SUDDEN SHIFT IN MEDIATION

Mexicans Promise Statement, But Change Minds.

U. S. INSISTENCE CAUSES JOLT

But Huerta Delegates Say Land Question Won't Be Allowed to Disrupt Proceedings.

The Mexican mediation wind has suddenly veered once more at Niagara Falls, Ont. When all seemed to be going well and every one was optimistic and the Mexican delegates, believing that they had reached an accord with the Americans, were about to issue a formal statement explaining their position on the land question and regretting that it was clearly impossible for them to give guarantees as to the action of a new sovereign and recognized government, there came a sudden halt.

The Mexican delegates had their stenographic work finished and then they stopped. Not that they were less optimistic than ever, but they were less certain of the wisdom of the promised declaration at this critical moment.

Then, when every one, amazed at this sudden step, was speculating upon the reason for it and the air was filled with rumors probable and absurdly improbable, the American delegates dashed up in their automobile and a prolonged and earnest "conversation" was entered upon.

It was obvious that there must be some more definite assurance respecting the land question to meet the declared purpose of President Wilson. Precisely how it was to be worked out, or how it could be worked out, was not altogether clear, but little doubt was felt by those participating that it would be worked out.

"We will not let the agrarian question disrupt the mediation proceedings," said one of the Mexican delegates. "I think there is a way of coming into common accord on this and other points so that we may complete our work shortly."

He held that while they did not consider the question a subject for international conference, but purely internal in all its aspects, they would interpose no objection to some general declaration which may be the basis for future study of the problem.

The Mexican land question is recognized by all as a fertile breeder of revolutions or sectional uprisings. It is virtually conceded that the insistence demanded by the United States for a guaranty in precise terms cannot be met by the Mexican representatives, since they have no power firmly to bind such an independent government as this mediation conference aims to bring into existence. The delegates from the United States doubtless will have to content themselves with the best pledge the Mexican delegates are able to give and to rely upon this promise that the arrangement will be honestly carried out.

It became positively known that the mediators regard as "proscription" and an injustice any demands by the Americans that General Huerta be denied the right to be a candidate for election to the presidency, following the restoration of peace in Mexico. This view they have made clear to President Wilson through the American commissioners.

The Mexicans expect that the provisional president to be chosen will appoint a cabinet representing the varied political interests of the country, and that there will be assured a fair election for a new president and chamber of deputies, with guarantees for the equitable treatment of all factions in the forthcoming campaign.

Back of all these negotiations lies the one assumption that the United States will exercise greater authority over the Constitutionalists' policy than it has been able to exercise over Huerta. Whether by moral suasion or by armed force, the will of the United States must prevail, if the mediation conference agreement is to be taken seriously. Should Carranza and Villa turn upon the United States, the entire problem will have to be taken up anew.

Faile Bank's Cashier Sentenced.

Cannon's Hat Is in the Ring.

SILLIMAN AT VERA CRUZ

U. S. Vice Consul Blames General Maas For Experience.

John R. Silliman, vice consul at Saltillo, whose arrest and subsequent disappearance came near breaking up all mediation between the United States and Mexico, arrived at Vera Cruz.

It was so weak that he had to lean on the arm of a soldier as he traversed the long break in the railroad into the American lines.

Mr. Silliman would not discuss his experiences, except to say:

"I have no blame for General Huerta for my experiences. General Joaquin Maas, the Federal commander, was solely responsible for it all."

The vice consul came from the capital without an escort, but in company with other refugees. Mrs. Silliman was not with him, she having remained as a guest of the British consulate at Saltillo.

Kills Three and Ends Life.

Louis Gilsoul shot and killed three women, one of them his wife; seriously wounded another and then killed himself, at the farm of his father-in-law, O. K. Olson, thirty miles north of Thief River Falls, Minn.

The dead are Mrs. Ludvig Larson, forty years old; Mrs. Louis Gilsoul, twenty-three years old; Miss Inga Olson, seventeen year old, and Gilsoul.

Mrs. Olson was so seriously wounded that she probably will die. Gilsoul appeared at the Olson home and asked to see his wife, a daughter of the Olsons, from whom he was separated.

He was met at the door by Mrs. Larson, who refused him admittance. He drew a revolver and killed the woman. He then set fire to the house and began shooting at the other members of the household, killing his wife first. He then started for the woods. Gilsoul's body was found in the woods where he had shot himself.

Wife Slain, Husband Shaves On.

Mrs. Carrie Freudenstein, fifty-five years of age, of Guttenberg, N. J., was found dead in bed Thursday, with a bullet wound in her left temple and a revolver by her side.

The fact that right-handed persons who commit suicide by shooting usually press the muzzle against the right temple led the police to believe that they had a murder mystery on their hands. George W. King, county physician, who examined the body, considers the circumstances as being suspicious.

When Coroner King went to Mrs. Freudenstein's home to question her husband, Henry Freudenstein, a barber, he was astonished to find the man shaving a customer, despite his wife's death.

Freudenstein said that he went to a pinocle tournament on Tuesday night and did not get home until late. He poked his head inside his wife's room, he said, and thought she was asleep. He found her dead when he arose.

Huckster Held For Murder.

John Benton, a Harrisburg huckster, who has several aliases, and whose nocturnal drives have caused him to be suspected of many raids on chicken roosts, is confined in the Cumberland county prison at Carlisle, Pa., charged with the murder of John M. Rupp, on his farm, near Mechanicsburg.

It is said that Benton has admitted the killing, but declares it was in self-defense. Benton is alleged to have gone to Rupp's farm to steal chickens. Rupp went out and was fired on. He returned the fire and hit Benton. A moment later he was killed.

COL. ROOSEVELT CALLS ON WILSON

Politics is Avoided in Half Hour Chat.

THEN DELIVERS A LECTURE

Former President Returns to New York After a Whirlwind Visit to Washington.

Sitting on the cool south jortico of the White House in Washington, Colonel Roosevelt and President Wilson talked of the colonel's coming trip to Spain, his recent Brazilian exploration jaunt, and they joked about his river of Doubt.

Politics, Panama canal tolls, the Mexican war question and other matters of state were, however, studiously ignored by both.

The chat lasted for about half an hour. When Roosevelt first entered the White House he met the president in the blue room, but they soon adjourned to the portico. When the ex-president left he was enthusiastically cheered by a crowd that had collected near the White House.

"It was just a little social call, with no political significance whatever," said the colonel referring to his White House visit.

Roosevelt and his party reached Washington on Tuesday afternoon. Officers of the National Geographic society met the visitors at the train. The colonel immediately started his program, which was a strenuous one. First he called at the Smithsonian Institution, where he reviewed the exhibits he had collected during his African exploration. Then he made his White House call, and later visited Senator Lodge and Ambassador Jusserand, of France.

