth and not Elizabeth Twining."

"I never thought of that," said the young man.

"If it is an excuse it is a poor one." Young Twining was very much pleased with his encounter and what it promised. The lady did not say that she would secure his sister the opportunity she desired, but she intended to try. Twining begged her to approach the subject gingerly, to which she readily agreed, assuring him that on no account would she make any trouble. However, she cautioned him against raising any hopes in his sister that might not be realized.

Twining arrived in the city in the morning, and the same evening word was sent to the manager that Helen Wadsworth had taken a cold and her voice had become so husky that she would not be able to play her part that night. Miss Twining, who expected at the end of the week to go home with her brother, was hopeful that her going might not now be necessary.

She hardly did herself justice, being agitated at assuming so important a role. But Helen Wadsworth sent word that she would doubtless be confined to her room for several days and perhaps longer, so the understudy had more opportunity. On the second night she did her best, making a pronounced hit, which was maintained in the other performances. Then Helen Wadsworth returned to her work.

On the last night that Elizabeth Twining played the principal part, after being called before the curtain again and again, she found an invitation in her dressing room to sup with Helen Wadsworth and bring her brother, who, the hostess had heard, was with her. The two were driven to the hotel where the actress was stopping, expecting to find her with her throat wrapped in flannels. But she advanced to meet them with no signs of illness and with an extended hand for Mr. Twining.

She was the woman he had met on the train.

"Permit me to thank you," she said, "for showing me that selfishness in myself that I have previously seen only in others."

Elizabeth Twining soon after secured an engagement for a leading part, and Helen Wadsworth took another understudy.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scotch-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Lingonore Hills and the Catoclin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.—Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

A NEW PHASE OF REFORM.

Not by making conspicuous the badge of dishonor, but by showing the chevron of good behavior, is the plan adopted by the San Quentin Penitentiary in California.

The other day there was great rejoicing at that penal institution when the proverbial striped suit was abolished and the gray cadet suit took its place. A bonfire was made and 2,000 convicts, to the music of the prison band, saw the last of this barbaric convict marking go up in flames.

Happily, there is a tendency to minimize misfortune and disgrace in all penal institutions; to instill hope into the hearts of those within; to encourage the unfortunate to lead better lives, and to engage employment for them when they leave. All this is in response to and through the efforts of prison reform movements which, during the past few years, have engaged the attention and the best services of practical and unselfish Christian men and women—human forces that, believing in their fellow-men, have given a tremendous uplift to fallen humanity.

The "trustee," as a consequence is looked upon with pride by his fellow-prisoners to-day; the man on parole is a self-respecting being having the confidence of those who stood sponsors for his limited freedom, while the graduate from the operation of the juvenile court is an inspiration and an example to the misguided of his age.

This whole movement is but the outgrowth of the realization that, in most cases, depravity has a limit and that reform begins when once the right spot is touched.

LOCAL APPLE CULTURE.

So popular and so prominent has the apple become that a day is now set apart in its honor; and so great is the demand for apples of superior quality that orchardists with a reputation are devoting more time and care than ever to the culture of this staple fruit, while farmers who have heretofore overlooked their opportunities are turning their attention appleward.

It has already been demonstrated that land in the vicinity of Emmitsburg is particularly adapted to apple-raising, and an impetus has been given local orchardists' efforts from the fact that fruit from nearby trees has won many an award in open contest.

No fruit pays better; no grain crop is more profitable. Nor is there anything that advertises a community more substantially or more extensively. Buyers from a distance come into apple-growing districts and leave money there—a considerable amount. The fruit is taken to the best markets and the name of the grower and the district from which the product is taken soon become widely known. A reputation and a demand, that holds from season to season, is immediately established.

There is plenty of room for more orchardists here, there is plenty of available land; nor should it be overlooked that the greater the product of fine fruit the greater the inducement to competitive buyers, few of whom will go out of their way to enter a community where there is only a limited supply. Thirty carloads, for instance, will attract the attention of dealers, whereas three carloads will not.

The field is open, the opportunity is here.

THE ANNAPOLIS ELECTION LAW.

