LASTING PEACE DELEGATES' AIM

Mediation Conference Meets at Niagara Falls.

PRESIDENT WILSON HOPEFUL

Huerta Must Go, Stable Government Erected and Land Reforms Accomplished Before U. S. Army Withdraws.

With the opening of the mediator conference at Niagara Falls on Wednesday to end the reign of anarchy in Mexico the administration officials in Washington are confident of its success.

President Wilson, it is known, is hopeful that mediation will be developed to a successful end. He had outlined to members of the mission the Mexican equation as he viewed it with the emphasis that it was the task of the United States unselfishly to attempt to help Mexico set up a government that would attract world recognition based on capacity to maintain domestic peace and to meet its international duties.

He told the delegates, Justice Lamar and former Solicitor General Lehmann, that the American government would regard the definite settlement of Mexico's problems as necessary to the withdrawal of American military forces from Vera Cruz.

Instructions to the delegates were not specific, but the president reiterated that peace in Mexico to him appeared to be conditioned on the elimination of the Huerta administration and the creation of a government that could guarantee untrammeled elections, a solution of the land problem and other discussions that have led to an internal strife of nearly four years.

Comprehensive settlement, the president believes, must be based on consideration of the Zapata and the Carranza factions, besides public interests in territory still controlled by Huerta.

Continued reports that Huerta would be ready to quit if that became absolutely necessary were considered a promising circumstance. The Mexican peace delegates, it is declared now understand that the horizon of mediation has been broadened beyond differences between the Huerta government and the United States, until it covers the task of pacification of all Mexico. While they are said to be prepared to recommend retirement of Huerta, yet it is believed they will insist upon a specific understanding over the form of government to be established.

Where the Constitutionalists, now sweeping southward in a successful military campaign, ultimately will stand on proposals for mediation remains to be determined. So far they have held aloof from participation in the Niagara negotiations. Nevertheless, hope was not lacking that they may finally agree to take part.

From what is considered a well informed source in Mexico City comes what purports to be the precise method by which the Mexican delegates will present Huerta's resignation if they decided that such a step is necessary. According to this information, which bears marks of authority the three delegates may present the resignations across the conference table whenever they consider the psychological moment has arrived.

When the resignation is announced to the mediators and to the American delegates the Huerta agents will ask the following questions as bound up in their offer of the retirement of the provisional president:

What are the plans of the United States following the resignation of Huerta?

Who will become the provisional president of Mexico?

Who will be barred from running for the presidency?

Will the United States call a halt on the advance of the Constitutionalists to Mexico City?

The Mexican delegates will then refer pointedly to the president's Mobil speech, in which he disclaimed territorial aggrandizement for the United States and expressed disapproval of the rise of revolutionists by force of arms. They will call attention to the president's reiteration of those sentiments in his address to congress. They will then ask for a reiteration of those remarks with direct application to Mexico.

In addition the Huerta delegates are to impose these conditions: An American loan to Mexico of $400,000,000 and a ninety-nine-year lease of Magdalena bay for naval target practice, at an annual rental of $1,000,000 gold.

Recluses Dies at Woodpile. Michael Mahoney, seventy years old, a recluse, dropped dead chopping wood at his home at Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Nominated For Governor By Pennsylvania Republicans.

ROLLS THREE MILES

Baltimore Clubman Finishes Unique Task in Fifteen Hours.

G. Howell Parr, a leader in the social and club life of Baltimore, who started to roll from the Elkridge Kennels club to Charles street extended and the University Parkway, a distance of about three miles, completed his task.

He performed the feat on a wager of $750 and finished in good condition. For more than fifteen hours, with frequent intervals of rest, Mr. Parr, dressed in a football suit, turned over and over on his hands and knees the entire distance, uphill and down, through mud and over stones, without once rising to his knees until the end.

KILLED BY PITCHED BALL

Blow on the Head Is Fatal to Boy Player.

Nelson A. King, seventeen years old, of Morristown, N. J., was killed near Greenwood Lake by a blow on the head from a pitched baseball.

Young King was at the bat in a game played by members of a Sunday school class of the First Presbyterian church of Morristown.

He staggered about after being hit then went to a waterway close by and bathed his head. The pain grew worse and a physician was summoned from Warwick, N. Y., the nearest place, but the boy was dead when the doctor reached the scene.

Drowns in First Auto Ride.

Mrs. Isaac Jackson, wife of the proprietor of the Jewell Belting company, of Siegfried, near Allentown, Pa., was drowned when their automobile backed over the bank into the Lehigh canal. The other occupants of the car were rescued.

Mr. Jackson purchased the automobile Saturday and planned to give his family their first ride. With his wife and himself in the car were his son Charles, daughter Lillian and a neighbor's daughter, Emma Freer.

Another son cranked the machine, and it darted backwards out of the garage, over the bank, and into the canal.

Maderistas Reported Slain.

The Mexican Federals are reported to have murdered Mrs. Gonzales Salas and her three small children, and Miss Maria L. Hernandez, daughter of Rafael Hernandez, one of the wealthiest men in Mexico.

The husband of Mrs. Salas was the chief construction engineer under Madero, and the hatred that some of the Huerta faction have held toward him has made him fear for the safety of his family.

Francisco Madero, son of the slain president, is said to have sailed for the United States on the stamer Mexico.

Badly Wounded in Duel.

A revolver duel over the affections of a girl may cost the life of Timothy Donaghue, who is in St. John's hospital in Brooklyn, with a bullet wound through the body.

Donaghue said that he had fallen in a duel, but he stubbornly refused to give the name of his opponent or the girl over whom they had battled.

Each man was accompanied to the scene by a second, and Donaghue fell at the first shot.

"I have no kick, even if I die, for it was a fair fight," said Donaghue.

Receivers For Metal Casket Co.

Receivers have been named in New York city for the Montrose Metal Casket company, a Delaware corporation, with principal offices at Wilmington, Del., and a factory at Hagers town, Md. The company has a capital stock of $3,000,000. Its assets are said to be $440,846 and liabilities approximately $40,666.

CLOSE VOTE IN PRIMARIES

Result of Democratic Governorship Fight Not Known.

PENROSE IS NOMINATED

Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh Named For Governor by Republicans—Pinchot and Lewis to Lead Washington Party.

The result of the first state-wide primary election in Pennsylvania on Tuesday for United States senator and governor were as follows:

Republican Nominees.
United States senator—Boies Penrose.
Governor—Dr. Martin G. Brumbaugh.

Democratic Nominees.
United States senator—Michael J. Ryan or A. Mitchell Palmer.
Governor—Vance McCormick.

Washington Party Nominees.
United States senator—Gifford Pinchot.
Governor—William Draper Lewis.

The vote for the gubernatorial nomination on the Democratic ticket is so close that the result is not yet known. Ryan is running ahead and appears to be the nominee.

Ryan carried Philadelphia, Schuylkill, Lackawanna and Allegheny counties by good sized majorities, while McCormick carried Dauphin and most of the interior counties by substantial majorities.

Though J. Benjamin Dimmick, candidate for the Republican nomination, made large claims, his vote in Philadelphia was exceedingly light, while throughout the state it was not considerable, save in his home county of Lackawanna.

While Dr. Brumbaugh had opposition for the gubernatorial nomination, it was merely nominal, save in the case of Joseph Cauffiel, of Cambria county. But the vote for Cauffiel in Philadelphia was merely nominal; it was larger throughout the state, but nowhere did it menace the Brumbaugh candidacy.

Heading the Washington party ticket, Gifford Pinchot, for the senatorial nomination, had no opposition. But the Washington party vote compared to the Republican was insignificant. Dean William Draper Lewis maintained a considerable lead over Judge Charles N. Brumm for the gubernatorial nomination. But neither had more than a small percentage of the total vote cast.

The non-partisan judicial ballot received only slight attention. On it were candidates for the supreme and the superior court benches. Judge Robert S. Frazer, of Allegheny, is the Republican supreme court nominee, and Judge Frank M. Trexler, present incumbent, for the superior court. The Democrats solidly supported Judge Gustav A. Endlich, of Berks county, for supreme court.

The vote in the primary throughout the rural districts was not as large as generally expected in view of the bitter fight for several of the nominations. This was caused by two things, the failure of many farmers to go to the polls because of their being behind in their spring work and the failure of many others to become enrolled.

