NOTED INVENTOR DIES IN NEW YORK

George Westinghouse Succumbs to Heart Trouble.

HAD BEEN ILL SOME TIME

Was President and Founder of Great Electric Company and Inventor of Air Brake.

George Westinghouse, sixty-seven years old, president and founder of the Westinghouse Machine and Electric company, with home offices in Pittsburgh, Pa., died in New York. He had been confined to his bed for some time.

A member of Mr. Westinghouse's staff said that he had been suffering with a heart complaint for over three months. Later it grew worse, and on Monday last he had a relapse, that left him weak.

Had George Westinghouse achieved nothing more than the invention of the airbrake, his name would have taken rank with those of great American inventors. But he has done more—much more—along the lines of controlling electrical current, utilizing various natural forces for commercial purposes, both generally and specifically, and has built up in the course of a long lifetime of intense activity so vast a business, here and in Europe, that his name is written indelibly on the world's tablets of fame.

Westinghouse was born in Central Bridge, N. Y., Oct. 6, 1846, the son of George Westinghouse and Emmeline Vedder Westinghouse. His father was the proprietor of the New York Agricultural works, at Schenectady, and from almost the age of ten George, Jr., was an earnest and eager "worker" in his parent's shops.

When the Civil War broke out young Westinghouse enlisted in the United States volunteers, with which he served from June, 1863, to November, 1864. He then became an assistant engineer in the United States navy, in which capacity he served until August, 1865.

He experimented first with a railroad frog, which turned out a success. The air-brake came next. It is said the idea dawned when he personally saw two freight trains collide head-on, although this point is not definitely authenticated.

Westinghouse next applied the compressed air principle to railroad switches and then to signals with such success that even the unwilling Commodore Vanderbilt was forced to recognize the value of "wind" properly applied.

Biltmore, Mr. Vanderbilt's world famous estate in North Carolina, is left to his daughter, Cornelia, who is now twelve years old. She also receives $5,000,000 in cash and is made residuary legatee.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, the widow, receives the estate at Bar Harbor, Me.; the Vanderbilt home in Washington, $250,000 in cash, a life interest in a trust fund of $1,000,000, which she may dispose of at her death as she sees fit, and part of the real estate in North Carolina, known as Pisgah Forest, containing about 80,000 acres, together with the contracts for the sale of timber therefrom, estimated to produce about $50,000 a year.

MISS WILSON'S RING

It Is a Large Diamond Solitaire and Weighs About 4 1/2 Carats.

The engagement ring of Miss Eleanor Wilson is in strong contrast to that of her sister, Jessie, now Mrs. Sayre.

Mr. McAdoo's choice for his fiancée is a large diamond solitaire, set in platinum. The stone weighs about four and a half carats and is blue white. It is set in prongs, surrounded by an elaborate and delicate filigree, studded with small diamonds on each side of the solitaire. Miss Wilson has shown her ring to all her friends.

Another White House Wedding.
President and Mrs. Wilson issued a formal announcement of the engagement of their youngest daughter, Miss Eleanor Wilson, to William G. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury.

The announcement came in the following brief statement from the president's secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty: "The President and Mrs. Wilson announce the engagement of their youngest daughter, Eleanor Randolph, to Hon. William Gibbs McAdoo."

The announcement did not come as a surprise to official and social Washington because of the fact that informal confirmation of the engagement had been previously made by Secretary Tumulty. It was then stated that the formal announcement would be made in a few days.

While no formal announcement of the date for the wedding could be made because of the haste with which it was decided to make known the engagement, it is understood unofficially that the ceremony will be performed in two or three months. A day early in June is expected to be chosen.

Says There Is "Fortune Telling Trust"

According to "Professor" John Brenner, in Allentown, Pa., there is a "fortune telling trust" in New York city, which establishes necromancers in various cities and exacts commissions from the proceeds they are able to gather from a fleeced public.

"Professor" Brenner, who several weeks ago established himself next door to the home of Chief of Police Bernhart, pleaded guilty. He said he did not know that fortune telling was contrary to law.

Brenner had been in Allentown only a few days when he was arrested by Chief of Police Bernhart. In giving him the limit, $100 fine and nine months in jail, Judge Groman remarked that he was sorry he could not impose a heavier sentence.

GIRLS' BRAVERY AT FIRE SAVES EIGHT

Rush Through Burning Building and Arouse Sleepers.

While raging flames enveloped College Hall, one of the largest and most historic buildings at Wellesley College for Girls, at Wellesley, Mass., the students, numbering 250, showing superb behavior, marched in orderly ranks from the burning building.

One hundred other persons, including the members of the faculty and domestics, also made their escape from the building.

The loss to the building is estimated at close to $1,000,000. No one was injured.

It was at roll call, made while the flames were sweeping through the corridors and dormitories, that the bravery of the girl students was well exemplified.

The roll call showed that five students and three members of the faculty were missing. There was no time to spare, but Miss Olive Davis, director of halls, hurriedly issued orders to the floor monitors. They rushed back through the smoke and aroused the missing eight, all of whom were gotten to safety.