When the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court stated to Mr. Marbury the other day during the inquiry as to the constitutionality of the Annapolis election law which practically disfranchises the negro men of that city, he said that the "15th Amendment covered every inch of the territory of the United States." In a Court of Law the question as to the iniquity of the 15th Amendment, may not hold, whether the amendment was forced into the organic law by violence or threats is not tenable, it is a part of the Constitution and it is only with the larger view which constitutional lawyers take of that Charter of Rights either from its letter or spirit that the true intent may be ascertained. There are conflicts of laws between the Constitution and the Laws of the various States and the egis of these rights is the reservation made by the 15th Amendment, that "all rights not delegated are reserved." Certainly the rights that guard the very life of the State must be reserved; for if the Sovereign may disregard the fundamental law of the State, it perishes and is absorbed by the usurping power.

Among the rights reserved, unquestionably the gift of suffrage is one; for the right to vote is an apauage of the State and not of the General Government.

If the State may define the qualifications of its electors, it possesses the power of excluding certain classes. No one can object to the restrictions put by certain States, such as the knowledge of English by the voter, the ownership of property, or the payment of taxes as a qualification for voting; so, if the State has the right to say who shall vote, the converse holds that it has the right to say who shall not vote.

Finally, the 15th Amendment is restrictive. The refusal to allow negroes to vote has but one result and that is the restriction of representation. Better fall back on the old Maryland Constitution of '67 defining the qualifications of the elector, when it states that none but "white men of 21 years of age, shall vote," than, by subterfuge evade the galling exactions of the iniquitous amendment.

THE BRUTALITY OF WAR.

That every nation exists in one of two conditions, peace or war, is true. But the former is that which characterizes Christian civilization, the latter the animal tendencies of man.

Throughout the Book of Life are scattered holy inspirations leading the human family to that irenic period which shall know war no more, it is symbolized in the parable when the lion shall be reft of his ferocity and shall rest by the side of the lamb.

That war should exist is but a proof of the fallen state of man for it argues the imperfection of human reason. It is against the march of civilization, for it destroys and builds not. The bivouac, the midnight march, man darning death and disease in all climates, exposure to life at all seasons, finally to drop into the grave and its silence, speak of horror and sorrow, not the heavenly fruited gifts of peace.

War has never settled any question. The Teacher directs "Put up thy sword; he that smiteth with the sword shall be smitten by the sword." Whatever the sword settles is reversed by the sword. But the time is at hand, when the great people of our land, under the leadership of President Wilson are about to support a new doctrine in which will be eminent the mingled glory of all the better traditions of Christian civilization, which will shine with gathered splendor as the Light of the Spirit of Peace and Justice.

THE "UNRULY MEMBER."

Before those—in whose breast there is a longing desire to start the "Did you hear of?" gossip—before they indulge in the despicable habit of retailing cheap and idle talk, let them first look inward. Let them swing open the door of their own closet in which their family skeleton rests, and let him think on this:

"If you are tempted to reveal a tale some one to you has told about another, make it pass before you speak, three gates of gold. Three narrow gates—first, 'Is it true?' Then 'Is it needful?' In your mind Give truthful answer, and the next Is last and narrowest, 'Is it kind?'"

And then let them mentally wander to the grave of him who suggested these words for his tomb:

"You who pass this grave put aside hatred; love kindness; be all services remembered in your heart, and all offences pardoned; and as you go down again among the living, let this be your question: 'Can I make some one happier before I lie down to sleep?' Thus the dead man speaks to you from the dust; you will hear no more from him."

A little thought, a little retrospection, and there will follow less desire to "talk."

Editorials From Maryland Exchanges.

Mud'Slinging Won't Do.

In view of the immense vote received by Mr. Blair Lee for United States Senator it is being questioned whether the bitter opposition of Mr. Anderson, as displayed in the columns of the American Issue, cost him many votes. In fact it is felt by many persons that the fierce onslaught of the Issue rather helped than hurt the candidate. The Issue was teeming, week after week, with severe criticism of Mr. Lee's course on the local option bill in the legislature of 1912, and people grew weary of its repetition, particularly as the subject of criticism will not be in the legislature of 1914. The cartoons in the Issue were especially offensive and objectionable, even to some, if not many, local optionists, and were so to the people who have taken little interest in the subject, pro or con.—Westminster Sentinel.

