HILLES PLANS CUT IN SOUTH'S VOTE

National Chairman Hopes to Eliminate Discard.

GIVES TWO GUARANTEES

He Asks Republicans to Ratify the Action of the Committee Before Jan. 1.

Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican national committee, made public in New York Tuesday the proposed plan to decrease the percentage of the southern and territorial representation in the Republican national convention in 1916, and thereafter from approximately 35 per cent of the total voting strength to less than 16 per cent, as provided in resolutions adopted by the committee at its meeting last December.

The plan is addressed to the Republican conventions of the several states, which are asked to ratify the action of the national body before Jan. 1, 1915.

A special committee, composed of C. B. Warren, of Michigan; Senator Borah, of Idaho, and ex-Governor H. D. Hatfield, of West Virginia, drafted the report, which embodies other resolutions adopted by the national committee. These guarantee:

Recognition, in the call to be issued for the next national convention, of the right of any state to provide for the election of delegates in direct primaries.

The right of any state to elect all delegates from the state at large, or part from the state at large and part from congressional districts.

These provisions were adopted with a view to eliminating contests before the national body, such as in the past have produced discord and dissension.

The plan adopted and recommended for ratification provides that the Republican voters in each state shall hereafter be represented in a national convention of the party by four delegates-at-large; two delegates for each representative-at-large in congress; one delegate from each congressional district, and an additional delegate from each congressional district in which the vote of 1908 for any Republican elector or for the Republican nominee for congress in 1914 shall not have been less than 7500.

Alaska and the District of Columbia under the plan presented will each be entitled to two voting delegates, while Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands will each be entitled to two delegates without the right to vote.

The result of this change in the basis of representation, if ratified by the requisite number of state conventions, will be a decrease of eighty-nine votes, as follows: Alabama will lose eight; Arkansas, three; Florida, four; Georgia, eleven; Louisiana, eight; Mississippi, eight; New York, two; North Carolina, three; South Carolina, seven; Tennessee, three; Texas, sixteen; Virginia, eight; Hawaii, four; Porto Rico, two, and Philippine Islands, two.

MONOPOLY CHARGE DISMISSED

Government Fails to Break Up Alleged Combine in Coal Trade.

The United States court in Trenton, N. J., has filed an opinion dismissing the suit of the United States against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad and the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Coal company for alleged violation of the commodities clause and the Sherman anti-trust law.

The court holds that there is no United States law or decision prohibiting the same set of individuals holding stock in two distinct corporations, even though they may be engaged in kindred business.

$50,000 PAINTING STOLEN

Painting of Madonna and Child by Van Dyke Taken From Motor.

The famous painting of the Christ child on the knee of the Madonna by Van Dyke was stolen from the automobile of M. Bernus, who was carrying it from Brussels to Antwerp. The canvas was valued at $50,000.

This was the first big art theft in northern Europe since the "Mona Lisa" was stolen from the Louvre in Paris, and the police were urged to take every precaution to prevent the picture from being carried out of the country.

Twelve Bookmakers Arrested.

A death blow was dealt to racing in Virginia by Attorney General Polard at Jamestown, when he visited the course with a force of deputies and arrested the twelve bookmakers laying odds on the horses running there, shortly after they had marked up the prices in the second race.

CHARLES W. BRYAN.
Brother of Secretary of State to Run For Governor of Nebraska.

Charles W. Bryan, brother of the secretary of state, is preparing to announce himself a gubernatorial candidate in Nebraska, according to good authority. Mr. Bryan has demanded that a progressive Democrat be named as the candidate and has told close friends that he is so anxious to see a progressive candidate that in order to insure a Democrat of that class he will himself enter the ring.

John D.'s Millions Back Open Shop.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., son of the richest man in the world, testified before the house mines committee in Washington about the question of his moral responsibility for the industrial strife which has kept the coal fields of southern Colorado in turmoil for six months.

After more than four hours of cross-examination Mr. Rockefeller had told the committee:

That he and three other directors represented his father's interest of about 40 per cent in the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, central figure in the big coal strike.

That as a director he had fulfilled all of his interest and responsibility in the company when he placed the officers, "competent and trusted men," in charge of the company's affairs.

That he knew nothing of conditions in the strike district except from reports of the officers of the company.

That the strike had become a fight for the "principles of freedom of labor," and that he and his associates would rather that the present violence continue "and that they lose all of their millions invested in the coal fields, rather than that American workmen should be deprived of the right under the constitution to work for whom they pleased."

That he favored arbitration in industrial disputes generally, but that in the present instance he supported the officers of the company in their refusal to submit the question of unionizing the mines to arbitration.

"Rube" Waddell Is Dead.

Georgs Edward ("Rube") Waddell, the famous base ball pitcher, formerly a member of the Philadelphia Athletics, died in San Antonio, Texas. He had been ill for a long time of tuberculosis.

Waddell was the most eccentric and unreliable pitcher in the country, but the most effective when in shape. He was born in Bradford, Pa., in 1878. Waddell went to the Bradford schools, but paid more attention to base ball than his education and early won renown as a twirler of phenomenal ability.

In 1897 he went to Volant college and later in the year joined Louisville. In 1898 he was with Detroit and Homestead, Pa.; with Columbus and Louisville in 1899; with Pittsburgh and Milwaukee in 1900, and with Chicago and Los Angeles in 1901.

Connie Mack took a trip to Los Angeles in 1902 and was so favorably impressed with his work that he made him a big offer to jump to the Athletics. It was his wonderful pitching that enabled the Athletics to win the pennant in that year, and he was also a big factor in the 1905 pennant winning team. In 1908 Waddell was sold by the Athletics to the St. Louis American team.

For a "Dry" Navy.

A dry navy is to take the place as the right arm of grape juice diplomacy in the scheme of the Wilson administration.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels has signed an order which absolutely prohibits the use or introduction of alcoholic liquors on any vessel of the navy or within the confines of any navy yard or shore station.

This order will be issued to the service at once and will become effective on July 1, 1914.

Find Pin in Appendix.

Surgeons at the State hospital in Ashland, Pa., operating on Michael Foley, of Mahanoy City, for appendicitis, found a bent pin in the boy's appendix. Young Foley has no recollection of swallowing the pin. He will recover.

Taft to Honor Memory of Aide.

William Howard Taft will be the principal speaker at the dedication exercises in Augusta, Ga., of a memorial bridge to Major Archibald Butt, on April 14, the second anniversary of Major Butt's death in the Titanic disaster.

Torreon Falls; Loss Over 5000.

Not only is Pancho Villa's rebel army in undisputed possession of Torreon, Mex., but his army is in close pursuit of the fleeing Federal army, recently defending the city.

WINTER WHEAT CROP BIGGEST IN HISTORY

The Prospect is For 649,000,000 Bushels.

Reports issued by the department of agriculture indicate that the United States this year will have a larger crop of winter wheat by 108,000,000 bushels than in any other year of the country's history.

The government estimate of the total winter wheat crop, based on an acreage of 4,807,000, is for 649,800,000 bushels. The largest winter wheat crop in any previous year was about 542,000,000, in 1901.

Not in years has the condition of winter wheat been so nearly perfect as it is now, according to the report. This is that the wheat, on April 1, was 95.6 per cent of a normal, as against 97.2 per cent on Dec. 1, and 91.6 per cent on April 1, 1913, and 80.6 per cent on April 1 the previous year.

The average condition for the last ten years, on April 1, is 85.7 per cent, while the average decline in the condition of the crop from Dec. 1 to April 1, in the last ten years, has been 3.5 per cent, or more than twice as great as the deterioration has been this year, which was only 1.6.

In these statistics the percentage is based upon the total crop that could be obtained if all the wheat planted grew to maturity.

Rye also is shown to be in good condition in the report, which says the average on April 1 was 91.3 per cent of a normal, against 95.3 per cent Dec. 1; 89.3 per cent April 1, 1913, and 87.9 per cent April 1, 1912.

CONFESSES BANK ROBBERY

Prisoner Admits That He Shot Two Men in Altoona Institution.

Frank Carroll, also known as Hohl and Wilson, who is in jail in Hollidaysburg, Pa., in connection with the recent bank robbery in Altoona, confessed to District Attorney Patterson that it was he who shot two men and robbed the United National bank of $2800 ten days ago.

Victim of March Hot Wave Dies.

George A. Klare, a letter carrier, of Pottsville, Pa., who was stricken with the heat while delivering mail during the sudden hot wave in March, which lasted but one day, died from the effects of the stroke. He had been only partly conscious since being stricken. Klare had a weak heart and was obliged to use caution during hot weather, but did not think it necessary to do so in March.

Gets $50,000 For Loss of Eyes.

A verdict awarding $50,000 to Matt Yurkonis for the loss of both eyes, was returned in the United States district court in Brooklyn, N. Y., against the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad.

This is said to be the largest verdict ever obtained in New York state for an injured workman. Yurkonis was working in the railroad company's Pettibone coal mine at Luzerne, Pa., when he was injured by the explosion of a squib of fuse in a powder hole.

March Guilty of Murder.

George H. March was found guilty of murder in the first degree at Media, Pa., for the killing of S. Lewis Pinkerton, an Edgemont township tax collector and farm manager, by whom March was employed.

The jury had deliberated for more than thirty-six hours and several times had returned to the court room for further instructions.

Pinkerton was slain in a barn on Nov. 7, 1913. His body was later found buried in a woods five miles distant.

Dispossessed; Cuts Throat.

Sitting against a boulder in Noy-Aug park, in Scranton, Pa., heading a constable's bill of sale for his household goods, Charles King, sixty-seven years old, was found bleeding to death from four cuts in his throat. King had been put out of his house and the furniture sold for rent. He cut his throat with a razor. It is said he will recover.

Torreon Falls; Loss Over 5000.

Not only is Pancho Villa's rebel army in undisputed possession of Torreon, Mex., but his army is in close pursuit of the fleeing Federal army, recently defending the city.

The cavalry, under Generals Hernandez and Ortega, sent in pursuit of General Velasco and his fleeing Federals, overtook the rearguard of the Federals at San Pedro de Los Colonias, and in the fight which followed 100 Federals were killed and 153 taken prisoners. The rebel losses were not given.

Torreon was the last stronghold held by Huerta in northern Mexico. The town, strewn with the dead and wounded of a six-day battle, was occupied by the victorious rebels on the heels of the fleeing Federals, the remnants of General Refugio Velasco's army.

In all the fighting no foreigner was killed or injured.

