IN BARBAROUS MEXICO

FIGHTING IS GENERAL

Constitutionalist Seems To Have Advantage

HUERTA PLAYS DILATORY GAME

Rebels Successfully Defend Juarez.—Guerrilla Warfare a Feature.—Americans Forcibly Deported For Protection.

As though resting under the inaction of the Washington Government in making any definite stand in regard to the strained relations that have existed between the two governments for some time past a sort of guerilla warfare has been carried on within the Mexican borders during the past week.

The volatile spirit of the Constitutionalist has manifested itself from day to day and each successive attack and repulse by either party has seemingly heightened the desire for open warfare.

Spies and sharpshooters from each side have been actively engaged in behalf of their respective heads and although much of the news that has reached Washington has been in many instances exaggerated, inside information makes it plain that the desire for a "show down" is widespread among the belligerents.

Gen. Huerta's attitude throughout the exchange of official notes has been puzzling to both sides. One moment he has seemingly been on the point of accepting the tentative terms offered by the United States, and at another, having been reinforced by the argument and advice of his chief adherents, he has apparently repudiated previous overtures. This naturally keeps the situation in a confused state and heightens the number of inquiries from the masses as to what decisive action if any, this government intends to take.

For several days fighting has been heavy near Juarez, the Federal troops striving to wrest that stronghold from the Constitutionalist under General Francisco Villa. Canoning was very heavy. After eight hours of fighting the Federals were repulsed with heavy losses.

Stretched in a semi circle for 15 miles the rebel forces kept up detached attacks which became general engagements, thus repelling the first onslaught of the Federals and forcing them to wait for darkness to resume their main attack, which Villa through a strategic move, turned into a rout. The fight was sharp, hand-to-hand in many instances, and the Federals lost heavily.

At a moment when the situation looked grave for the rebels, and Salazar's approach upon Juarez became threatening, all Americans and foreigners were ordered out of Juarez and under military escort were conducted to the international bridge at El Paso. Those Americans who were dilatory about leaving Juarez and were placed under arrest and forcibly ejected. No reports indicate that Americans or foreigners had been subjected to any indignity other than the forcible deportation, which to Colonel Medina seemed necessary for their protection.

Memorial Theatre to Edwin Booth.

Work on another theatre, to be operated along the lines of the once-tried New Theatre, will be started shortly on a site in the vicinity of Columbus Circle, New York. The theatre is to be known as the Edwin Booth Memorial, and will be erected by the Edwin Booth Memorial Corporation. Plans have been completed by Henry Ives Cobb calling for a six-story building to cost $450,000. The auditorium of the theatre, according to Mr. Cobb's plans, will seat 1,528 persons.

It is promised that the theatre will be a distinctly American institution, erected to the memory of an American Artist by American capital and with national ideals.

A New Issue of Stamps.

Postmaster General Burleson has authorized a new issue of stamps of the 7, 9, 12, 20 and 30 cent denominations, to meet the needs of the parcel post business. With these new stamps, and the smaller denominations already in use, nearly every amount from 1 cent to 60 cents can be made up with not more than two stamps, thus saving the annoyance of so many stamps on the parcel.

The largest electric hatching plant in the world is owned and operated by Frott Bros., Plymouth, England. They have 94 incubators, each of about 500-egg capacity, and the average output is about 8,000 chicks a week.

FATHER RUSSEL'S REPLY TO PROTEST AGAINST MASS

Pastor St. Patrick's, Washington, Says There is No Such Thing as a National Celebration of Thanksgiving.

"I am very sorry that exception is taken by anyone, especially by ministers of the Gospel, to a celebration which has for its object peace and good will to men. The purpose of the Pan-American celebration is to bring together prominent men of the American republics for the purpose of fostering friendly sentiments among them. It is not a diplomatic celebration, neither is it official. I am not responsible for the views expressed by newspapers with regard to the celebration.

"There is no Roman claim that this celebration is now the official celebration of Thanksgiving in our National Capital. There is no such thing as a national celebration. The celebration is on the contrary, an occasion when the reserve of diplomatic and official life may be cast off, when men may meet as friends. President Taft saw the good which would result from such a celebration and always encouraged me by his presence.

"At the first celebration the Secretary of State, Mr. Knox, asked me at the dinner to make the celebration annual. The following year the dean of the Latin-American diplomatic corps, Mr. De la Barre, reiterated the request.

"I cannot understand why exception should be taken to the President's attending services in a Catholic church any more than to his attending services in any denomination to which he does not belong. He has attended services, as he has a perfect right to do, in other churches than his own, and I am not aware that anyone has presumed to find fault with his action.

"Because he is President of the United States Mr. Wilson does not forfeit the right guaranteed him by the Constitution to worship God as he sees fit. I cannot understand how men who profess to preach peace should go so far to stir up strife as even to dictate to the President of the United States his mode of worship and try to prevent him from enjoying the right of the poorest American citizen."

What Red Cross Seals Do.

Every Red Cross Christmas Seal that is sold is a real bullet in the fight against tuberculosis. These seals last year helped to support thousands of needy tuberculosis patients and to give them a chance for life. They provided for many visiting nurses, whose hundreds of thousands visits brought instruction and cheer to numerous patients. They helped maintain dispensaries in scores of cities from the Atlantic to the Pacific, where thousands of consumptive patients received free treatment, aid and advice. They provided the means to purchase millions of copies of circulars, pamphlets and other literature with which the public has been educated about tuberculosis. They have established and helped to maintain more than 150 open-air schools for children who needed open-air treatment. These are just a few of the ways in which the $400,000 received last year was expended. This year $1,000,000 is needed. Surely everyone can help by buying at least ten seals.

The Largest Shipment of Radium.

The largest shipment of radium ever sent out of this country left last week for France. It amounted to 150 tons, and will yield a little more than eleven grams of pure radium, which, it was said, will represent a cash value of $1,000,000.

Hermann G. C. Thofehn of Paris, who came here on a special mission to procure a large amount of this mineral for France, said that he had gained control of the entire output of radium producing mines in Mexico, and also owned 80 per cent. of the ore production in the United States.

Will Save Cardinal's Wine Vault.

London officials have decided to preserve intact one of the few remaining portions of the old Palace of Whitehall. The apartment in question, which has a low vaulted roof, is said to be the wine cellar of Cardinal Wolsey, and it at present forms a part of the refreshment department at Whitehall Gardens. A portion of the wall was recently laid bare, with the result that the original brickwork was found to be in perfect condition.

Dairy Cow Establishes Record.

A Swiss cow owned by the Michigan Agricultural College, has made a new world's record for milk production by animals of her breed.

In the year just ended she yielded 19,304.6 pounds of milk, which tested 4.102 per cent and made 1000.5 pounds of butter.

In the East-room of the White House brides have stood, and at precisely 4.30 Tuesday afternoon, Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson, daughter of the President and Mr. Francis Bowes Sayre were united in marriage by the Reverend Sylvester W. Beach, of Princeton, N. J. Dr. William T. Grenfell, of Labrador was best man and Miss Margaret Wilson sister of the bride was maid of honor.

A Very Big Bill For Toys.