Latest Food Advice.

Beware of freak diets and food "experts" and eat what you want when you feel like it. This is the latest official advice of the Department of Agriculture in a warning issued to the public. Back to the good old two-inch beefsteak!

If you feel like eating a fine broiled lobster or fried spring chicken do not hesitate to order it forthwith, say the government officials. Plenty of good, wholesome ordinary food makes man's chance of health the best, they say, giving a gentle rap to mail order menus of alleged cures sold by "dietetics experts" and "folklore" scientists.

This is fine advice for the overfed plutocrats who have to go to hot springs to boil themselves down, but of what use is it to the thousands of girls and boys and men and women who, like the girl who killed herself in Chicago the other day, must keep body and soul together on 15 or 20 cents a day for meals?—Westminster Advocate.

Bird Protection Now and in Future.

In opposition to the millinery interests, many thousands of dollars were expended in written and spoken appeals to the people, whose representatives have, in response, enacted laws that are regarded as safeguarding every form of American birdlife more extensively than ever before in history. To-day Uncle Sam has become the leader of all the nations of the world in the suppression of bird butchery for the feather traffic, and in the preservation of game birds by the new Federal laws, the Audubon warders assert.

Two million birds are reported to have found a safe refuge this year on the Audubon reservation and guarded colonies, including 10,000 egrets over which sixteen armed agents have watched in protected breeding grounds throughout the Southern States. Fifty-two thousand boys and girls have been enrolled as junior members of the National association since last year and thousands of dollars have been spent in supplying the coming generation of the whole country, through the schools, with educational matter that will make bird protectors for future years.—Catoonsville Argus.

No Right to Ballot Space.

The Prohibition party has almost, if not quite, lost its legal right to be considered a party entitled to nominate candidates. For years it has merely encumbered the ballot with names and added to the expense of tax-payers and to the difficulty of voting. One per cent. is too small a following to justify ballot privileges and expense—the requirement should be raised to five per cent. One out of every hundred scarcely has a real right to inconvenience the other ninety-nine.—Taneytown Record.

The Ugly Word.

The New York Sun proposes an addition to the penal code that will forbid the use of the words "lie" and "liar" by a campaign speaker. Undoubtedly our political manners afford room for improvement. But perhaps it would be just as well to prohibit lying in a campaign as to prohibit the accusation. In the form of libel the laws do not prohibit lying, but it is seldom that the accusations of the stump are taken into court. As the charge of lying is calculated to provoke a breach of the peace—though in politics it rarely does—it might be provided that if one man calls another a liar he should be arrested on the spot, taken before a magistrate and required to produce his evidence or be locked up as a common scold. As a matter of fact, charges can be made and refuted without using any insulting terms.—Sykesville Herald.

Aged Preachers in Germany.

The shamefully inadequate provision made for the support of the aged ministers of the gospel of most denominations in this country is in marked contrast to the superb provision made for them in Germany. There, it is stated, the young minister gets a minimum salary, usually $500 and a parsonage. This salary is increased every few years until at sixty-five the minister, even if he has changed his parish, receives $2,500, the largest compensation permissible, to which is to be added the use of the parsonage and certain fees given him. At sixty-five the minister can withdraw on a pension if he shall so elect or if the parish shall so desire, or he can continue by general consent five years longer. On withdrawing he receives as a pension for the rest of his life two-thirds of his last and highest salary. On his death his widow receives an adequate pension for the remainder of her days and also each of her children until their sixteenth or eighteenth year.—Christian Herald.

The Idea of Suggestion.

Richard Mansfield once said that when he was a lad in London he often nearly starved. There was a certain bakeshop where he would go and feast upon the odors coming from the door. That boyhood notion gave him the idea of putting those lines in his play, "Beau Brummel," about "dining on the names of things"—a suggestion he used with powerful dramatic effect.

This idea of suggestion has done many a good deed. About ninety years ago a thirsty man walked up Wall street—I understand the habit of getting a thirst no longer prevails there, or maybe it is only the manner of allaying it—and pumped a tin cup full of water from his own well. "Not so good as I used to get from my father's well," or something to that effect he remarked to his wife. "A pretty idea for a song," said she, and so he sat down and in an hour wrote "The Old Oak Bucket."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Votaries of Church Bells.