The losses have not been compiled, but General Villa estimates his own losses at 500 killed and 1500 wounded and the Federal loss at 1000 killed and 2500 wounded, with an unknown number of prisoners. This is by far the largest number of casualties in any of the many battles that have marked the Mexican revolution of the last four years.

Senate Cuts Out Telegrams.

By a vote of 47 to 4 the senate deprived itself completely of the privilege of sending telegrams on official or other business at the government's expense. Senators O'Gorman, Oliver, Tillman and Lippitt voted against the resolution.

HOME RULE WINS BY 80 MAJORITY

Commons Passes Measure to Third Reading.

THE IRISH FORGES GLASH

Timothy Healy Charges John E. Redmond With Deluding Ireland Over Settlement.

By a majority of 80 an amendment for the rejection of the home rule bill was defeated in the house of commons in London, and without division the bill was given for the third time its second reading in the house.

The second reading of the home rule bill was carried the first time by a majority of 101, and the second time by a majority of 98.

Eight O'Brienites abstained from voting and two Liberals voted against the government. One Nationalist was absent through illness. Three Laborites also were absent, and Charles F. G. Masterman, who had previously voted as a member of the government, lost his seat in the election for Bethnal Green last February.

National, Independents, Nationalists and Ulsterites clashed in partisan debate over the home rule bill.

Timothy Healy, the Independent-Nationalist, charged Mr. Redmond with deluding Ireland.

"From Sir Edward Grey's speech announcing there must be an appeal to the electorate before the bill comes into operation," he said, "it is clear that the whole matter is the purest gamble for Ireland."

"If the advocacy of conditions made by William O'Brien had been followed instead of calling the Ulstermen 'Orange dogs and carrion crows' the question would be much nearer settlement."

Mr. Healy then announced that the followers of O'Brien, ten in number, would not vote for the second reading of the bill.

The Nationalists, Mr. Redmond said, would have been glad to accept the scheme proposed by Sir Horace Plunkett in February, by which a plebiscite would be taken after a certain number of years on the question whether any section of Ulster desired to continue subject to the Irish parliament.

Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader, declared that the government's attempt to "jump" Ulster with naval and military forces had made him skeptical of any reality in its professions of peace and conciliation.

Sir Edward suggested Mr. Redmond, like the government, was trying to create an atmosphere favorable to himself without an attempt to find a practical compromise.

"The talk of federalism," he said, "has not advanced the settlement of the Ulster question an iota."

Sir Edward Carson repeated his offer that if the government would agree to allow parliament to decide at the end of the six years' period of exclusion whether or not Ulster should have the continued right of local option he would call an Ulster convention and submit the question to it.

Two Die Looking at Fight.

Patrick Eagleton, seventy years old, and Mrs. Dennis Arsenault, sixty years old, of Spencer, Mass., dropped dead from fright in the street in Worcester, Mass., as they witnessed a three-cornered fight between Martin Niederberger, a chauffeur, and Stanley Orutt and Charles Banon, the employees of a cereal company.

Orutt and Banon, while distributing samples, had called at the home of Walter Watson, Niederberger's employer. Mrs. Watson claims she was insulted by one of the men and informed her husband.

Watson and Niederberger started out after the two distributors and located them at the trolley waiting station. A fight followed and Mr. Eagleton, who was waiting for a car, collapsed from fright and died. Mrs. Arsenault sank to the floor of the station and died.

Twelve Reserve Banks Named.

The twelve districts and twelve reserve cities of the federal reserve banking system authorized by the new currency law were announced by the organization committee. This is the first formal step to be taken in the organization of the new banking system.

The cities that are to have federal reserve banks are: New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Richmond, Va.; Atlanta, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Dallas, Tex.; San Francisco and Kansas City.

Twelve districts are outlined, with these cities as financial centers, it being required that the reserve bank of each district shall subscribe to a minimum of $4,000,000 of capital in the reserve system.

Profit in Crop Loans.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo announced that all of the loans made by the government to aid crop movements last fall have been paid and that the clear profit of the transaction was $2,600,000. The banks borrowed only $37,386,000 of the $150,000,000 which Secretary McAdoo declared he stood ready to loan if the farmers needed it.

$275,000 Fire at Charleston.

Firemen succeeded in extinguishing a fire which had raged in a block near the state capitol in Charleston, W. Va., and caused damage estimated at $275,000. The fire began in the plant of an electrical company and extended to a number of wholesale establishments.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.
His Millions Back Open Shop In Colorado Mines.

Venango County, Pa., is "Dry."

All of the applications for wholesale and retail liquor licenses in Venango county were refused by Judge George S. Criswell in court at Franklin, Pa., who had granted licenses for eighteen years, and three new applications were made this year. Judge Criswell hasn't disposed of two brewery applications.

The applications were refused on the ground that saloons are not necessary, and in this connection Judge Criswell took into consideration the public welfare.

The court that fails to do this, he says, fails to exercise the discretion which it possesses relative to public interest. To regard as proper for consideration only the useful and unobjectionable functions of a liquor license is to do violence not only to the adjudged law of the state, but to the common sense of men, the judge says.

Judge Criswell declares that the Brooks high license law does not say it is "lawful" for courts to refuse licenses, but provides that they "shall" refuse them when they aren't necessary, and the question of necessity is left to the discretion of the court.

The judge admits that the Brooks law is not a local option law, but says it contains a local option feature, in that it requires courts to have due regard for the number and character of petitioners and remonstrants.

The message stated that the Newfoundland's men were bringing the pelts of the seals toward that steamship when overtaken by the blizzard, and that the Newfoundland has not a single seal skin now on board.

The other vessel reported a catch of 28,000 seals. This would mean that the Newfoundland's financial loss is perhaps $70,000, as each skin is worth about $2.50. The Newfoundland is reported to be undamaged.

The steamship Bellaventure, bringing fifty-eight bodies and some of the survivors of the Newfoundland to St. Johns, is blocked in the ice. Many of the rescued sealers are reported to be dying, and the death list will be increased before the rescue steamship arrives.

CY WARMAN. POET. DEAD

Wrote "Sweet Marie" and Was Pioneer of Railroad Literature.

Cy Warman, the poet and short story writer, died in Chicago after a long illness.

Warman was stricken with paralysis in a hotel last winter. The outlook was unfavorable from the first. He was removed to a hospital a few weeks ago, where he continued to sink until the end came.

Cy Warman was known as the "Poet of the Rockies," and was a pioneer in the school of railroad literature. His tales about railroad men were based on personal experiences at Salida, Colo., where, in the early 80s, he worked as a wiper, a fireman and an engineer. After a few years of railroading he became ill and was compelled to seek other employment.

The poet later met and was married to Miss Marie Myrtle Jones, who inspired the lines for "Sweet Marie," a song which became a great success.

Warman was born in 1855 near Greenup, Ill., on a homestead presented to his father by the government for gallant service in the Mexican War.

CATTLE FROM ENGLAND

The First Shipment In Nine Months Reaches New York.

Six hundred and forty-eight head of Jersey and Guernsey cattle, valued at $700,000, arrived in New York on the steamship Minnewaska from the British Isles.

This is the first shipment of cattle arriving in New York for nearly nine months, importations having been checked by the federal quarantine enforced because of prevalence of disease.

The cattle on the Minnewaska are consigned to C. S. Cooper, of Coopersburg, Pa., and Frederick Phillips, of Villanova, Pa., and other breeders.

SECOND SHIP MAY BE LOST IN STORM

Belief Grows That Southern Cross Was Wrecked.

SEALER CARRIED CREW OF 173

The Funeral Vessel Bellaventure, With Fifty-eight Boddies Aboard, Caught In Ice Floes.

Blocked by the great masses of floating ice and unable to make progress in the blinding snow and against a terrific gale taht is sweeping St. Johns, N. F., rescue ships failed in their efforts to go to the aid of the Southern Cross, imprisoned somewhere in the ice floes, together with 173 members of her crew.

Fears that the sealer has been crushed and that her crew has been frozen to death or are lost on the fields of floating ice were revived when government authorities stated that the vessel had not arrived at Channel, N. F., as previously reported, and that an extended search for the missing ship would begin as soon as the blizzard and gale abate and make it safe to navigate vessels.

The Southern Cross, formerly used in Antarctic exploration by Sir Ernest Shackleton, carried a crew of 173 men and was loaded with more than 17,000 seal skins, trophies of a hunt in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The Southern Cross started homeward a week ago, and passed safely down the west coast, through Cabot strait and along the southern coast. On Tuesday morning she was sighted off Cape Pine, nineteen miles west of Cape Race. Since then the blizzard struck this section and nothing further has been heard from her.

Messages sent to New York stated that when the Newfoundland was caught in the ice 100 of her men were on the floe, and that various vessels have picked up more than eighty bodies of men who were frozen to death and that nearly a score of survivors were found.

The message stated that the Newfoundland's men were bringing the pelts of the seals toward that steamship when overtaken by the blizzard, and that the Newfoundland has not a single seal skin now on board.

The other vessel reported a catch of 28,000 seals. This would mean that the Newfoundland's financial loss is perhaps $70,000, as each skin is worth about $2.50. The Newfoundland is reported to be undamaged.

Terrace Talk

What do you mean, Goldsborough's an umpire?

The Holy Cross game, which was to have been played Wednesday had to be called off on account of the heavy rain.

The investiture of Dr. Bradley as Monsignor will take place next Friday, April 17th, at the College, at 9 o'clock.

The Easter holidays began on Wednesday and over half the students left for "Home." Classes will be resumed on Friday next.

The University of Vermont, 17; Varsity, 2. Mount Saint Mary's lost its second game to the University of Vermont on Wednesday of last week. Eight hits and a presentation of 16 free rides tells the story. Sutton, who opened on the mound, for the locals was very wobbly, and Moran who succeeded him showed no more equilibrium. The work of the mountain field was also poor. Denning, pitcher for the visitors, allowed six scattered hits. The line-up:

St. John's, 8; Varsity 2.

The Mountaineers were unable to break their losing streak last Saturday when they journeyed to Annapolis and were beaten by the St. John's aggregation, by the score of 8 2.

Bunching hits in the first inning off McCoy, the cadets gathered three runs, enough to decide the contest. They added another tally in the second inning and sewed the game up completely in the fourth by registering four more runs.

Mathews, the St. John's captain, who started the twirling, was in fine form. He pitched five innings. Four scattered hits were all the visitors were able to collect off his delivery, while eight batsmen were retired on strikes. Mathews retired in favor of Stevens, who only recently returned to college. Stevens, too, twirled steadily.