It was a sterling tribute to the remarkable coolness of the girls. Just as the head of the line of students reached the ground floor of the five-story building it was wrapped in flames. When all were out ranks were broken and the girls, not members of the "fire brigade," watched the destruction of their old college home.

The college officials gave the girls' fire brigade unstinted credit for the escape of those in the building.

Many of the students lost all their valuables.

"Mother" Jones Departed.

That she was deported from Trinidad, whence she went to Denver, Colo.; that she never asked to see Governor Ammons, that she was accompanied to Denver by militia officers had been released, and that she expected to return to the strike zone soon, were points emphasized in a statement made by "Mother" Mary Jones, noted strike leader, who had been a military prisoner at the San Rafael hospital, Trinidad, since Jan. 1.

Immediately after giving out the statement she left for the state house to call on Governor Ammons.

General Chase stated that "Mother" Jones would be rearrested should she return to Trinidad.

Church Choir Strikes.

Reproved from the pulpit by Rev. Edward Gallagher, their pastor, who asserted their whispering and gossiping disturbed the service, the choir members of the Ryland M. E. church in Washington went on strike.

Following the morning service, the twenty-four members of the choir went to the pastor and demanded that he apologize. They were additionally scolded instead.

Miss Mary C. Brewer, organist and choir leader, announced that there would be no more music in the church until a new pastor is appointed. She claims that the entire congregation is supporting the choir.

Gets Life Term For Assault.

The penalty for the crime is death and the life of the man was saved by Deputy Attorney General Chaytor, who stated that the state was satisfied with a verdict of guilty with a recommendation to mercy.

The jury, without leaving the box, brought forth the verdict, after which the youth was sentenced.

MRS. GOELET GRANTED DIVORCE

Children to Be in Joint Custody of Parents.

NO MENTION OF ALIMONY

Multi-Millionaire Was Accused of Extreme Cruelty and Violation of His Marriage Vows.

Mrs. Robert Goelet, formerly Miss Elsie Whelen, of Philadelphia, was granted a divorce by Justice Barrows in the superior court in Newport, R. I., after the reading of depositions for three hours.

The court in summing up the testimony had the following to say: "Extreme cruelty may consist of insulting and abusive language, as well as physical violence. The testimony shows a continuous use of insulting, vulgar and abusive language by Goelet toward his wife, accompanied by numerous petty acts, clearly calculated to annoy and embarrass her and accomplishing this result. The effect has been, according to the testimony, a serious impairment of her health, and the conditions fully warrant the court in granting this divorce."

Counsel had previously agreed as to the disposition of the children, a decree being entered that Peter, now two years old, should remain in the custody of Mrs. Goelet until he is six years of age; then his custody will be jointly between mother and father. Ogden, now seven years old, is to be jointly in the custody of the father and mother. No mention was made of alimony.

While Mr. Goelet did not contest the divorce he was represented by counsel.

Counsel for Mrs. Goelet read affidavits to substantiate the charges made against her husband of extreme cruelty and gross wickedness and misbehavior in violation of the marriage covenant. Mrs. Goelet's petition was dated New York city, Jan. 19, 1914, and was read in a voice so low that only the presiding justice could hear its reading.

In her deposition Mrs. Goelet accused her multi-millionaire husband of telling her that if she did not like his conduct she "could go to —."

"He told me he would much prefer to send me away than to send his valet away," the wife deposed. Mrs. Goelet accused her husband of having spies keep an espionage upon her in her house. She said he was always rude to her friends; had slammed the door in the face of one of her guests; had said repeatedly "marriage is —," and had tried to suppress her in every way and to keep her down mentally.

The wife's testimony was corroborated by depositions from three of the Goelet domestics.

Earthquake in Japan Kills Many.

Girl "Kidnapped" and Now Married.

The Elkton, Md., dispatch that Joseph Granese and Jennie Picard, of Norristown, Pa., had been married, marks the climax of events following the abduction of the girl in Norristown on Feb. 7.

Either Joseph Granese or his cousin were believed to be responsible, but nothing could be proved. It is said that the marriage of the couple was opposed by the girl's father.

Jennie Picard, seventeen years old, was kidnapped after her young brother was frightened away from her side on a road near Norristown.

When the boy told his father that he recognized the wagon as belonging to Granese, the father sought out the man, who denied any knowledge of the whereabouts of the girl.

Picard stabbed him in the groin and fled. He was captured by his victim's father, who pursued him with a shotgun. Picard later was liberated on bail.

Body Buried Three Years Not Father's

Charles N. Kling, of Bittersville, near York, Pa., left home three years ago, leaving his wife and eight children.

Shortly afterwards word was received by the family that he had been killed on the Pennsylvania railroad near Harrisburg and that the body had been interred at Camp Hill.

Nine months afterwards his two sons, Monroe C. Kling, a cigar manufacturer, and Samuel C. Kling, had the body exhumed and brought to Red Lion from Camp Hill. It was taken to Salem cemetery and buried.

On Wednesday Monroe C. Kling received word from Akron, Ohio, that the father was alive and in that city. A correspondence has been started, and it is more than likely that the father will return in a short time. Whose body was buried for that of Charles N. Kling is a mystery.