These matters occupied his time until night, when he lectured before the members of the National Geographic society on the Brazilian trip. He emphasized to his audience his belief in his River of Doubt, explaining in detail the nature and location of the stream.

Later he completed his Washington program by a conference with Progressive leaders in congress. They discussed the political outlook as it applies to Progressives throughout the country.

The colonel then left for New York.

Two Killed in Odd Accident.

Two children were killed at Burlington, Ia., when a horse, struck by the automobile in which they were riding was thrown into the tonneau.

The horse's head struck the heads of the children, a boy, twelve years old, and a girl, three years old, fracturing their skulls.

The victims were riding with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Leuter, who were slightly hurt when the automobile turned over.

Embezzler Gets Three Years and Fine.

Former County Treasurer William M. Lloyd, of Shamokin, was sentenced to three years in prison and was also fined $19,497.38 and costs for the embezzlement of Northumberland county funds by Judge Moser at Sunbury, Pa. Mark L. Swab, of Sunbury, deputy treasurer, who was also convicted, has not yet been sentenced.

Oklahoma Wants 15,000 Men.

Fifteen thousand additional hands will be needed in Oklahoma to harvest the 1914 wheat crop, according to State Labor Commissioner Daugherty. The commissioner estimates the crop at 40,000,000 bushels, the largest the state ever has produced. Harvesting will begin in the southern part of the state the first week in June and continue thirty days.

Lightning Kills Three Brothers.

Three Brothers named Crohulik, aged seventeen, fifteen and eleven years, respectively, living on a farm near Ord, Neb., were killed by lightning. The boys were standing in the doorway of a barn, which was struck by lightning, and the three were instantly killed.

Post Left $22,252,800.

Bequeathing over one-half of his fortune, estimated at $22,252,800, to his wife, Leila Y. Post, and his daughter, Mrs. Marjorie Post-Close, of Greenwich, Conn. will the late Charles W. Post, of Battle Creek, Mich. was made public.

Back Broken 30 Years; Is Dead.

Paul Miklin died of a broken back received in the Henry Clay shaft at Shamokin, Pa., thirty years ago. On being removed to his home doctors said he would die in a short time. Since then he has lain virtually helpless.

FLIGHT BY HUERTA AGAIN REPORTED

Dictator Said to Have Fled From Mexico City.

General Victoriano Huerta left Mexico City at 3 o'clock Wednesday morning and is enroute to Puerto Mexico, according to information that was given to a reported in Vera Cruz, Mex.

His informant occupied a high position in Mexico City. His report is given the color verisimilitude by the fact that the German cruiser Dresden and the steamship Ypiranga, of the Hamburg-American line, steamed from Vera Cruz for Puerto Mexico, the Dresden following closely behind the Ypiranga. It was believed that the German government will offer General Huerta asylum on either the Dresden or the Ypiranga and protect him. It is impossible to confirm the report that Huerta has fled.

Believing that the downfall of Huerta is imminent and that anarchy will ensue in the capital, friends of the provisional president are fleeing from Mexico City. Most of them are going to Puerto Mexico, but others are coming to Vera Cruz for protection.

Fausto E. Miranda, a member of the chamber of deputies, and four of his fellow congressmen arrived in Vera Cruz. They brought news of the defection of many former staunch allies of the president.

"Many others are preparing for flight," said Senor Miranda. "In a few days" the trains from Mexico City will bring those who, like ourselves, foresee the downfall of Huerta. They will flee to save themselves and their families, recalling the fate of Madero.

"Huerta will flee when he realizes that the time has come to save himself. He will not wait until the last moment to assure himself of safety, and his adherents therefore argue, Why run out necks into the nooses for the sake of being the last out?"

ASSESS JOHN D. $311,226,347

Oil King's Taxes in Ohio Will Be $1,556,131.

John D. Rockefeller's personal property on which he will be assessed for taxation in Ohio is worth $311,226,347.

These are the figures according to an announcement made in Columbus by the state tax comptroller, after hearing from the district assessors, William Agnew and John D. Packler, of Cuyahoga county. Of this amount $285,000,000 is alleged to be Standard Oil stock.

Rockefeller's taxes at the rate of $5 a $1000 would be $1,556,131. The action of the assessors in listing Mr. Rockefeller's personal property at this amount follows their campaign to induce him to make a return on an amount which they consider equivalent to his actual holdings. His attorney declared Rockefeller had returned $5,000,000 in New York and that this should exempt him in Ohio.

Tariff Loss $63,000,000.

Armed with tables of figures, Senator Smoot, of Utah, told the senate that the total loss to the commerce of the country in the month of April as a result of the passage of the Underwood tariff law had been $63,000,000.

He based this, he said, on reports as to increased importation and decreased exportation. He said this was at the rate of $766,000,000 loss a year.

Peter Wanner a Suicide.

Peter D. Wanner, seventy-four years of age, one of the best known citizens of Reading, Pa., shot and killed himself at his home. He was a leading member of the bar; was at one time district attorney and later ran for Democratic congressional nomination and was defeated.

WILSON HEARS FROM ZAPATA

Is Told Rebel Leader Is Not Bandit and Leader of Freebooters.

An agent of General Emiliano Zapata is now in Washington at the suggestion of Secretary of State Bryan, and laid before President Wilson information intended to controvert the statements that Zapata is merely a bandit and that his followers are freebooters.

The agent told Bryan that in any settlement of the Mexican problem full consideration be given to the Zapatistas as a leading element in the revolution. Zapata, the agent informed Bryan, has an army of about 21,000 men. The emissary assured Mr. Bryan that Zapata and his followers will observe all the rules of civilized warfare.

Man Nearly Killed in Fight With Bear

A. B. McCloskey, who lives at Hyner, near Lock Haven, Pa., was attacked and severely injured by a large bear in his yard, after he had shot it with a 22-caliber rifle.

The bear came from the neighboring mountain after a calf. McCloskey hit the bear at short range, when it attacked him, throwing him to the ground, crushing him and mangling his left arm and leg. His life was saved when his wife and Mrs. William Riggle beat off the bear with a shovel and a club.

Mrs. Riggle and Mr. and Mrs. McCloskey had frightened the bear away from a cow, but it picked the calf up in its forepaws and bit the rope off its neck.

McCloskey grabbed the bear with his left hand and fired into its body with the target rifle. The bear threw him down and they struggled about on the ground, McCloskey clinging to its neck. Mrs. McCloskey and Mrs. Riggle then beat the bear, driving it away.

A party of men started with dogs in pursuit of the bear soon after the attack, intending to kill it, even though the law was broken.