The Mountaineers got one run in the second session on Freeny's error, followed by Long's single. Their other run came in the seventh when Stevens passed McCoy, the latter going to third on McMorris's single. Hickey fanned, Rice was passed filling the bases. Costello hit into a fielder's choice and McCoy scored. Brady ditted Costello's feat and McMorris was caught at the plate. Cogan swung. The score:

'Varsity, 14; Emmitsburg, 4.

In an interesting game on Tuesday afternoon the varsity withdrew from the field of contest with a scalp. They bettered the Emmitsburg nine, by the score of 14 to 4. But like the Vermont game, the score does not indicate a batting feast, but was the result of a number of disastrous attempts on the part of the city-dwellers to locate first base. While practicing this feat in the fifth inning six Mountaineers were chalked up in the R column. Stokes who pitched for the natives showed good form, fanning six of the Mount's batsmen, and had been given better support the score would have been much closer. Chic Rosensteel who succeeded Stokes did not allow a man to reach first. For the Mountaineers, Epperson pitched steadily allowing only one hit. Moran in the two innings he pitched was touched up for two bingles. Ben Sebald and Jap Long, who look like brothers, backed up Emmitsburg and Mount St. Mary's respectively, in fine style. Our columns being only twenty inches long, we have to forego the box score, and give the game by innings:

EMMITSBURG	R	H	E
0 0 0 0 3 1 0	-	4	3
M. S. M.	3	0 2 3 6 0	x-14

A unique feature of the game was the cheering. The Collegiate Classes under the leadership of McGee did valiant work for Emmitsburg, and more than once smothered the efforts of McDermott and his clansmen, the Preps and minims, who espoused the cause of the 'Varsity.

Death of Rev. Germanus Kohl.

Rev. Germanus Kohl, aged 59 years, for six years rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Harrisburg, and a graduate of Mt. St. Mary's College in the class of '83, died at Conewago, Penn., last week. He spent fifteen years in Adams county, ten years at Littlestown and the remaining five years at Conewago where he endeared himself to his people. Father Kohl's death was due to an illness which started from a cold contracted early in November.

The funeral took place Friday morning, April 3, at 10 o'clock conducted by Rev. James Huber, of Hanover. Interment in Conewago Chapel cemetery.

John Norris, noted newspaper man, died last week.

The Chicago Chapter will be entertained on Tuesday, April fourteenth, at a luncheon given by Miss Margaret R. Sackley.

The Buffalo Chapter will organize on Saturday, May thirtieth.

MARYLAND LEGISLATURE OVER

A Few Constructive Bills Come Out of All the Legislation.—Many Die in the Final Jam.

Out of the more than 1700 bills that went into the hopper in this session of the Maryland Legislature, a few important bills became laws. Of these the following is a brief summary: Several constitutional amendments, the most important of which proposes the referendum and home rule for Baltimore city and the counties. From a humanitarian standpoint the most important legislative work was the Hammond Workmen's Compensation measure, which will throw real protection around thousands of the working people in the state. In the line of constructive work the Price law providing $6,600,000 for continuation of the state road system and a new Light Street Bridge, and the Campbell bill creating a State Tax Commission stand out preeminent. By the first the values of lands throughout the State will be largely increased, while the second will bring about a reduction in tax rates by an equalization of assessments. The legislation giving the State Board of Health greater powers is another of the most progressive groups.

The state's convicts and insane, sick and homeless were also well taken care of. The first, through the bills creating the State Board of Prison Control, and the second by naming a State Advisory Parole Board. Large sums for maintenance and additional buildings to house the weak-minded were appropriated, as were liberal amounts for the hospitals and state asylums. Especially prominent also was the educational legislation passed.

The native oystermen of the state were also cared for through passage of the Shepherd amendments to the Haman oyster culture law.

Reduction of the tax on bank stock to 1 per cent. was another important piece of legislation, as was an increase of judges' salaries.

Prominent among the bills which met defeat are:

To wipe out racing in the state through a state-wide antibetting law.

State-wide prohibition through a constitutional amendment.

Cutting down the representation in the house to 61 members and increasing the pay of legislators to $16 per day.

To put the state into competition with private lime industries by establishment of state-owned and convict-worked lime plants in the southern Maryland and on the Eastern Shore.

Changing the date of primaries from early September to early June.

Providing pensions for widows with dependent young children.

Nomination of United States senators by mass or direct vote. (A county unit senatorial primary law was passed in its stead).

To provide a minimum wage scale for working women and minors. Annexation of parts of Baltimore and Anne Arundel county to Baltimore city.

In the words of the Free Lance the work of the Assembly is summed up thus: For better or for worse, they done their darndest.

The Frederick County Delegation in the Legislature is to be commended on the remarkable record they made. Out of the sixty bills introduced by that body only a dozen were killed or died, while much constructive legislation of great importance to the county was enacted into law. A few of the local measures that passed were:

Four economy bills; about half a dozen city measures; Walkersville charter, with referendum, Knoxville dry; school teachers' salary increase, hunting law, Woodsboro franchise.

Important measures killed: Letgore roads and bridge bill, the Wachter liquor bill; Bolt, prohibiting the establishment of more saloons in the county; Brunswick bill giving privilege of voting "wet"; Nelson's Merchandise License bill.

Emmitsburg Bowlers Defeated.

The Emmitsburg Duck Pin team was defeated by the C. & P. team of Frederick in an exciting contest at Matthews Bowling Alleys on Friday evening, by a margin of 65 pins. The local men attribute their defeat to lack of practice and the absence of one of their star bowlers. The "Hello" men held the upper hand throughout the game and the little men at the lower end of the alley fell at their command. Rotering led the Emmitsburg lads with an average over the century mark, while Zeigler played havoc for the "Local and Long Distance." A return game will be scheduled later to be played at the county seat. The scores: Emmitsburg—Eichelberger 254, Annan 262, Rotering 302, Bell 293; Matthews 280. C. & P.—Miller 333, Strine 266, Gardner 284, Zeigler 284, Stake 293.

Splendid Representation For Maryland Planned
In Vast Gathering of States and Nations

JUST inside the Golden Gate a vast army of workmen is rushing to completion the huge exhibit palaces of America's Panama canal celebration, the Panama-Pacific International Exposition in San Francisco in 1915. Many of the most celebrated architects, sculptors and artists in the United States co-operated in the design of the marvelous exposition city upon the shores of San Francisco bay. As an inspiration they had before them the greatest engineering work in the history of the world—the Panama canal—and in the completion of the canal they saw the final result of the effort of centuries to secure a passageway between the oceans. As the Exposition assumes form the wonders that the architects dreamed of become vivid and tangible. A city of palaces facing north upon San Francisco harbor is rising against the walls of the hills that embrace the Exposition site upon the south, east and west. When completed, months before the opening of the Exposition, it will be found that the majority of the Exposition palaces are united into one enormous structure, with its outside walls as high as the average six story city block and with its golden towers and minarets rising to heights of 170, 250, 350 and 430 feet. Eight of the main exhibit buildings will form parts of a huge group surrounding the three principal courts. They will represent in conception a stupendous oriental bazaar, similar in form to the bazaars of the east, at Constantinople, Damascus or Cairo. The roofs of the buildings will be colored a reddish pink, like Spanish tile, and will be spread over the mile long group of the main exhibit buildings extending along the blue waters of the bay. Wonderful groups of statuary will tell the story of the Panama canal.

The site of the Exposition covers 635 acres on San Francisco harbor. A will be under way by the time this article is published. One of the unique phases of the Exposition will be the tremendous participation of the South American nations. Many of the republics will make displays never before seen outside their own boundaries. The commonwealths of the United States will be represented upon a splendid scale. Thirty-five states have selected the sites of their state pavilions, and the appropriations made by state legislatures aggregate millions. The largest appropriation is that of New York state—$700,000.

DAYLIGHT PERSPECTIVE OF PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION.

more impressive location for a great maritime celebration could not have been chosen. The Exposition city will face north upon the stream of traffic that passes through the western portal of America. On the south, east and west rise the hills of San Francisco, like the walls of a vast amphitheater. On a tree lined esplanade along the harbor's edge visitors will view great maritime pageants by day. By night a series of marvelous illuminations proceeding from great batteries of colored searchlights will turn the Exposition city into a fairyland.

Eleven huge exhibit palaces are under construction at this writing, and all of the fourteen main exhibit buildings

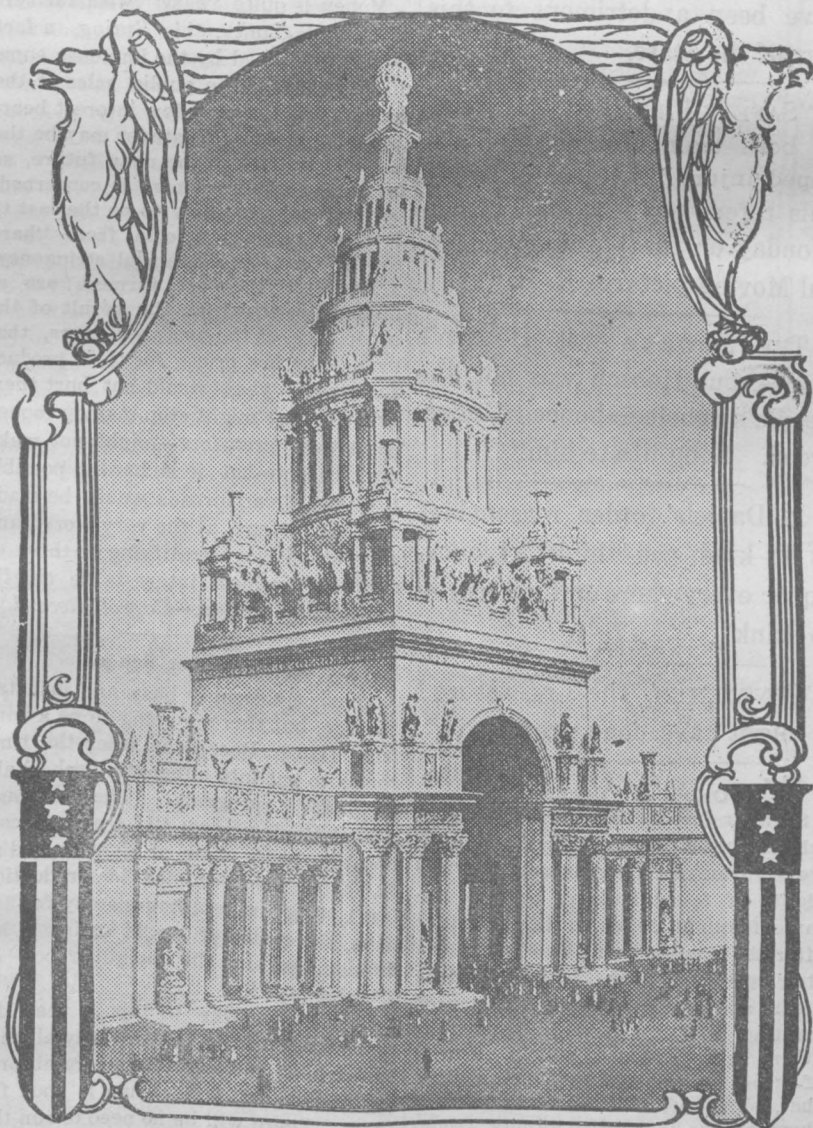

Thanks to the activities of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association of Baltimore, more largely perhaps than to any other single factor, the state of Maryland will not be without adequate representation of its great resources and manifold advantages and will take her proper place among the states at the Exposition. A bill which will provide from $75,000 to $100,000 to cover the expense entailed by making an exhibit is now in the hands of the state senate, and action will probably be taken on the matter in very short order.