U. S. Express Company to Quit.

The directors of the United States Express company voted in New York city to wind up its affairs and have it go out of business.

Stockholders in the other big express companies are already anxiously inquiring how long it will be before they follow suit.

The first direct result of the government's competition and the reduction of 16 per cent in express rates therefore will be to have thrown 15,000 employees of this company out of work by the time its liquidation is completed. Its yearly payroll is about $6,000,000.

"We could have stood the competition of the parcel post as originally planned," said President Roberts. "But we cannot stand it as at present constituted, when it is carrying parcels of almost unlimited weight."

FRENCH CABINET REORGANIZES

Caillaux, Finance Minister, Resigns Because of Tragedy.

POLITICS CAUSED SHOOTING

The Slaying of Paris Editor by Madame Caillaux Causes Hostile Demonstration.

The French cabinet has decided to retain office in spite of the resignation of Joseph Caillaux, minister of finance, whose wife shot and killed Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro in Paris as the result of attacks made in that newspaper upon M. Caillaux.

Although Caillaux was considered the strongest and most influential member of the cabinet, his colleagues determined to accept his resignation and to reorganize the various portfolios.

M. Caillaux appeared at the ministry of finance for a few minutes in order to dispose of several urgent matters of departmental business. He called into his private office several of the higher officials of the ministry and informed them of his resignation. The minister was extremely depressed. He broke down during his interview with the officials and wept like a child. His colleagues quietly withdrew and left him alone. When he had become somewhat more composed, M. Caillaux proceeded to his private residence.

Because of the hostile demonstrations by street crowds a number of detectives were assigned to protect the minister.

Madame Caillaux, who caused this upheaval in French political life, is meanwhile confined in the St. Lazare prison. Acting on information given by Madame Caillaux, the police took possession of various papers in the office of the editor of the Figaro.

It is understood that among these papers were various private letters written by M. Caillaux to his present wife before they were married and while she was still the wife of Leo Claretie.

It is generally supposed that Madame Caillaux had received an intimation that Calmette was about to publish these letters, and it was this that led her to attack him. Calmette was a bitter political foe of M. Caillaux.

Madame Caillaux deliberately shot four bullets into M. Calmette's body. The editor of the Figaro had been conducting in his newspaper a vigorous political campaign against M. Caillaux, denouncing him as corrupt and insincere.

There was a pathetic and dramatic scene when the minister of finance was allowed to meet and talk with his wife. Tears rolled down the cheeks of the statesman as he embraced Madame Caillaux. The minister was in a state of almost complete collapse as he repeated over and over again: "Why did you do it? You have ruined my life, but I forgive you."

Madame Caillaux also broke down and sobbed. As the couple embraced and wept they heard through the barred windows of the jail the shouts of mobs in the streets. Aroused to frenzy by the crime and eulogies of the dead man printed in the papers, hundreds of persons clamored about the St. Lazare prison and the Caillaux residence screaming: "Caillaux is a murderer! Caillaux should be killed!"

THREE KILLED ON FERRYBOAT

Five Others Injured in Collision on Hudson River.

Three men were crushed to death and five were injured in a collision between the Lackawanna railroad ferryboat Ithaca and a Jersey Central freight car float on the Hudson river at New York.

All the killed and injured were commuters in the men's cabin on the main deck of the ferryboat.

The float, towed by a tug, cleft the Ithaca a midships. A protruding freight car bore into the men's cabin, wrecked it, and when the ferry boat bore away dived to the bottom.

The accident was caused by neither captain seeing the other in time, another ferryboat crossing the river between them.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIG FIRE

Twenty-Nine Years Since Conflagration Almost Destroyed All The Buildings At St. Joseph's Academy.

To-day is the twenty-ninth anniversary of the fire at St. Joseph's College and Academy that threatened to destroy the entire property. It is interesting to note the excitement and the difficulty experienced by the firemen in fighting the flames, as described by the Union, Frederick, Maryland.

"About noon last Friday, fire broke out in St. Joseph's Academy, near Emmitsburg, and raged furiously all afternoon, destroying a portion of the elegant structure of that old institution. The wind was blowing a gale, and it was feared all the buildings would be destroyed, when word reached Frederick asking for assistance. The fire department was soon out, and about three o'clock about a hundred persons from there started for the scene of the fire on a special train taking with them the Independent fire engine and a large quantity of other apparatus. Upon arriving there it was found that the gallant little fire department of Emmitsburg had the fire under control, but the Frederick boys went to work and soon relieved those who had fought the flames diligently for more than four hours and by midnight nothing remained but the blackened walls and ashes of what were but twelve hours before two large wings of that well-known institution. Below we give a detailed account taken from the Baltimore American which was furnished them by a special correspondent:

"The fire broke out in the kitchen of the Sisters' department, and was undoubtedly caused from a defective flue. There had been trouble with the flue before and it had been remedied. The fire seemed to have started very near the roof, for when first seen it was raging among the wooden shingles, and was burning so brightly that it could be seen for some distance. The school was in session, the scholars engaged in their tasks, and the Sisters busy with their several employments when neighbors rushed up the wide drive and cried 'fire' at the top of their voices. This was the first intimation the Sisters received that their home was in danger.

