Extracts from Bulletin No. 165, Vol. XVI, April, 1913.

April, 1913.

"The average calculated yields for three years of eleven varieties tested shows Greater Baltimore' ranking First with a yield of 16.25 tons per acre against Stone 13.38 tons per acre.

"Considering Yield and Quality the eleven varieties tested will rank as follows as a field crop for canning:—First 'Greater Baltimore.'

"Picking season from July 25th to October 1st, the 'Greater Baltimore' yielded nearly 22 Tons Per Acre.

"The 'Greater Baltimore,' which has been gaining in popularity with the Canning Trade during the past two years, begins bearing 12 to 16 days earlier than the Stone, when both are sown and handled in a similar manner throughout the season.

"It will also be seen that 'Greater Baltimore' is carly a bearer as Chalk's Early Jewel, which is carly a bearer as Chalk's Early Jewel, which is early a bearer as Chalk's Early Jewel, which is carly a bearer as Chalk's Early Jewel, which is carly a bearer as Chalk's Early Jewel, which is carly a bearer as Chalk's Early Jewel, which is carly a bearer as Chalk's Early Jewel, which is carly a bearer as Chalk's Early Jewel, which is carly a bearer as Chalk's Early Jewel, which is carly a bearer to considered an early sort.

"It is largely the Earliness and the Uniformity with which the plants bear a Large Number of Large Smooth Fruit throughout the ripening season that makes the 'Greater Baltimore' superior to the Stone, which has been the standard canning 'The average date of first ripening for the 'Greater Baltimore' way 120 days from the sowing of the seed in the hot beds and 65 days from the time the young plants were set in the field."

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scoth-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn .- Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

P. pular Egotists.

J. Sloat Fassett, of New York, political sage, looks over current politics and observes four colossal egotists. By a happy dispensation of nature they are equally divided between the two parties. The egotists of his party are Theodore Roosevelt and Charles E. Hughes; those of the Democratic party are the President and the Secretary of State. We fear Mr. Fassett uses lanwas used for the right purposes.—Towcertainly has many of the marks of the egotist about him, but the last presidential election proves him to be a prime ident's election to be governor and would seem that at least three of the

Mr. Williams has been Assistant Secretary of the Treasury since the Wilson Administration came into office and has not commended himself to conservative financial opinion by his conduct. The salient facts of his record as Assistant Secretary are his reversal of the judgment of the acting Comptroller of the Currency in the matter of a falling trust company and his indirect violation of the law to rescue it. The story of Mr. William's appropriation to himself of a power not lodged in his office as an Assistant Secretary has been published in the press of the United States but it is worth recalling since President Wilson has thought him qualified to be Comptroller of the Currency. Getting Around It.

The members of a party around a table in an exclusive club in a downtown skyscraper were much amused the other evening by a controversy between their walter and another employee of the club.

One of the party had ordered sirup. What the sirup was for has nothing to do with this story. Going to the dumb waiter, the servitor shouted in his best ordering voice:

"Sirup!" "I don't getchu." came the response down the shaft.

"Sirup!!" this time with two exclamation points and rising inflection. "Come again," was the imperturbable

Courtship by Flowers. In remote Alpine hamlets and villages, especially in the Bernese Oberland, there still exist ancient and pretty customs of proposing marriage by the language of flowers. If a maid accepts a bouquet of edelweiss from a man she at the same time accepts him as her flance, the idea being that the man has risked his life to obtain the flowers for the woman he loves. An other method which exists in the canton of Glarus is for the young man to place a flowerpot containing a single rose and a note on the window sill of the girl's room when she is absent from home and wait-perhaps daysfor a reply. If the maid takes the rose the young man boldly enters the house to arrange matters with her parents. but if the rose is allowed to fade away the proposal is rejected without a sin gle word having been exchanged be tween the couple. Sometimes a fickle girl will keep a young man waiting a day or two for an answer, but whatever it may be it is final.

When Buttons Were Big. Bachaumont writes in his "Secret

Memoirs," Nov. 18, 1786: "The mania for buttons is today extremely ridiculous. They are not only of enormous size, some of them as big as six pound crowns, but miniatures and pictures are made upon them, and this orna mentation is extremely costly. Some of them represent the medals of the twelve Caesars, others antique statues and still others the Metamorphoses of Ovid." Isabey, in his biographical notes, says that when be came to Paris he worked for a living by making copies of Vanloos and Bouchers on the lids of snuffboxes and that for these medallions he was paid from 6 to 8 francs each. was still the fashion," he said, "to wear buttons as big as a five franc piece upon which cupids, flowers and landscapes were cut in cameo, I went into that business I got 12 sous for each."-Philadelphia Ledger.