The measure not only has the enthusiastic backing of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association of Baltimore, but of Governor Goldsborough and practically every important interest in the state. Maryland is actuated, as are the other states, by a just desire to participate in the trade expansion and the increased immigration that are sure to follow both the completion of the canal and the $50,000,000 celebration wherewith the country is to observe the event, for every state has borne its share in the building of the canal, and each is entitled to its share of the benefits.

It is obviously the very earnest desire of Maryland's citizens that the exhibit of their state shall, in a small way, be as comprehensive as the Exposition itself and that not only should its products, manufactures and material resources and advantages be shown, but that the beauties of the state and the multitudinous activities of its people in every direction of endeavor be set forth to the view of the millions who will visit the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco in 1915.

A unique feature of the Exposition—and it is difficult to select from among the thousands of brilliant features one as being more interesting than another—will be a continuous live stock show, the greatest the world has known. Fifty acres will be used for live stock pavilions and show grounds. The Exposition management has set aside $175,000 for premiums for live stock, while $225,000 is offered for harness races. Breeding associations of the United States have so far offered $45,000 in premiums. This is a total of $445,000.

The "Midway" at the Exposition (the name has not yet been chosen) will be spectacular. At a cost of $350,000 the Santa Fe railway will present a series of panoramas showing the Grand canyon of Arizona, famous artists being engaged upon the panoramas. In a working model of the Panama canal visitors will proceed through the locks, as if actually going through the canal itself, and lecturers will explain its operation. This concession, to cost $250,000, will have a capacity of handling 2,000 people through its locks every thirty minutes. Another concession will show the historic old market place of Nuremberg, Germany, and wonderful concessions from China and Japan will be shown. Altogether the cost of installing the concessions is estimated at $11,200,000.

A MARVELOUS SETTING FOR SCULPTURE AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION, SAN FRANCISCO, 1915.

The dominating architectural feature of the Exposition is the superb Tower of Jewels which will command the south entrance of the Court of the Universe. This tower, 430 feet in height, will have a base one acre in extent. The tower will rise upward in terraces, giving way at last to a group of figures supporting a globe typifying the world. The repeated figures of armored horsemen and of explorers of the oceans will be used in the tower, which, with its statuary, mural paintings and mosaics, will be indescribably beautiful. Messrs. Carrere and Hastings, architects in chief of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo in 1901, are the architects.

A RESURRECTION WORD.
Lo! in the rosetate trembling break of day,
Strong angels sought the bed whereon
He lay,
A song of Heaven awoke Him and He stirred,
To waken the flower and star and leaf
and bird:
Forth from the crypt He stepped, no more to die,
Lord of the living, both in earth and sky.

DEATH OF MR. M. E. DOLL.
Mr. Melville E. Doll, of Frederick, who for nearly half a century has been closely identified with the business life of that community, died at his home, at noon Tuesday from pneumonia.
Commenting on his life the Frederick Post says: "Public life had no allurements for him, although he was always interested in questions of public import. By his quiet demeanor and strict fidelity to every trust reposed in him, he won the esteem and confidence of his fellow citizens in all walks of life. He was an upright man and a good citizen."

In 1867, Mr. Doll married Miss Danner, of Gettysburg, Pa. Several months ago Mrs. Doll died, she was a sister of Mrs. Charles Reinwald of this place.
Mr. Doll is survived by one brother, Mr. Samuel V. Doll.
Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the house, conducted by Rev. H. L. G. Kieffer. Interment was made in Mt. Olivet cemetery.
Last year 300,000 babies under one year old died in the United States. At least 50 per cent. of them could have been saved by proper care.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county.

REGIONAL BANKS DISTRICTING.

The consensus of opinion is all but unanimous that the location of the Regional Banks, in many localities is a blunder and to a great extent an injustice.

The laying out of some of the regional districts afford ground for belief that scientific or economic arguments did not prevail in the deliberations of the organization committee.

By reference to a publication entitled the "Operation of the New Bank Act," by Thomas Conway, Jr., and Ernest M. Patterson, Profs. of Finance in U. P. we find the statement that "It is generally conceded that New York and Chicago will be on the list because of their situation and financial prominence; San Francisco and New Orleans come next."

by the designation of the Districts for these Banks. The New York Mail continues, "And no doubt New York has reason to congratulate itself that it has narrowly squeaked through and into the list of these regional capitals. There was a strong disposition to annex New York to Boston."

We find no financial authority approving the selection of Richmond as a center to control the financial movements of Baltimore. The slight would have been far less had Baltimore been made a satellite of New York or Philadelphia.

So, also, when it is considered that New Orleans is the second port of the United States and among the leading of the world's cotton markets, with larger population, financial and commercial interests than Atlanta and Dallas, Texas combined (we say Dallas, Texas, as, even some well informed reader might ask where is Dallas?)

It seemed from the first but a practical conclusion that Baltimore and New Orleans that for 100 years have been considered leading cities of the South, were entitled to recognition.

The question will take on an acute form both here in Maryland and in Louisiana when the crop moving period arrives and when money in larger sums than either Richmond for this region or Atlanta and Dallas combined for the 6th region can supply.

The injustice may be rectified however, as under the law the federal Reserve Board composed of the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller of the Currency and five members to be appointed by the President of the United States must ratify the organization committee's selection before it becomes final.

CLEAN UP TIME.

Clean up time is here. With the coming of Spring everybody is anxious, or should be, to "set things in order." The feeling is irresistible. Nature suggests it—sets the example. She has thrown off the old while still lingering in the shadow, and now the warm sunshine and the siren call of birds bid her don her new apparel and gladden all the world.

Then comes the paint—and, perhaps the cement sidewalk, for people come more to the front, literally, as the balmy weather arrives, and every property owner is anxious that his premises, in their entirety, do credit to him and the community. Community pride is a commendable pride and should actuate each person. Only by its general observance can the whole community reflect its decency, its belief in itself and show to the outside world that it is worth while.

In this connection let another word be said in favor of the Civic League. It is an organized body with town beautification and town welfare for its plea. Realizing what inestimable benefits arise from concerted action, inspired by these associations, cities and towns everywhere cooperate with these leagues and the net result is better sanitation, cleanliness, decency, beauty, and satisfaction. Most places have a public clean up day. Why not Emmitsburg?

STILL you must remember that it's awfully hard to keep the Democratic party split after the first mint julep hits Pennsylvania avenue.—Boston Transcript.

And the way they make them there! What tender mint; what snow-like sugar; and as for the chief ingredient, that mellow brew like the milk of human kindness—why two rounds of them would make Champ Clark declare that he never wanted the nomination. Split the Democratic party while this cement is obtainable? Never!

THE delegation from Frederick county made a record of which it can be proud. Senator Mathias and delegates Brust, Nelson, Buzzard and Belt were ever watchful for the county's interest. They introduced and upheld excellent bills and they voted against and successfully fought against measures that would have been a detriment to this part of the State.

"SAFETY FIRST"—"The crews of both trains jumped and escaped injury." Needless to say this refers to a head-on collision Monday on the W. M. (Wonderful Moving-picture) R. R.

THE Senate was Hobson's choice, but Hobson was not the people's choice—hence Underwood. Long life to him!

Is Daniels' order reasonable? Is it kind you think? Liquor, liquor everywhere and not a drop to drink?

GENTLEMEN, The Legislature! It might have done worse.

Origin of "Bonfire." Stow, referring to the "bonifiers" which the citizens of London were wont to make on the streets on "the vigils of festal days and on the same festal days in the evenings after the sunne setting every man bestowing wood or labor towards them" and which were an occasion of feasting and merriment, says that "these were called bonifiers as well of good amitie amongst neighbours, that, being before at controuersie, were there by the labours of others, reconciled, and made of bitter enemies, loving friends, as also for the vertue that a great fire hath to purge the infection of the ayre."—London Globe.

Actors and Long Hair. A theory concerning the reason why old fashioned members of the theatrical profession used to favor the practice of wearing flowing locks is advanced by Mr. Henry Ainley. In the course of a speech at the Actors' Benevolent fund dinner he said he was informed that in the dark ages if actors committed any grievous offense they were pierced through the lobe of the ear. From that time, he thought, they began to wear their hair long.—London Standard.

Ready Remedy. Author—I am troubled with insomnia. I lie awake at night hour after hour thinking about my literary work. His Friend—How very foolish of you! Why don't you get up and read portions of it?

Editorials From Maryland Exchanges.

Booze and Business.

It was only yesterday—or the day before yesterday—that the traveling Salesman or the Outside Representative of a Business House was a Hail-Fellow-Well-Met, with an over supply of questionable stories, an ability to play a stiff game of poker, and an ever apparent thirst.

The minute he met you he said, "What'll you have?" He carried it in his hip pocket, in his grip, or in dire extremities he knew the side-door signal of every saloon in the state. He was a Boozer with a capital B. He started his business day with an "Eye Opener" and he closed it with a "Nightcap."

Then competition increased, the pace grew faster, more houses wanted the same customers. Business Arguments of Price, and better service, and finer merchandise were offered instead of chloride-of-lime jokes.