"The excitement for a time was intense. All knew how hopeless with the small protection at hand would be a fight with the flames if they once got a fair headway. It was bitter freezing cold, and the wind coming down the mountain was blowing almost a gale. Fortunately the wind was from the west, as the kitchen was one of the group of buildings on the north and east, the flames were blowing away from the main buildings and from the handsome church which stands as the centre of the great group that make up the institution."

"Mother Euphemia, who had charge of the institution which is famous the world over as the headquarters of the Sisters of Charity in America, looked at once to the safety of the Sisters who were confined in the infirmary, and who were unable to help themselves. There were about forty Sisters in the building, which immediately adjoined one of those on fire. It was no easy matter to get them out. They were all of them in a great state of fright, as they saw the flames from their windows and heard the great noise about them. While some of them were able to walk out without assistance, others were bedridden and had to be carried out upon the mattresses on which they lay. It took some time to do all this work carefully, so as to do the invalids no more harm than was inevitable, but the work was finally done, and all were carried to a building that was far out of the range of the fire. They were comforted with assuring words, were given medicine to strengthen them, and seemed to have suffered very little from the excitement. All felt relieved when the work was finally accomplished."

"Emmitsburg has a small fire department, and if a small fire department ever laid itself out to do good work, this one did Friday. When the fire was at its height, Sister Euphemia, fearing that it was going to sweep away the whole institution, telegraphed to Frederick and Baltimore for help. Frederick responded at once, but Baltimore was too far away, and if it had sent an engine it would not have reached here till after the fire was under control. Frederick sent an engine and truck and a large delegation of brave firemen to run the machine. They came on a special train, and their arrival was hailed with joy. Before they got here, however, the fire was pretty well under control. The population about here is not very large, but it seemed to have all turned out Friday as quick as the alarm was given, and all worked with a will. People flocked from Emmitsburg by the hundred, and students came down from Mt. St. Mary's in perfect brigades. Buckets were called into use lines were formed, and this arrangement together with streams thrown on the fire from hose connected with Emmitsburg's water works, made quite a force of water even upon such a flame. It was so cold that the water froze frequently, and some of the firemen were almost covered with coats of ice."

"From the kitchen the fire quickly spread to the refectory, and from there to the dormitories used by the Sisters. There was no use trying to check its way, and all the water in the region could not have prevented the destruction of these buildings. Work as the firemen might, they saw that these would have to go, but they did nobly in saving the others. The Sisters saw that they were kindly treated, and furnished them with food and drink to enable them to keep up their strenuous efforts. Those who could not work as firemen devoted themselves to the saving of furniture and in this way nearly all the furniture in the two buildings was saved. The buildings destroyed were of brick, four stories in height and were put up in 1874. One was 112 feet by 54 feet, and the other 60 feet by 60 feet. They were of a very substantial character, and well served the purposes for which they were used."

PRIVATE OWNERSHIP BEST

Second Vice-President of Telephone Company Says So.

In an address to the Telephone Society, of Baltimore, M. H. Buehler, general manager of the C. & P. Telephone Company said, in part:

"It has long been the opinion of great economists that public utilities calling for a more or less high degree of technical ability and the employment of a great many men, such as transportation, telephone, telegraph, etc., can best serve the people when privately owned and publicly regulated.

"During 1913 the Bell system alone paid $12,000,000 in taxes to the Federal Government in the various states and municipalities. The Government pays no taxes even on its real estate. Government ownership would mean that the $12,000,000 now contributed by the Bell telephone companies alone to the Government in the various States, cities, towns and villages would have to be raised by additional taxation of the whole people, whether they are telephone subscribers or not.

"Take roads. It is the common experience of almost all our States in road building, where the State itself has charge of the building of the roads, that the waste has been enormous and that there is hardly a time when the necessary repairs to the road are done at the time they are necessary, but actually after the road is worn out.

"There is no more justice in comparing telephone conditions and telephone service and the telephone problem in this country and in Europe than there would be in comparing the service of the street railway of 25 years ago, with horses for motive power, with the service of our New York subways.

"Whether from the standpoint of development or the quality of the service when compared with any publicly or privately operated organization, the people in these United States are getting the very best there is to be had.

"As to the cost, the business and the rates are so generally supervised by Public Utility Commissions that the public may be assured they are getting the very lowest rates consistent with a continuance of good service."

MOUNT SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

Terrace Talk

The Mountaineers suffered their fourth and most disastrous defeat of the season at Gettysburg on Friday last when they lost 55-28. The Mountain five showed poor form throughout the game and at no period did they show old time form. The small size of the court was a severe handicap to them and they were unable to exhibit any passwork. Mt. St. Mary's had previously defeated Gettysburg on the home court 43-39.