Dolls furnish one-fourth of all the toys coming from abroad. Germany is by far the greatest purveyor of playthings, and its flaxen-haired dolls virtually are the only travelers of the kind that are admitted through the customs houses to the arms of American children. In the furnishing of toys England comes next, with Japan, France, Austria-Hungary and Belgium following in importance. The United States' exportations have fallen off steadily in recent years.

The importation of playthings before the New Year is ushered in will aggregate $9,000,000, the experts figure. Added to this the home production will be fully $11,000,000.

Toys to the extent of more than $20,000,000 will have been provided for American children by their dotting parents before the present year wanes, according to the experts of the federal bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

Device to Time Telephone Talks.

A telephone timing device has been put on the market, which is said to be of great assistance in offices where long-distance charges are features of expense. The device consists of five small sand glasses attached and cushioned in an oxidized frame. These glasses are graduated so as to require one, two, three, four and five minutes for the sand to run from the upper to the lower tubes. The sand in the first glass runs out at the end of one minute that in the second at the end of two, and so on. When the fifth glass is emptied the timer is inverted automatically and the sand runs the other way.

FOOTBALL NOT NEW GAME

PLAYED BY ANCIENTS

Spartans Held Contests Under Different Rules

THE SPORT CAME FROM GREECE

Latins Carried it to Britain Where Kings Forbade Its Practice.—The Various Stages of Its Evolution Up to the Present Day.

Park H. Davis, writing for the Sunday edition of the New York Times, opens the eyes of those who have imagined that football is of modern origin.

Football was played at Sparta 2,300 years ago, says Mr. Davis. Several of the writers of ancient Greece refer to it and describe its methods. It was played upon a square field marked by side-lines, centre-lines, and goal-lines, and because the initial play, opening the game, was a long forward pass down the field, the Spartans called the game harpastum, meaning a throwing forward—a word still preserved in the English word harpoon.

The Romans learned the game from the Greeks. Julius Pollux, a Roman writer, is authority for the statement that Augustus Caesar appointed a commission to revise the rules of the Grecian game and make it suitable to military diversions for his legions. Pollux says the field was changed from a square to a rectangle, that the goals were marked by posts, that 27 players constituted a side, divided into 15 forwards, 5 defensive backs, 4 half backs and 3 full backs; that a score was achieved by kicking the ball or carrying the ball between the posts, that two fouls such as kicking the ball out bounds equaled a goal, and that goals were exchanged after each score.

It was from the Roman legions that ancient Britain learned football, and for centuries in olden England football thrived with such vigor that the royal proclamations of King after King against the game, because it detracted from the practice of archery, failed to check its growth.

With the coming of 1800 football was played at all of the secondary schools of England—Eton, Harrow, Westminster, Rugby and others. The style of play at each school was different, but all were characterized by a prohibition against carrying the ball.

Organized football in America originated in a game between Princeton and Rutgers, played on Nov. 6, 1869, under an original set of rules resembling "soccer" more than "tugger."

In 1875 Princeton issued an invitation to the football men of Columbia, Harvard, and Yale to meet them in the Old Massoit House at Springfield to organize an intercollegiate league and to adopt the Rugby rules as a basis for their common game. The meeting was held on Nov. 23, 1876, and the result was the adoption of Rugby football as the American intercollegiate game.

Ingenious young America since that day, year after year, has put many clever innovations in the original Rugby.

"Thermas" Barges to Transport Fruit.

The Lehigh Valley railroad is using "thermas" barges to transfer fruit and other perishable freight. These barges are constructed on the same principle as the "Thermas" bottles and are each ninety feet long. By this means it is possible to keep these delicate commodities at an even temperature during the entire journey from the producer to the European markets, thus insuring their soundness and flavor. Their interiors will show a uniform heat of forty degrees, the temperature maintained in refrigerator cars.

Little icing or heat will be required, however, as the new barges are built to be impervious to heat or cold. Three thicknesses of white pine, alternating layers of specially prepared siding, and two layers of hairfelt make it easy to regulate the temperature on the inside as desired.

May Not Dance the Tango.

A dispatch from Rome says, "the Vatican, replying from several bishops seeking advice regarding the tango and other modern dances, declares the tango must be considered immoral and therefore forbidden to Catholics."

Women wearing slit skirts or transparent gowns have been forbidden by several bishops, to attend church services."

The largest single order of postage stamps ever made out by a postmaster was filed this week by the postmaster at Philadelphia. It called for 90,230,000 stamps valued at $1,696,000.

by rules. Our scrimmage displaced the English scrimmage in the '70s, and at the same time the number of players was reduced from 15 to 11. With the early '80s came a system of running by the side of the player with the ball—called at the time "guarding." This later developed into permissible offside interference, familiar to all under its present name of "interference." In 1887 the English waist tackle gave way to the American knee tackle, and with this change came the contracted rush-line in place of the widespread line of forwards of the old Rugby game. The decade of the '90s saw flying wedges and their derivatives, momentum mass plays, come and go. In 1905 came the famous forward pass, and in 1910 the abolition of interlocking interference. In the last three years many minor details have been perfected, until today, out of Rugby football of 1876, we have a distinctive American game, ingenious, well balanced, and justly meriting its title as king of school and college sports.

This year's fatalities in football exceed those of 1912, the number of killed and injured during the season just past amounting to 14 and 175 respectively. The 175 injured represent only those who were incapacitated for several days at least. Only those in which there were broken bones, torn ligaments, broken tendons, internal injuries, and severe sprains, strains, and wrenches are considered in compiling the record. Of the fourteen dead thirteen succumbed to injuries received in accidents this year. Charles Sweitzer, formerly a Hamline University player, died November 17, at St. Paul, following a complication of diseases resulting from minor injuries received several years ago. In nearly every other fatality death resulted from fractured skulls, broken necks, or spinal injuries.

ADMIRAL RILEY AND ADMIRAL TURNER WILL JOIN FLEET

Picked Men from Turtle Creek Distillery Will Sail Aboard the Submarine "Hot Stuff."—Great Preparations Made.

It seems that all during the negotiations between the United States and Mexico Admiral V. A. Riley has been in close touch with three Secret Service men, in his employ, who have been stationed by his orders in the stronghold commanded by the Mexican General, Vasques Bananarina outside of Mexico City.

In conference Sunday night with Rear Admiral Jake Turner a place was devised which will necessitate landing an additional force of picked men from Turtle Creek on the lower southeast coast of Mexico where they will find the main fleet under the command of Admiral Bushman.

These men, it is understood, have been fed on bull dog meat and silo juice from the "distillery" and each one has been inoculated with tobacco juice and gunpowder. On the voyage in the armored submarine boat, "Hot Stuff," which is under sealed orders, these trustees will each receive copious injections of tiger blood.

Admiral Riley declares that when his picked squad breaks loose in Greaser Land, General Huerta, upon knowledge of its presence, will have an acute attack of rumbunctiumtum and will surrender—unless General Bill Snyder, restive and restless from close confinement in the cider barrel of the Huerta palace, declares himself provisional president.

Recent advices from Mexico, by wireless, to General Jerry Overholtzer, confirmed the report that either General Snyder or Commodore Henry Bowman are likely to make this declaration; in which case it is predicted that the government at Washington will recognize either one of them—(just what will happen when this recognition takes place is not stated).