Senator Bradley Dies.

William O. Bradley, United States senator from Kentucky died, in Washington after a lingering illness, aggravated by a fall.

Senator Bradley, who was elected the first Republican governor of Kentucky in 1895, was born March 18, 1847, his father being a distinguished lawyer.

He ran away twice to join the Union army, but was brought home. In 1865, at the age of eighteen, he was admitted to the bar, the legislature suspending the age qualifications by special act.

Bradley won a national reputation by his speech seconding the nomination of Grant in the 1880 Republican convention.

After having been a candidate four times, he was elected to the senate in 1908.

Tried to Save Husband; Killed.

While trying to keep her husband, who was walking in his sleep, from jumping out of a second-story window at their home at Hooversville, Pa., Mrs. C. H. Wheeler, wife of a wealthy lumber dealer, stumbled through the open window and was instantly killed. Wheeler also fell and sustained, it is thought, fatal injuries.

Felix Diaz of Toronto.

General Felix Diaz, a nephew of Porfirio Diaz, ex-president of Mexico, and candidate for the presidency in case of the retirement of General Huerta, has taken a suite of rooms in a private hotel in Toronto, Can., to be near the mediation conference at Niagara Falls. In the Diaz party are General Del Rio and seven other Mexicans.

HOME RULE BILL PASSED FINALLY

Goes Through Commons by a Majority of 77.

WILD CHEERS GREET VOTE

The Measure Will Become a Law Upon Signature of King, as Lords' Veto Would Have No effect.

The Irish home rule bill passed for the third consecutive time in the house of commons in London by a majority of 77.

The bill becomes a law upon its signature by King George. The vote was: For, 351; against, 274.

Under the provisions of the parliament act the bill becomes a law after this stage, as it had already twice passed through all its stages in the house of commons in two separate sessions, and the veto of the house of lords therefore has no further effect.

In the regular course the bill goes to the lords, but the powers of the upper house were destroyed by the act of parliament providing that any bill having been passed on three consecutive sessions of commons, becomes a law by royal consent.

The end of the hard fought struggle came quite suddenly, the Unionists refusing to debate the bill without further information as to the government's intentions in regard to the proposed amending measure.

Announcement of the result of the vote was followed by an unprecedented demonstration. Nationalists and Liberals sprang from their seats in a delirious outbreak of cheering. The speaker made no effort to check the tumult, as he knew it was useless. The roar of cheers and the clapping of hands drowned out the cat-calls and hisses of the Unionists.

Frenzied supporters of the government clasped each other in their arms, dancing through the aisles of the house. Others stood upon their seats waving hats, canes, handkerchiefs and papers.

The bill got no support from the O'Brienites, who are out of sympathy with the policies of the government coalition. The members of this faction of the Irish party failed to vote.

The bill will be sent to the house of lords after the Whitsuntide holiday. After the passage of the bill the house of commons adjourned until June 9.

Now that the home rule bill has been passed, public interest has shifted and centered on the Ulster province. The question of the hour is: "What will Ulster do?" If Sir Edward Carson, Captain James Craig and the other leaders of the anti-home rule Orangemen put into execution the threats reiterated during the past few months civil war will follow in the north of Ireland.

Dispatches from Belfast, which is the seat of the Unionist following in Ulster, stated that the news of the passage of the home rule bill created tremendous excitement, and that the municipal authorities, fearing a conflict, had taken vigorous precautions to maintain order with extra police and with troops if necessary.

Becker is Guilty in First Degree.

Charles A. Becker, former lieutenant of police, was found guilty on his second trial in New York for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler.

The verdict was returned four hours and two minutes after the jury retired for its deliberations.

The verdict was guilty in the first degree. The penalty under this verdict is death in the electric chair.

By convicting Becker the jury accepted as true the story of the murder plot as told by "Jack" Rose, "Bridgie" Webber and Harry Vallon.

After the short formal proceedings in court were over it was learned from a member of the jury that only one ballot was taken.

No sign of emotion showed on the impassive face of the former head of the "strong arm squad" when the jury handed down the finding that sentenced him to death in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison, where only a few weeks ago the four gunmen who killed Rosenthal paid the penalty with their lives.

Five Die When Car Hits Motor.

Five persons were killed at Asheville, O., Wednesday when an interurban car struck an automobile driven by W. M. Miller. The dead are: W. M. Miller and his wife, Mrs. Alice Staiger, his sister; Mrs. C. E. Hill and Vida Ford, five years old. Mary Bell Hill, the six-year-old daughter of Mrs. Hill, was rescued from the wreckage, but she was so badly burned that it is believed she will die. The car and the automobile were consumed by fire after the collision.

Meeting of the Baltimore Chapter of St. Joseph's College Alumnae of Emmitsburg, Md.

A meeting of the Baltimore Chapter of St. Joseph's Alumnae, Emmitsburg Md., was held Saturday afternoon, May 23rd, at the home of Mrs. Robert L. Paul, Melvin Avenue, Catonsville. The object of the gathering was to bring the members of the Baltimore Chapter under regular organization.

The business meeting was conducted in a beautiful locust grove on the grounds of Mrs. Paul's home. After a few words of welcome by the hostess, the Rev. Edward A. William spoke on the "Ideals of the Past."

Miss Stella McBride, of Emmitsburg, secretary of the general alumnae, delivered an address on the work of the general alumnae and the benefit to be derived from the union of the separate chapters.

Mrs. Mary Wade Kalbach, of Lancaster, Pa., first president of the general alumnae told the ladies that loyalty to St. Joseph's meant their presence at Alma Mater for the general meeting in June.

Miss Clara I. Cogan, secretary of the New York Chapter outlined the plan of organization which has proved so successful in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia. Baltimore adopted the plan unanimously and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

Regent, Mrs. Loretto Muth Paul, Secretary, Mrs. Julia Kalbach Foster. Letters of greeting were read from Mother Margaret, Sister Francis, Sister Augustine, Sister Benedicta, Sister Caroline and Sister Mary Vincent.

Mrs. Clara Douglas Sheeran, of Brooklyn, regent of the New York Chapter outlined the movement for an international federation of all Catholic Alumnae. Mrs. Sheeran read a circular letter thousands of copies of which have been sent to the Catholic Alumnae Associations in the United States and Canada—also letters of approval received from their Eminences, Cardinals Gibbons, Farley and O'Connell, Bishop Allen, of Mobile, and Mother Margaret, of Emmitsburg.

A dainty collation was served on the lawn small tables being grouped about a blue and white May pole to which the favors—framed photographs of St. Joseph's were attached by blue and white ribbons. The table decorations were lillies-of-the-valley the college flower.