Many citizens who failed to vote last fall also neglected to register this spring, and hence could vote only the non-partisan, judicial ballots. Apparently some voters forgot that it was necessary to register and were disappointed when they were refused any but a non-partisan ticket.

A conspicuous example of this was found in Montgomery county, where hundreds who wanted to vote for the candidates of their party could not do so because they were not enrolled.

Driver Stricken Blind.

August Wyckoff was stricken with blindness while he was driving a team of horses through the center of Trenton, N. J. The cause of the affliction has not been ascertained. His sight left him without warning, and he had to call to a passerby to stop the horses and assist him in getting from the wagon.

Stolen Painting Returned.

The painting by John Sargent, "Perseus With the Head of Medusa," recently stolen from the Brooklyn Museum, was returned in the mail. It was not damaged in any way. No clue to the sender was obtained.

No Race Suicide in This Block.

Twelve hundred children in one city block were found this week by school census enumerators in Chicago. The population is almost exclusively Polish. Louis Link, with seventeen children, is the largest contributor.

SILLIMAN'S FATE MAY PROVOKE WAR

Believed U. S. Consul Still in Prison or Slain.

American Consul John R. Silliman, who the Federals promised to release at Saltillo and convey safely through their lines, after vigorous representations by the United States state department, failed to arrive in Mexico City on a long delayed train, as was expected.

Grave fears were immediately felt in Washington over the possible fate of the official, from whom no word has been received for days.

Coupled with this disturbing news comes the information that the two horses which Private Samuel Parks had with him when he wandered into the Mexican lines at Vera Cruz while temporarily deranged, have been returned by the Mexicans, with no word of Parks, practically confirming the reported execution of the American soldier.

If any harm has come to either of the Americans, Huerta has broken the truce and a war of vengeance may follow.

Phillip C. Hanna, United States consul general at Monterey, has expressed the fear that Silliman may have been killed by his Federal captors, or at best is still held in prison at Saltillo.

One development may be the sending of United States troops from Brownsville to Saltillo to compel the Federals to produce Silliman or his body. It is known that this stringent measure has been considered in Washington, and if carried out is fraught with possibilities, for the Constitutionalist will regard this step as an invasion of their territory and it would arouse them more now because of their victory at Tampico.

When the Constitutionalist captured Saltillo, General Villa and his officers will undoubtedly free Silliman and all other Americans imprisoned there, but whether the capture will take place in a few days or a week or two, is a question, as the Constitutionalist have little ammunition, and at present are engaged in starving out the Federal troops at that place. From information given by refugees, Mexicans and foreigners, Consul General Hanna believes Silliman is still in the state penitentiary in Saltillo, treated with unbelievable severity.

Youth Admits Killing Three.

Harley Beard, eighteen years old, was arrested in Chicago and charged with the murder of three persons in Ironton, Ohio.

Beard confessed that he was guilty of the triple killing, and he is being held to await extradition.

Beard said that he first beat his victim on the head with a stick of wood and then completed the work with a razor. Those he killed were Robert Massie, his sister, Mary, and their mother, Mrs. Massie.

Beard was arrested at the home of his sister, Mrs. E. E. Day.

The mother was seventy-five years old, and the son and daughter past forty-five.

Mary Massie was found in the kitchen with her hands tied behind her back and her throat cut. Robert was found in the back yard with his head battered in, and the mother in the front yard, with her throat cut and skull fractured.

Accused of Killing Husband.

Mrs. Victor Hall, widow of a young merchant who was shot to death in his home at Greenspring on April 15, was indicted for murder by a special grand jury in Louisa, Va., which has been investigating the crime for five days.

Mrs. Hall, who was in the court house, having been taken into custody on a bench warrant, following a second attempt to burn down her home and store, was at once arrested, protesting her innocence. She was released on $5000 bail to appear for trial in July.

The indictment charges that Mrs. Hall shot her husband while he was in bed on the morning of April 15. The prosecution contends that she killed her husband because he threatened to expose her for setting fire to the store of W. R. Dunkum, a competitor, with whom she had quarreled. She asserted that a burglar had shot her husband.

Robbers Blow Movie Safe.

Posing as detectives, four men gained an entrance to a Broadway motion picture theater in New York, made the watchman a prisoner, handcuffed three workmen who were in the theater, then blew open the safe in the box office, obtaining $10,000.

The robbers were in the theater building three hours and compelled the watchman to wind the watchman's clocks at several points in the theater at the proper time, so that no suspicion as to their presence would be had on the outside.

The hospital corps at Vera Cruz keeps a sharp lookout for sick and wounded soldiers. This has been especially true since Private Parks, driven insane by the terrific heat, wandered into the Federal lines and was put to death by Mexican troops. The picture shows a mounted member of the medical corps patrolling the railroad with supplies for any emergency.

200,000 LIVES TO TAKE MEXICO

"Noisiest" Thing is American Dollar Writes Government Official.

Senator John Sharp Williams aroused his colleagues when he read a letter in the senate from "a gentleman in the government service at Vera Cruz," whose signature he tore away from the communication.

The writer declared that "the noisiest thing in Mexico is the American dollar," and predicted that it would cost 200,000 lives and $5,000,000,000 to "take Mexico and hold the Mexican in subjection."

"It would be a great deal better," read the letter, "if the United States were to bear the loss of those who come down here to take a gambler's chance and lost and send them out of the country than to go to war with Mexico for purposes of conquest."

Girl Shot By Suitor.

George Hinks, nineteen years old, the son of Joseph Hinks, of Shenandoah, Pa., is alleged to have shot and probably fatally wounded Viola Scelider, the pretty eighteen-year-old daughter of George Scelider, a baker, on the Locust mountain road near the Catholic cemetery.

The bullet lodged in the young girl's breast just above her heart. She was hurried to the State hospital in a dying condition.

Hinks, it is said, was in love with the young woman, but the girl's parents strongly objected and forbade him to come to the house.

Hinks heard that Miss Scelider was on the mountain in company with Harry Reeves, another suitor. This, it is said, so angered Hinks that he got a revolver and rode to the cemetery in an automobile.

Arriving at the Annunciation cemetery he overtook Miss Scelider in company with her sister, Mary, sixteen years old, and Harry Reeves, seventeen years old, when he jumped out and is alleged to have shot Viola, then jumped into the automobile again and commanded William Mandower, the eighteen-year-old chauffeur, at the point of a gun, to drive at full speed to Ringtown, four miles over the mountain. Half way over the mountain Hinks commanded the terrified chauffeur to slow up and jumped from the car. He then commanded Mandower to drive on at full speed and disappeared into the thick woods. He was found by a constable in a dying condition, with a bullet wound in his head.

Aviators Drop Bombs.

General Obregon's military aviators became effective again in the battle that has been raging for many days at Mazatlan, Mexico. An aeroplane that was circling about the Federal entrenchments dropped bombs with considerable accuracy into the fortifications. They exploded directly within the Federal lines, but the extent of the casualties was not reported in the city.

500,000 HONOR SAILOR HEROES

Great Multitude Views Funeral in Philadelphia.

CITY, STATE AND NATION JOIN

Tribute to Seamen Slain at Vera Cruz Most Remarkable Ever Seen in the Quaker City.

While a multitude, estimated at about 100,000 persons, looked on in sorrow, the bodies of George McKenzie Poinsett and Charles Allen Smith, ordinary seamen, killed at Vera Cruz, were carried through the streets of Philadelphia in a pageant that was one of the most remarkable ever seen in that city.

For three miles the flag-enshrouded caskets in which the bodies of the sailor youths lay were drawn on gun carriages between lines of men, women and children, who stood in ranks seven and eight deep. Unlike all other public gatherings in recent years, the great throng was silent, almost reverent.

City, state and nation had a part in the gigantic tribute to the sailor dead. Mayor Blankenburg, Philadelphia's delegation in congress, members of councils and other officials rode in motor cars and carriages behind the caskets.

Sailors and marines from the Philadelphia navy yard, nearly 500 of them, were escorts for the bodies, as was the entire strength of the First Brigade of the National Guard. Relatives of the dead occupied places of honor in the line. And bringing up the rear were soldiers of other wars, the Veterans of Foreign Service and Veterans of the Spanish War.

Two or three older men, who wore the blue and the badge of the Grand Army of the Republic, also were in the line, while William Durst, the last survivor of the men who fought on the Monitor against the Confederate ram Merrimack, rode on the driver's seat of a carriage.