Railroad Through the Air

A marvel of engineering is this new monorail line, suspended in midair, between Elberfield and Barmen, Germany. The tracks of this railroad have their roadbed in the air, suspended by very wide inverted V-shaped steel girders. The train is operated by electricity, its truck wheels running along this single track. An alarming rate of speed is attained by the train. American tourists visiting this section of the country find great pleasure in riding on this line, which winds its way along the Wupper river.

A necessary tool for testing is the file, which is not able to injure or scratch a real diamond, while on an imitation it quickly makes its mark. Kakko Dancers of Japan

Despite the modernization of Japan, there still survive in the villages many curious old customs, among these being the Kakko dance. The parade of the dancers is here shown. The two men leading carry paper lanterns, for the dance was originally a nocturnal affair. After them follow the performers, most of them wearing peculiar hats that cover both head and face, and carrying small drums.

By DOROTHEA HALE

Ned Forsythe was the son of an inventor who had not the business capacity to reap the profit on his inventions. Perhaps it would be nearer the mark to say that the elder Forsythe had not the capital to put the novelties he produced on the market. At any rate, he died, leaving his widow and her only child, Ned, in poverty, as they had al-

But Ned understood that just before his death his father had invented an explosive that would prove far more valuable than any that had yet been produced, being especially available in gunnery. He had offered his invention to the government, had given an exhibition of its working and had received an order for a large supply, to be followed by other orders at a price that would make him rich. Furthermore, a company with an established plant capable of manufacturing the stuff had the contract to produce the goods. Nothing remained but to pass over the recipe for the explosive when the inventor fell on the floor of his laboratory and died without speaking a word.

After his father's death Ned hunted high and low for the formula. He first went through the laboratory, searching every nook and cranny, examining every scrap of paper, but without success. Then he looked through the house in which the family lived, a little frame dwelling on the outskirts of a city, with no better success. There was no other place to look, and Ned and his mother, from a prospect of stepping from poverty into affluence, found themselves worse off than they had ever been before.

But Ned did not give the matter up. He had heard his father tell his mother that he was puzzled how to keep his secret till he had made all his contracts and must give it to the manu-

Forsythe knew that should he be suddenly taken away his wife and child would be cut off from the benefits of his invention. He had once parted with the secret of an invention and thereby made another person rich without reaping any benefit himself. He had then vowed that he would never part with another such secret until the last moment. He told his wife shortly before his death that he had decided to put the recipe for the manufacture of his explosive into cipher. But as to what he was to do with the cipher or the key he said nothing.

A month passed after the inventor's death when Mrs. Forsythe received a letter addressed to her in the well known hand of her late husband. On the envelope was written "Via San Francisco, Hongkong, Aden, Naples, New York." The letter bore the postmarks of these cities and had evidently been around the world. The recipient tore off the envelope, and there, on the paper inclosed, was written a jumble of words. Below was written:

receive this I shall have told you where the key is to be found.

The poor woman had received another disappointment. Her husband had, under fear of losing his secret, deprived his wife of that which he desired her to possess. What was there in these incoherent words of any value without the key? The letter, however, had a different effect upon her son. He vowed that he would decipher the recipe if he spent his whole life in doing so.

Several months passed, and it seemed that the receipt of the letter had been for worse instead of better. Ned made no headway in deciphering the word puzzle. Having his father's fear of giving away the secret, he would not intrust any one else with it and spent so much of his time on it that he was useless at anything else. He and his mother were near the point of starvation when a brother of the late inventor was summoned and asked for the wherewithal to purchase something

He was told about the invention and the cipher recipe. Having asked to see the latter, it was shown to him. As soon as he looked at it his eyes lighted with interest.

"Your father." he said to Ned, "was during the war for the Union a member of the staff of a general officer. This you know as well as I, but you may not know what your father told me-that when telegrams were sent by his commander it was his duty to put them into cipher and when they were received to decipher them. He kept some of these dispatches for awhile after the war and showed them to me and the principle on which they were built. I think he has used that principle in this case. The recipe has, I believe, been written in a certain number of columns, down one, up another. proceeding till every column is filled. Here are check words having no mean ing, thrown in doubtless to make the matter more complicated."