The line-up:

Costello.....r. f.....Campbell
Phillips.....r. f.....Mahaffey
May.....c.....Ikler
Leary.....l. g.....Scheffer
Lally.....r. g.....Monk

Baskets from floor, Mahaffey 7; Campbell, 3; Ikler, 4; Scheffer, 1; Monk, 1; Horr, 1; Costello, 3; Donovan, 1; May, 1; Leary 1. Goals from foul, Costello, 15; Mahaffey, 19. Subs for M. S. M., Donovan for Phillips; Rogers for Donovan; Sutton for Lally. For Gettysburg, Horr for Monk. Time of periods two twenty minute periods.

By defeating the U. of P. Dental College Tuesday evening Mt. St. Mary's basketball team closed one of the most successful seasons in her history. From a schedule of 19 spirited games, the Mountaineers have 15 victories to their credit. Their most notable victory was over the strong Albright Quint, who are the winners of the Central Pennsylvania League. Of the other strong colleges, Manhattan, West Virginia Wesleyan, Gettysburg, and Bucknell were obliged in their turns to acknowledge the science and superiority of the Mt. St. Mary's team.

Each of the four defeats sustained by the Mountaineers is easily understood. Two of them were inflicted on foreign courts during the Christmas holiday trip to New York. The season was just beginning, and the team lacked organization and time to get its bearings. Both of these defects were duly remedied. The third defeat occurred at the hands of Mt. Washington Lyceum, a fast professional team from Pittsburgh, with an enviable record. Captain Costello was unable to engage in this contest and the team missed his services, although they lost only by a two point margin. The last defeat of the season was at Gettysburg, on a small undersized court, which greatly handicapped the Mountain team. In nearly all the other games, Mt. St. Mary's doubled the score of their opponents, and when the Varsity had secured a substantial lead, Coach Day made many substitutions.

It would be difficult to select individual stars on the quint, every man proving a strong factor in making the season a success. Teamwork, coupled with quick and correct penetration in getting at the weaknesses of their opponents, was the secret of the Mountaineers' achievements. Mention, however, should be given of Captain Costello for his admirable alertness and calculation in caging baskets. In eleven games he scored a total of 239 points, with 88 baskets from the floor and 63 from the foul line. Phillips and Donovan, who alternated at the other forward position, were towers of strength and paragons of science and skill. May, at center, who always outjumps his opponents, was a valuable adjunct in the play of teamwork. The resilience of May is marvelous. Leary and Lally at guards played a strong defensive game and broke up many plays which looked like sure tallies for their opponents. Sutton and Rogers were desirable substitutes who improved as the season progressed. Capt. Costello is the only man to be lost to the team by graduation and the prospects for next season are unusually bright.

The complete schedule and results is as follows: M. S. M. 18, Manhattan 34; M. S. M. 23, Seton Hall 47; M. S. M. 36, Albright 20; M. S. M. 24, West Virginia Wesleyan 9; M. S. M. 26, Western Maryland 10; M. S. M. 62, Penn State Forestry 15; M. S. M. 47, Lebanon Valley 23; M. S. M. 37, Susquehanna 24; M. S. M. 68, Alumni 24; M. S. M. 25, Manhattan 23; M. S. M. 41, Bucknell 14; M. S. M. 30, Mt. Washington 31; M. S. M. 33, Western Maryland 11; M. S. M. 48, Gallaudet 26; M. S. M. 43, Gettysburg 39; M. S. M. 28, Gettysburg 55; M. S. M. 17, U. of P. Dental 13; M. S. M. Reserves 30, Gettysburg Reserves 19; M. S. M. Reserves 89, M. C. S. 2.

Between the halves of the game on Tuesday last the "M" men of the basketball team assembled in the dressing room and elected James P. Leary, of Philadelphia, captain for next season. Leary has been the mainstay of the team for two seasons and his work during the past season was of the highest order.

The general call for baseball candidates was issued last Monday. About 45 candidates reported and Coach Day has held bunting practice in the Gym since that time. It is expected that the men will be on the field the latter part of the week.

A UNIQUE ORGANIZATION

Three Hundred Reformed Drunkards Hold Meetings in New York.

Under the name of the United Order of Former Boozers, three hundred reformed drunkards, many of whom now hold responsible places, held a dinner recently in New York. One hundred and seventy-six of the number have lived a total of 7,470 years, 3,238 years of which have been spent in drunkenness. They have spent in drink approximately $1,291,500, and unearned wages because of inability through drink is estimated at $645,750. A total loss to the community and nation of nearly $2,000,000.

After the banquet a meeting was held and a constitution adopted. The organization will be a permanent one, the object of which will be to aid others in breaking their friendship with John Barleycorn.

New Parcel Post Order.

Postmaster General Burleson has issued an order providing that after March 16 parcels of printed miscellany weighing more than four pounds may be mailed under the parcel post rates when within other parcel post regulations. This will be a great advantage to printers, who can now send printed letter heads, bill heads, envelopes, etc. to customers by post at parcel post rates if over four pounds in weight.

PERSONALS.

It is the aim of THE CHRONICLE to publish as many personal and social items as possible, but it frequently happens that those who have guests visiting them, and those who entertain, fail to send a list of their friends, or an account of these events, to this office. Readers who live at a distance are always interested in what is going on "at home," and for that reason, if for no other, this column should be filled every week. It is of course understood that anonymous contributions will not be published. Names of persons furnishing items will be withheld.