In carriages also were borne large and handsome floral decorations, including wreaths from President Wilson, a gigantic American flag from the Knights of Columbus and a miniature battleship of flowers, the gift of the sailors and marines of the reserve fleet, now at League Island.

The parade started from Independence Hall. The line of march led up Fifth street from Walnut to Market street, thence to the city hall and then north to Berks street, where the military and naval escort formed in two lines to let the caskets, the officials and the organizations which followed pass through and into Monument cemetery.

Arrived at Monument cemetery, the caskets were placed in motor hearses. Poinsett's body was taken to Hillside cemetery for burial, and the body of Smith was taken to Fernwood cemetery for burial. With each went a squad of marines to fire a salute over the grave and a bugler to blow "Taps," the call which, in both the naval and military branches of the country's service, means "Lights out."

But, while the procession was the crowning feature of the tribute which the city paid to its hero dead, it was hardly more impressive than were the scenes earlier in the day. Through the room where the caskets lay in the old supreme court room in Independence Hall, filed for six hours a steady stream of men, women and children.

It was estimated that 100,000 persons saw the caskets and the floral decorations in the dimly-lighted rooms before the line was denied admittance. Another 50,000 assembled in the vicinity of Independence square and stayed until the procession started.

Pays $50; Gets $200,000.

Mrs. John Kane, wife of a real estate salesman who worked for a Northumberland, Pa., lot selling agency at a salary of $15 a week several months ago, took options on 300 acres of what was believed to be oil or gas bearing lands near Ridgway, Elk county. The flyer cost $50, she said.

Last week a test well was sunk on the land adjoining her lease and gas was struck. She sold part of it for $500 per acre, and has received an offer that will net her close to $200,000. She says she will accept that sum.

Mr. and Mrs. Kane recently moved to York, where they are now engaged in selling vacuum carpet sweepers.

Rebels Defeat Federals.

The Constitutionalist troops under General Alberto Carrera Torres have gained a position in the outskirts of San Luis Potosi. They have dealt the Federal garrison a severe blow, according to a message received by the Constitutionalist in Juarez.

DO AWAY WITH DISFIGUREMENTS

New State Law Prohibits Bill Boards and Advertisements Along Public Roads.

An Act of the last Legislature, Chapter 824, Section 9, makes it a misdemeanor for any one to place advertisements or notices other than notices posted in pursuance of law, along a public highway, or on private property without first obtaining the written consent of the owner.

The State Board of forestry which is charged with the enforcement of this law desires the co-operation of every public spirited citizen in making this law effective throughout the State. The State is spending millions of dollars and the counties large sums in improving the roads to facilitate transportation and travel. Along these good roads are unsightly bill boards and advertisements that detract so much from the beauty of the country and which nearly everybody wants to see eliminated. Under this new law it will be possible to do this.

The State Board of forestry desires the co operation of every public-spirited citizen in eliminating from the roadsides within the right-of-way of public roads in the State all bill boards, advertisements and unauthorized posters, and to this end proposes that Saturday, June 20th, shall be observed as "Sign Board Day." In order that this work may be done systematically and under supervision, every one who will volunteer is requested to notify the State Forester, Baltimore, Maryland, or the local Forest Warden, stating what road or section of the road he can take care of. He will then be supplied with an official badge, a copy of the law, and full instructions. This is a public movement for beautifying roadsides in which all should be interested and give their aid.

Potatoes Should Be Making Thrifty Growth

Timely Cultivation Will Kill Weeds While Spraying Will Prevent Disease.

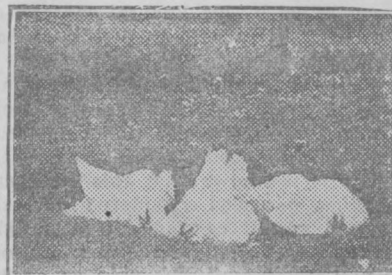

T. H. WHITE, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

If potato seed is covered with a plow, the land will be left in a rigid condition. A week or two after planting, these ridges should be levelled down with a board or clod crusher. Just as the plants appear a smoothing harrow should be used to level the ground and kill the weeds. Very often, especially in late crops, it is not necessary to do any hand hoeing if this harrowing is thorough. Cultivation can be done with an ordinary five shovelled cultivator. Small shovels can be used the first time, stirring the soil deeply. At the last cultivation a broad shovel behind will work about the right amount of earth up to the hills.

Spraying to keep off diseases and insects is an important part of potato growing. For insects and diseases affecting the tops Bordeaux Mixture with either Paris Green or Bordeaux is mostly used. To make Bordeaux Mixture dissolve five pounds of copper sulphate in twenty-five gallons of water, slake also five pounds of good stone lime in the same amount of water. Pour both together into the spray barrel. To this may be added eight ounces of Paris Green or three pounds of Arsenate of Lead which will kill the insects.

The spraying should be done thoroughly every ten days until the vines begin to mature. When the spraying is done mechanically the machine should, if necessary, be driven over the patch several times, or until all the foliage is protected with a coating of spray material.

You will receive a certificate showing the amount of work done in the summer school. This certificate entitles you to due credit for College work done, and to credit on your teachers certificate.

TAKING A BATH IN THE DIRT.

ROY H. WAITE, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Dusting a flock of hens by hand to get rid of lice is a laborious and tedious task and is none too efficient unless carefully done. Dig up a little patch of ground about four feet square in front of your poultry house and let your hens dust themselves. They will enjoy the work very much and probably will do a much better job than you can do.

SOY BEANS MAKE VALUABLE MARYLAND CROP.

Improve the Soil and Yield Hay of High Feeding Quality.

N. E. SCHMITZ, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Soy beans make a valuable general crop to grow on the average Maryland farm since they both benefit the soil and give a hay of high feeding value, practically equal to alfalfa. They are well adapted to our climate and to most of our soils good varieties that will mature in any section of the State are found on the market.

The soil should be in the same condition and be prepared in the same manner for soy beans as for corn, except that soy beans may be grown in poorer soils than those on which corn can be profitably grown. Soy beans will not grow in very poor sandy land lacking humus as well as cow peas will. On the other hand, soy beans are better suited than are cow peas to the clay soils throughout the State west of the Eastern Shore and Southern Maryland. The best soil for them is a clay loam.

Soy beans may be planted from the time corn planting is finished until the middle of July, depending upon the location and what the crop is grown for. In general, the best time is from June 1st to 20th. When a crop of hay is desired, the method of seeding is the same as with cow peas or wheat,—by using the drill. The rate of seeding for hay is about 1½ bushels per acre.

In growing soy beans for seed, they should be planted in rows 24 to 36 inches apart to allow for cultivation as with corn. For this about one-third to one-half bushel of seed per acre is required. The planting may be done with a regular corn planter, or wheat drill by stopping the proper seed holes.

Few soils in Maryland are naturally inoculated for soy beans. When they are being grown for the first time, inoculation should be provided for by securing seed from a field in which soy beans have been grown and working into the soil at the rate of three to four hundred pounds per acre.

The principal advantages of soy beans over cow peas are their upright growth, their high and certain seed fields, from 15 to 35 bushels per acre, less trouble in curing for hay and better hay, and uniform maturing of seed, which makes harvesting for seed a simple operation. Where a fair growth has been made, binding with the wheat binder and shocking the same as wheat is the simplest and best way of harvesting. When well shocked, the bean may remain in the field all winter without much injury from the weather. The threshing is very simple, an ordinary wheat thresher will do the work very effectively, when the cylinder speed is reduced to 500 or 600 revolutions per minute, but the separator speed must be maintained at the normal rate as for wheat.

IS DEADLY ENEMY OF PEACH CROP

Timely Spraying For Brown Rot Saves $35,000 Crop For One Grower.

T. B. SYMONS, Maryland Agricultural College.

During the season of 1912, J. G. Harrison & Sons, Berlin, Md., practically lost their whole crop of peaches on 10,000 trees through the attacks of Curculio and Brown Rot. In the year following, the Horticultural Department of the Agricultural College conducted a demonstration in the same orchard. As a result, the crop was saved with a net profit to the owners of $25,338, due without a question to the thorough methods of spraying employed.

A BANNER CROP.