Among those present were: Mesdames Loretto Muth Paul, Hilda Muth Convery, Fannie Hartman George, Kate Clayton Watson, Florence Hartman McDivitt, Mary Knox Welsh, Mary Kearney Wolcott, Bessie Torney Devries, Frances Brown, Julia Kalbach Foster, Sara Ferguson Pierce, Mary Castleman Talbot, Misses Minnie Hubert, Mary McDivitt, Annie Warner, Katherine Goldsmith, Anna Oldenberg, Anita Goldsborough and Cecilia Muth. Miss Stella McBride, of Emmitsburg, Md., Secretary of the general alumnae. Mrs. Mary Wade Kalbach, of Lancaster, Pa., first president of the general alumnae.

Mrs. Clara Douglas Sheeran, of Brooklyn, regent of the New York Chapter.

Miss Clara I. Cogan, of Brooklyn, secretary of the New York Chapter.

Mrs. Madeline Robinson O'Neill and Miss Elizabeth Robinson, of Bel Air.

Mrs. Agatha Mahoney O'Donoghue, Miss Kate Brady, Mrs. Ellen Camp Pointier and Miss Ella Castleman, of Washington.

The next Baltimore meeting will be held the second Saturday of October at the home of Mrs. Kate Clayton Watson.

The Washington meeting will take place Thursday May 28th at the home of Mrs. Agatha Mahoney O'Donoghue.

MT. ST. MARY'S ITEMS.

Sunday afternoon the St. Anthony baseball club met and defeated the College Juniors by the score of 8-6. The heavy hitting and Shorb's pitching for St. Anthony's were features. Shorb fanned eleven men. The St. Anthony's boys have scheduled several games with Emmitsburg for the near future. Their game for the picnic day has not yet been arranged but in all probability Thurmont will be their opponents.

Mr. Joseph Martin, of Hagerstown, and several of his friends spent Sunday in this place.

Hess's saw mill is now operating in the old Still House Woods.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ridenour.

Mrs. Alexander Knott and son, Guy, spent Sunday at Smithsburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Warthen, of Philadelphia, are visiting in this locality.

Mr. John Franklin is having a new eastern built on his property, the Thornbrook farm.

Mr. Paul Winchester who has been quite ill is rapidly recovering.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hetzel and Mr. and Mrs. Ignatius Lingg spent Thursday in Frederick.

From all accounts many of the young folks of this locality forget that there is a law forbidding fishing during May and first part of June. A word to the wise should be sufficient.

The written examinations at the College began Monday.

G. W. WEAVER & SON,

Songs the Union Soldiers Sang

WHEN the cannon ceased booming the Union soldiers sang. They were for the most part a musical aggregation, and many observers have testified to the stirring of their emotions by the choral singing of thousands of men assembled in camp. The songs they sang acquired a sacred character which clings to them still in the north fifty years after the war. Below are given two of the Union soldiers' favorites:

We Are Coming, Father Abraham

By JAMES SLOANE GIBBONS.
We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more,
From Mississippi's winding stream and from New England's shore.
We leave our plows and workshops, our wives and children dear
With hearts too full for utterance, but a silent tear.
We dare not look behind us, but steadfastly look before.
We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more.

If you look across the hilltops that meet the northern sky
Long moving lines of rising dust your vision may destry.
And now the wind an instant tears the cloudy veil aside,

PLAYING THE OLD WAR SONGS.

And floats aloft our spangled flag in glory and in pride,
And bayonets in the sunlight gleam, and bands brave music pour.
We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more.

If you look all up our valleys where the golden harvests shine
You may see our sturdy farmer boys fast falling into line,
And children from their mothers' knees are pulling at the weeds
And learning how to reap and sow against their country's needs.
And a farewell group stands weeping at every cottage door.
We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more.

You have called us, and we're coming, by Richmond's bloody tide
To lay us down for freedom's sake our brothers' bones beside,
Or from foul treason's savage grasp to wrench the murderous blade
And in the face of foreign foes its fragments to parade.
Six hundred thousand loyal men and true have gone before.
We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred thousand more.

When the Cruel War Is Over

By CHARLES C. SAWYER.
Dearest love, do you remember
When we last did meet
How you told me that you loved me,
Kneeling at my feet?
Oh, how proud you stood before me
In your suit of blue
When you vowed to me and country
Ever to be true!

CHORUS.
Weeping, sad and lonely,
Hopes and fears, how vain!
Yet praying when this cruel war is over,
Praying that we meet again.

When the summer breeze is sighing
Mournfully along
Or when autumn leaves are falling
Sadly breathes the song,
Oft in dreams I see you lying
On the battle plain,
Lonely, wounded, even dying,
Calling, but in vain.

If amid the din of battle
Nobly you should fall,
Far away from those who love you,
None to hear you call,
Who would whisper words of comfort,
Who would soothe your pain?
Ah, the many cruel fancies
Ever in my brain!

But our country called you, darling,
Angels cheer your way
While our nation's sons are fighting
We can only pray,
Nobly strike for God and liberty,
Let all nations see
How we love the starry banner,
Emblem of the free!

Where once the warring cannon boomed,
The dulcet strains of peace hold sway.

Tribute to the Navy's Work In The Civil War

By Admiral D. D. PORTER

WHILE our army has been written of by a thousand ready pens, the navy has not, as a rule, been a popular theme for the historian, and now and then only do we meet with some well drawn story of the navy and the benefits it conferred upon the country, says Admiral David D. Porter in his "History of the United States Navy in the Civil War." Our army was full of writers who could delineate in the most happy manner all the events that were transpiring around them. They

OUR SOLDIERS MEMORIAL DAY, 1914

NOT now the firm, elastic tread
As when to war they marched away;
They're battling time, are warring years,
In bloodless battles of today.

The whitened hairs above their brows,
The wrinkles and the bended forms—
These are the scars they now receive,
The wounds that fall in silent storms.

Ah, once they faced the deadly fire
And stood where shot and shell fell fast!
They fight time's battles bravely now
As fought they battles of the past.

And, though no fields of carnage now
Spread horrors to the shrinking eye,
Upon time's field each passing day
The victims of the battle lie.

So now we pluck the fragrant flower
And weave the laurel wreath today
To lay beside the silent forms
Of those who fell beside the way.

ATE ENEMY'S BREAKFAST.

Custer Returned the Favor by Leaving His Dinner.