The church bell has its votaries. Tennyson sang of "the mellow lin-lan-lone of the evening bells." And do you remember that experience of "Henry Ryecroft"? "I once passed a night in a little market town where I had arrived tired and went to bed early. I slept forthwith, but was presently awakened by I knew not what. In the darkness there sounded a sort of music, and, as my brain cleared, I was aware of the soft chiming of church bells. Why, what hour could it be? I struck a light and looked at my watch. Midnight. Then a glow came over me. 'We have heard the chimes at midnight, Master Shallow!' Never till then had I heard them. And the town in which I slept was Evesham, but a few miles from Stratford-on-Avon. What if those midnight bells had been to me but as any other and I had reviled them for breaking my sleep?"—London Chronicle.

Joke of a Sultan.

The sultan of Turkey once played a joke at the expense of some medical experts at Constantinople. When the plague broke out in his capital the sultan asked if anything was known as to the cause. On being informed that it was to be found in the state of the drinking water, he called at once for six empty bottles, which he had filled in his presence, all from the same one of the palace wells, placed his own seal upon them, and then, without divulging their community of origin, handed all six to a prominent analyst. To his amazement the report sent in was that four of the samples contained plague microbes. The fifth was merely putrid water, and the sixth was quite pure. Abdul Hamid calmly shrugged his shoulders and kept his thoughts to himself.

Would Fill the Bill.

Some who have attended councils and associations can appreciate this story of the late Rev. Dr. Norman Macleod of Edinburgh. Going into a room in which was a cage containing a large owl, he surveyed it for a long time. The owl sat unmoved, placid and erect. His mien was dignified, his horns impressive, his eyes cold and observant, his countenance sagacious and critical. At length Norman broke silence, "Man, ye wad mak' a splendid modera-tor!"—Christian Register.

Sentimentalism.

"Here's a very good definition of a sentimentalist." "Let's hear it." "A sentimentalist is a person who weeps over a fallen column, but is too lazy to help set it up again."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Gifted.

"I am convinced," said Mrs. Meekton, "that women are especially qualified for the duties of statesmanship."

Why?

"Because most of the women I have known were natural born lecturers."—Washington Star.

His Undertaking.

A Realist.

"If there were four flies on the table and I should kill one, how many would be left?" inquired the teacher. "One," answered a bright little girl.—"The dead one!"—London Tit-Bits.

Model Husband.

She: My husband has never spoken a harsh word to me in his life. He—no consideration at all. She: Oh, no! too cautious. —London Opinion.

The Perfect Rose.

"Thou art like unto a flower," warbles the German poet to his love. A certain exasperated old German florist and nurseryman who flourished half a century ago in New York was accustomed to assert with equal positiveness that a flower is like a woman. He had many women customers whose trade he appreciated, but whose demands often drove him to rumple his upstanding Teutonic brush of hair until he looked like an angry parrot. He finally unbosomed himself to the husband of one of them, whose diary has preserved his words:

"I have so much trouble with the ladies when they come in to buy mine rose! They want him hardy, they want him double, they want him fringed, they want him nice color, they want him eberrytins in von rose. I hopes I am not what you call an uncalled man, but I have sometimes to say to that ladies, 'Madam, I never often sees that ladies that was beautiful, that was rich, that was goot tempered, that was young, that was indelligent, that was discreed, that was berrection in one ladies. I sees her mooch not!'—Youth's Companion.

Thorp's Corps.

Testators' requests often lead to strange results. A scotchman, Thomas Thorp, left all his worldly goods to his two nephews on condition that they erected a monument to his memory with at least one verse inscribed thereon. These careful brothers searched long and ardently for a verse at once brief and apt, but they found that the poets were inclined to run to words. They asked the aid of the monument mason, who suggested that the following couplet would admirably meet the case:

Here lies the corp

Of Thomas Thorp.

The brothers thought this apt, but wordy. The mason cogitated long and deep, and, to the satisfaction of every one, the verse found upon the stone was:

Thorp's Corps.

—London Graphic.

German Courtship.