Indeed, too much importance cannot be attached to the sprays for fruit protection against insects and disease. Often the whole crop is lost through injury by Curculio, followed by Brown Rot. The Curculio winters in the adult stage, appearing just as the foliage develops on peaches and plums. It feeds upon the foliage for a little while, then, the female beetle, laying her eggs, does the principal injury to the fruit by making a semi-circular cut in which its eggs are laid. The egg hatches in a short time and the small larva makes its way into the center of the fruit and there develops. The fruit rots and drops, the larva, escaping into the ground and later developing into the adult beetle.

The beetle is controlled by spraying with Arsenate of Lead at the rate of 2 pounds to 50 gallons of water. This poison is usually combined with the self-boiled lime sulphur wash, a fungicide which will control Brown Rot.

The self-boiled lime sulphur is made by slaking 8 pounds of lime in a sufficient amount of water, and adding 8 pounds of sulphur when the lime begins to slake. The mixture must be kept stirred and the water added as needed, to keep a pasty condition until the lime is all slaked. The heat generated by the slaking lime causes the sulphur to mix physically with the lime in a very fine state, but should not be continued long enough to form much of a sulphide compound as shown by the mixture taking on a yellow or brown color. The mixture is then strained into the spray barrel and the arsenate of lead added.

CAUTION:—The Concentrated Lime Sulphur Solution, such as is used in dormant or early spring spraying should not be used on peach or plum foliage under any circumstances.

Where Brown Rot has previously appeared, the first application of the above mixture should be made just after the fruit sets and before the shucks are off the peaches. A second application two weeks later is very necessary and a third treatment a month before the fruit is ripe is very desirable. Not only will this treatment prevent injury from Curculio and Brown Rot, but also from Peach Scab and other diseases.

The instruction in the summer school is free to all teachers and others of the State. This means that those who enroll for the work will have living expenses only. The summer school is within the financial limits of every rural teacher of the State of Maryland.

WHAT TO PAY FOR YOUR FERTILIZER.

How To Figure the Cash Value Of a Fertilizer From the Analysis Given.

W. E. HANGER, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

When we buy commercial fertilizer we are buying food for our crops just as we buy feeds for our livestock. Its value per ton to us depends largely on the kind of materials used in its make-up. Fertilizers are generally spoken of as 2-8-4 or 1-8-5 fertilizers according to their analysis, which means in the case of the 2-8-4 fertilizer that it contains 2 per cent. Nitrogen, 8 per cent. Phosphoric Acid, and 4 per cent. Potash. So when we have the analysis given, we ought to have a good idea of what a ton of a fertilizer is worth.

A simple and certain rule to follow is to multiply the per cent. of nitrogen by three, which in this case would be 2 times 3 or 6. Then add to this figure the per cent. available of Phosphoric Acid and that of Potash, which would mean with a 2-8-4 fertilizer, 6 plus 8 plus 4 or 18. By placing the dollar sign before this last figure, giving us $18, you will have the approximate cash value of a 2-8-4 fertilizer. If the amount of ammonia is given instead of the nitrogen multiply the per cent. of ammonia by 2½ instead of 3.

To the value of the fertilizer we must add the cost of mixing the materials which is commonly reckoned at $5 a ton and this added to $18 will give $23 or close to what the selling price of a 2-8-4 fertilizer ought to be. We, of course, take it for granted that the fertilizer offered is up to its guarantee. If you have any doubts, you should write to the State Chemist at College Park for the standing of the fertilizer you think of buying.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county.

WHEN?

In spite of all reports that Huerta will resign and thus remove embarrassment in the mediation proceedings, those who know the Dictator and the mulishness of the Indian will doubt the promised solution.

But two circumstances can bring about the removal of Huerta, either his defeat should there be war or his assassination when the down trodden Mexican will rise against him.

"FIXING" THE FACE.

THIS prescription for beauty is given by the Journal of the American Medical Association:

For giving the face a good color, get one pot of rouge and one rabbit's foot. Bury them two miles from home, and walk out and back once a day to see if they are still there.

The stockholders in the Rouge and Talcum Powder Trust will take exception to this, of course.

They would like to see their commodity applied an inch thick; so thick that were a sudden jolt given the wearer the result would be like that produced by a baseball player sliding to third; but "the average man of rational clean mind," as the Journal well says, "would prefer to see colored wigs and rouge on the women of the chorus and the public tangoist than his own feminine kinsfolk."

Lucius Seneca, Nero's tutor born in 4 B. C.—criticized the powder craze and lauded his mother for refusing to follow it. He admired her for this and also for not being a victim of the decollete habit.

In a letter on this subject addressed to her he writes, "you never stained your face with walnut juice nor rouge; you never wore gowns cut conspicuously low; your ornaments were a loveliness of mind and person that time could not tarnish."

An apt commentary on the present fashion from a philosopher of the past.

TOLL EXEMPTION.

Taking the view of Senator O'Gorman that the Panama Zone is American Territory and that therefore a question of sovereignty arises in the debates of toll exemption, it would seem that the question involves one of National or rather domestic policy and if so there could be no denying the right of the American people to legislate on the subject as they would on any other matter that pertains to sovereignty.

THE time is fast approaching when the "Statesmen" who desire to save the State will loosen up with oratory fire. To their, the only, party they will nobly "point with pride," as the only aggregation to withstand the "wrecking tide."

It is to be hoped that in the scheme for a "rational Sunday," the people of Baltimore will not find it necessary to close a greater number of churches than they usually close during the summer.

THE Hungarian Diet is considering the scheme of the conscription of women for service in war. Here is an idea for the U. S. Government—a chance to utilize the vigor of militant suffragists in Mexico.

Is everybody chipping in for the fund to oil the streets? The only way to have the oiling done is by private subscription.

If Mary Johnson, the novelist, contemplates another edition of the "Long Roll" she can get some very interesting new material by applying to Howell Parr, Baltimore.

In Spite of the Proof.

An American lady, living in China, had been teaching a class of young Chinamen. One day a native prince called on her in his fine robes and talked to her with some embarrassment.

"Madam," he said, "I came to you to see you about a matter that is very near to me. You have been teaching that the world is round."

"Yes," replied the instructor, "and I have been offering the proof." "I know," said he, "but that is not what I came to see you about. It is all very good what you say, but, madam, I have always been taught that it is flat. I want to know if you would feel bad if I continued to think it flat?"

"Oh," replied the teacher, "it is not a matter of how I feel, but a matter of evidence. I demonstrate that it is round; I offer the proof; if you accept the evidence you think it round; if you reject it you think it flat."

Our intelligent friend was still unmoved, still more concerned about the object of his visit. "I understand," he said, "that all you say, madam, is good and reasonable. But would you mind if I still thought it flat?"—The Masses.

Ready With a Reason.

Some time ago a man from the city spent a few days in a country town, and while there a real estate dealer tried to interest him in suburban scenery. Returning to his hotel that night the city man saw the agent in the lobby.

"Look here, old fellow," remarked the city man, "I thought you told me that you didn't have any malaria down in this section?"

"That's just what I told you," was the prompt declaration of the agent, "and I told you right."

"Maybe you did," doubtfully returned the city man, "but just the same I saw a man down the road a few minutes ago with chills and fever."

"Oh, I see now," smiled the real estate man, with a look of enlightenment. "That was Smith. He was shuddering and shaking to think what his wife would say to him when he got home."—Exchange.

A School For Spies.

In St. Petersburg there exists to all intents and purposes a real university of the science and art of espionage. It consists of some six independent but harmonized faculties or departments, training and controlling the immense army of spies and "agents provocateurs" all over the empire and its innumerable centers all over the world.

Power of Water.

The power of water is enormous. A tiny jet of water descending 1,000 feet traveling at the rate of 100 yards a second cannot be cut into with an ax or a sword. It will fracture the best blades of Toledo steel. It will hurl an ax through an oak plank. It is quite impossible for a man to cut this stream through. To compute the power of falling water it is necessary to multiply the volume of flowing water in cubic feet per minute by its weight, 62.5 pounds, and this product by the vertical height of the fall in feet and divide by 33,000, the number of foot pounds representing one horsepower for one minute.

A Lively Corpse.

Joseph G. Grow, a member of the United States diplomatic corps, tells a story of Bunsen, the German scientist, who was often mistaken for his cousin, Chevalier Bunsen.