One day during the war General Young, later a congressman, was breakfasting in a house near Warrenton when he was notified that Union troops were approaching. Young disappeared and a few minutes later General Custer walked in and ordered breakfast. "There is General Young's breakfast," said Miss Hunton. "Well, that will do," replied Custer. "Young and I are great friends." When Custer left he ordered dinner to be served to him at noon. In the meantime the Confederate troops closed in on him and he was forced to retreat. "Give the dinner to General Young," said Custer in passing the house. "Tell him I enjoyed his breakfast."

"FIGHTING PHIL" KEARNEY.

One of the bravest Generals Who Fell in the Civil War.

One of the bravest generals who fell in the civil war was General Philip Kearney, born in New York city June 2, 1815. On March 8, 1836, he was appointed a second lieutenant of the United States dragoons, the first regiment of cavalry organized after the war of 1812.

Kearney was a born cavalry officer. He was a magnificent rider, dashing and adventurous, with the courage of a lion. In 1837 he was stationed at Fort Dearborn, now the city of Chicago. Later he studied cavalry tactics in France.

On the breaking out of the war with Mexico he recruited a splendid troop of cavalry, largely defraying the expenses from his private purse. In a gallant charge at Churubusco he lost an arm. At San Antonio he was brevetted major for gallantry. In 1851 he resigned from the army, traveled around the world and settled in Newark, N. J. In 1859 he went to France and served under Napoleon in the Italian war and won the cross of the Legion of Honor at Solferino. He lived in Paris awhile, but when the civil war broke out joined the Army of the Potomac. He was made a major general July 7, 1862, but was killed before the commission reached him. He met his death at the battle of Chantilly, having ridden right into the enemy's lines. His remains were removed recently from Trinity cemetery, New York city, to the National cemetery at Arlington, Va.

DIDN'T WAIT FOR ORDERS.

How the Army of the Cumberland Won Victory of Missionary Ridge.

When the soldiers of the Army of the Cumberland were ordered to clear the rifle pits at the base of Missionary ridge they did it and then, according to orders, lay on their arms and let the Confederates pop at them without replying. This did not suit the Union men, and soon they began to get uneasy. First one regiment, then another, moved out and started up the ridge until finally the whole Army of the Cumberland was climbing that hill, struggling over rocks and timber, but ever onward, without any orders having been given for an advance. The result was that eventually General Thomas' soldiers captured the ridge.

When General Grant saw the men scrambling up the ridge he turned to Thomas and said, "Who ordered those men up?"

"I don't know, but I did not," was his answer. "Did you order them up?" asked Grant of Granger, who was standing near.

"Not I," answered Granger. "They started without orders. But no matter; when those boys get started nothing can stop them."

The Heroes' Requiem.

The hands are weak, the eyes are dim,
Of those who saw war's visage grim
Beyond the brown Potomac's rim.
Fling out the flags on high!
Sing loud the national hymn!
Let cannon thunder to the sky,
The heroes' requiem!

Cavalrymen At Close Quarters

One of the Prettiest Saber Fights of the Great War

IT was not often that the opposing cavalry came into such close quarters that they could use their sabers with effect, but it happened on one notable occasion in east Tennessee during the war.

Colonel E. M. McCook, at the head of a cavalry division from Burnside's army, met and charged upon two divisions of Longstreet's men under Generals Morgan and Armstrong.

While McCook led his division at a galloping charge, Colonel O. H. La

THE CHARGE ON THE GUNS.

Grange, at the head of a demi-brigade, came upon a superior force of Morgan's troopers around a battery, made a dash for them and sabered the gunners as well as their cavalry supporters, taking two cannon and many prisoners.

When the main opposing lines fairly met on open ground there ensued one of the prettiest hand to hand combats of the war, at the end of which the redoubtable Morgan was routed and his battleflag and escort were captured.

Regiment That Grant Commanded.

A peculiar interest attaches itself to the Twenty-first Illinois infantry because it was Grant's old regiment. The men in that command little thought that the stranger assigned to them as their colonel was destined to become the grandest figure of the war. John W. Alexander succeeded Grant as colonel. He was an officer of rare merit, but was killed at Chickamauga, where the regiment lost heavily, 146 of its men being captured or missing. Its total enrollment was 1,452 men, and the total of killed and wounded was 374. Grant remained in command only until Aug. 7, 1861. The regiment served in Missouri till May, 1862, when it joined Buell's army.

The News From Culpeper.

A fine looking negro went over the Union lines on the Potomac and reported himself for work.

"Where are you from?" asked the officer on duty.

"Culpeper Court House, sah."

"What's the news down there?"

"Nuffin much, massa, 'cept dar's a white man down dar los' a mighty val'ble nigger dis a-mahnin, an I reckon he done lose some more live stock 'fore night."

ONE OF THE SURVIVING OLD TABS.

were also ready with the pencil. The photographer, while he traveled with the army, would spend his days in photographing every noted scene, reprints of which were scattered broadcast over the Union, keeping the movements of our armies as clearly before the millions of people in the north as if the battles had been reflected in a mirror.

Naval ships did not travel with reporters, photographers or sketchers. There was no room for these on board ship, and if perchance some stray reporter should get on board the discomfort of a man-of-war, the exacting discipline and the freer life in camp sent him back to shore, where in most cases he only remembered his associations with the navy as a trip without any satisfaction and with no desire to do justice to the work of the naval service.

It is true our armies were entitled to all that could be showered on them by a grateful people, yet the part performed by the navy when placed in its true light before the world will show to advantage, compare it as you may with any other branch of public service. Time with unsparing hand has swept away nearly all the men who led our fleets to battle during the war. But one or two remain, while those who were in the flower of manhood when the war was at its worst have reached the highest honors the country had to bestow and with no more naval duty afloat to perform except in time of war, when they can offer their services, none the less efficient for a green old age, are waiting calmly (enjoying the rest from the hardships of the past) to reap those higher rewards for duties well performed on earth where the sounds of battle will no more be heard and where the laurels they have gained will never wither. These officers must not be forgotten.

Every man who held position of honor and trust in the navy department in those trying times is dead and gone, and the multiplying events of a quarter of a century have crowded out for a time the great works which emanated from their conjoint exertions, but those who will take the trouble to hunt up and read over the documentary history of the times will find ample evidence that to the navy department and the navy is the present generation largely indebted for the happy condition of affairs now existing in a united country, a prosperity never exceeded in the history of the land, and the most substantial proofs that the navy will always be found foremost to support this union of states, no matter what may be the sacrifices made by its officers and other personnel.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county.

REMEMBER THE DEAD.

Memorial Day! A tender phrase and one that explains it all. The veriest tot knows its significance and the oldest veteran needs no prompting.

Were those who now rest beneath the sod unmindful of them who linger on, save only for a day? Ah no.

THE HOME TEAM.