The form in which a proposal of marriage is made has undergone great change in Germany during the past few years. At one time any young man who proposed marriage attired himself in his dress suit and carried a bouquet as an offering to his chosen one. We must not seek to pry into the intimacy of such proposals, but if the disconsolate lover left the house carrying his bouquet with him it was a sure sign that he was rejected. Nowadays proposals are less formal, but engagements are no less binding. In fact, a betrothal is regarded as almost as solemn and binding as the wedding itself. On every possible occasion German lovers appear arm in arm, and the custom is not confined to one class alone. Peasants walk thus, and princes and princesses follow the popular custom.—London Standard.

Horrible Dueling.

A particularly terrible kind of duel was fought on one occasion in Mexico. The opponents were an Indian settler and a rich cattle owner. The weapons chosen were butchers' knives, and it was settled that each combatant was to hold out his hand in turn to have one of his fingers cut off. The first to show the least sign of suffering pain was to have a bullet put through his heart by the other. The Indian had the first cut and amputated the cattle owner's first finger at a single blow. The Indian's first injury was the loss of a thumb, and he likewise remained as impassive as marble. This horrible drama went on until each combatant had lost four digits. Then the cattleman's second became so frightened at the ghastly sight that he shot the Indian dead and ended the fight.

A Golfer's Discovery.

An enthusiastic golfer, one of those fellows who can speak on nothing else but golf, was one day taken by a friend to our local observatory to have a look through the building. The golfer's friend, who was a keen astronomer, got him a look at the moon through the telescope and then asked him what he thought of the planet. To his amazement he answered back, "It's a' richt, but it's awfu' fu' o' bunkers."—World of Golf.

Woman's Winning Way.

"In all my life," she said, with a sigh, "I have seen only one man that I would care to marry." "Did he look like me?" he carelessly asked. Then she flung herself into his arms and wanted to know what secret power men possess that enables them to tell when they are loved.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Taming Time Coming.

"Charles seems to be very exacting," said a fond mamma to the dear, demure looking girl who was dressing for the wedding.

"Never mind, mamma," said she sweetly; "they are his last wishes."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Information Wanted.

"They say that Cupid strikes the match that sets the world aglow. But where does Cupid strike the match? That's what I'd like to know."—Cornell Widow.

The design shown is particularly good for use on a sofa pillow top or for a small table cover. The embroidery may be done in outline stitch, chain stitch or in the long and short stitch, or the design may be braided with fine
soutache braid.

To outline take short stitches, keeping the needle toward the right, and

FOR PILLOW OR TABLE COVER.

work upward. Chain stitch is a form of outline stitch and resembles the stitch made by a single thread machine
if done evenly.

First fasten the thread on the wrong side and then take a straight stitch on the stamped line, throw the thread around the needle, pull it all the way through, thus making a loop. Put the needle through on the wrong side again as near as possible to the spot where it was brought up, make the second stitch like the first one and outline in the same way.

For the long and short stitch take short, irregular stitches close together, working slantwise from the center toward the outer edges of the pattern.
No padding is required.

To apply the soutache braid make an incision in the goods at some point of the pattern, insert the end of the braid, fastening it on the wrong side; then follow the design, turning the curves carefully, and sew by machine either in the center or on the edge of the braid, but avoid cutting more than is necessary.

comes in one size only. Send 10 cents to

THE SCALE TURNED

By ARTHUR GRIGSBY

Edwin Hoxie, an American artist seeking subjects for his brush in Spain, left Madrid to go to the mountains of Toledo, some sixty miles from the capital. Arriving at an inn midway between the plain and the summit of the range, he concluded to make it his headquarters, going about among the evening and concluded to put off any work till the morning. The inn being in a lonely spot and at the time apparently no other boarders in the house, he seated himself on a veranda, where he could overlook the plain far below, and called for supper.

The cloth was laid by a girl in a short petticoat encircled with stripes of various gay colors, beneath which appeared a dainty foot and ankle.

Hoxie was very young, and youth is unthinking. He permitted himself to gaze too admiringly on the senorita and did not take the pains not to do so while she was looking. He spoke some Spanish and began to chat with her, but could get nothing except "Yes, senor," and "No, senor," for she was a diffident little thing, especially in the presence of one in the social scale so far above her.