"When he was traveling in England he met a lady who asked him, 'Have you finished your book, "Bible Work," yet?'" "No, madame," he said. "I regret that my untimely death has prevented my doing so."—Detroit Free Press.

Social Caste In Berlin.

German royalty is rigid in its exclusive etiquette. The Prussian nobility form a caste entirely apart from the rest of society, and Berlin, socially speaking, is composed of many different worlds, none of which mingles with the other.—London M. A. P.

Any Old Excuse.

Big Sister (who wants to be left alone a moment with her sweetheart)—Fritz, the house feels so stuffy, go into the next room and open the window, will you? Fritz—The window is open. Big Sister—Oh, well, shut it again, will you?—Flegende Blatter.

That's the Answer.

"Why is your husband so irritable at home?" inquired the amazed visitor. "Because he knows it's safe to be," answered the long suffering wife.—St. Louis Republic.

Wonders of Plant Life.

We are told by Darwin in his "Origin of Species" that in the month of February of a certain year he took three tablespoonfuls of mud from three different places beneath the surface of the water of a small pond, which mud weighed only six and three-quarter ounces and was all contained in a breakfast cup. He kept it covered up in his study for six months and during this period obtained from it the astonishing number of 537 plants.

On Nov. 15, 1911, a Scotsman contributor planted a dozen acorns in a patch of soil taken from a hedge root of about twenty-eight inches in length by about eleven inches in width and about two and a half inches deep, and he resolved to take a note of the number of plants which should grow from seed naturally contained in it. By Nov. 15, 1912, he had removed from time to time, as they showed themselves, 155 plants, and by Nov. 15, 1913, fifty-six more, or for the two years 211 plants in all.

A Culinary Experiment.

The friends of a certain distinguished professor frequently dropped into his laboratory for a chat in the evening, says the Boston Herald. Generally, they found him busily engrossed in some experiment.

One evening, when two friends called, they found the professor bending anxiously over a spirit lamp, on which a small pot was bubbling.

"Well," said one of the callers, "what is it tonight?"

"Guess," murmured the professor. "Micrococci?" asked one.

"No."

"Pneumococci?" asked the other.

"No."

"Spirochaetae?"

"No."

The callers ran the scale of microorganisms as far as they knew it. Then one of them said:

"Well, we give it up! What is it?"

The professor smiled blandly. "Sausages!"

Davy and His Lamp.

Jan. 9, 1816, saw in the depths of an English coal mine near Newcastle a little drama in which there were but two actors—the one a clergyman, the other a miner. The latter was busily picking out the coal by the light of a "steel mill" when he saw approaching him a light. The miner knew the gassy nature of the pit and shouted, "Put out the light!" but no notice was taken even when prayers took the place of oaths. The newcomer was the Rev. John Hodgson, rector of Jarrow, and he had in his hand the first Davy safety lamp, now safely housed in the Museum of Practical Geology in Jermyn street, London. Sir Humphry Davy when urged to patent it replied: "It might undoubtedly enable me to put four horses in my carriage. But what could it avail me to have it said that Sir Humphrey drives his carriage and four bought at the expense of miners' lives?"

Tennyson's Terror.

At the time when rumors of the probable marriage of the Marquis of Lorne and Princess Louise were floating about London Tennyson had one day a number of guests at luncheon, among whom was the Marquis of Lorne. In the course of talk the marquis told Tennyson, then poet laureate, that the queen liked his new volume. "I am glad to hear it," Tennyson said in his sonorous, slow, musical bass voice. "I have given a good account of her in that volume, but the newspapers didn't like my rimes—say they are bad. I live in terror," he continued, "of any of the queen's family marrying and of hearing from her that she hopes I will write something. I have no news of that kind yet, but I live in terror of it."

Not Necessary to Speak.

No one has ever succeeded in committing John Barrett, chief of the pan-American bureau, as to whether suffrage is right or wrong, but he tells this story apropos of nothing and everything:

Two men were late at the club. "It's awfully late, Brown. What'll you say to your wife?"

"Not much, old man; just 'Good morning, dear.' She'll say the rest."—New York Tribune.

A Bolsterer.

"How does Hamlet Patt manage to keep in vaudeville?"

"He has a certain value. He's a bolsterer."

"What's a bolsterer?"

"He's so rotten that he makes the rest of any bill look good."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Overdoing It a Little.

"Speaking of economy," says a character in one of Life's stories, "Gillett says that he is saving up for a rainy day."

"H'm!" came the response. "His wife thinks he must be saving up for another flood."

Questions Free.

Caller—But you said you wouldn't charge me anything for the little legal question I asked you. Lawyer—I haven't. What I've charged you for is the answer.—Boston Transcript.

Not One Sided.

The Parson—Lottie, don't you know it is wrong to worry your mother so? Little Lottie—Huh, you don't know mamma! She worries me more than I worry her.—Chicago News.

While Doubt stands still, Confidence can make a fortune.

Analyzing a Raindrop.

Rain water as it leaves the clouds is pure. As it passes through the atmosphere it absorbs more or less carbonic acid gas and air, which it carries with it into the ground. As it seeps through the upper soil it will generally absorb still more carbonic acid gas from the decaying animal and vegetable matter almost always present. Should the water fall on insoluble rocks, such as granite or marble, it will remain fairly pure. But if it passes through a layer of limestone the carbonic acid gas which it carries will cause it to dissolve away this rock, and as a result bicarbonate of lime will be present in the water. Should it pass through a layer of sulphate of lime or gypsum, the water will contain a large amount of this material.

It is generally known that the bicarbonates of lime and magnesia when present in the water form a comparatively soft scale; the chlorides and nitrates are apt to cause corrosion, and the salts of soda and potash present, while not scale forming, are apt to cause foaming when sufficiently concentrated.—Power.

Sunlight and Fresh Air.

The word disinfectant has become a household term, and almost every one knows that it means something that destroys germs, though comparatively few know what our best and cheapest disinfectants are.

The most useful and efficient all round disinfectant that we have is the sun, and the air is his worthy ally. Fresh air dilutes germs as water dilutes filth, and the lustiest germ will quickly curl up its toes and die if exposed to the sunlight. But fresh air and sunlight are abundant and cheap, so of course we usually prefer to use some disinfectant that smells bad and can be bought at the drug store.

Open windows and rolled up shades would save many lives, but what do we have windows and shades for if not to keep them down? Besides, if we left them up it would let in the flies and fade the carpets, so we pamper the germs and employ the doctor.—Rural New Yorker.

The Thrifty Spirit.

It seems easier to be a deacon or elder nowadays than it was in our fathers' time. The portentous solemnity of countenance has gone out with the "blacks" that used to be essential for the duty of standing at "the plate." Only last Sunday, says a correspondent in the Glasgow News, I laid down my mite under the gaze of quite a sprightly deacon wearing a soft gray hat and a suit of light tweeds! When daddy stands at the plate a certain small boy finds it difficult to observe due decorum as he passes in to worship. In fact, he shows a desire to take his parent's hand and stand at the receipt of collection too. On Sunday, as I sat waiting for the service to begin, listening to the chink of the coin in the "plate" in the vestibule, I heard a young voice uplifted in argument with a fond mamma: "But, mummy, it's daddy! He'll let us in for nothing. Can't I keep my penny for another time?"

The Dark and Bloody Ground.

Before the white man began to explore Kentucky, about the middle of the eighteenth century, the region was a vast hunting ground for many large tribes of the south, north and east, and between these tribes there was continuous conflict for the possession of the rich game privileges. Later on, when the white people settled in the territory, their struggle with the red men was more bitter and persistent than in almost any other section of the continent; hence the sanguinary name that was given to the territory. "The Dark and Bloody Ground."

The Reform He Advocated.

The editor of a British weekly journal, wishing to know what reforms well known men desired to see effected during the year, once applied to Sir W. S. Gilbert, among others. The author of "The Mikado" answered: "Dear Sir—A reform which I am particularly anxious to see carried into effect is that editors would cease to trouble busy people for gratuitous contributions."

Bankruptcy.

"Pa, what's bankruptcy?" a little boy once asked. And pa, who had been "bit" that week, answered bitterly: "Bankruptcy, my son, is where you put your money in your hip pocket and let your creditors take your wallet and coat."

Whist.

An acquaintance of Talleyrand once remarked to him that he did not think it worth his while to learn the game of whist. Talleyrand's reply has been remembered until this day: "Not know whist, young man? What a dismal old age you are preparing for yourself!"