For several days there has been great activity at the Limberger Arsenal at Friends Creek. Under the personal supervision of Admiral Turner ten thousand mattresses have been stuffed with fish hair. These will be loaded in the hold of the "Hot Stuff" and will be used as breast works when the Turtle Creek forces land.

In preparation for the cruise in the submarine boat, Admirals Riley and Turner have been submerging themselves for days in spring water, at the same time dieting on spring chicken and spring onions. This, it is understood, is to give resiliency to their step when climbing through cactus groves.

Everything is ready aboard the "Hot Stuff." Steam is up, umbrellas and eggs are up, and at any minute orders may be received for the cruiser to weigh anchor.

Would Fly Across Atlantic.

Herr Marinebaureur Wahl, a German ship builder, closely connected with the German Secretary of Navy, is here to arrange with Glenn H. Curtiss for a hydro-aeroplane flight across the Atlantic. Mr. Wahl said that if conditions were found favorable he and Curtiss would make an attempt this winter in a flying boat.

MOUNT SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

The training tables went out of use on Friday.

Several important meetings of the Junior and Sophomore classes were held during the past week.

The football season was brought to a close yesterday, when the hefty mountaineers clashed with Fordham University at New York.

A meeting of the Athletic Association was held in the Music Hall on Tuesday afternoon. All the members were present and many important matters were discussed.

Mt. St. Mary's football warriors engaged in the final scrimmage practice of the season Tuesday afternoon, and the varsity vied with one another in playing the best football of the season. The eleven is in first class shape for Fordham game in New York on Thanksgiving Day and the Mountaineers should be able to give a splendid account of themselves.

Coach Day was very much pleased with the showing his men made against the heavy Albright team last week and he believes that if the eleven will enter into the contest with Fordham with the same zest and vim, there will be some trouble for their opponents. The line has improved wonderfully on defensive work and the backfield has shown to great advantage in the recent scrimmage work.

The alumni of Mt. St. Mary's College who live in the vicinity of New York are planning to attend the game in a body. Many students from the Mountain will accompany the team to New York. The probable lineup follows:

Hannon, L. E., Kelley, L. T., J. McManus, L. G., Rice, C., Dwyer, R. G., Dowdle, R. T., Keenan, R. E., Capt. McManus, Q. B., Sutton, R. H. B., Carroll, L. H. B., Mahoney, F. B.

FOR THOSE WHO ARE INTERESTED IN ROAD BUILDING

Annual Convention and Congress To Be Held in Philadelphia in December.—Event for Road Builders.

The fourth American Good Roads Congress, the tenth annual convention of the American Road Builders' Association and the fifth annual good roads exhibition will be held in the First Regiment Armory, Philadelphia, December 9, 10, 11 and 12.

Many millions of dollars are being expended annually for the improvement of rural roads and city streets, and many more millions will be spent each year in the future. The problem of how this money should be spent in order to secure the best results involves questions of vital concern, requiring careful study on the part of those upon whom the responsibility is placed. It is for the careful consideration of these questions that a great convention is held each year under the auspices of the American Road Builders' Association.

The American Road Builders' Association was organized over eleven years ago, and is, therefore, the pioneer association of its kind. Briefly stated, the aims and objects of the Association are:

First, to unite in a national organization all those in the United States and Provinces of Canada who are actively engaged in laying out or supervising the work of construction and maintenance of roads and streets, and all others specially interested in highway improvement. Second, to carry on a campaign of education and thereby raise the standard of road building and street paving. Third, at its convention to devote its sessions primarily to the presentation of papers and to discussions on the practical questions connected with the design, construction and maintenance of rural and urban highways.

Morgan Et Al Control Billions.

The huge sum of $22,000,000,000 is not large enough to include all the corporations to which the 'influence' of the three allies (J. P. Morgan & Co. and the National City and First National Banks) extends," says Louis D. Brandeis, in the second of a series of articles on the Money Trust, appearing in Harper's Weekly.

At age of 65 only 5 out of every hundred have anything more than their daily earnings.

The game between the North and South resulted in a 9-6 victory for the Southerners. The players were members of the minim department but the game called forth the admiration of many of the members of the Senior side. The Yankees could not hold the husky representatives of Dixie, although they lost out by a comparatively small margin. The Northern and Southern contingents were loud along the cheering line, and now since the game is over everybody seems to be for the South.

The Mountaineer for November is a particularly interesting and well rounded edition of Mt. St. Mary's excellent monthly publication. The contributions in this number are diversified and much above the average of this high class college periodical which, under the guidance of Mr. Ralph Keating and his able assistants, is a decided credit to the College.

In addition to two clever short stories by Keating and James C. Kay there appears a thoughtful critique of the poetry of Francis Thompson, a profitable review of the development of the dirigible by George J. Goldsborough and a very instructive paper dealing with Specialization by J. Ward Kerrigan. It is a plea for preparedness and concludes with this sound advice: "Other things being equal, it is obvious that one who has finished an academic course and then enters upon and completes some special line of work is better qualified than he who has only the training of the particular branch. The man who has restricted his education, if the word can be used in so narrow a sense, enters the field, to say the least, handicapped and hobbled. He will never become an originator, never a discoverer."

The meditative poem, "The Deserted House," is the pleasing contribution of John C. Kelly '16, and John A. Stanton holds the interest of the reader with a speculative paper on, "A Literary Centre in America."

The editorials are timely, the book reviews impartial and the Alumni and Sporting notes chatty and entertaining.

Power of the Country Press

The country press does not need any defense from us, says the American Press. It stands on its own merits as the greatest power in the United States. It could, if organized, make or unmake a president of the United States. It is the most effective molder of public opinion in existence.

THE COUNTRY PAPERS AS A WHOLE REACH A VASTLY GREATER PROPORTION OF THE POPULATION OF THE UNITED STATES THAN DO THE METROPOLITAN DAILIES AS A WHOLE.

The country papers reach upward of 65,000,000 people, and the entire population, exclusive of the Philippines and Hawaii, is 91,000,000.

The papers reaching more than two-thirds of our population are, collectively, certainly more important than papers reaching only one-third of the population.

The National advertisers are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in space in the country papers. They are increasing their volume each year. They have learned that the metropolitan dailies and magazines do not reach an immense mass of people of purchasing power.

Daddy's Bedtime Story

Edna and Her Doll Family Are Photographed.

The Dolls Were Placed Beside Her.

JACK and Evelyn knew by the grin on daddy's face that he had something funny to tell them.

"Most little boys and girls like to have their pictures taken, especially if the pictures make them look nice," said he.

"Florrie and Mimi had theirs taken the other day by the Neighbor Lady. It was a charming picture, and little Edna, who had gone off and hidden behind some bushes, was quite sorry she wasn't in it.

"The next time she saw the Neighbor Lady she told her to be sure to come down some day with her camera.

"I'm goin' have my pitcher taken, too," Edna explained.

"The Neighbor Lady said she was sure to come as soon as she could, and so she did.

"It was a pleasant afternoon when she came down the road with her camera, and the three children were in the yard.

"Edna did not run away and hide, as she generally does when neighbors come in. Of course the Neighbor Lady is not much of a stranger, but one of Edna's favorite games is playing pretend.