If the good people of Emmitsburg will continue to patronize the ball games at home to the same extent as they did the first game there will be many an interesting contest on the local diamond this summer. The Emmitsburg team is playing good ball; every man on the nine has his heart in the game; the club is at practice regularly, and there is good material to draw from.

Without public support, however, no baseball team can exist. It seems hardly necessary to make this statement, so self evident is it. Nor is it necessary to make a formal appeal to our devotees of this manly sport.

In passing we might refer to the festival to be given on the 5th and 6th of June for the benefit of the Club. This will afford all an opportunity to show their good will towards their home nine.

OPEN AIR CONCERTS.

The large attendance at the open air concerts given by the Emmitt Cornet Band proves that the whole town thoroughly enjoys the music rendered by this excellent local organization.

Words of commendation for the players have been heard on all sides, and remarks of pleasurable surprise at the marked advance in precision, modulation and expression that characterized the various numbers on the programmes thus far given have been many and well deserved.

The people of Emmitsburg are fortunate in being able to enjoy these public concerts by such a good musical organization and free of charge the Emmitt Cornet Band is to be highly commended in its generous public spirited attitude.

Nobody has yet answered our question, asked many months ago—Is Mrs. Pankhurst afraid of a mouse?—Charleston News and Courier.

What? An old Kilkenny Cat like that? No, she's not afraid of a mouse or a moose either. She's a wild cat, a catamount—yes, a catapult, and when properly keyed up she can bowl over a whole platoon of the Coldstream Guards, with a company or so of the Black Watch and the Inniskillen Dragoons thrown in.

THEY say that B. H. Warner, Jr., is again coming out for Congress in the Sixth. In spite of the fact that four out of the five counties in this Congressional district—and one of them Montgomery—repudiated him the last time?

PERHAPS some one can show the Colonel a way to sink party differences without sinking the party.—Washington Post.

The best way would be for the Colonel to go back to South America and sink himself in that new river he discovered.

While Colonel Roosevelt is grooming Oscar S. Straus for the senatorial race in New York, here in Maryland Isaac Lobe Straus is already in the preliminary canter. Look out for the water jumps!

THE dates are fast approaching when the grads, all capped and gowned, will knock old Oratory out before the second round.

THE Maryland barrel is of different size than those used in New York and Pennsylvania.

Especially the 'Pork' barrel which is decidedly smaller.

AMONG the new uses for alfalfa is given the manufacture of tea, coffee, candy and food. Not a word is said about those high five cigars made of alfalfa, hemp and burlap.

Thackeray in Baltimore.

The first and only time I saw him (Thackeray) was in Baltimore when I was seventeen years old. He and John P. Kennedy, a friend of my father, strolled one Saturday afternoon into the Mercantile Library, where we boys were reading.

Oddities of Moss.

The lichen is a very strange plant, and moss is almost as queer. Like the lichen, moss is hard to kill, and for the same reason. Although it loves water, it can dry up without doing itself the least harm and then neither cold nor heat can hurt it.

Silkworm Fish Lines.

China produces quantities of the glutinous thread generally known as silk fishing line or silkworm gut. The so called silk fish line or silkworm gut is usually prepared from silkworms in the caterpillar state.

Stoking the Meat.

In 'Our Southern Highlanders' Horace Kephart says: 'The mountaineers have an odd way of sharing the spoils of the chase. They call it 'stoking the meat'—a use of the word 'stoke' that I have never heard elsewhere.

Seed is Their Currency.

An ancient system of banking is still in active and successful operation in southern Italy. This is that of the monti frumentari, or grain storage warehouses. In these are stored large quantities of seed, which is given out to farmers upon demand without payment.

His Mistake.

Exe—Cigar, old man? Wye—Thanks! (Puff, puff.) Capital weed this. Aren't you going to smoke too? Exe (examining the remaining one)—No, I think not. Wye—What's the matter? Did you give me the wrong one?—Boston Transcript.

Better Days.

Wife—I wonder if Mr. Van Dusen hasn't seen better days? Husband—Oh, yes, Van Dusen wasn't always married, I don't think!—Chicago Record-Herald.

The cheerful live longest in years and afterward in our regards.—Bovee.

When the Worm Turned. Recently a man omitted to hand his tailor a few chunks of silver in exchange for good togs, and after waiting a reasonable length of time the tailor party sued for the amount of the bill.

Thus it was that he found himself on the witness stand one day with the insistent lawyer for defendant trying to establish the point that his client had three months in which to pay for the goods and that that time had scarcely elapsed.

'Now, sir, Mr. Tailor Man,' mercilessly continued the lawyer, 'had I bought those clothes instead of my client, would you have summoned me into court at this early stage?'

'No, sir,' was the prompt rejoinder of the witness. 'Good!' smiled the lawyer, with a satisfied air. 'And why not, please?'

Persia's Sorrowful Tree.

There is a tree in Persia to which the name 'the sorrowful tree' is given, perhaps because it blossoms only in the evening. When the first star appears in the heavens the first bud of the sorrowful tree opens and as the shades of night advance and the stars thickly stud the sky the buds continue gradually opening until the whole tree looks like one immense white flower.

For Husbands.

A clergyman took down a small volume. 'This is called,' he said, 'the 'Instructions of Ptah-ho-Tep.' It is one of the very oldest papyrus writings known. It gives, among other things, advice to husbands, and that advice is as good today as it ever was. Listen.'

Exploiting the Antique.

A gang of swindlers in Toulouse had for stock in trade a beautiful antique cabinet and a considerable stock of anta-dacety. With these they took for a short lease a historic chateau near Toulouse, installing a venerable old lady to play the part of owner.

Fountain Pens.

It is a popular fallacy that fountain pens are quite a modern invention. As a matter of fact, an old work of reference published in 1795 contains an illustration of a fountain pen, the appearance of which is very much like those sold at the present time.

They Didn't Chatter.

A doctor attended an old lady from Scotland who had caught a severe cold. 'Did your teeth chatter when you felt the chill coming over you?' asked the doctor.

Prepared to Be Pessimistic.

An exact illustration of pessimism was that given by an elderly person who remarked one sunny morning: 'I have a premonition that something is going to happen today. I don't know what, but I won't like it.'—Collier's Weekly.

Fair Warning.

Mistress—Jane, I saw the milkman kiss you this morning. In the future I will take the milk in. Jane—'Twouldn't be no use, mum. He promised never to kiss anybody but me.—Illustrated Bits.

Domestic Economy.

'Why did she marry a man younger than herself?'

Most of It.

Post—Thinks he's the whole thing, does he? Parker—Well, I'd hardly go as far as that, but he certainly considers himself a quorum.—Smart Set.

We prepare ourselves for sudden deeds by the reiterated choice of good or evil.