Very Restive.

The Caller—You say that your son dislikes the country and wants to go to the city. Does he seem very restive at home? Mrs. Tungtwist—Yes; he's awfully restive. He ain't done nothin' but rest since he graduated from college.—Princeton Tiger.

Tale of Two Lakes.

Lake Baikal, in central Asia, and Lake Tanganyika, in central Africa, furnish similar problems for scientists, as both are fresh water, removed from oceans, yet both contain deep sea fish.

A weak mind is like a microscope, which magnifies trifling things, but cannot receive great ones.—Chester field

Chatterton's Suicide.

Thomas Chatterton, the poet, was a phenomenal boy. He wrote some remarkable verse for one of his age. He was born in Bristol, England, on Nov. 20, 1752. He went to London to better his opportunities for employment. He did not succeed and lost heart. He became very poor and sometimes for days was compelled to go with little or no food. On Aug. 24 Mrs. Angel, the woman from whom he rented a room, knowing that during three days he had eaten nothing, invited him to dinner. He was offended at her expressions, which seemed to hint that he was in want and assured her that he was not hungry. Withdrawing into his garret at nightfall on the same day and quietly locking himself in death came to him before daybreak on Aug. 25, 1770. When, on his continued nonappearance in the morning, the attic door was broken open it was found from the contents of a nearly empty phial still grasped in his hand that he had died from the effects of arsenic.

Relation of City and Country.

With us cities are as certain to spring up with the increase of country population as the forests are to disappear. City and country are organically related. Crops cannot be grown without fields nor exchanged and manufactured under the modern system of division of labor without cities. Only in the rudest pioneer settlements do men dispense with this division of labor by doing everything painfully and badly on the farm. Such settlements are retarded and hampered until they have towns for the city part of the work. When we estimate that the average inhabitant of New York may have but a few score square feet for his own use we are apt to forget that he can only exist on them because somewhere in the country there are acres of ground producing for him, as really and definitely for him as if he owned them and hired the labor on them, what Professor Penck has called his "sustenance space."—Atlantic.

Beauty Fashions.

In the days of Roman supremacy the women tinted their eyebrows with black in emulation of "ox eyed Venus." They painted their faces, sprinkled themselves with perfumes and even wore false hair or tinted their own locks in accordance with the prevailing fashion.

The Greek ladies of the same period employed maids who rubbed out their mistress' wrinkles, "decorated" her face with red and white paint and darkened her eyebrows. It was then also the fashion to coat the face with white of egg and goose grease to protect it from the sun and wind. It is even said that they had a recipe for turning blue eyes to black.

These fashions all had their origin in Italy, where in later years the notorious Lucrezia Borgia is said to have dyed her hair different colors, according to her fancy of the moment.

An Ancient Suez Canal.

It is certain that in ancient times a canal connecting the Mediterranean and Red seas did exist. Herodotus ascribes its projection to Pharaoh Necho, 600 B. C. The honor of its completion is given by some to Darius, by others to the Ptolemies. How long this canal continued to be used we do not know, but becoming finally choked up by sand, it was restored by Trajan early in the second century A. D. Becoming again useless from the same cause, it was reopened by the Caliph Omar, but was finally closed by the "unconquerable sands" about A. D. 767, in which state it has since remained. This ancient canal, from Suez to Bubastis, on the east branch of the Nile, was ninety-two miles long, from 108 feet to 160 feet wide and fifteen feet deep.

Not Reassuring.

He was so well satisfied with the impression he believed he had made on the young lady that he did not attempt to verify his belief, but boldly tackled his standing with the rest of the family.

"Do you think," he said, "that your worthy father will accept me as a son-in-law?"

"I haven't a doubt of it," said she. "Father and I never agree on anything."—Washington Star.

It Was Hard.

"Have you anything to say before sentence is pronounced against you?" asked the judge.

"The only thing I'm kickin' about," answered the convicted burglar, "is bein' identified by a man that kep' his head under the bedclothes the whole time. That's wrong."—Puck.

How to Make Him Happy.

Mary (angrily)—I think you are the biggest fool in town, John. John (mildly)—Well, Mary, mother used to tell me that when I was a little boy, but I never thought she was right about it until I married you.—Liverpool Mercury.

Presumptive Evidence.

"What made you think Mr. Lovetwet had been drinking?"

"Why, when the charlotte russe was set before him he tried to blow off the foam."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Not Exclusive.

Nellie (aged five)—Our family is awfully exclusive. Is yours? Bessie (aged four)—No, indeed! We haven't anything to be ashamed of.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Real Sympathy.

Juror—We acquitted him out of sympathy. Friend—For his aged mother? Juror—Oh, no—for having such a lawyer.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

YOU CAN SHARE IN THE GREAT SAVING
On Commercial Fertilizers By The Use Of

CRIMSON CLOVER
Read Farmers Bulletin No. 579 on Crimson Clover
Its Free - Address U. S. Dept. of Agriculture Washington, D. C.
A bushel of Crimson Clover Seed sown on four acres of ground will increase the succeeding yield of Corn or Cotton about the same amount as would a ton of complete fertilizer applied at the rate of 500 lbs. per acre. A good stand of Crimson Clover turned under will ordinarily double the yield of the crops which follow. The physical condition of the soil is also materially benefited. The Sandy Soils are increased in Humus and Nitrogen Contents. The Stiff, heavy clay soils are rendered more open and friable.
Crimson Clover makes an excellent grazing crop, hay, ensilage and pasture for all classes of live stock. Milch cows make considerably more milk, when pastured on Crimson Clover. It is also valuable as a honey plant, furnishing an abundant supply of nectar in the spring.
Crimson Clover is valuable as a Winter Cover crop. It is especially valuable in Orchards where it is generally plowed under as a green manure crop. The plants retain for the use of the trees the following season, much of the plant food, which would otherwise leach out of the ground during the Winter and early Spring. A good stand of Crimson Clover not only reduces the erosion and the gullying of the fields, but on sandy fields, the blowing of the soil by the wind is greatly lessened. The Plants also serve to hold the snow to a greater extent than if the field was left bare during the Winter. More and more each year farmers are realizing the importance and great value of Crimson Clover.

So of paint; depends on the paint.
Devoe is worth the top price, whatever it is. Poor paint is worth nothing at all; you got to pay your painter $3 or $4 a gallon for putting it on; and it isn't worth it.

THE WEEK AT THE COUNTY SEAT
Chronicle of Happenings at Frederick
City and in the Courts.

General J. S. Coxe and his "Army of the Commonwealth" arrived here on Saturday. The General's army consists of only six men.

The game of hide and seek is apparently being played at this city by some of the members of the Board of County Commissioners and members of the Board of Charities and Correction. One states that it is up to the other to take the initiative in any step looking to the abolishment of the Board.

That Sheriff Conard and his deputies have landed in jail three men connected with the robbery of the Ebert hardware store and implicated in many other petty crimes seems to be the opinion of the authorities.

The bright sunshine and balmy breezes of Sunday brought out tourists and automobiles and at the same time brought to Frederick a series of collisions that breaks the numerical record for a short space of time. Three cars collided at Market and Church street within two hours.

Before the horrified gaze of half a dozen companions with whom he had been romping on the Sandy Hook railroad platform, Ernest, the fourteen-year-old son of R. C. Phillips, Sandy Hook, slipped from the platform beneath the wheels of a passing freight train, and received injuries from which he died on Monday. Dr. Thomas B. Johnson was with the lad until death.

Forty miles of the most modern roads of Baltimore city were inspected on Friday by a delegation from this county, which went to Baltimore to decide upon the material that is to be used in improving Court Square. Those in the party were City Attorney Smith, City Engineer Crum, L. C. Culler, President of the Board of Aldermen and County Commissioners Humm and Annan.

The contemplated pleasure run of Maryland Motorcycle Club of Baltimore was halted near Ellicott city by the death and injury of two of the members. The route included Frederick.