Merchants woke up. Great Business Houses found out quick that their boozing salesmen had no stamina. He tired easily. He was easily discouraged. When things went wrong he increased his booze ration. Instead of working the harder in the emergency he sat around in barrooms and told his yarns and said "What'll you have?" Which yielded his firm no profits.

He turned to the Bottle for courage, for conviction and for consolation. It gave him none of these. At twenty-five it made a "sport" of him. At forty it made a Bum of him.

His firm discharged him. Not one salesman in one hundred that you meet these days is a boozier. His firm won't stand for it. His customers won't stand for it. And if he has brains and wants to keep them, he won't stand for it himself.

The Athlete training for a race must not use booze. In this twentieth century there is no line of worth-while endeavor, particularly business, that is not a race, the keenest kind of a race. And no man can afford to handicap himself by toying the line with booze on his breath—for such is the way of defeat. Let it alone.—Towson New Era.

Don't be afraid to get your name in print. If there is anything interesting about yourself, other people will like to read it just as much as you like to read about them. It is a mistaken notion that you are trying to push yourself forward simply because you have your name in the paper. If everybody felt that way, where would the papers be?—Union News.

Money "Easy" With Farmers.

Money is quite "easy" with farmers of Carroll county, this Spring, a fact that is evidenced by the immense sums of cash paid at the public sales of the county, and the very few interest bearing notes given. Whatever may be the business outlook in the near future, so far as the whole country is concerned, our farmers are likely to be the last to feel any serious effects from "hard times," or from a financial stringency.

The fact is, most farmers are so financially sound, as the result of the prosperity of the past ten years, that even very low prices for their produce for several years would not hurt them greatly; they might stop making money as fast as heretofore—might not make any, in fact—but it is hardly possible that any great inroads would be made on their savings, at the very worst, and all of this is very gratifying to those of us whose business interests lie chiefly in the rural section.—Carroll Record.

The All Year School.

This is a tolerably busy and industrious age, but there is going to be a howl from Dan to Beersheba when the time comes to put into effect the "school-all-the-year" program. The Chicago School Review says: "If a private corporation had a chain of plant valued at $2,000,000,000 occupied in production but 1,000 hours, six hours a day for 166 days, the manager would estimate his annual loss in the neighborhood of $300,000,000."

But the answer to this is that the teachers generally have already all that they can do and the children are absorbing knowledge faster than is good for them. There will be no need to run the school plants more than at present unless the adult population is drawn upon to supply the pupils. This, it looks now, will be done to some extent, but not by any means, we should guess, to the degree that would demand continuous use of school plants.—Cumberland Evening Times.

The tonnage of the merchant vessels launched throughout the world in 1913 showed a large increase over the preceding year and, in fact, over any previous year, being estimated at 3,332,000 tons, as against 2,901,000 tons for the vessels launched in 1912. The tonnage of the vessels added in 1913 to the French fleet was 176,000 tons, as against 111,000 tons added in 1912.

According to the chief of the Pure Food and Drug Department of Tennessee, "this country has outstripped China in the use of 'dope,' and the percentage of narcotic-users is greater than that of the Orient."

Ashes of the Great.

The city republic of Florence gathered her famous dead at Santa Croce, gave "the all Etruscan three," Dante, Petrarch and Boccaccio. England has made Westminster abbey the burial place of such men as Chaucer, Spenser, Newton, Darwin and Tennyson, besides a baker's dozen of kings. But in America the ashes of the great are scattered far and wide. Washington rests at Mount Vernon, Va.; Lincoln at Springfield, Ill. The tomb of Paul Jones is an inspiration to students in the naval academy at Annapolis. Poe sleeps at Baltimore; Mark Twain at Elmira, N. Y.; Alexander Hamilton in old Trinity churchyard, surrounded by towering skyscrapers which embody his philosophy of life and government. Is not America's way the best? England and Florence make things handler for the tourist, but is he the chief person to consider? Since our heroes come from all the land is it not best that their ashes return to the soil from which they spring, till youth in every neighborhood has some reminder of public service and noble work?—Chicago Journal.

The Torment of Cold.

I thank heaven that I know what it is to be cold, to be cold from the crown of the head to the sole of the foot, to be cold from the cuticle in to the heart, and from the heart to the soul. I thank heaven for it, because, knowing this, I have a new revelation of the possibility of suffering, and I am able to find a paradise in a common wood fire. Knowing this, I declare to you there is not a more pathetic sight in the world than a poor man who is thoroughly cold from week to week. It is the refinement of torture. It does not gnaw like hunger, which presently becomes a sort of insanity and relieves itself. It is a dead, unblest, icy torment. I used to see men in the army whose silent endurance of cold brought more tears to my eyes than all the hunger and all the wounds.—Sidney Lanier.

A Candidate's Revenge.

French electors occasionally have some home truths thrown at them by candidates who fail to secure enough votes. At one general election M. Albert Normand, a chemist and druggist, who was a candidate for deputy from Montagne, received only six votes and issued an address thanking "the six electors who showed their confidence in me. They are the only solvent citizens in the constituency, and I beg to assure them of my esteem. As for the others, I hereby give them notice that in future all attempts to obtain credit at my establishment will be relentlessly refused. During the last nine years they have robbed me of about 3,000 francs in bad debts, which I have taken no steps to recover. Yet when an opportunity is afforded of showing their appreciation of my leniency I meet with the basest ingratitude."

Carlyle and London's Noises.

No one has ever inveighed against the noises of London with such picturesque emphasis as Thomas Carlyle. When Augustus Hare met him for the first time at a dinner given by Lady Marian Alford most of Carlyle's conversation ran upon the sufferings attached to a London residence. "That which the world torments me in most," he moaned, "is the awful confusion of noise. It is the devil's own infernal din noise. It is the blessed day long, confounding God's works and his creatures—a truly awful hell-like combination, and worst of all is a railway whistle, like the screech of 10,000 cats and every cat of them as big as a cathedral." Against this diatribe may be set the fact that Carlyle spent the last forty-seven years of his life in London without any compulsion to live there.

Helping His Temper.

The sun was blinding, clouds of dust were blowing everywhere, and Jones was most decidedly off his game. It really "put the lid on it" when, just as he was struggling to play his ball out of a quarry, a benevolent old lady out of a quarry, a benevolent old lady passed by with a companion. She halted in evident surprise and pointed with her umbrella at the earnest golfer. "Dear me, my love," she remarked in audible tones, "what a very respectable dressed man that is breaking stones!"—Argonaut.

He Admired Her Judgment.

She—Oh, Fred, dear, you are so noble, so generous, so handsome, so chivalrous, so much the superior of every man I meet, I can't help loving you. Now, what can you see in plain little me to admire? He—Oh, I don't know, dear, but you certainly have very good judgment.—London Tit-Bits.

She Knew.

The teacher had given the class a talk on household pests. "What, now, is the greatest foe the housewife has?" he asked. Up went one little hand. "All right, Mary, what is it?" "A husband," came the quick reply.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Away From Home.

"He is one of those near vegetarians." "What is a near vegetarian?" "He never eats meat except when he is invited out."—Pittsburgh Press.

Force of Habit.

"Why did she want to set her husband's will aside?" "Merely because it was her husband's and she had got in the habit of setting it aside."—Houston Post.

We must not take the faults of our youth into our old age, for old age, young with its own defects.—Goethe

Dazed the Crank.

David P. Barrows, while acting president of the University of California, one day received a queer visitor. Lean and terribly earnest, the man broke into Barrows' study.

"I am the prophet Micah," he announced, "and I have a need for your service. The world is soon to come to an end. Could you not spread the tidings through the university?" "Dr. Barrows shook his visitor by the hand, collected his thoughts and replied: "I believe that at no time was there such a crying need for prophets. But, unfortunately, prophesying is an art with which I am unfamiliar. I am not even in close sympathy with it and, as I am unable to comprehend what you have accomplished, I confess inability to participate as a prognosticator."

Whether it was the unexpected reply or the quick fire of so many words that dazed the visitor will never be known. Certain it is the man backed to the door and uttered the inadequate reply, "Yes."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Gentlemen of Leisure.

One of the upper ten thousand, once visiting America, accepted the hospitality of a gentleman in New York. When taking farewell of his host the latter asked him what he thought of the American people.

"Well," answered the nobleman, "I like them immensely, but I miss something." "What is that?" asked the Yankee. "I miss the aristocracy," replied the Englishman.

"What are they?" naively asked his host. "The aristocracy!" said the nobleman in a somewhat surprised tone of voice. "Why, they are people who do nothing, you know; whose fathers did nothing, you know; whose grandfathers did nothing, you know—in fact, the aristocracy!"

Here he was interrupted by the American, who chimed in with, "Oh, we've plenty of them over here, but we don't call them aristocracy—we call them tramps."—Exchange.

Washington's Only Joke.

The only admirable quality in which Washington was deficient was humor. One of the very few jests he ever made—perhaps the only one—has descended to posterity on the authority of his aid-de-camp, Colonel Humphreys. General Washington rather prided himself on his riding, so the colonel one day when they were out hunting together dared him to follow over one particular hedge. The challenge was accepted, and Humphreys led the way. He took the leap boldly, but to his consternation found that he had mistaken the spot and was sunk up to his horse's girth in a quagmire. The general either knew the ground better or had suspected something, for, following at an easy pace, he reined up at the hedge and, looking over at his engulfed aid, exclaimed, "No, no, colonel, you are too deep for me!"

Massaged With Nettles.

Nettles are said to be an almost certain proof that man has lived on the spot. One British species, the so called Roman nettle, is said to be found only where the Romans have been. Coles, the seventeenth century herbalist, explains, "It grows both at the town of Lidde, by Romney, and in the streets of the town of Romney, in Kent, where Julius Caesar landed, with his soldiers, and abode there a certain time, and for the growing of it in that place it is reported that the soldiers brought some of the seeds with them and sowed it there for their use to rub and chafe their limbs when through extreme cold they should be stiff and numb, being told before they came from home that the climate of Britain was so extreme cold it was not to be endured without some friction."

Tale of the Iron Duke.

The Duke of Wellington, if he did not confer commissions in the army upon little boys, went one better in the way of promise. It is Grant Duff who tells the tale in his diary. "Dined with the Spencer Walpoles. She told a story of playing as a child in the gardens of Apsley house. The old duke came out, and the children stood in a row while he passed. He stopped and said to one of them: 'You are a very nice little fellow. When you are old enough I will give you a commission in the guards.' 'But I am a girl, Mr. Dook,' said the child."

Not a Magnet.