East and West. In the desert you would have expected him to step out of a sheik's tent, but he actually came out of a doorway in the heart of New York's Syrian quarter. His father, a proud Arab with deep pockmarks in his face, followed. The boy had black silken hair, his skin was the color of seasoned mahogany, and his eyes danced with the fires of the east.

Father and son wandered along Washington street until the way was barred by a red haired boy, whose looks spelled fight. A white arm shot out and countered. A dark fist found its mark, there was a clinch, and the son of the accident went down in the gutter. The tiny real Arab smiled with disdain upon the street arab, while the man of the desert granted approval and called his son to his side.—New York Post.

Nigeria's Paradise.

With no taxes to pay and no wearisome restrictions to undergo, living in a land so fruitful that a few weeks' labor is enough to supply them with food, home and clothes for a whole year, the Etoi, natives of extreme southern Nigeria, on the equator, should be and probably are among the happiest people on earth, according to P. A. Talbot, African explorer, of London.

When England Had Duels.

Probably the last duel brought about in England through indiscretions in print was the encounter between John Arthur Roebuck and John Black on Nov. 19, 1835. Roebuck, who was then member of parliament for Bath, had issued a pamphlet bitterly attacking newspapers in general and the Morning Chronicle in particular, and for this he was challenged by the editor of the Chronicle.

Revenge.

It is recorded that once during the rehearsal of a musical comedy Mr. Charles Brookfield, the late reader of plays, came upon a composer wandering about the corridor of the theater muttering angrily to himself. 'Why, what's the matter?' Mr. Brookfield asked. 'You look very ferocious.'

The Living Present.

He that hath so many causes of joy and so great is very much in love with sorrow and peevishness who loses all these pleasures and chooses to sit down upon his little handful of thorns. Enjoy the blessings of this day if God sends them, and the evils of it bear patiently and sweetly, for this day only is ours.

Remnants.

'Now, children,' said the teacher to the junior class in arithmetic, 'if I had nine yards of cloth and used five to make a skirt and three to make a jacket, what would I have left?'

Hopeless.

'We wish, madam, to enlist your aid in influencing your husband for the public good. He holds the key to a very interesting situation and—'

Discretion.

Singleton—Have you decided what you are going to call the baby, old man? Wedder-ton—Certainly I am going to call him whatever my wife names him.—London Tit-Bits.

Goes the Rounds.

'They tell me that woman is a gossip. Do you think she is reliable?'

Plenty of Time.

Madge—Are you in a hurry? Marjorie—Why, no, dear. I have an appointment, and I'm only half an hour late.—Judge.

Storm Gods. Storm gods in the mountains have ever been the inspiration of some of the world's best poetry and of fascinating legends in that literary storehouse—Asiatic, Egyptian and classic mythology. And, by the way, many students are now looking beyond the Aryans, beyond the Egyptians, beyond all Greeks, Minoans and Latins, to a vast civilization antedating their most ancient histories—looking to now sunk-en Poseid.

All phenomena in nature, such as lightning, outbursts of rain, hail and snow in summits and ranges of peaks, all marshaling of huge mountain clouds for elemental war—earthquakes, cyclones, hurricanes, waterspouts at sea, huge waves beating over land as destroyers, outbursts of sulphurous and asphaltic flames from the earth, apparitions in the sky, as meteors, fireballs, bolides, comets, eclipses of the sun and moon—these all were supposed to be caused by an intelligence ruling each, and they were persons higher than man and called gods.—New York American.

Seven Ways of Spelling "E."

Dealing with some objections to spelling reform Mr. William Archer told the Society of Shorthand Teachers in London that there was not a single letter in the English language to which only one sound was attached, nor was there a sound which was represented by only one letter.

The word 'sovereign,' Mr. Archer said, was so spelled today because of its supposed connection with the word 'reign.' As a matter of fact, there was no connection between the two and the proper spelling was that which Milton used—i. e., 'sovrnan.'—London Spectator.

Systematic Birds.

'Doubtless,' said the professor of natural history to the returned traveler, 'you have picked up many strange bits of information regarding the animals and birds of the countries you have visited.'

'A few,' answered the traveler. 'The most interesting thing I ever heard, however, was a story I got in Africa. It seems that a year or so ago a representative of a rubber stamp house went through there and lost his sample case, containing all kinds of office stamping apparatus. It appears that some ostriches found his sample case, broke it open and swallowed the samples.'

'I see nothing odd about that. Ostriches will eat anything.'

Sites of the Capital.

The capital of the United States has been located at different times at the following places: At Philadelphia from Sept. 5, 1774, to December, 1776; at Baltimore Dec. 20, 1776, to March, 1777; Philadelphia, March 4, 1777, to September, 1777; Lancaster, Pa., Sept. 27, 1777, to Sept. 30, 1777; York, Pa., Sept. 30, 1777, to July, 1778; Philadelphia, July 2, 1778, to June 30, 1783; Princeton, N. J., June 30, 1783, to Nov. 20, 1783; Annapolis, Md., Nov. 26, 1783, to Nov. 30, 1784; Trenton, N. J., from November, 1784, to January, 1785; New York, Jan. 11, 1785, to 1790. Then the seat of the government was removed to Philadelphia, where it remained until 1800, since which time it has been in Washington.

Decimated.

We speak of a city or an army being 'decimated' when we mean to imply that it has suffered from many fatalities. The term is taken—and taken wrongly—from an old and barbarous custom of punishing mutinous regiments, town defenders, etc., by killing one man out of every ten ('decimus' being the Latin word for 'tenth'). Thus, unless we mean that precisely one person in ten was killed, our use of 'decimate' is incorrect.

Very Considerate.

'Dis ain' de same umbrella I lent you,' said Uncle Rnsberry. 'Colse it ain'!' replied Erastus Pinkley. 'Wif all dem good umbrellas to pick 'um you didn' s'pose I were g'ine ter bring you back yoh same of cotton rain proof, did you? When I borrows I pays interest.'—Washington Star.

The Reptile.

Schoolmaster—So, then, the reptile is a creature which does not stand on feet and moves along by crawling on the ground. Can any one of you boys name me such a creature? Johnny—Please, sir, my baby brother.—London Tit-Bits.

Rain Gauges.

Although the invention of the rain gauge is attributed to an Italian contemporary with Galilee, such instruments were in use in Korea at least two centuries before his time.

A Counsel For Living.

Let not future things disturb thee, for thou wilt come to them if it shall be necessary, having then the same reason which now thou ushest for present things.—Marcus Aurelius.

Plain Goodness.

Do not be troubled because you have not great virtues. God made a million spears of grass when he made one tree.—Henry Ward Beecher.