EMMITSBURG WINS ANOTHER

Defeats the Fast Thurmont Nine in Exciting Game.
Emmitsburg's reorganized baseball club took Thurmont into camp, on the local field, the final count being 6 to 3. The game was fast throughout and it was not until the 8 inning that the victors clenched the contest.
Rosensteel, who twirled for the locals, allowed only four scattered hits, and struck out 16 of the opposing batsmen, every one of whom fanned more than once, except Ed. Creeger, who refused to be fooled. For the visitors Ed. Creeger pitched 7 innings during which he fanned 7 men and allowed 2 runs, Root, who succeeded him, struck out the first three men up, but in the next session weakened and was hit freely for 4 more tallies.
A special feature of the game was the professional umpiring service rendered by Prof. "Mike" Thompson. That his decisions were satisfactory to everyone was evident from a noticeable lack of any complaint whatsoever. This feature alone was a distinct pleasure, and the club is to be congratulated on securing this widely known arbiter.
A return game with Thurmont will be played in the near future. The scoring of Tuesdays game was as follows:
R. H. E.
Thurmont 0 0 0 0 1 0 1 1—3—4—4
Emmitsburg 1 1 0 0 0 0 4 x—6—8—8
This was the second game won by the club, the first being over Mount Saint Mary's.

Alumnae Chapter

Notes

St. Joseph's Academy

The New York Chapter of St. Joseph's College Alumnae, of Emmitsburg, Md., held its regular spring meeting on Saturday, May ninth, at the home of Mrs. Marie Ullo Romeo of Dyker Heights.

The New York Chapter is in charge of the details of a nation-wide movement for the Federation of all Catholic Alumnae in the United States and Canada. Mrs. James J. Sheeran, Regent, outlined the general plan and read many beautiful letters of approval received from their Eminences, the American Cardinals, Bishop Allen, of Mobile, and Mother Margaret of St. Joseph's, Emmitsburg. Mrs. Mary Wade Kalbach, ex-President of the General Alumnae of Emmitsburg, responded to this subject and made a strong and direct appeal to the New York members to labor for the success of this forward movement in Catholic organization.

A delegation of New York members arranged to go to the Philadelphia meeting on May 16, and to the Baltimore meeting on May 23, to secure the cooperation of these Chapters in the great undertaking. St. Elizabeth's College, of Convent Station N. J. has been one of the first colleges to come forward with promises of active support.

After the regular business of the meeting, the New York Chapter was entertained by the Secretary, Miss Clare I. Cogan, who read many letters of greeting from the Faculty and Sisters of Emmitsburg.

Miss Elizabeth Welty, whose beautiful contralto voice is well known in Brooklyn Catholic circles, sang "My Laddie," "To You," and "Sweet Miss Mary."

Mrs. M. Romeo entertained her guests at a May-pole Tea the College colors--pale blue and white and the College flowers--lilies-of-the-valley predominating.

The guests included: Mrs. James J. Sheeran, Regent, Miss Clare I. Cogan, Secretary, Mrs. Marie Ullo Romeo, Miss Angeline Romeo, the Misses Mary and Elizabeth Welty, Mrs. E. Widman, Miss Cosina Hennessy, Mrs. Henry Sayers, Mrs. C. L. Bruns, Mrs. John Alvarez, Miss Alvarez, Mrs. E. Criswell, Mrs. Thomas Meehan, Miss Meehan, Mrs. John D. Battin, Mrs. C. Pochon, Mrs. E. Phillips, Miss Emily Droogan, of Albany, Mrs. Mary Wade Kalbach and Miss Kalbach, of Lancaster, Pa.

The Philadelphia Chapter of Saint Joseph's Alumnae, Emmitsburg, Maryland, held their first meeting on Saturday, May 16, 1914 at a buffet luncheon at the residence of Mrs. J. C. White, Overbrook, Pa. Though the movement toward organization is still in its infancy there were about twenty-five members present.

After the luncheon business matters were discussed when Mrs. J. C. White was elected Regent and Mrs. E. V. d'Inville, Secretary.

Many letters were read from Superiors congratulating "the girls" who wish to revive the memories of the "dear sweet valley" and wishing them success.

The next meeting will be held in October at Miss Mary Coleman's.

Football in Distavor in 1853.

Football had its enemies among early Puritans. Prominent among them was Phillip Stubbes. This doubtless earnest but severe writer published in 1583 a book entitled "The Anatomie of Abuses." And therein he wrote of football; "I protest unto you that it may rather be called a friendly kinde of fight than a play or recreation, a bloodie and murdering practice than a fellowly sporte or pastime; For doth not everyone lye in wait for his Adversarie, seeking to overthrowe him and to niche him on the nose, though it be upon hard stones? in ditch or dale, in valley or hill, or what place souer it be, heareth not, so he have him down. And he that can serve the most of this fashion, he is counted the only fellow, and who but he?"

Increase in Maryland Cities.

Frederick city has added to its population in the past four years, or since the 1910 U. S. census, 475 persons. The gain in the past four years for Hagerstown is placed at 17,749. The Bureau estimate gives Cumberland 23,846, while in 1910 the population was 21,839. Annapolis has gained 34 people in the four years, which would make the present number 8,643.

The large volume of bank clearings, a very reliable index of trade, shows that general business is still heavy notwithstanding the depression and the prevalence of much pessimism.

Women's colleges in the United States are said to be better equipped than the colleges of men.

SYNOPSIS.

Book I.

CHAPTER I—Rudolph Van Vechten, a young man of leisure, is astonished to see a man enter No. 1313, a house across the street from the Powhatan club. The house has long been unoccupied and is spoken of as the House of Mystery.

CHAPTER II—Several persons at regular intervals enter No. 1313.

CHAPTER III—Van Vechten expresses concern to his friend Tom Phinney regarding the whereabouts of his cousin and fiancée, Paige Carew. A fashionably attired woman is seen to enter the House of Mystery. A man is forcibly ejected from the house. Van Vechten and Tom follow the man and find him dead in the street.

CHAPTER IV—Van Vechten is attracted by the face of a girl in the crowd of onlookers surrounding the body. Later he discovers the girl gazing at him with a look of scorn from the windows of the mysterious house.

CHAPTER V—Detective Flint calls on Van Vechten to get his version of the tragedy.

CHAPTER VI—Tom Phinney goes alone on a yachting trip. He recognizes among some persons in a passing motor boat two men whom he had seen enter the House of Mystery. He sees one of them, a Mr. Callis, on shore later and follows him. Tom is seized, blindfolded and taken to a house. He hears a girl named Jessie, evidently the daughter of the man in authority, question his captors. A sweet-voiced girl later protests against the roughness of his captors.

Book II.

CHAPTER I—Van Vechten calls on his uncle, Theodore Van Vechten, big man in Wall street and known as the "Man of Iron," in search of information regarding the whereabouts of Paige Carew.

CHAPTER II—Detective Flint shows Van Vechten a gold mesh purse found in the House of Mystery. Van recognizes it as belonging to Paige Carew.

CHAPTER III—The sweet-voiced girl helps Tom Phinney escape, but refuses to disclose her identity. Tom declares he will meet her again.

CHAPTER IV—Detective Flint tells Van Vechten he has a theory that Paige has been kidnaped. Van goes to lay the case before his uncle.

CHAPTER V—Messages are sent to Europe in an effort to trace Paige. Tom tells Van Vechten he is in love and relates his adventure.

CHAPTER VI—A message from London reports that two ladies resembling Miss Carew and her companion, Mrs. Devereaux, sailed for New York some time previously. A reward of $2,500 is offered.

CHAPTER VII—It develops that the ladies visited the English home of Temple Bonner, owner of the House of Mystery. Flint has a theory that they are connected with the mystery of No. 1313.

CHAPTER VIII—It is recalled that Temple Bonner was in love with a daughter of Compton Schuyler, who married Max Willard. The other daughter married a man named Devereaux. Bonner and Willard were intimate friends. A search is started for Willard.

CHAPTER IX—Van Vechten enters the House of Mystery by the back door in time to hear John Callis threaten a girl. He interferes and helps the girl escape, but is rendered unconscious in the struggle with Callis.

CHAPTER I.

Tom Finds Employment.

It was in an exceedingly dejected frame of mind that Tom Phinney, alone in Van Vechten's huge six-cylinder car, made his way to Maiden Lane in search of Mr. Brownlow. The low state of his feelings was in a large measure owing to a condition that had grown really imminent and personal only during the last few minutes; one that meant renunciation of all his past mode of living and realization of a necessary readjustment to an uncertain future; he had turned over a new leaf, foresworn idleness and frivolity, and was going to work!