Sitting down, Ned's uncle wrote out a message in columns and gave Red the plan. What had been a jumble of words became a perfectly coherent message. Ned grasped the idea, and the two went to work to decipher the

They failed at the time, but Ned worked on and at last produced an intelligible reading. The matter was again taken up with the manufacturer, the recipe produced, and Ned and his mother are now rich.

In the picture the frock is made of rosebud batiste, but the design is a good one for challie, cashmere or silk. The round neck will be preferred by most mothers, but the frock can be made high, with a low neckband. The sleeves allow of a choice of three lengths.

For the four-year-old size the dress will require two and a half yards of material twenty-seven inches wide, with two and an eighth for banding.

How An Artist Obtained Recognition

By F. TOWNSEND SMITH

Alan Vail when a schoolboy was constantly scotded for covering his books with pictures. The flyleaves and the margins of the pages were covered with heads of persons with all sorts of expressions, besides the hodies of dogs, horses, cats, elephants and other animals. One could easily tell by referring to his schoolbooks how much and how little each subject interested him. For instance, his reader, the lessons in which were well selected, was quite free from sketches, while his arithmetic and grammar were full of them. He was interested in the reader, but he detested grammar and arithmetic.

Alan determined to be an artist. His father, who was a practical man and had a large family to support, shook his head at his son's choice of a field of labor, but since Alan seemed fitted for nothing else than an artist he consented. He could not afford to send the boy abroad to study, so he was obliged to prepare himself for his profession in America. A part of a course in an art school was all the instruction he received. Then he began to try to pick up a living as best he could by making pictures.

Like most persons of artistic nature, he first flew high. He painted on canvas, but no one cared to buy his pictures. Then he tried to get an order to illustrate books; but, the field being occupied, he sank to an illustrator for a third rate newspaper. At this he made just enough to keep body and soul together.

One day Alan saw a baby sleeping in its crib. He was much impressed with the relaxedness of the little one and wondered if he could transfer it to paper. He tried and was eminently successful. The child slept just as sleepily on paper as he did in his crib. "I'll tell you what you do with that, Alan," said a friend. "Send it to a baby food company and ask for an order to put it in oils for an ad."

Alan shuddered at the suggestion. Was he indeed reduced to applying his art for business purposes? But he needed money to pay his room rent, so he acted on his friend's advice. The company quickly returned the picture with the order he had solicited, offering him $100 for his work. When the picture was finished every one who saw it remarked:

"How pretty!" "Dear little thing!"

"Sound asleep, isn't he?" These remarks and other such ingenuous criticisms so pleased the artist that he forgot that the picture was to be degraded as an advertisement. But when he sent it to the food company and received it back again with instructions to put in it a baby's bottle with the words "Perkins' Food" on it he almost cried.

However, the promise of a check as soon as the picture was returned with the "essentials" painted in helped to sweeten the dose, and Alan got himself down to the task. He received the check, paid his room rent, bought himself a new outfit of clothes and a good meal. Thus improved in body and mind he bethought himself what next to do.

Art is art, even on a sign or an advertisement, and not a few of the world's great artists have been obliged to apply their abilities in this way. To get that relaxedness on canvas or in marble that Alan had transferred from the sleeping child is one of the main features of genius. Persons who saw the Perkins food advertisement saw simply a sleeping child. Here and there one who knew the picture's intrinsic worth supposed that the work of some great artist had been appro-

Alan knew he had produced something that he had only seen in drawings which were exhibited as treasures of art. He determined to try it again with a dancing girl. Between the model when placed on the canvas and other pictures of dancers was the same difference as between two girls the one of whom is born graceful and the other is not. He continued to work in this vein till his $100 was exhaust ed, but by this time one of his pictures was sold, for a song, it is true, but it produced money. This was the first encouragement of a practical kind that the young artist received. That first bank bill paid him, though but a tithe of the price paid him for his ad., was far more grateful to him. But this was a matter of sentiment. One who saw the picture that Alan what it was really worth wanted one by the same artist. This led to another sale, and these two led to others, and it was not long before dealers would say to inquirers, "Oh, that's an original Vail, and his pictures come

But these earlier prices were dwarf ad by those Alan obtained ten years later In one respect his work did not improve, but in other respects it did main reason why his pictures commanded a high price was because the were advertised. In other words, I found that their worth, as well as Pe kins food depended on their bein shown to large numbers of persons and in advertising that article he ha advertised himself.