"Her sisters had told her that if she ran away she could not get her picture taken, so the little girl sat very quietly on the garden bench with her favorite doll.

"She looks nice there, doesn't she?" the Neighbor Lady said to the children's mother. "Suppose we take her picture with her dolly."

"But Edna had ideas of her own as to how she wanted her picture done.

"Want picture taken with other dollies," Edna insisted.

"Then Florrie and Mimi began bringing out dolls and piling them up around Edna. There was the French doll, the doll with curly eyelashes, the doll with one arm, the doll with half a head, the doll that would float, the rag doll, the wooden doll, the boy doll, the colored Dinah doll and many more.

"They couldn't stand the dollies in a row on the seat with Edna because the row would have been too long to get into the picture, so they stood them up and draped them over the back of the seat.

"The Neighbor Lady tried to coax Edna to have just the best looking dolls taken, but Edna was firm. It should be all or none of them.

"So the Neighbor Lady hurried and snapped the camera, and the picture was taken.

"And when it was finished Edna was quite put out because the dollies on the ends of the row had not got into the picture.

"And now she says she will never have her picture 'taken' any more."

Why Not Schools For Men?
 No man ever feels the need of education so much as the man who sees opportunity for advancement open before him, but who does not dare to take it for fear that he can not rise to it. It is useless to say anything to such a man about neglected opportunities, and it is equally futile to say the same thing to the youth who is neglecting his studies. The first cannot go back and live his boyhood over; the latter cannot comprehend his danger, nor will he believe in his own possibilities, nor can he really study intelligently things for which he is not sufficiently mature. The few who mature early enough in life to go through technical schools or colleges are provided for. Can we not provide men's schools for those who mature normally?—American Magazine.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Touring on foot along the coast of France between St. Nazaire and La Rochelle, sketching by the way, I came to a picturesque spot where stood a cottage. A boy often came and looked on while I worked. I was tempted to cease my landscape drawing and sketch the boy instead, for I never saw a finer model of a child of that age. I chatted with him and learned that he lived in the cottage with his mother, a widow; that his father had been a wealthy man, and until his father's death a few years before the family had lived in a chateau.

Curious to know something more of the story, I asked the boy if he would present to his mother the compliments of an American artist who was on a sketching tour and beg shelter for the night under her roof. He ran away with my message and soon returned to say that his mother would be happy at least to receive a visit from monsieur. I folded my stool, easel and other equipment and, slinging the package on my shoulder, accompanied the child to his home.

I found Mme. Clairmont, his mother, as aristocratic looking as her son. I told her that my curiosity had been excited by her boy as to her family story, and if it would be no intrusion upon her feelings I would like to know more of it. She made me welcome and gave me the facts.

She had married late in life a man much older than herself who was both rich, high born and in every way prominent. One child, my little friend Gaston, had been born to them at a time when it was supposed that she was too old to bear a child. Her husband's brother, who had been looking forward to inheriting the estate, had shown from the birth of Gaston that he was bitterly disappointed at being supplanted. But he gave no sign of any intention to dispute the succession till after the death of her husband a year ago.

M. Clairmont had scarcely been interred when his brother, Martin Clairmont, claimed the property on the ground that Gaston was not his son nor the son of his wife, but the child of one Annette Voudray, a laundress, who had been brought into the chateau to be palmed off as the child of Mme. Clairmont. The claimant obtained from this woman what purported to be a confession to that effect. There was a trial that was dragged through the courts for two years; then the highest court confirmed the decisions of the lower ones, deciding in favor of Martin Clairmont, giving him his deceased brother's estate and Gaston to Annette Voudray.

Mme. Clairmont had possessed a little picture of her own, with which she bought off the woman so far as Gaston was concerned, and he remained with his mother. They had come to live at the cottage, Mme. Clairmont having a small allowance from her relatives.

Such was the story I got from the lady's lips, and I could not doubt her statement. One thing surprised me—that a court should be made to believe that Gaston was the son of a laundress. True, he did not especially resemble his mother, but I have observed that sons and daughters bear the closest resemblance to their parents at a corresponding age. One can hardly expect a child to resemble a parent of sixty.

Mme. Clairmont kindly offered me a room for the night, which I gladly accepted. Her personal effects, furniture, heirlooms, pictures, etc., had been removed from the chateau to the cottage. The room I accepted showed evidence of this. Over the mantel was a picture that interested me. It was roses arranged in an oval shape to make a border for a portrait. The portrait was that of an old woman. Stopping in strange places as I did, I carried with me the most powerful electric hand lamp I could buy. In order to see the portrait more distinctly I brought my lamp to bear on it. The strong light revealed that the old woman's picture had been painted over another picture. The one first painted was too indistinct for me to see any more of it than to warrant my assuming that it was the head and shoulders of a boy.

The next day I called Mme. Clairmont's attention to my discovery and was surprised to find that it was also a discovery for her. Being an artist, I was familiar with processes for removing paint and offered to attempt to take off enough of the first portrait to reveal the second, suggesting that there was a remote possibility of some family evidence behind it that would bear on her fortunes. She assented, and I at once began my work.

But I was obliged to work in a dark room and with my electric light, for the boy portrait was only visible under my electric lamp.

By very careful work I succeeded in removing enough of one layer without the others to show the boy's head and was surprised to reveal a portrait of little Gaston. But his mother said no; it was the head of Gaston's father at Gaston's present age.

That picture brought about a return of the Clairmont estate to its rightful owners. As to the picture, there was but one explanation. The original must have been painted in colors requiring certain artificial light to bring them out. Later some one not knowing that there was a portrait under the flower border had painted the picture for a second portrait.

A City That Was a Failure.

Of all the seven cities of Asia perhaps Sardi has the most interesting and romantic history, and yet, with all its natural advantages, its wealth, its famous rulers, its wise counselors, its victorious armies, it was the greatest failure of them all, says the Christian Herald. The richest man in the world, Croesus, was king of Sardi; the wisest man, Solon, was her guest, and yet, through overconfidence and lack of watchfulness, time and again it was surprised, conquered and all but destroyed, until at last the disintegrating rock and soil from its own citadel, loosened by the winter rains and hurled down by destructive earthquakes, buried the city thirty feet deep from the sight of man. It became a dead city, and it was buried by the forces of nature.

Regulating His Sleep.

John Wesley recognized the evils of oversleeping and gave a recipe whereby one may find out how much sleep he really wants. It was derived from experience. "I waked every night about 12 and lay awake for some time, and I readily concluded that this arose from my being longer in bed than nature required. I procured an alarm, which waked me next morning at 7 (an hour earlier than I rose the day before), yet I lay awake at night. The next morning I rose at 6; notwithstanding, I lay awake the second night. The third morning I rose at 5, nevertheless lay awake. The fourth morning I rose at 4, as I have done ever since, and I lay awake no more."—London Chronicle.

No Matter Who.

A party of women were being escorted through the state house the other day by a bowing and scraping guide. The women were of the enthusiastic type and raved over this and that and said, "Oh, simply too gorgeous." Finally they were shown the portrait of a former governor.

"Oh, superb, isn't it?" said one of them, "and an excellent likeness too. A portrait of whom did you say it was?"—Boston Traveler.

The Fishless Fisherman.