"Let me sing the old songs in your parlor," lisped the girl who thought she was a prima donna. "Please don't," begged the landlady. "But your boarders will be carried away by my singing." "That's just the trouble. The last time you sang they were carried over to the next boarding house."—National Monthly.

Poured.

"I have poured every day this week at some function or other," remarked the vivacious girl. "Well, well!" murmured the old gentleman who overheard her. "Now I know what is meant by the term 'a reigning belle.'"—St. Louis Republic.

Frank About It.

Shoe Store Salesman—What size would you like, madam. Miss Larjun—I'd like a No. 2, but there's no use talking about that. You may as well show me your No. 5's.—London Telegraph.

No Recall For Him.

Mike—Do you believe in the recall of judges, Pat? Pat—That I do not. The last time I was up before his honor he sez: "I recall that face. Sixty days." I'm agin the recall of judges.—Life.

SOME WEDDING THIS.

A Missouri editor who was brimful of hard cider, got a wedding account and a sale ad. mixed, and served to his readers this dope:

William Smith the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Smith, was disposed at auction to Lucy Anderson on my farm one mile east of here in the presence of seventy guests including the following, to wit: Two mules, twelve head of cattle. The Reverend Jackson tied the nuptial the least averaging 1,250 pounds on the hoof. The beautiful home of the bride was tastefully decorated with a seawash calf, a spade, a sulky rake, one feed grinder, one set double harness almost new and just before the ceremony was pronounced Mendelsohn's wedding march was played by one milch cow, five years old, one Jersey cow, to be fresh next April, carrying a bunch of flowers in her hand and looking charming in a gown made of light spring wagon, two boxes of apples, two racks of hay, one grindstone, mouseline deori, trimmed with about 180 bushels of spuds. The groom is well known and stood well among society circles of twelve Berkshire hogs, while the bride is an accomplished and talented school teacher of a splendid drove of Poland China—pedigrees if desired. Among the beautiful presents were two sets of knives and forks, one spring harrow, one wheelbarrow, one go-cart, other articles too numerous to mention. The bridal couple left yesterday on an extended trip, term of twelve months' time, extended to responsible parties otherwise spot cash luncheon will be served at the table. After this Mr. and Mrs. Smith will go to housekeeping in a cozy home at the corner of Main and Ductor R. L. Granby, auctioneer.

LAWS GOVERNING SUBSCRIPTIONS

Most readers of newspapers and many publishers are not familiar with the laws governing subscriptions. Here are the decisions of the United States court on the subject. They will be interesting to publishers and many will undoubtedly be glad of the opportunity to print them for the benefit of delinquent subscribers:

"Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to renew their subscriptions.

"If subscribers order a discontinuance of their publication the publisher may continue to send them until all dues are paid.

"If the subscriber refuses to take the periodical from the postoffice to which they are directed, he is responsible until he has settled his bill and ordered the paper discontinued.

"If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the papers are sent to the former address, the subscriber is held responsible.

"The courts have held that refusing to take periodicals from the postoffice, or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intention to defraud.

"If subscribers pay in advance they are bound to give notice at the end of the time if they do not wish to continue taking it, otherwise the subscriber is responsible until express notice with payment of all arrearage is sent to the publisher.

Daddy's Bedtime Story

Why There Is a Saint Valentine's Day.

JACK and Evelyn had been making valentines all day, for it was the day before the 14th of February. When daddy got home that evening he found all sorts of traces of them. Bits of red cardboard and red tissue paper lay around the floor and pieces of paper were stuck together with paste.

"This does look as if you two had been having a busy day," remarked daddy.

"Oh, we have," said Evelyn. "We've just made quantities of valentines of all sizes and we'd like you to post them for us. Will you, daddy?"

"But you mustn't look at any of them carefully," added Jack.

"Oh, no," agreed daddy. "I'll post them the last thing tonight, and I won't look at any of them. I wonder if I'll get a valentine by any chance?"

Jack and Evelyn looked at each other with a knowing smile and Evelyn said:

"Wait and see, daddy. Maybe you will, though maybe you won't! Anyway, do tell us a story now, for we're wasting so much time talking."

"What I'd like to know," said Jack, "is if there ever was a person named St. Valentine and why we have St. Valentine's day."

"I've always wondered why, too," added Evelyn.

"Yes," said daddy, "there really was a St. Valentine. He was a bishop in the third century—that was many, many years ago. He was a very good, kind man and always went about doing kind things for people. But some of the Romans didn't like him, and in those days the people were cruel, and if they didn't like any one or thought he might do them harm, they had him beheaded, and Bishop Valentine, as he was then called, was beheaded.

"His friends felt dreadfully that such a good man should be so cruelly murdered, and for days they could talk of nothing else but of the good Bishop Valentine, and they'd tell one another of all his good deeds and of his love for all people and of his kindnesses. The older people would tell their children about him until before long they began to speak of him as St. Valentine, and that name clung to him.

"So that ever since then, through all the years that have passed, he has always been known as St. Valentine, and although he was so cruelly beheaded, still his deeds of charity and kindness will always be known.

"You see, that is why we send valentines around to tell people we're thinking of them and are fond of them, and we call them valentines because they're nice, thoughtful messages and are like the dear old St. Valentine."

Oyster Shell Scale Here.

A specimen of scale affecting shade trees in this locality was forwarded by THE CHRONICLE to the Maryland Agricultural College for the purpose of determining the species of insect. The reply from the Associate Entomologist states that it is the "Oyster Shell Scale" and that it may be controlled by using kerosene emulsion. The formula is: Kerosene 2 gals; common soap half pound; water 1 gal. Dissolve the soap in hot water, add the Kerosene, and emulsify by violent churning. "The Oyster Shell Scale lives over the winter in an egg state, and you will have to watch your trees carefully between May 1st and May 15th to determine when the young are crawling, as that is the time you should spray for the scale."

Mr. John Thomas Gelwicks who is very fond of Martins has doubled the number of his bird houses in his very pretty garden. The birds began last week to explore their new quarters and arrange for the coming season.

Mrs. Catharine Hyder had a new shingle roof put on her house this week.

Mr. J. Stewart Annan has had the porch on his residence on West Main street, repainted.

Messrs. Casper Hausden and Charles Daywalt, son of the late Officer Daywalt, of Waynesboro, made a bicycle trip to Emmitsburg last week. The pair left Waynesboro last Sunday and pedaled to Emmitsburg, where they remained until Monday. From here they went to Thurmont and Frederick and returned by way of Hagerstown, Tuesday. No mishaps whatever marred their trip.

Mr. Harry Hopp repaired the porch at the rear of his residence on West Main street, this week.

Mr. John S. Hollinger, of near town, shipped to Ohio this week, 14 beautiful evergreens. These trees were grown on Mr. Hollinger's well-known farm and will be used to ornament a camp meeting ground.

In the past ten days six new subscribers for electric light have been added to the service list of the Emmitsburg Electric Company.

Some of the light fingered gentry were plying their trade in this vicinity last week. They entered the lower part of John S. Hollinger's property near town but were evidently frightened off before they could accomplish their purpose. From the home of Ivan Riley they carried off canned fruit, vegetables, pies, etc.

The public schools closed yesterday for the Easter Vacation. Studies will be resumed on April 14.

The meeting of the Patrons Club which was to have been held on April 13, has been postponed until the following Monday, April 20. The meeting will convene at 7.30 P. M. at the school building.

At the last meeting of the Vigilant Hose Company the following nominations were made: President, Charles R. Hoke, Samuel L. Rowe, and Harry S. Boyle; Vice-president, J. Brooke Boyle; Treasurer, A. A. Horner; Secretary, E. C. Moser; Captain, Clarence Rider, William Sellers; First Lieutenant, Charles M. Rider; Second Lieutenant, Samuel L. Rowe, H. M. Rowe; Hose Director, Joseph R. Hoke. The next meeting of the company will be held in May.

FIRST GAME OF SEASON

Emmitsburg Boys Face the Mountaineers and Make a Good Showing.

The game with Taneytown having been called off on account of rain—it was to have been played April 1st—the Emmitsburg Baseball Club made its initial bow to fandom on Tuesday afternoon. Their opponents were the "Mountaineers" and the game was played amid much merriment on Echo Field where many a game has been won by nines representing Mount Saint Mary's College.

It was not a challenge or scheduled game, the purpose being simply to give both aggregations practice for future events and in order that the college team might feel the salutary effects of being cheered against, the student body was divided into two squads, one encouraging their own fellows, the other giving heart to the visitors by lusty approval of the good showing they made.

And it was a good showing. There were errors, of course, and they meant runs; but under the circumstances it is a wonder that there were not more. On the other hand there were good plays and the battery of the town boys did valiant service for its team. Every player on the Emmitsburg nine "went after it." Some struck out, but many found the sphere, and come what might, nobody was afraid of the "big league stuff" and everybody was happy.

Nor were the town boys at all ashamed of the score 14-4. They had no need to be. It was their first effort as a team and that with very little practice and the result was highly satisfactory.

Wanted to See Daughter.

A lot of excitement was raised Wednesday evening when Edward Lighter was brought before Squire M. F. Shuff. It was brought out at the hearing that Lighter, who came here from Carlisle, Pa., went to the home of Mr. Harry Stonesifer, of near town, and asked to see his 13 year old daughter, who was sent to the Stonesifer home from the Hoffman orphanage, where she had been placed by her mother. It is alleged that Lighter and his wife are separated. Mr. and Mrs. Stonesifer objected to the man's presence and Deputy Sheriff Adelsberger was told to arrest him.

Before Squire Shuff, the defendant stated that he only wanted to see his daughter, and promised that he would wait until he obtained the legal right to do so. There was no direct charge against the man and the case was dismissed.

SPRING LAMB.

Your Easter dinner will be the more enjoyable if it includes Spring Lamb. We can furnish it to-morrow also tender Veal. apr 10-11. H. M. GILLELAN & SON.

A live baby boy was mailed for 18 cents at Stratford, Okla., addressed to his grandmother at Wellington, Kan. He was safely delivered. On the same day the ashes of a dead Dutchman went by parcel post to his relatives at home, at a cost of $1.42.

THE WEEK AT THE COUNTY SEAT

Chronicle of Happenings at Frederick City and in the Courts.

More than 200 suggestions have been mailed to Mayor Fraley as slogans for Frederick.

President of the Board of Trade Dronenburg said in a conference with the managing committee of the Star Spangled Banner Celebration that more than $1,000 is needed to make Frederick's celebration a success.