You fully intend to pay it; it is on your mind for the time being, but something else engages your attention and—well, you just fail to do it.

This is a courteous reminder to those who are in arrears. It is not a dun. It is just an equivalent for "Won't you kindly send us your check for this year's subscription to THE WEEKLY CHRONICLE."

A High Tribute from a Western Subscriber.

"THE CHRONICLE comes promptly each week and has many items of interest especially the local ones. Your editorials strike me as being particularly good, and to your credit. I must say as yet I have not found any of them that appear to be bad. You have a happy faculty of touching up the right thing at the right time. This thing of expanding subjects that have grown old and gray may be alright with the philosopher but that which the modern man wishes to learn is the present pertinent thing."

Fraud Paint

The worst mistake one is likely to make in painting is wrong paint; it is easy to make.

We all say "Ours is the best"; and there are 1000 of us. One is best; but a dozen are so near on a level that no one knows, for sure, that his is the one. The worst paints are the worst liars; they know what they are, put on a bold face, and brazen it out.

Their one true argument is low price; but low-price paint is always, must be a fraud; it is made to cheat cheatable people.

LE GORE BRIDGE QUESTION.

Plan For Valuation By An Impartial Board of Engineers.

"I am sure it is perfectly fair, and that is all I want," said Mr. Le Gore in speaking of the Nelson Bill providing a plan of valuation for the Le Gore Bridge and Roads. The bridge and roads were built by Mr. Le Gore under the authority of the Act of 1904, Chapter 342, which provided that upon the completion of the bridge and roads, the commissioners should purchase them from Mr. Le Gore. The question as to the value and purchase price has been the open question, the legal and moral duty of the county to pay what was reasonable for them, never having been questioned.

"I want to say in all seriousness," remarked Mr. Le Gore, "that if anybody can suggest a better plan, one that is fairer or more reasonable, I am willing to accept it. The plan in the bill was hit upon as one which would strike the people of the county as absolutely right and just. If any county official, any citizen, any County Commissioner or any newspaper editor, or anybody at all can give us any arrangement or method which will be fairer or better in any respect, I shall be very glad to have it, and will accept it. I am certain the county wants to do what is right by me, and that is exactly what I want to do by the county."

The board to determine the value of the bridge and roads is to consist, according to the provisions of the bill, of five competent civil engineers, two of whom are to be appointed by the County Commissioners, two by Mr. Le Gore and these four are to select the fifth member of the board. If the four fail to agree upon the fifth member, the bill provides that the chief engineer of the Topographical Survey of Baltimore City, shall be the fifth member. The expense to be borne one half by Le Gore the one-half by the County Commissioners. The members of the Board are all required to be sworn to make a true, fair and just valuation of the properties, and to make their report in writing and under oath to the County Commissioners, and the amount reported by the Board of Valuation as the true and just valuation shall be the purchase price of the Bridge and Roads, which are to be paid for in the bonds of the county, which Mr. Le Gore is required to accept at par, bearing not more than 4 per cent interest.

THE WEEK AT THE COUNTY SEAT

Chronicle of Happenings at Frederick City and in the Courts.

Before an audience which filled Hood College Hall, Dr. Jerome Hall Raymond, the noted traveler, delivered an intensely interesting lecture on "Switzerland, the Triumph of Democracy," on Monday evening.

Almost simultaneously with the Cline-Etchison business deal came the announcement on Saturday morning that Clarence M. Malone, for nearly five years one of Frederick's leading insurance agents, has taken over the established jewelry business of H. S. Landis on Market street.

Two hundred and fifty dozen biscuits were delivered about this city by the Boy Scouts of the Evangelical Lutheran Church on Saturday. As a result an order will be forwarded to the National Headquarters by the troop for $50 worth of drum corps paraphernalia and by the latter part of the week there's going to be "music in the camp."

With manacles jangling every time he moved his arm, cigar in one hand and newspaper in other, Jesse Derr sat in the waiting room at the Baltimore and Ohio railroad station waiting for the train to take him to the Sykesville sanatorium for treatment. This action by the authorities follows a long period of crime.

Over 50 men took the civil service examination for fourth-class postmasters on Saturday morning in the Girls' High School building.

The annual appropriation of about $6,000.00 for last year from the State to the Board of County Commissioners, or Montevue, has been held up, ostensibly because of an insufficient statement of receipts and expenditures at Montevue.

Miss S. M. Akin, of Cartersville, Ga., an experienced librarian, will assume charge of Frederick's public library on April 15 in the cafe room of the Y. M. C. A. The librarian, the site of the library and the date of its opening were determined upon at an important meeting of the Civic Club.

After a consultation with their attorney, Jacob Rohrbach, the County Commissioners on Monday afternoon decided to fight the Legore bridge and roads bill, now pending before the Legislature. Attorney Rohrbach was instructed to go to Annapolis and use every effort to have the bill killed.

The famous baseball evangelist, Billy Surprise Pound Party for Mr. and Mrs. John Franklin.