"So you took a day off from your work and went fishing?"

"Yes," replied the man who insists on being cheerful.

"Have any luck?"

"Certainly. A day off is luck enough."—Washington Star.

A Wafer.

"What," asked the teacher, "is the meaning of the word 'wafer'?"

"A wafer," replied Maurice, aged nine, "is a kid without any father or mother."—Chicago News.

But Which Is Which.

By HOLLAND.

EVERY ONE appreciates the importance of pure food. All appreciate the danger in adulteration, the risk in substitution.

You can aid the pure food movement and at the same time aid yourself. How? Merely by buying articles that are of known purity and merit.

How can you know these articles? By watching the advertising columns in this paper and in other papers. Manufacturers who advertise have confidence in their goods and are willing to have themselves and their products known. Makers of substitutes and "just-as-goods" usually hide behind anonymity or use a meaningless firm name or brand.

There can be no better guarantee of the purity and merit of an article than the fact that it is widely advertised.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

The Monroe Doctrine was not, in its nature, intended as a menace to monarchical governments; it was the result of the action of the Congress of Verona that formulated the measure known as the Holy Alliance, by which all European monarchies except England and Russia entered into a compact, not only to help Spain regain her lost colonies, but to check the spread of Republicanism.

Some believe that the message of President Monroe conveys the idea that we shall interfere with the Latin Republics not only preventing them from changing their form of government from a Republic to a Monarchy, but that we claim a supervisory control over them.

In the first place we never interfered with Brazil as long as it was a Monarchy, and the mere fact that President Monroe declared "that we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing (the new American Republics) or controlling in any manner their destiny by any European power, but as a manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States," shows merely a determination to protect these States against interference, not to control their destiny.

While the "Doctrine" was never adopted as a feature of American international policy, it met not only the support of most of our Presidents, but the sympathy of England; and so far checked any designs European Monarchs might have had regarding the Latin American Republics.

Another important question arises from the intent of the Doctrine regarding European colonization on this continent. While Mr. Monroe maintained that "the American continents by the free and independent condition which they have assumed, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European power," it was never intended to preclude the Latin American Republics, without their will, from receiving foreign colonists within their borders.

The Doctrine will come up as long as each Republic carries out the principle that the rights of the governors are derived from the consent of the governed and not the capricious exactions of absolutism.

The denunciations of some of the members at the Pan-American meeting in Worcester, Mass., the other day amount to mere vaporings. As President Polk in 1848 urged on Congress to accept the offer of the dominion of Yucatan to prevent it from becoming a part of the dominions of any European power, so will it be whenever any of the Latin Republics call on the United States to protect it against the menace of any foreign power, this government taking for its rule of action the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine will extend its probation for the perpetuation of the independence of those States that we have welcomed into the family of Nations.

THE PEOPLE REGRET IT.

It is regrettable that the President was actuated by purely selfish motives in deciding to do away with the New Year reception at the White House. No one will deny that handshaking on these occasions is an arduous task, and that standing in line is somewhat of a tax on the physical strength of the receiving party. This, however, is the one opportunity offered the people, the masses, for greeting their Chief Executive, shaking his hand and looking into his face at close range.

MAY THE LEGISLATURE RESPOND.

Many years have elapsed since the Maryland School for the Deaf has received an appropriation of a substantial character from the Legislature, and it cannot be conceived that the governing body of the State will do aught but grant an appropriation of $25,000 for building and improvement purposes at this splendid institution. The needs of the school have been most carefully considered by the Board of Visitors, and at the semi-annual meeting last week this sum was deemed absolutely necessary for the changes contemplated.

Once again we remind Governor Goldsborough of his promise to be a "champion" of the School for the Deaf. The opportunity now presents itself.

MURDER and manslaughter seem to mean very little to Gov. Blease, of South Carolina, who has just pardoned fifty-six convicts guilty of those crimes. During the two years he has held office he has pardoned 882 prisoners—more than one for each day of his term—and by Christmas he intends to make it an even thousand. We fear that Gov. Blease has a very poor a conception of the meaning of the word justice—about as poor a conception as he has of much else that is above the plane of vulgarity and commonness.

DEBONAIR Marie Melrose, Shopped late for some silk Christmas hose—

Said the clerk With a jerk Of his head, Which was red,

"I'm sorry, we're all out of those." Marie knew better than to wait. For years she had been admonished to "shop early," but she always took the advice as a joke. Many others do the same thing—but they get left. If you do not want to be disappointed, begin to shop for Christmas NOW—to-day.

WILL she worry—Miss Putitoff?—No.

At the very last moment she'll go To big stores By the scores Where the clerks Work like Turks—

She will not be well satisfied, though. No one can hope to be satisfied who waits, who puts it off. Christmas goods are at their best NOW. Do yourself a good turn, and do the merchants and clerks a good turn by making early selections.

JUDGING from the numerous advertisements, "Wanted—A Wife," appearing in the Frederick newspapers, men in this county are too busy to court. It is also noticeable that it has not been a path of roses for some who have obtained wives by this means.

Favors Woman Suffrage.

I favor woman suffrage because I believe it will promote better womanhood, bring woman into closer touch with the world, broaden and strengthen her mentally, and make her more serviceable in all branches of life's work. I do not expect the millennium to come with woman suffrage, but man will benefit because he will have for a mother a woman better equipped mentally through her study of public questions, made necessary to exercise the duty of suffrage, and through the responsibilities suffrage will impose upon her.

Such a mother will be a closer companion to her sons; she will have more in common with them, and her influence over them, growing out of her companionship with them, will be more effective. The same will be true of the relationship between husband and wife.

In my judgment, woman will benefit directly from suffrage, man indirectly, but both will benefit, and I therefore favor it.—TOWNSEND SCUDDER.

The promoters of the Sulzer lecture tour lost $500 on the House that heard the ex-governor in Buffalo.

Editorials From Maryland Exchanges.

The Wife-Beater.

Discussing the recent agitation in Congress to have an injunction passed to prohibit the use of the whipping post in Delaware, Justice Aaron R. Anders, of Frederick, declares that the whipping post is the proper method of punishment for the wife-beater. The man who has no more decency or self-respect than to beat his wife, ought to get the same treatment for his punishment.—Valley Register.

The Parcel Post.

Truly the day of triumph has arrived for the little Congressman of Western Maryland when the recent report of the parcel post branch of the Postoffice Department discloses the fact that both the work done and the revenue received far exceed all early estimates. In fact it is perfectly plain that this arm of the government bears many of the heaviest burdens of the country resident, and extends to him many blessings heretofore unknown.

From the standpoint of consumer he may purchase where he pleases and his goods delivered at his door with the utmost dispatch at a nominal cost. From the standpoint of the producer the products of his farm may be delivered to the public carrier who comes to his door, and delivered again at the same low rate, to a city consumer at the lightest rated price without the intervention of the middle man.—Bel Air Aegis.

It is doubtful whether either men or women want feminine clothing reduced to a state of severe, uniform common sense, but some tendency in that direction will be welcomed by a large portion of the more conservative element in this country with considerable enthusiasm.—Garrett Journal.