A handsome new front built at a cost of nearly $500 will be erected at the United Engine House in the near future.

An important meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Baseball Team was held in the Association building on Tuesday evening.

The annual meeting of the Stockholders of the Frederick & Woodsboro Turnpike Company resulted in the election of W. C. Nedig, president and Ezra Houck Jr., Manager.

The pilgrimage from Baltimore to the tomb of Frances Scott Key will be made on September 8. Probably 50,000 people will come from there to this city in connection with "The Star Spangled Banner" Centennial celebration, which will be held that week in Baltimore.

Arbor Day was observed on Friday, April 3rd.

Greater Hood College began on Thursday when Joseph H. Apple, Jr., lifted the first shovel of earth from the site of Alumnae Hall after the groundbreaking ceremonies were observed in Hood College Chapel.

The question of providing an expert agricultural demonstrator for Frederick County has been revived. The members of the Frederick County Farmers Association discussed thoroughly the possibilities of this question and its president, J. P. King says he is in favor of a popular subscription movement.

Word has been received at the Emmitsburg Post Office that farmers desirous of getting into communication with private residents of Baltimore city with reference to supplying them with produce from the garden and farm, may do so by sending their names to the Postmaster at Baltimore, Md. He in turn will place their names on a list and this will be distributed amongst the people of that city.

This plan offers a good opportunity for the farmer to get the highest market price for his produce. The produce can be sent by Parcel Post up to 50 lbs. at a rate of five cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof. Almost any product of garden and farm can be shipped by Parcel Post except live animals. Poultry can be sent by Parcel Post only when dressed.

It will be advantageous for farmers in this locality to make up and forward their lists to the Postmaster at Baltimore, Md., and be first on the ground floor to get good prices for their products. It is suggested that the farmers in one vicinity go together and sign their names on one list giving their Post Office addresses written plainly, and that this list be sent without delay to Post Master at Baltimore City, Md.

CELEBRATED THEIR GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Moses P. Walsh, of Pittsburgh, Married Fifty Years

Moses P. and Mary Caron Walsh, life-long residents of Pittsburgh, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their home, Richland and Steuben avenues, Crafton, last Sunday afternoon. Every one of the seven children born of the union, together with husbands, wives and children, were present, four generations in all being represented.

While strictly a family affair, the fact that the honor guests had contributed in no small measure to Pittsburgh's growth and development made it of public importance to the extent of numerous congratulations on the part of old-time friends and associates.

Moses P. Walsh first saw the light of day in the old family home, Fifth avenue and old High street, the site of which is still in possession of the family, while Mrs. Walsh was born on the site of the old Scotch Hill Market, Second avenue.

Those present were: Mrs. J. Ledlie Gloninger, John L. Walsh, Louis P. Walsh, R. E. Walsh, Mrs. Erick O'Brien, Alexis P. Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hart Taylor and John Gloninger.

Men's Summer Underwear, Balbriggan, long and short sleeve, ankle and knee length drawers, 25c., 50c. and $1.00, Special Values. B. V. D. Union and Single, Poros Knit Union and Single. G. W. WEAVER & SON, apr 10-11 Gettysburg, Pa.

Ought to Paint

I ought to have painted last year, but I hated to pay $2 a gallon. I've got to paint this year; It'll take a little more paint; I suppose I gallon in 10; and a little more work, I suppose 1 day in 10.

My job would have cost last year about $50; it is going to cost this year $55.

$5 gone. I suppose it'll be the same again, if I wait again.

What if paint goes-down to $1.75 a gallon? $2.50 on the job!

I shant wait; what a fool I was. DEVOE

Made to fit and no two exactly alike. New ones coming in right along to take the place on our racks of those gone.

White and Light Fancy Lingerie Dresses Just received dozens & dozens of Stylish, Well Made "Waldorf" and "Acorn" brands of dresses in Crepes, Voiles, Batistes, etc., $4.00, $5.00, $6.00 to $12.00. Many are trimmed in handsome Shadow Lace flounces and bands, others in other popular laces and embroideries, and nearly all have sa in girdles and tabs in colors. Many of our customers have availed themselves of first choice, but the daily New Arrivals makes the choice just as good as ever.

House and Morning Dresses Dainty, Pretty, Good Style. Dresses for every use, some dressy enough for occasions. Cut right for comfort and style, made as good as the most careful dressmaker would make them, and they cost you less in money and time.

Waists & Blouses By some means our several sources of supply have given us choice of styles, of better designing, and of better materials for the price than we have ever been able to show before. The lines are so extensive it is impossible to give any descriptions. Blouses from 50 cts. up. Waists of Wash Silks, Nets, Satins, etc., at $2.79 up, with all the new style features of collars, sleeves, etc.

Spring Coats The Utility Coat, The Dress Coat, The Sport Coat, The Balmacon, are all represented in large measure in our stock. Mostly in 3-4 length with various sleeves and collar ideas; some with beautiful linings. Materials are Gabardines, Fancy Woven Cheviots, Crepes—and of course the Serge, and Two Toned Fancy Effects. Colors of every wanted kind, including New Fabrics in Cream White, Honey Comb or Waffle Weaves, Black Moires and Black Cords. Never such a Spring Coat season as this. Coats for all sizes of women, which must be seen to know their beauty. We planned for liberal coat selling, but we have had to supplement it by duplicating and the giving of more orders.

The Separate Skirt Not for years has there been so much style—or rather—so many style features to the Separate Skirt as this season. Peg Top, Tiers, Top Flounce, Tucked Up and What Not. Plaids, Checks, Plains—all in great variety. When you get a skirt from us, you get style, tailoring and fit, at no more price than inferior makes and styles cost.

Corsets, Brassieres, Camosoles, Corset Covers, New Muslin Underwear All made to conform to the New Shapes and Styles of dress. Don't buy these Under things hap-hazard, come to a store that knows, and will advise, and where prices are sure to be right.

There is something about the styles of all READY-TO-WEAR GOODS for this Spring that will make you feel DREADFULLY OLD FASHIONED in last Springs clothes.

SYNOPSIS.

Book I.

CHAPTER I—Rudolph Van Vechten, a young man of leisure, is astonished to see a man enter No. 1313, a house across the street from the Powhatan club. The house has long been unoccupied and is spoken of as the House of Mystery.

CHAPTER II—Several persons at regular intervals enter No. 1313.

CHAPTER III—Van Vechten expresses concern to his friend, Tom Phinney, regarding the whereabouts of his cousin and fiancée, Paige Carew. A fashionably attired woman is seen to enter the House of Mystery. A man is forcibly ejected from the house. Van Vechten and Tom follow the man and find him dead in the street.

CHAPTER IV—Van Vechten is attracted by the face of a girl in the crowd of onlookers surrounding the body. Later he discovers the girl gazing at him with a look of scorn from the windows of the mysterious house.

CHAPTER V—Detective Flint calls on Van Vechten to get his version of the tragedy.

CHAPTER VI—Tom Phinney goes alone on a yachting trip. He recognizes among some persons in a passing motor boat two men whom he had seen enter the House of Mystery. He sees one of them, a Mr. Callis, on shore later and follows him. Tom is seized, blindfolded and taken to a house. He hears a girl named Jessie, evidently the daughter of the man in authority, question his captors. A sweet-voiced girl later protests against the roughness of his captors.

Book II.

CHAPTER I—Van Vechten calls on his uncle, Theodore Van Vechten, big man in Wall street and known as the "Man of Iron," in search of information regarding the whereabouts of Paige Carew.

CHAPTER II—Detective Flint shows Van Vechten a gold mesh purse found in the House of Mystery. Van recognizes it as belonging to Paige Carew.

CHAPTER III—The sweet-voiced girl helps Tom Phinney escape, but refuses to disclose her identity. Tom declares he will meet her again.

CHAPTER IV.

Mr. Flint Advances a Theory.

Mr. Flint's voice dissipated Rudolph Van Vechten's bewilderment; but the young man remained completely nonplussed over the seemingly inexplicable manner in which his Cousin Paige's purse had appeared. He met the detective's narrow regard with a long, questioning stare; then he abruptly dropped into a chair.

"Flint," he said, "you took my breath away. Sit down, man, sit down. Think I'll let you go until you have told me all about this?"

So slowly did Mr. Flint obey, that the other could not restrain his impatience.

"Is my cousin in New York?" he questioned peremptorily. "Have you seen her? This is a terribly serious matter, Mr. Flint, as you would appreciate if you were acquainted with all the circumstances."

"Suppose," returned the quiet voice, "you first answer my question—do you know where your cousin is?"

"No"—bluntly, "I don't. Until today I imagined I had some idea of her whereabouts, but"—he weighed the shining purse in his hand, contemplating it soberly—"here is the second reason I have been given within the last hour to feel a good deal of anxiety respecting her."

"Will you tell me the other reason?"

Briefly Van Vechten related the encounter with T. Jenkins, of the Sphere, and at the close of the recital the listener nodded understandingly.

"It is beginning to look as though my search for a murderer was opening up something a bit more serious," began Mr. Flint; but the other sharply interrupted.

"What do you mean? It can't be that anything has happened to Paige?"

Before replying, Mr. Flint regarded him a moment doubtfully.

"Do not become unnecessarily alarmed, Mr. Van Vechten, but it is possible—barely possible, understand—that we have run upon a kidnaping plot."

Van Vechten groaned and sank limply back, staring a horror he could not voice.

"Flint! Do you really know what you are saying?"

"Tut, Mr. Van Vechten. I said 'barely possible.' I meant no more. If you can't control yourself it will be useless for me to talk further. I believe your help would be valuable, and I had hoped to enlist it; but I might as well leave you if you cannot give your attention to the chances of Miss Carew being involved."

"You have as much feeling as a jellyfish, Flint," the other broke in. "I am stunned. Give me a moment to grasp this hideous suggestion."

And he did succeed, gradually, in pulling himself together. The very idea was so shocking, so far beyond the pale of any possible experience that he might within reason expect, that his admirable imperturbability as for the moment shaken. He finally said:

"What have you to support your belief?"

"Not much. And I have no positive belief. I simply want to present a theory for your consideration, suggested by such few unsatisfactory facts as we have, in the hope that, together, we may arrive at one more plausible."

Mr. Flint ceased trying to disabuse his mind of its fears, by unsupported assurances.

"Let us go back to yesterday," he resumed. "The episode of the four men you saw enter the house over yonder was not mystifying to me. Even while you were relating it I was pretty certain that they were responding to an advertisement of some description. The only peculiarity lay in the fact that they arrived precisely an hour apart."