There were many points in the vicinity where attractive views were to be obtained, and Hoxie attended to his work, not thinking about the girl when doing so. But in the evening between supper and bedtime he needed company and after supper would invent ways to keep her with him on the veranda. The inn was kept by her aunt, and the two women were the only persons in the house besides the few way-farers who stopped there. The aunt Hoxie addressed as senora, the girl as Pepita, which was her name. When he was not out sketching he was continually calling on the one or the other for something—either a glass of wine or a bit of cheese or for Pepita to bring her guitar and play for him.

"You are troubled about something, Pepita," he said one evening to the girl while she waited upon him at supper. "What is it?"

"Nothing, senor," she said.
"Yes, there is something you fear.
Tell me."

"Well, then, senor, there are bandits in these mountains. You should not go out sketching."

"You must be mistaken. I asked about that before coming here and was told that I would be as safe here
as in Madrid."

This did not appear to relieve the girl's fears. There is something that draws a man to a woman who fears for him, and Hoxie drew the girl to him and kissed her.

"It is very lovely for you," he said,
"to be anxious for my safety. Don't worry. I think I can take care of myself."

There was a sound in some shrubbery just beyond the veranda. Pepita started, gasped and trembled. Hoxie looked up at her, surprised, and was about to ask her what had frightened her when she ran into the house.

The next evening was very warm, and Hoxie lay smoking in a hammock in the yard. The moon was at the full and in the rare atmosphere at such a height cast a bright light.
Hoxie dozed. Suddenly he roused himself and looked upon a shadow cast by the moon on the ground directly before him. It was the shadow of a man with arm uplifted. The closed fist seemed to grasp something, for there was a protrusion from it not clearly enough shadowed for Hoxie to discern what it was. Hoxie divined that it was a weapon of some sort, most probably a knife.

Whatever was done must be instan-taneous. Hoxie's reasoning certainly was. He reasoned that some one was about to kill him; that the murder would be committed silently. The only method of escape seemed to be to call to some one. This might frighten off the murderer.

"Senora!" he called without displaying any alarm in his voice.

"What do you wish, senor?"

"A glass of wine."

At the first word the shadow withdrew so that he did not see it. His enemy had sprung back.

"Never mind," Hoxie said, rising as he spoke. "I will drink it in the house."

Not daring to betray his knowledge of his danger by looking back, he walked into the house without turning his head. He had not seen his enemy —only his shadow. Nor did he see him later. His coolness had saved his life. His enemy quite likely was in such condition of mind that a word spoken by the man he would kill was enough, momentarily at least, to deter him, and before he had time to begin again it was too late.

Hoxie was never in a hurry about anything. He said nothing to the landlady about the matter, preferring to think it over before doing so. He remembered the sound in the bushes, where the evening before he had kissed Pepita, and her fright. Here was an explanation.

"Pepita," he said the next morning
when he was alone with her.

"Yes, senor."

"You have a lover, one whom I have never seen."

"Yes, senor."

"Is he a good fellow?"

"Yes, senor," faintly.

There was silence for a few moments, when Hoxie added: "I am going down to Toledo. Goodbye."

THREE MEN ARRESTED.

ESCAPE FROM JAIL

Pursued and Captured by Deputy Sheriff Rowe. - Remanded to the Frederick Jail to Await Hearing.

John Myers, Charles Wills and Chas. Hess were arrested on Saturday night, charged with breaking the locks and hinges on the town lockup.

Within a half hour after Myers and Wills had been locked in the jail, Hess, who had been able to furnish bail, and was therefore a free lance for the time, visited the prison, calmly unscrewed the hinges on the doors and liberated his two friends. They were caught later by Victor E. Rowe, District Deputy Sheriff, and John H. Matthews, Police Justice for the Emmitsburg district, who, after searching the neighborhood, found the fugitives near Crystal Iron Springs.

Myers and Wills are now in the Frederick county jail, while Hess is still out under $500 bail.

The offense for which the men were arrested occurred on October 14. They are alleged to have broken into the home of David Hardman, near Emmitsburg, on that date, and to have stolen quantities of cider and vegetables. Owing to difficulty in finding the culprits, the warrants were not served until last Saturday.