SYNOPSIS.

Book I.

CHAPTER I—Rudolph Van Vechten, a young man of leisure, is astonished to see a man enter No. 1313, a house across the street from the Powhatan club. The house has long been unoccupied and is spoken of as the House of Mystery.

CHAPTER II—Several persons at regular intervals enter No. 1313.

CHAPTER III—Van Vechten expresses concern to his friend, Tom Phinney, regarding the whereabouts of his cousin and fiancée, Paige Carew. A fashionably attired woman is seen to enter the House of Mystery. A man is forcibly ejected from the house. Van Vechten and Tom follow the man and find him dead in the street.

CHAPTER IV—Van Vechten is attracted by the face of a girl in the crowd of onlookers surrounding the body. Later he discovers the girl gazing at him with a look of scorn from the windows of the mysterious house.

CHAPTER V.

Introducing Mr. Flint.

Whatever it might have been that Rudolph Van Vechten wanted to ponder in connection with the morning's happenings, he had no thought for the hourly procession of strange men into Number 1313, nor for the veiled lady (as much as her appearance had agitated him), nor yet for the murder—if murder there had been.

His mind was flooded with dissolving images of a fair girl's face. He saw her shrinking in dread before an unspeakable terror, from which he could not shield her; he saw her sobbing out her heart in bitter distress, and it was not his privilege to comfort her. And then, most vivid of all, were the scorn and reproach of her handsome dark eyes, against whose silent accusation he could not defend himself.

His fruitless mental effort was chafing and fretting him almost to distraction; his head ached and throbbed; his nerves felt as if they stood stripped in a sleek storm. And a beautiful face, as luminous as dawn, floated elusively before him, pleading, rebuking, teasing, coaxing, hating, but constantly and always leaving him more and more mystified and hopelessly perplexed.

As far advanced as the season was, there still remained several weeks which, earlier, he had planned to spend with the Carterets. Fred Carteret owned a pleasant summer home on the north shore of Long Island, and a comfortable sailing-yacht which Tom Phinney delighted to navigate up and down the sound, while the other dined, made merry or took advantage of the cool breezes to sleep. He even regretted that he must forego Tommy's cheerful habit of every now and then poking his head in at the cabin skylight and shouting directions to the bridge players below—who, as everyone knows, always enjoy that sort of thing. He would invariably vanish before the only available missiles could annihilate him, and become immersed in some profundity of his self-imposed duties.

And then would have followed a journey in his own trim steam-yacht (T. Phinney, master), down to the Chesapeake, to wait for the autumn hedge of ducks. His cousin's prospective arrival from abroad had altered all these pleasant arrangements.

Paige Carew had completed her musical studies in July; some day she would enchant the world—or at least that elect portion of it which she would condescend to favor—with her violin; her career at the conservatory assured this prophecy. Was not that honor and glory enough for a girl not yet twenty?

Then why should she and Mrs. Devereaux go off to London for the season, instead of coming home to meet the people with whom she would have to mingle after they were married, and receive their laudations and congratulations?

Van Vechten paused at this reflection.

After they were married! Ever since he could remember, this contingency had been taken so for granted that he had never thought to question it. It was so much the proper thing for them to do, such a logical union, so desirable from every point of view, that he and Paige had always regarded it as a settled thing—an assured fact—awaiting only the ripe moment. True, neither of them seemed eager to hasten the time, but if that time was ever to come it must now be near at hand; they could not much longer be content with "some time."

He frowned with annoyance. Why couldn't such a sensible girl come home at the proper time, when all arrangements had been made for her reception and her family and friends had every reason to expect her? There was one consolation in the absence of those friends from town; he was not obliged to invent answers to embarrassing inquiries concerning his dilatory cousin. But this was small compensation for stewing in New York by himself until Paige chose to notify him of her whereabouts and intended movements. He gave one moment of sober thought to the circumstance that he really did not know precisely where she was; if some sudden emergency should arise necessitating a cable he would not know where to reach her. But he speedily dismissed this phase of the matter; it was no new thing for Paige to start off on a holiday jaunt without confiding her proposed itinerary to anybody, and now Mrs. Devereaux was with her.

"Just the same," he mused, "if I knew where to catch her, I would send her a cable that would set her to guessing for a while."

Unable longer to remain quiescent, he bounded from his chair and collided with Alexander, who was seeking him in his corner—an accident that did not affect the page's accustomed composure in the least.

"Gentleman to see you, sir," Alexander announced.

"Who is it?" Van Vechten snapped irritably. "I don't want to see anybody."

He paused. Didn't he? Alexander had not presented a card, but whoever the caller might be he signified a diversion. If he tried any longer to think he would be a raving lunatic in another hour. And, besides, something had destroyed the savor of the sole pleasurable aspect of his meditations.

Alexander resolved his doubts. He caught a knowing look in the page's countenance.

"Beggin' your pardon, Mr. Van Vechten, I think you'd want to see this gentleman."

"Very well," Van Vechten wearily acquiesced. "Show him in."