Huerta's fighting spirit is said to be directed mostly from the bottle, the most prized asset in Mexico's capital city. If all of President Wilson's plans fail to dislodge the Dictator, he might commission Commander Anderson to separate the doughty Greaser from his bottles.—Harford Democrat.

After this football season, a war with Mexico may seem a very tame affair.—Cumberland Daily News.

Hon. Blair Lee, of Montgomery county, is the first United States Senator from this State, elected by popular vote, under the new law. The people voted for him and he should have his seat in the United States Senate without any contest. We think any effort to keep him out on technicalities is ill advised.—Westminster Times.

So far as the suffragist movement in this country is concerned, none of its enemies need fear the consequences of Mrs. Pankhurst's invasion. Her activities and those of her kind abroad have done more than anything else to defeat the aims of those who would give women the franchise. They may be expected to have the same result in this country, where already many of the leaders in the feminist have taken the apostle of lawlessness to their bosoms and identified her as one of themselves. Undoubtedly there are many thousands of women suffragists who shrink from being classed with Mrs. Pankhurst. But in order to escape that fate, it will be necessary for them to repudiate both their leaders and their methods.—Catonville Argus.

In the case of Judge Harlan, who resigned from the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City, to accept from the Fidelity Trust Company a much higher salary than he has been drawing from the State, has precipitated all this twaddle about the alleged insufficiency of the State stipend. It is rumored that the amount to be paid Judge Harlan by the trust company is $15,000 a year. Suppose we should increase the salaries of our judges to $7,500, as suggested, or even $10,000, how would that help our judges on the bench? Fifteen thousand dollars would still be greater than ten thousand dollars, and the big corporations would see to it that their bids would always keep in excess of those of the public. They can easily do so, for the public pays the bills in either case.—Towson Union News.

Undoubtedly the legislature which meets in January will appropriate money for the placing of a State exhibit in the land show next year, as West Virginia has already done. It will be worth every dollar set aside by the State for the purpose, because it will call the attention of the people who are interested in agriculture to what Maryland has to offer to the man looking for fertile acres in a fine climate. And to Frederick county will belong the credit of having blazed the way for the other counties of the State.—Frederick Post.

One Voice Music.

Composers have not scorned writing bits to suit the style of particular singers, thus, as Francis Rogers remarks, "storing up for the usual voices of subsequent generations much travail and sorrow." Mendelssohn crowded "Hear Ye, Israel," with high F sharps to give Jenny Lind, whom he adored, a chance to display the particular beauty of her voice in that region, with the result that that air has been a sore trial to most sopranos ever since. Faure, the famous French baritone, also had a particularly facile and mellow high F sharp, and many parts were written especially to give him a chance to exhibit it to the gasping multitude. But in most baritone voices this F sharp is the very limit of the upper range, and, although it may have both power and brilliance, it seldom possesses either mellowness or facility; consequently all the roles written for Faure (Meyerbeer's "Dinorah," for instance) are particular trying for the ordinary baritone.—Argonaut.

Wearing Shabby Clothes.

It's a great thing to wear shabby clothes and an old hat. Some of the best things I have ever known, like these experiences of the streets, have resulted from coming up to life from underneath, of being taken for less than I am rather than for more than I am.

I did not always believe in this doctrine. For many years—the years before I was rightly born into this alluring world—I tried quite the opposite course. I was constantly attempting to come down to life from above. Instead of being content to carry through life a sufficiently wonderful being named David Grayson, I tried desperately to set up and support a sort of dummy creature which so clad, so housed, so fed, should appear to be what I thought David Grayson ought to appear in the eyes of the world. Oh, I spent quite a lifetime trying to satisfy other people!—David Grayson in American Magazine.

Kleptomania.

The paragraphist opened his typewriter, adjusted a sheet of paper, lit his pipe and sat for a moment immersed in thought. Then he clicked off a single line of copy. He glanced at what he had written, and a look of surprise came across his classic features. Then he gasped, shrieked and went into a fit of hysterics.

His colleagues rushed into the room, but he was beyond human aid. In ten minutes he had laughed himself to death. Then one thought himself to look at the last lines those fingers, now cold and still, had written. At the top of the all but unrolled sheet appeared these words: "Another shoplifter arrested in one of our big stores has been dismissed with a warning and her name withheld from the papers. What used to be called a crime is now yelet a mania"—That was all. But it had caught the paragrapher unawares.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Curious Signboards.

An eighteenth century Glasgow sweep suspended over the door of his house the announcement: Barney Keir, he does live here. He'll sweep your vents, and not too dear. And should they chance to go on fire He'll put them out at your desire.

Edinburgh once enjoyed the distinction of possessing the most prolix signboard on record: "John Main, Stationer, Bibles, Testaments, Psalms, Hymns, Prayer-books, Catechisms, Proverbs, Books, new and old, in various branches of literature. Money or exchange for old Books; Papers, Pens, and Ink; Wax and Wafers; Blacklead, Hair, and Hair Pencils; Colored Books, Memorandum Books, Religious Tracts, Books neatly bound, on moderate terms."—London Mail.

Bear Fighting.

In the seventeenth century on feast days the life of the czar of Russia was enlivened with such amusements as a battle to the death between a bear and a spearman, in which, it is said, frequently the man lost his life. In the event of a successful issue the spearman was rewarded by being taken to the royal cellars, where he was allowed to drink as much as he liked.—Cri de Paris.

Not Enough Practice.

"Oh, Johnnie, Johnnie," said the aunt reproachfully, "why is it you never remember to say 'Thank you?'" "I expect it's 'cause I don't get things given to me often enough for practice," answered the young diplomat, hopefully eyeing a box of chocolates.—Philadelphia Ledger.

When Servants Were Fined.

What would servants of modern times say to the following rules and regulations that were adopted over 300 years ago in the household of Sir J. Harrington, the translator of Ariosto? A servant absent from prayers to be fined twopenny; uttering an oath, a penny; leaving a door open, a penny; a penny fine for any beds unmade, fire unlit or candle box uncleaned after 8; any one breaking any of the butler's glass, a shilling; twopenny fine for any one who has not laid the table for dinner by half past 10 or supper by 6; any one being absent without leave, fourpenny fine, a penny fine for any follower visiting the cook; a fine of a penny for any visitor's room left untidy for four hours after he or she has dressed; a penny fine if the hall be not cleaned by 8 in winter and 7 in summer; a fine of threepenny if the stairs be uncleaned every Friday after dinner.

All these fines were deducted from the servants' quarterly payment of their wages.—London Standard.

Red Hair and Temper.

"All mankind," said Major Hurst, a well known English student of eugenics, "may be divided into those who are red haired and those who are not red haired. It is a fundamental difference." In almost every case of a red haired child the major has succeeded in discovering a red haired ancestor, and he thinks that practically the whole of the red haired population springs from a single red haired man far back in the past. Here are some of his conclusions:

In order for red to appear it must be in the ancestry on both sides.

A red father and a dark mother, or vice versa, hardly ever have a red child.

Two reds always have red offspring. But it is exceedingly rare to find two reds marry, as they seem to have a mutual antipathy.

It is a popular fallacy that red haired persons have any distinctive temperament. They are no more hot tempered than other people.

A Story of Talleyrand.