When arrested Myers and Wills were very much under the influence of liquor, and Magistrate Matthews refused to give them a hearing. They were placed in the lock-up. Hess, being sober, was given a hearing, and his bail fixed at $500, which he furnished.

When it was found that the prisoners had made their departure, Deputy Sheriff Rowe immediately secured an automobile and with Magistrate Matthews toured the neighborhood. The men were found near Crystal Iron Springs, brought back to Emmitsburg and given a hearing on Monday morning and additional charge of jail-breaking was added to the charges against the prisoners and the bail of Myers and Wills fixed at $300, which they were unable to furnish. Hess was again released on the $500 bond he had already furnished, while Myers and Wills were placed in the Frederick county jail to await trial on December 1.

DANIEL W. STOUTER.

Daniel W. Stouter a well known and life long resident of this place died at the home of Prof. Frederick J. Halm Tuesday morning of cancer of the stomach. Mr. Stouter was taken to the hospital about a month ago but nothing could be done for him and since then no hope was held for his recovery. He was born near Emmitsburg March 13, 1851. He was a member of the Emerald Beneficial Association and of the Holy Name Society of St. Joseph's Church.

Mr. Stouter is survived by his wife, who before her marriage was Barbara Neck, one sister, Sister Felix, of Mount Washington, six sons, Frank and John of Paterson, N. J., James, of Baltimore, Joseph, of Ridgewood, N. J., Vincent, of Jersey City, N. J., Charles, of Germantown, Pa., and one daughter, Mary, at home.

The Newspaper And The Book

One man in a hundred reads a book; ninety-nine in a hundred read a newspaper. Nearly a century ago, when the American press, which is now a spreading oak, was in its green twig, Thomas Jefferson said he would rather live in a country with newspapers and without government than in a country with a government and without newspapers. THE CHRONICLE OFFICE

AN UNPAID DEBT

By MANTON HENDERSON

The outing season was over, and the outers were returning to town. Expecting an aunt whom I was to meet and see through the city to her home. I went to the station to meet her. I didn't meet my aunt. She had delayed her coming, but I met with an adventure.

Those waiting for the train were roped off to inspect those who left it and to pounce on those we expected when they came along. Among the last was a young lady whose face the moment she saw me broke into a smile, and, advancing to the rope, she dropped a suit case she was carrying and, clasping my hand, put up her lips to be kissed. She was a stranger to me.

I defy any man, be his intentions the most scrupulous, to have a pretty girl put up her mouth to be kissed to draw back. Why, it would be an insult to the girl. At any rate, I kissed the young lady, fervently since I was about it, and awaited developments. I confess I wondered should my aunt come along what she would think of the proceeding. Then I was afraid she would come along and bring about an explanation before an explanation was called for.

"I'm so glad you've come," said the girl. "Did you get the telegram? I'm tired out carrying this suit case." And, taking it up, she handed it to me. "Have you got a carriage? You have changed ever so much."

Now, if she had stopped for an answer to the first of these questions I would have been in honor bound to explain. But she didn't, and, taking the suit case from her, letting her do all the talking, upon which she seemed bent, I escorted her to the street, called a carriage and, my conscience prompting me to go no further, stood still. She looked at me with wonder in her big brown eyes and said:

"Why, what are you waiting for?"

This rattled me, and I got into the carriage and shut the door.

"Where to, sir?" called the driver.

I hesitated a moment, got out the word "Number," hesitated again, and the girl supplied the information. Then we rattled away, I feeling as though I had been committing a forgery and expecting an arrest at any moment. Unfortunately the girl subsided from her loquacity, and I felt bound to say something. I thought it a good time to confess—that is, if I could pump up the courage to do so.

"I feel it my duty to tell you"—I began.

"Oh, heavens! What is it? Any one dead?"

This rattled me again. I hadn't the sand to go on in the vein I had started. I switched off.

"Oh, no," I said, "not that at all. What I was going to say is that for a few days I shall be loaded down to the guards with work and shall not be able to show you the same attention as if"—

"Dear me, how you frightened me! I know Uncle Ben is quite ill, and I feared you were going to tell me that the poor old man had gone."