He did not know the man who immediately followed Alexander into the lounging-room. The stranger was under medium height, slender and unassuming in appearance, but carried himself with a certain quiet assurance that commanded attention. He was as gray as a badger, and his lean, smooth-shaven face resembled tooled leather.

There was a conspicuously alert look about his steady gray eyes, Van Vechten also noted, which presently disclosed a habit of narrowing and revealing a web of fine wrinkles at their corners. This single change of facial muscles, Van Vechten soon learned to recognize, possessed the peculiarity of indicating one of two moods—concentration upon the matter in hand, or else a smiling humor that made one warm to him. Van Vechten felt that his visitor would be chary of speech, but that whatever he might say would be well worth harkening to.

"Mr. Rudolph Van Vechten?" now queried the newcomer in a tone that could not have carried a yard beyond the person to whom it was addressed. Van Vechten nodded and motioned to a chair.

"My name," he acknowledged. And, with a wry mouth: "You are a detective. I might have expected it—but I didn't."

Instantly the steady eyes contracted and wrinkled at the corners. The young man all at once discovered that his irritation was evaporating, and that he could smile in sympathy with his visitor.

Said the quiet voice: "I am glad to know that my estimate of your intelligence was not at fault. Flint is my name—Phineas Flint—from Central Office."

"Considering that you have never seen me before, Mr. Flint," Van Vechten lightly retorted, "it is rather extraordinary that you should possess any particulars upon which to base an estimate of my intelligence."

The steady, smiling regard still met the young man's.

"I'll demonstrate just how simple a matter it is—if you have pardoned this intrusion?"

The listener nodded. His attention was already won.

"Have you any idea how the poor chap met his death?" he queried.

"Yes," was the prompt reply. "He was struck over the head with some kind of blunt instrument. It is pretty certain that only one of the blows—the one on the temple—could have proved fatal; the other—right behind the left ear—might have stunned him or produced unconsciousness. But as to who did it—there's the question. There are some extraordinary features about this murder, Mr. Van Vechten."

Rudolph Van Vechten rose and walked over to a front window.

"Come here," he invited Mr. Flint. And then, after the latter had quietly joined him, he nodded toward Number 1313.

"See that house across the way? Well, less than two minutes before my friend and I came up with the poor chap lying in the alley, he emerged from there. I am pretty certain, too, that his departure was accompanied by some sort of fracas—before the door was opened, you know."

The network of wrinkles marked a narrowing of the gray eyes, while Mr. Flint subjected the unprepossessing facade to a long, searching scrutiny.

"Then," he said at last, "you were following him. Why? Surely, not out of idle curiosity?"

The young man shrugged his shoulders. "Sit down," he curtly bade, resuming the seat he had occupied earlier in the day, while Mr. Flint sank into the one lately occupied by Tom Phinney. "If you can make anything of what I have to tell you, you are welcome to it."

He began with as much of Number 1313's history as he knew, and, with but two reservations, recounted everything down to the moment that he and Tom rushed from the club to overtake the man killed at the alley intersection.

The detective listened with a marked but respectful attention, not once interrupting the recital. And when Van Vechten had finished, Mr. Flint asked a single question. His preoccupied look remained upon Number 1313.

"Has it occurred to you," he said, with thoughtful deliberation, "to wonder where the murderer came from?—and whither he fled?"

Van Vechten sat silent, unmoving, his face a mask. Involuntarily now, his mind once more fashioned a map of the neighborhood—one that carried the fatal alley straight behind the house across the way.

"I mentioned," Mr. Flint was pursuing, "that this case offered some rather extraordinary features. So far, quite the most extraordinary is that a man was struck down on a populous thoroughfare, in broad daylight, and nobody saw the actual deed. Besides the newsboy, there was a lady almost directly across the street from the alley, who witnessed from a window the man sink to the walk. But she saw no one running from the scene."

"Perhaps," murmured Van Vechten—"perhaps no one did."

"Ah—to be sure," observed Mr. Flint, smoothly. "A crowd gathered very quickly, I believe; what was easier than to remain and mingle with it? An old trick, Mr. Van Vechten."

That young man did not meet the swift oblique glance that swept his immobile features. Mr. Flint rose slowly, and stood irresolutely fingering his hat. He was again absently contemplating the Silent House. After a moment his eyes crinkled in a smile. He said softly:

"I see, Mr. Van Vechten, that the same thought has come to both of us." And before departing he bestowed a final reflective nod upon Number 1313.

FASHION HINT

By JUDIC CHOLLET

Everything that gives the effect of breadth to the hips is smart. In the case of this skirt the effect is acquired by very simple means. The circular ruffles are arranged over the skirt in indicated lines. They flare slightly, but nevertheless they give the desired modish lines.

The skirt itself is in three pieces, with the edges lapped at the left of the front. As a matter of course the ruffles can be omitted if a plain skirt is wanted. Simple as the skirt is, it can be treated in two or three different ways.

For the medium size the skirt will require five and a half yards of material twenty-seven inches wide.

This May Manton pattern is cut in sizes from 22 to 32 inches waist measure. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number, $123, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail. If in haste send an additional two-cent stamp for letter postage. When ordering use coupon.