During the troublous days of the French revolution, when aristocratic heads were dropping in the basket in the name of liberty, fraternity and equality, Talleyrand lived and prospered by virtue of a marvelous ability to tell just the psychological moment to jump off one band wagon and aboard another.

The name of this French diplomat has been kept alive more than have those of most of his contemporaries by a vast number of anecdotes in which he figures. It was Talleyrand whom Mme. De Stael, homely but brilliant, tried to corner by asking him if she and the beautiful Mme. Recamier were to fall into the water, which one he would rescue. And Talleyrand smiled in his most languishing manner and replied: "Ah, madame, but you swim so well, you know!"

Wangen's Fountain of Wine.

A fountain of wine is one of those historical extravagances which are generally associated with the name of Nero, yet on every July 13 the public fountain of Wangen, in the Alsace wine country, flows with wine. In the middle ages the commune of Wangen was sentenced to make an annual payment to the monastery of Strasburg of 400 measures of wine. In 1733 the payment was abolished by the Directory. Under Louis XVIII, two merchants secured the transfer of the payment to them, by means of forged documents, for £650, but the commune commenced proceedings against them, in which it was victorious on July 13, 1830. Since that date a communal festival has been held on that day, and from the public fountain erected to commemorate the victory wine flows for one hour in the day.—Westminster Gazette.

No Complaint to Make.

It was at the radeville. The girl with the excruciating voice had just finished her song. "Just think!" growled Brown to the stranger beside him. "We paid real money to hear that!" "I didn't," was the placid response. "Come in on a 'comp.'" "But you had to spend car fare to get here, did you not?" asked Brown. "Nope," replied the uncomplaining one. "I live in walking distance." "But," persisted Brown desperately, "at least you hoped to be entertained, not punished?" "No, I didn't care," grinned the stranger. "I came to get away from home. My wife is cleaning house."—Judge.

Her Rule.

She was giving orders at express rate, for they were married, and he, as a rule the most meek and submissive of men, was, like the proverbial worm, beginning to turn. "Do you think," he inquired, "that you rule the whole of the universe?" "No," she snapped; "but I rule the first letter of it."—London Answers.

A THIEVING MYSTERY
By EDITH V. ROSS

"Mr. Murtaugh," said Andrews, chief officer of the postoffice detective bureau, "more thievery has been going on at Trimmingham. This is the fourth time stamps have been missed in that quarter, and I wish you to go there and get on to the thief."
"I've been there twice already," replied Murtaugh, "without finding anything wrong. The people of the town all have the most perfect confidence in Miss Griggs, the postmistress, and her only clerk is her younger sister, aged sixteen. Miss Griggs has appeared to be as much puzzled as any one as to what becomes of the missing stamps."
"I'm afraid, Murtaugh, you're too gallant to spy on a woman."

There was a hidden meaning in the words, for Andrews was not above spying on the members of his force and had learned that Detective Murtaugh, who had been several times to Trimmingham to ferret out the source of the trouble, had been making love to the postmistress. Indeed, he would have sent some one else this time, but he suspected Murtaugh of shielding Miss Griggs, and if he was doing this he was recreant to his duties as a postoffice official. Murtaugh made no reply to Andrews' last remark, and the latter added:
"Well, try it once more. If you don't get on to the thief this time I'll try some one else."

This was spoken in a tone to give Murtaugh a warning. He was one of the best men on the force, and Andrews didn't wish him to get into trouble by shielding a thief.
Murtaugh had thoroughly convinced himself of Miss Griggs' honesty, and her sterling worth was apparent to every one. He knew it would be folly for him to spy on her, and, acting on his own judgment, he went openly to Trimmingham and told her that he had come to help her find who was stealing her stamps.

The postoffice was a little one story frame building, all of which was occupied for mail purposes. One night Murtaugh stole unobserved into the postoffice, climbed up under the roof and bored a peep hole in the ceiling through which he could look down into the postoffice. A few stamps had been left in the postmistress' desk. The detective kept awake all night, but heard not the slightest sound below, saw no light—indeed, no sign of any one coming to steal stamps. But in the morning the stamps left in the desk were gone.

Since the thievery was perpetrated at night there was no need to watch in the daytime. Indeed, no stamps had ever been missed in the day. They were counted in the morning and at night. How the thief managed to get into the house after dark without being detected Murtaugh could not conceive.
When sure that no one was near to see him he examined every part of the little building, especially the cellar, for a subterranean passage, but could find no passable ingress. That Miss Griggs or her sister could so far outwit him as to get into the house while he was there without his knowing it he felt sure was impossible. The stealing must be committed by some one else—some one who managed to conceal himself or herself in the building. This person must be able to work quite noiselessly. Whether the exit was made in the daytime or not was like all the rest of it—unknown. Indeed, Murtaugh could not find any possible way any one could get into the building unless by going down the chimney, and to do this without being heard would be very difficult.
During the time of his operations his love affair with Miss Griggs was being brought to a head, and when he returned to his chief the only thing he had to report was that he was engaged to the person whom he had been sent to spy on. This he kept to himself, though Andrews knew of his lovelornness, for he had sent a detective to spy on his spy.

Andrews astonished Murtaugh by discharging him. He also transmitted an order written at his suggestion from Washington to Miss Griggs that she was required to make good all the stamps that had been purloined. Since from the first more than $100 worth was unaccounted for and the salary at Trimmingham was but $400 a year Miss Griggs found herself unable to comply with the order, for she and her mother and sister needed every cent of her income.
Murtaugh found another job. Miss Griggs was permitted to retain her place till an enlargement of the postoffice building which was intended could be made. In taking out a side of the house the workmen laid bare a space that was filled with fragments of postage stamps. Miss Griggs' desk had stood against this wall. Mice had gnawed a hole from the wall into the back of the desk, which gave them access to the drawer in which she kept the stamps. The tiny thieves, attracted by the gum arabic on the back of the stamps, had carried them where they could feast on it at leisure.
A great deal of sympathy had been manifested for Miss Griggs by the townspeople who all signed a petition that she should be retained in her position. This was now not necessary. She would have retained her position, but Murtaugh established a detective agency of his own and wanted to attend to his business.

That the foot of the stocking is quite sure to wear out while the leg portion is perfectly good is well known. Darps are exceedingly trying and often injurious, but new feet can be set in with perfect success if a little care is taken.
Of course silk stockings are more difficult to refoot than those of lisle or cotton, but the refooting may be accomplished if sufficient care is taken in catching up the dropped stitches. These stitches must be fastened securely before the work is done.
The illustration shows soles of two sorts, which are equally desirable and which can be cut from the good portions of one stocking and inserted in others. The seams are so arranged that there is no danger of discomfort or of any annoying rubbing.

HOW TO REFOOT STOCKINGS.

The pattern is cut in eight, nine and ten inch sizes. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, 789, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage. When ordering use coupon.

TRAPPER OF NEAR FOUNTAIN DALE IS ASSAULTED

Aged Man Hit on Head With Club By Intruder.—Another Breaks Collar Bone and Arm.—Sufficient Clues for Arrest.

On Sunday night David Wilkenson, of near Fountain Dale, Pa., a trapper by trade, heard a noise in his barn where he is accustomed to store hides and pelts. Upon opening the door a man, who had evidently entered the building with the intention of "making a haul" sprang at him and hit him a severe blow on the head with a heavy club.