"Not at all, not at all. I assure you I had no such intention." I mopped my face with my handkerchief.

All the while the carriage was bowling toward the address given the cabman, and I was thinking of that "day of wrath" when I should meet those who would uncover my unintended deception and make me an object of contempt.

"Do you know," said my companion, turning to look at me with her face, her lips dangerously near mine, "that had I not been looking for you I wouldn't have known you."

"You, too, are changed," I replied, and a method of saving myself flashed into my brain. Why shouldn't I pretend to have made a mistake as well as she? Splendid idea! Now was the time. So I continued, this time with perfect confidence: "But, Lou, the change is for the better. You were pretty when I saw you last. Now you are beautiful."

"I'm glad you continue to call me by my first name," she replied. "I was afraid you would 'Miss' me."

Great heavens, rattled again! I had accidentally struck her name. Instead of wondering that I didn't call her Alice or Evelyn or some name other than her own, thus bringing out the double blunder, she was glad I did it.

The carriage swerved to the curb. I was lost. In a moment persons would be running out to meet the girl and give me away. Miserable me, what should I do? Oh, for a little more time!

"Before we alight," she said, "I wish to say something. You won't feel hurt, will you?"

"Certainly not! Go on."

"Please don't see me to the door. They don't know anything about this meeting, and I don't care at present to have them know."

I gave mute thanks to heaven. "I think you are quite right," I said. "I will remain in the carriage."

The devil had been sick and would be a saint. He had suddenly recovered, and devil a saint was he. Conscience with safety vanished.

"Mayn't I have a parting kiss?" I whispered.

We drew back away from the window, and—it was very sweet if it was a rascally proceeding on my part.

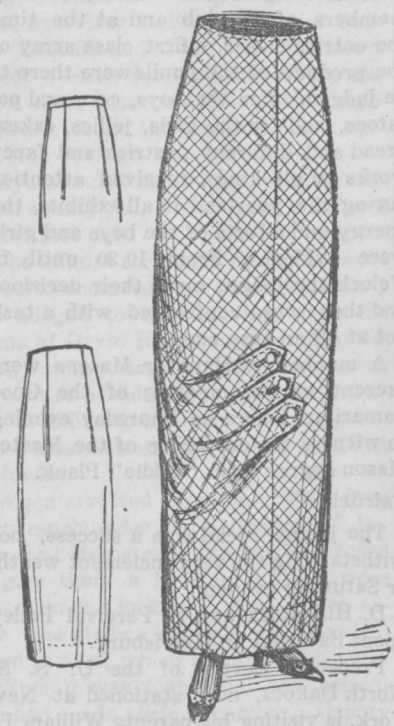

I have often wondered who she was and who was the fellow I owe reparation to for two kisses that belonged to him.

Almost every form of front drapery is to be found in the new skirts. One side of this model is cut with a pointed edge that is lapped in a novel manner. The arrangement of the fullness at the back is exceptional too, for it is laid in two outward turning plaits that give a box plaited effect.

Skirts of this kind are suitable both for street and indoor costumes. Since all the fashionable materials are soft and can be draped effectively it may be generally used. As shown here it is made of checked material cut on the bias. Buttons placed on the points make an effective trimming.

For the medium size, the skirt will require four and a half yards of material twenty-seven inches wide. The width at the lower edge is one yard and a quarter.

The loose blouse suit is the newest for boys. It is pretty and becoming and means little labor for the mother and leaves the youngster free and happy. This one is made with plain trousers, and the blouse is drawn over the head, there being only a slight opening at the front.

In one view two materials are used, and both styles are correct. Galatea and linen, madras and the like are the materials most in use, but for winter serge will be the fabric employed.

Until recently it has been the custom of most mothers to dress their children, whether boys or girls, in feminine looking clothes. Now an edict has gone forth against this style. It is impossible when Johnnie is dressed just like

Susie for the family's admiring acquaintances to tell at a glance the sex of the baby.

For the four year size will be needed two yards of material twenty-seven inches wide for the blouse, with one yard and an eighth for the trousers.

This May Manton pattern is cut in sizes for boys of two, four and six years of age. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, 7996, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage. When ordering use coupon.