"But that circumstance also is easily explained: The advertiser had need for more than one man, and he wanted to interview them one at a time without meeting one another. Upon running through the files of the daily papers for a fortnight back, I found a confirmation of my conclusions. Here it is." And he handed Van Vechten a newspaper clipping, which the latter studied long and intently before returning:

"WANTED—A young man who will exchange unreservedly one week of his time for $1,000 cash. Must be muscular and willing to risk an adventure involving an element of danger. If imposed conditions are implicitly obeyed, payment will be made immediately upon successful outcome. If you are confident you are the young man, Address X720, Tribune."

"Now," Mr. Flint went on, "certain obvious conclusions may be drawn from this advertisement, and certain things concerning it may be pretty confidently inferred."

"Whatever the enterprise, it involves some danger; it requires young men of physical strength and daring; and it is of sufficient importance to the advertiser for him to expend a considerable sum of money in putting it through—say four or five thousand dollars. There is an army of young men answering the description, employed as well as unemployed, for whom the little ad. would hold an irresistible appeal; undoubtedly Mr. X-720 was deluged with applications."

"Then what is his next obvious step? Why, he puts the mass of letters through a process of selection and rejection. From the lot he chooses the few which strike him the most favorably, and makes appointments with the writers. The house across yonder was secured as a base of operations."

"It was not rented from the agent," Van Vechten suddenly interposed, remembering a feature of the Powhatan committee's call on that individual.

Mr. Flint raised his brows. "So?" said he. "We'll come back to that letter. I was going to say, the mere fact of the advertiser having selected so respectable a neighborhood to operate from was no less than a stroke of genius. Nobody to pry into his affairs; nobody to suspect him—it was only by accident that suspicion was attracted to him at all." Mr. Flint's visage assumed a satisfied expression, as he remarked:

"His ingenuity commands my admiration; I apprehend that the case will prove interesting—most interesting, indeed."

"Don't tell me," protested Van Vechten, "that you can find any satisfaction in the difficulties you are expecting to encounter. It will be bad enough if we have to deal with common crooks, but a criminal prodigy? Lord defend us!"

"I'm afraid, Mr. Van Vechten, that you have no very keen relish for an intricate problem."

"Relish!" the young man barked. "With my uncivilized in the mercy of a gang of unprincipled knaves? I guess not!"

"Oh, well," the detective conceded, "I can't, of course, expect you to view the affair from a professional standpoint; but I assure you, this case is exceedingly promising, and my enthusiasm and determination mount as it grows more baffling."

"That's something, at any rate," Van Vechten admitted with a show of reluctance. "Your zeal will lose you nothing, I promise you. But where did you find the purse?"

The sharp gray eyes swept Van Vechten's earnest face. Mr. Flint replied soberly:

"Now you have hit upon the circumstance that connects Miss Carew with the affair. I found it hanging from a nail, in a dark corner of an upstairs closet, across the street—in your precious house of mystery."

The young man's blank immobility alone betrayed his stupefaction. After a pause:

"Easy, easy, Flint," said he, unsteadily. "Kindly repeat that; this infernal snarl is dulling my faculties."

The other did so, adding: "Of course it was left there—overlooked—by somebody; whether by Miss Carew or somebody else, I am not prepared to say."

Van Vechten sat a long time deep in thought. The occasional glance he directed at the detective was eloquent—in contrast with his impassive features—of the doubts and fears and anxieties that were assailing his mind, and of a conflicting hope that things were not so black as they were being painted. At last, with a slight gesture that signified his helplessness to cope with the situation, he leaned back and sighed.

"Mystifying it all is, to be sure," he said; "but that array might sound more formidable if it were more certain and positive. At the same time, my anxiety about my cousin has by no means abated."

"On reflection," Mr. Flint meditatively continued, "I was scarcely justified in asserting that the facts suggest the possibility of Miss Carew having been kidnaped; it would be more accurate to say: If it turns out that she has been, why, then the facts we now have would have dovetailed with the crime."

"I was thinking of Mrs. Devereaux," cut in the other—"you know who she is?"

The detective nodded. Van Vechten asked:

"Could she have been kidnaped also?"

"Dismiss Mrs. Devereaux for the present," returned Mr. Flint; "she is an item against the possibility. I want first to mention the most serious aspect of the whole affair, for there is one circumstance that makes its criminality almost self-evident."

"Assuming that the man who was killed went to the house in answer to the advertisement—and there is no reason to believe otherwise—in all likelihood he was a stranger to the advertiser; then, where shall we look for a motive?"

"This strikes me as the most probable one: his scruples balked at the enterprise; he denounced the criminals, who were thus threatened with exposure and arrest if they did not immediately silence the intractable individual. They chose the second alternative, which would indicate that they are desperate enough."

"Now let us consider the facts supporting the improbability that Miss Carew has been kidnaped."

"First of all, there is the extreme difficulty of doing such a thing in any event—the lack of opportunity. But with your cousin the difficulty is even greater: she is in Europe with a trustworthy companion, and a number of unlikely assumptions must be materially strengthened before the kidnaping hypothesis can be accepted as a working theory."

"If the deed was committed abroad, how was the young lady conveyed to America? If she was first lured to this country, how was she persuaded to make such an important move without notifying her relatives? And always there is Mrs. Devereaux to be considered. If Miss Carew was separated from her, how is her silence to be explained? If she was not separated from Mrs. Devereaux, then the older lady either must be regarded as a confederate, or it must be assumed that she was forcibly taken also—either assumption being extremely improbable."

"There is one other idea that occurred to me, but a pretty far-fetched one, I'm bound to admit: we may have stumbled upon a rendezvous of international thieves. The purse may have been stolen from Miss Carew, in Europe, weeks or even months ago."

But Van Vechten decisively shook his head. "It has not been out of her possession a week," asserted he; the significance of which the detective seemed to understand.

"Well," said he, "I have been candid with you, Mr. Van Vechten; suppose you return the compliment."

"What do you mean? I have nothing to tell."

"Nothing to tell," the other echoed musingly—"precisely." The contracted eyes favored Van Vechten with a penetrating look.

"Mr. Van Vechten," he began quietly after a pause, "I have not followed my profession for a score of years without acquiring more or less facility in certain directions. For example, I know almost intuitively when anybody is keeping something back from me. I knew that you were not entirely open and frank while I was talking with you yesterday."

The young man regarded him with an amazement not entirely free from discomposure.

"Of course," Mr. Flint went on, without the least emotion, "I can't imagine what your reason may be for reticence; but I do know that if you persist in remaining silent upon any point of this case, you are adopting a most unwise course. I am not trying to force your confidence; I am merely inviting it, leaving the decision with your good judgment. Bear in mind that I haven't the slightest personal interest in finding Miss Carew; she is merely incidental to an investigation I am pursuing."

For a long time Van Vechten pondered. At last he said, very soberly: "You are right, Flint; I haven't been perfectly frank with you. My conception of detectives and police generally has been the haziest, but I believe I can trust you"—with stress upon the "you." "I am going to, at any rate."

And then he recounted the episode of the veiled lady in the taxicab, the incident of the girl and the sandy-haired man in the crowd, and of his subsequent view of the former at a window in Number 1313.

"My impulse toward reserve is so difficult to account for," he said in conclusion, "that I had determined to keep the matter to myself."

"I am glad you didn't," was the low-voiced rejoinder.

"Flint," said Van Vechten earnestly, "do you believe that I am qualified to form a fairly accurate estimate of a person's character, from a study of that person's features?"

"You should be, Mr. Van Vechten," was the reply. "Your habits of life, your daily associations, naturally would develop a certain skill in that direction. I would attach considerable weight to your opinion in such a case."

"Then," with much positiveness, "nothing in the world could be more absurd than to imagine the girl I saw being engaged in anything criminal, or even entertaining a suspicion that she is surrounded by a criminal atmosphere. She is young, she is beautiful, she is refined and gentle; the stamp of purity and adherence to right ideals is unmistakable in her face. Whatever comes of your investigations, you will find to be unqualifiedly true all that I now assert respecting her."

"I do not question your judgment, for it is more than probable that your estimate is correct. But the fact is of less importance than the circumstance that the young lady seems to entertain a very cordial dislike for you."

"But," expostulated the other, "she doesn't know me, Flint. I never saw her in my life before yesterday. Why should she dislike me? God knows I never intentionally harmed anybody in my life."

"She unquestionably thinks she knows you—which, as far as her conduct is concerned, amounts to the same thing."

"I have racked my brain over it," Van Vechten announced, "until I am utterly befogged. I have heretofore accredited myself with some slight degree of perspicacity, but her unmistakable animus completely mystifies me. I am positive, Flint—absolutely positive—that our destinies have never crossed before in any way."

"Queer enough," was the other's comment. "But the veiled lady; are you certain she could not have been Miss Carew?"

"Oh, no, she was not Paige. There was no detail of resemblance. I have a fancy, based upon nothing, that she and the girl at the window are the same."

"But of whom did she remind you?" The detective fastened him with a shrewd regard.

"That," returned Van Vechten, "is the one point concerning which I feel that I ought to know something definite, but which persistently eludes me. In fact, the conviction never crystallized."

Mr. Flint fell into a brown study, from which the other had no inclination to disturb him. During their conversation the afternoon had passed, and now the detective sat motionless and silent while the dusk gathered and deepened.

Presently he roused himself with a little shake. No one had intruded upon their privacy; save for themselves the lounging-room was now empty. He rose and went over to one of the windows, taking his hat with him. Van Vechten followed.

In the shadowy twilight the silent house across the way loomed somber and forbidding; its lifeless darkening front might have been Mystery and Secrecy personified. The two stood abstractedly contemplating it, each immersed in his own reflections, while the pall of night lowered, blurring and distorting the shabby outlines.

Mr. Flint broke the silence.

"I am glad we had this talk," said he in his quiet way. "But dear me, dear me, what is it leading us to? I trust we are not going to stir up any mud." He abruptly changed the subject, asking:

"May I inquire whether you intend making any move to locate Miss Carew?"

"It was my intention to call upon my uncle immediately, lay the case before him, and then set the cables to working."

"That's right. I was going to suggest something of the kind."

After Mr. Flint had gone, Van Vechten did not pause to dine. He ascertained by telephone that his uncle would be at home, then summoned a cab and sped through the stifling night—a night that augured storm—to Theodore Van Vechten's huge, dreary Fifth Avenue palace.