Regaining his feet Wilkenson knocked the man down. Just then another intruder felled Wilkenson to the ground, breaking his collar bone and arm and seriously bruising him about the head. It is understood that there are sufficient clues to lead to the apprehension of the assailants.

Dr. Jamison is the attending physician and reported very favorably on Mr. Wilkenson's condition.

The affirmative speakers were Ella May Caldwell and Ferne Byers; negative, John Fuss and J. C. Annan. It was decided by the judges and by the school that the affirmative won the debate. Then followed a song, "Flow Gently, Sweet Afton." Composition, "Winter" by Charles Riffle. Select reading, Harriet Beam, "Progress." Instrumental duet, "Over Hill and Dale," Loretta Gilliland and Ferne Snook. Recitation, "Thanatopsis," Clyde Cover. The Reading Circle was composed of Mary Weant, chairman; Allan Moser, Reading of Life of Poet. The poet was Wordsworth. Then followed a discussion of the poet and his works by the school. Report of the critic. Question box, words and manners. Truthfulness. The program was concluded by singing "Over There." Society adjourned to meet Friday, December 5.

Good Conditions in This Country.

Sir George Paish, editor of the London Statist, chief speaker at a meeting of the Commercial Club Boston, makes this statement about the economic condition in this country:

"Never has the international position of the United States been stronger than at the present time." The position here is unusually sound. For the distant outlook I am equally hopeful. I believe that the present trend of sentiment and of legislation makes for a great increase in agricultural production in the United States, and this promises to create a greatly increased number of home consumers for American manufactured goods."

Every woman who likes a pretty, becoming hood will welcome this design. There are scarf ends that are charmingly graceful as well as practical, and the little wrap can be utilized in two different ways.

With the hood drawn up over the head as shown on the figure, it is a perfect protection for the motor, for the steamer or for cool evenings.

Worn as a scarf, as shown in the small cut, it is a pretty, simple wrap for the porch. It is so simple to make that any woman can have such a scarf within an hour or so's work. In the illustration black messaline is lined with

The scarf will require one and seven-eighths yards of material twenty-seven inches wide, with the same amount for lining.

FASHION HINT

Lingerie was never more entrancingly pretty and dainty than at present. Transparent effects are decidedly in the ascendant. Each garment is made of thin fabrics and shaped closely, with the paramount idea of keeping the figure slim, and all trimmings are put on without extra fullness. Shadow and val lace and a little Irish lace with fine batiste and nainsook faintly embroidered by hand and machine are put together with narrow beadings and fancy stitchery.

These drawers are built on the latest model. They are closed at the sides, and the fullness at the back is regulated by ribbons and casings, but they consist of only one piece of material.

In one view the straight edges are trimmed, and in the other the edges are cut off and frills joined to them.

CIRCULAR CLOSED DRAWERS.

A still different effect could be obtained by scalloping the straight edges and embroidering some design above.

Washable silks and crepe de chine are being used for garments of this kind as well as the familiar batiste and the like.

For medium size the drawers will require one and seven-eighths yards of material twenty-seven inches wide, with three and a half yards of insertion, one and three-quarter yards of edging to make without frills and three yards of embroidery one and three-quarter yards of insertion to make as shown in back view.

This May Manton pattern is cut in sizes from 22 to 33 inches waist measure. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, 788, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two cent stamp for letter postage. When ordering use coupon.

THE PARSON'S REMEDY

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

It was love that brought about the marriage of Abraham Scott, a young farmer, with Tilda Hastings, and for the first year they were very happy. Then it happened that Tilda's mother passed a week with them, and when ready to go home she said: "Tilda, I've been watching things since I've been here."

"Why, what is there to watch?" she asked.

"Henry's tyranny over you."

"Why, mother?"

"It's a fact. If your father treated me that way one of us would leave the house in short order!"

"But I can't understand you at all. Just what has Henry done?"

"He's treated you like a child or a slave. I saw it the first day I was here, and it amazed me that you didn't show your spunk."

"Why, mother, how strange you talk!" said the wife. "Tell me one thing Henry has done that wasn't right."

"I'm going to tell you of more than one, Tilda. I've been setting them down on paper so as to be sure, and here they are:

"The first day I was here he walks in and orders you to melt some mutton tallow for a sore back cow."

"Why, he didn't order. He asked me to."

"Don't try to excuse him. There was a commanding tone in his voice. The second day he comes stomping in like a duke and calls out:

"Hey, Tilda, I'm going to town, and don't you forget to feed the hogs at noon!"

"But I don't see anything wrong about that," was protested. "He was going after nails."

"Well, I'd just like your father to roar out at me like that just once! I'd tell him to go to Texas quicker'n wink. On the third day your Henry hollered at you from the barnyard and wanted to know if the sheep shears were in the kitchen."

"But he wanted them, mother."

"I s'pose he did, but he spoke like old Nero. If your father had called to me like that I'd have gone down there with a club. On the fourth day, as we was eating supper at 6 o'clock, the clock stopped. You must remember what Henry said?"

"He said it had stopped."

"Yes, but how did he say it? He looked right across the table at you, and there was pounded glass in his tones as he said:

"Tilda, you forgot to wind up the clock last night."

"But I did forget, mother."

"And what if you did?"

"What do you want me to do, mother?"

"Assert yourself. Be the boss of the house. Have things go as you want them, to the same as I do. Your father wouldn't dare to pull a cabbage head in the garden without asking my leave."

The wife hadn't looked upon her husband as a tyrant. On the contrary, she regarded him as one of the kindest men she had ever heard of. She had no wish to meddle or boss, and she had felt that she was getting all the rights she could well take care of. But the mother had sowed the seeds of discontent, and they soon sprouted. Tilda began to find fault and tender advice and to even threaten suicide if her opinions were not deferred to. Henry figured out that the mother-in-law had been talking and using her influence against him, but he went ahead patiently and avoided anything like a rupture.

It was when the boy baby was born that Tilda's mother said to her:

"Now, you want to put your foot right down about a name for baby. I am sure Henry will want to call him James, after an uncle."

"But that's a good name, isn't it?"

"Tilda Scott, have you lost your senses?"

"I hope not, mother."

"Then perhaps you can tell me who the ravens fed."

"Moses, wasn't it?"

"Not by a jugful! It was Elisha, and that's the name you want to give baby."

"But I'm sure Henry won't like it."

It so happened that Henry overheard most of the conversation as he was training a vine by an open window. He didn't walk in and order the mother-in-law out of the house, but he sauntered off to the home of the parson whose church he and his wife attended and stated his case down to the baby, then added:

"My wife is to threaten to jump into the horse pond if I object to the name."

"You have a horse pond?"

"I have, sir."

"How deep is the water?"

"About four feet."

"The mother-in-law is about five feet, I believe."

"Thanks," said Henry. "I have the den."

Henry got home just as the mother-in-law was leaving the house. He picked her up and carried her to the pond and heaved her in. When she waded ashore he heaved her back. When this performance had been repeated for the fifth time he asked:

"Have you anything to say to me?"

"Yes," was gasped in reply. "Baby can be named James, and I'll never darken your door again."

And hence came back and never left the household again. What should we do without the parsons to advise us?