Gloomy meditations darkened his handsome face, and in his preoccupation he wasted a good quarter of an hour searching for Brownlow's number. In harmony with a fancied portrait of the latter's establishment, he directed his attention to the smarter, more modern structures; and it was quite by accident that his eye alighted upon the right place—an indescribably shabby building, age-worn and decrepit, pinched between two skyscrapers. He stopped the motor and viewed the entrance with doubt and disfavor. But there was no mistaking it; from the curb, Brownlow's name could be seen on the directory board just inside the entrance.

There was not even an elevator, so Tom was obliged to climb two flights of stairs, dark and dirty, to a suite of dingy offices, in the outer of which two old, white-haired clerks bent over ponderous ledgers without so much as deigning him a glance, and a trim young lady, affording a sharp note of contrast to her surroundings, pounded upon a typewriter. It was she who recognized his presence with a bright, smiling regard, who took his card and disappeared into another room, and who returned presently to say that Mr. Brownlow would see him at once in his private office.

The farther Tom went, the more incredible it became that this could be the business habitat of the Kohinur's owner—for Tom was familiar with every private craft that acknowledged New York as its home port—and far from being dazzled by a bewildering display of precious stones, the sparkle of a diamond here would have been so conspicuous as to be startling.

To his unobservant eye there was nothing to indicate what manner of business might be carried on here.

Brownlow's private room was even dingier and more uninviting than the outer office—for all the world like the husk of a frost-bitten nut of which Brownlow was the wrinkled kernel.

But could Tom have been present while the importer was entertaining a prospective customer, he would have obtained an insight into Brownlow's methods. In front of the only window that was scrupulously clean stood a wide table. Across the polished top two comfortable leather chairs faced each other. Two or three dark purple velvet pads and a couple of jeweler's lenses lay here and there upon the top itself. At these two places the importer and the customer would have been sitting tete-a-tete, the latter harkening while the former discoursed at length upon any subject save the one that had brought them together, until one of the bent figures in the outer office returned from Brownlow's safe-deposit box in a nearby bank, bearing beneath his arm a small leather case. After this had been deposited at Brownlow's elbow and the bent figure had retired to re-attach himself to his own particular ponderous ledger, the case would have been opened and its glittering contents poured out upon the velvet pads. Then the little man's garrulity would have ceased, and he would have uncovered a minute knowledge of gems and values against which the sharpest bargainer knew that it was useless to contend. Unnumbered millions of dollars worth of precious stones had passed through his claw-like fingers, each adding its quota to his wealth; and thus it was that he could indulge in a luxury like the Kohinur.

The importer was alone, however, when Tom entered. He rose nimbly from his desk and greeted his caller with an effusiveness that left the latter tongue-tied.

"My dear Mr. Phinney!" cried the little man, beaming, the while he vigorously pumped Tom's unresponsive right hand. "My dear Mr. Phinney! Almost literally you have arrived at the eleventh hour. It is impossible for me to express my gratification at seeing you. So you didn't forget the request I made so bold as to proffer at Mrs. Payne-French's!" He stopped with surprising abruptness, then went on in a tone expressive of consternation: "Don't say that you have failed! Don't tell me you have come here only to bring disappointment! It would be a cruel act of kindness on your part, but . . . Ahem! Sit down!"

Tom dropped into the chair which the other thrust at him as if he meant to knock his legs from under him.

"Pray don't give me any such ill-tidings, Mr. Phinney, for this is my last day of grace; if I don't get a skipper and mates for the Kohinur by six this evening, I stand to lose"—he raised his hands in a despairing gesture—"I can't bear to hear myself say it! I can't bear to think of how much I shall lose—more than any man can afford—good, honest money, just waiting to be picked up."

This was all more or less unintelligible to Tom; but he had succeeded in pulling himself together, and as soon as he could wedge in a word he tried to impress upon the excitable merchant that he was offering himself for the opening. When at last Brownlow comprehended, he suddenly checked himself and stared at Tom in silent surprise; but in a moment he drew a long face, which put the finishing touch to his caller's discouragement.

"You're not in earnest," Brownlow voiced his misgivings, solemnly wagging his head, but nevertheless maintaining an interested scrutiny upon the young man. "Why, should you be looking for such a billet?"

"Because I want the money," was the blunt response. "And take my word for it, Mr. Brownlow, I'm in earnest. If you doubt my qualifications—"

The other raised a silencing hand. "I know all about them," said he, crisply, "else I shouldn't have broached the matter to you in the first place. I supposed your interest and activity in yachts and yachting would enable you to put me in the way of finding what I wanted; I didn't expect that you would—er—ahem!"

Tom took the words out of his mouth.

"Strike you for the job myself, eh? Well, I have."

Brownlow seated himself at his desk, upon which he thoughtfully drummed with his fingers, every now and then directing a sharp glance at his caller. Tom was beginning to realize that the employment of a captain for the Kohinur, for some occult cause, was not to be so simply arranged as such matters generally are; the preliminaries were unusual and—to him—unnecessary; he was becoming more and more puzzled, for he believed that Brownlow was needlessly investing the proceedings with an air of mystery, and this made him restive.

By and by Brownlow drew a long breath and once more gloomily shook his head.

"I'm fearful that it's not to be," sighed he, heavily. "When you hear the conditions you will back out like all the rest of 'em. Seems like these days navigators are too busy clipping coupons and drawing dividends to be attracted by a little thing like double wages."

Tom pricked up his ears. Two pastimes had been mentioned which he, at least, never had enjoyed. He interrupted with an exclamation.

"Double wages! Say"—eagerly—"if the game's straight I don't care to hear conditions. Where's your yacht? I'll get my dunnage aboard without wasting any more time."

The little man bounded from his chair and began pacing the floor with short, nervous strides. Every now and then he would halt with a jerk and address a few remarks to Tom, rub his hands together briskly and dart off upon his promenade.

"I declare, Mr. Phinney," he spoke vehemently, "in a way this is a rare stroke of luck for me; but before we go any further I must—my conscience impels me to tell you—ahem!—some things. Certain details must be laid before you before I allow you, out of the generosity of your nature, to bind yourself to any obligation. The conditions, I believe I may truthfully affirm, are extraordinary; indeed, without exaggerating the state of affairs, I may even go so far as to say that they are astoundingly extraordinary; and I must put you into possession of such facts as I am at liberty to impart.

"But"—he broke off abruptly—"I need more than a captain; I am pledged to secure the services of a first and second officer and a chief engineer. The scamps who have been serving me in those capacities—confound 'em—are poor, miserable, spineless creatures whose proper walk in life is between a pair of plow-handles instead of upon the deck of a sea-going craft. They are a pack of cowards, Mr. Phinney, when an opportunity is presented to them that smacks of adventure. As I have already intimated, I've had the devil's own time trying to find men for the billets, and you'll have to scare 'em up somehow, somewhere, before six o'clock. That's the fix I'm in."

"But what is it you want to tell me?" Tom impatiently tried to pin him down. "If the thing depends upon so much we haven't any time to spare. I've a motor below, and I'm pretty sure I can get the men."

Brownlow threw himself into his chair and hitched it closer to Tom. Leaning forward, in a confidential attitude and occasionally emphasizing his remarks with a vigorous tap upon the young man's knee, he impressively began:

"Looky here, Mr. Phinney—here's the way of it. A certain party wants to charter the Kohinur for an indefinite period. Ordinarily I wouldn't listen to such a proposal, but he offered me a sum of money that quite took my breath away, and—ahem!—to be frank with you, just now I need the money more than I do the boat. Do you get me? Well! He put it up to me to find the men I have mentioned—rest of the crew's all right—but the enterprise is wholly secret. Understand? Secret! They balked. And there you are."

"A-ha!" interjected the bewildered listener, who was now beginning to see light. "That listens well—if the thing's not crooked."

"Crooked!" shouted Brownlow, aghast at the very idea. "Young man, do you think I would lend myself to anything crooked?" Tom did not commit himself, and the other went on with much warmth. "As I say, the enterprise is secret; I myself am ignorant of its nature; but—believe me, Mr. Phinney—it is indorsed by a name that would astonish you were I at liberty to mention it. In point of fact, it was that name that finally influenced me to accept the offer. Crooked? God bless my soul, no!"

Tom was already upon his feet. "If that's all I'll go hunt for men. We haven't any time to lose. What then?"