DEATH ENDS CAREER OF JACOB A. RIIS

End Comes to Social Worker in Summer Home.

Jacob A. Riis, author and social worker, died at his summer home at Barre, Mass., after a long illness. Mrs. Riis and a son were at his bedside when the end came. Mr. Riis was brought to Barre about two weeks ago from a sanitarium in Battle Creek, Mich., where he had been a patient for several months, taking treatment for heart trouble of long standing.

Jacob August Riis became, through his work in behalf of the poorer people in New York, "the most useful citizen" of the metropolis, according to a tribute once paid to him by Theodore Roosevelt, his intimate friend. Riis was the thirteenth child of a Latin teacher in Ribe, Jutland, Denmark. He was born in 1849. He learned the carpentering trade and went to America.

Riis led a varied career during the following six years. He built miners' huts in a construction camp in Massachusetts, made bricks, drove a team, and peddled flat irons and books. With only $75 capital and notes for $575 he succeeded in buying the South Brooklyn News, which was on the verge of bankruptcy, and made such a success with the property that he was able to sell it at a considerable profit a few years later. He returned to Denmark and married the girl who had refused him when he was a carpenter's apprentice. This first wife died in 1905 and two years later Riis married Mary Phillips, of St. Louis.

YOU CAN SHARE IN THE GREAT SAVING
On Commercial Fertilizers
By The Use Of
CRIMSON CLOVER
Read Farmers Bulletin No. 579 on Crimson Clover
Its Free - Address U. S. Dept. of Agriculture
Washington, D. C.
A bushel of Crimson Clover Seed sown on four acres of ground will increase the succeeding yield of Corn or Cotton about the same amount as would a ton of complete fertilizer applied at the rate of 500 lbs. per acre. A good stand of Crimson Clover turned under will ordinarily double the yield of the crops which follow. The physical condition of the soil is also materially benefited. The Sandy Soils are increased in Humus and Nitrogen Contents. The Stiff, heavy clay soils are rendered more open and friable.
Crimson Clover makes an excellent grazing crop, hay, ensilage and pasture for all classes of live stock. Milch cows make considerably more milk when pastured on Crimson Clover. It is also valuable as a honey plant, furnishing an abundant supply of nectar in the spring.
Crimson Clover is valuable as a Winter Cover crop. It is especially valuable in Orchards where it is generally plowed under as a green manure crop. The plants retain for the use of the trees the following season much of the plant food, which would otherwise leach out of the ground during the Winter and early Spring. A good stand of Crimson Clover not only reduces the erosion and the gullying of the fields, but on sandy fields, the blowing of the soil by the wind is greatly lessened. The plants also serve to hold the snow to a greater extent than if the field was left bare during the Winter. More and more each year farmers are realizing the importance and great value of Crimson Clover.

JOIN THE BOYS' POTATO CLUB

Age, Acreage and Basis of Award Requirements.—Part of Government Work.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture is at present establishing Boys' Potato Clubs throughout the State and offers as an inducement special awards for the best results obtained by the contestants. The conditions of the club make it necessary that at least three boys form a club. The ages may be from 10 to 18 years, the acreage  $\frac{1}{4}$  of an acre. The ground should be plowed about June 1st, the potatoes not being planted before July. The seed is to be selected and sent by the Department, the boys paying for the seed and fertilizer and bearing all other necessary expenses, but getting all the crop.

The basis of award:
Greatest yield per  $\frac{1}{4}$  acre.....40%
Best showing of profit.....30%
Best exhibit of one peck of seed potatoes.....15%
Best history on "How I made my crop of potatoes".....15%

Total score.....100%
What club members should agree to do:

To study and follow the instructions of the Farmers' Cooperative Demonstration Work.

To plan his own crop and to do his work. (A small boy may hire help for heavy plowing in the preparation of his seed bed.)

To make an exhibit of one peck of seed potatoes at a place designated for the purpose in the county.

To keep an accurate account of all items of expenses, receipts, etc., in connection with his plot. His own work to be charged for at 10 cents an hour.

To have his land carefully measured and the potatoes gathered and measured in the presence of two reliable disinterested witnesses.

To send report at the end of the season together with an account on "How I made my crop of Potatoes," to the State Agent in Charge of Club Work.

W. M. Prospect for Deficit.

Earnings of the Western Maryland last year were $415,000 less than fixed charges even though interest on the notes sold to cover cost of construction of the Connellsville cut-off was carried in construction account. Net earnings of the road for the first nine months of this fiscal year have been at the rate more than $1,000,000 below the previous year. Prospects, therefore, seem good for a deficit of over $2,000,000 after paying all charges, including interest on the notes.

WHAT A NEWSPAPER DOES FOR A TOWN.

The value of a live, energetic newspaper to any town or city is absolutely impossible of estimation. There are so many ways that the good newspaper promotes the interest of the city and the individual citizens where it is published that it would be like trying to number the sands of the sea to enumerate them. It is the true friend of the city or town and every resident thereof and stands ready to fight the battles even of individual citizens in a way that no other agency has either the nerve or the courage to do. It stands as a great bulwark of defense for the city and for the people.

But this is only one feature.

There's another that is seldom given much thought and that is that the newspapers of any town or city are a paying investment for such place as industrial institutions. People welcome with open arms and loud acclaim any factory costing a few thousand dollars and they think the town is wonderfully fortunate in securing a plant that will give employment to a number of people. Sometimes they even put up a bonus to secure such a plant. There are many newspapers which give employment to a number of people, and nothing is thought of it. The money that comes to the paper is published. None of it goes away except for ink and paper and some other small supplies that cannot be bought at home. The newspaper is essentially a home institution. It works day and night to build up its home town and state, and spends its money freely with home people. It is published on strict business principles these days, and that is the reason for the growth and prosperity that has come to many papers during the past few years.

As a business enterprise, a good newspaper is about the best industry that any town has, and its publishers ask nothing but a square deal.—Publisher's Auxiliary.

THE stores which do the largest business are those which keep their names constantly before the public. Advertising is just as great a necessity to an active business life as food and drink are to healthy physical existence. If you stop eating you die for want of sustenance, if you stop advertising, your business dies for want of publicity.

(Copyright 1912 by A. C. McClurg & Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

Book I.

CHAPTER I—Rudolph Van Vechten, a young man of leisure, is astonished to see a man enter No. 1313, a house across the street from the Powhatan club. The house has long been unoccupied and is spoken of as the House of Mystery.

CHAPTER II—Several persons at regular intervals enter No. 1313.

CHAPTER III—Van Vechten expresses concern to his friend, Tom Phinney, regarding the whereabouts of his cousin and fiancée, Paige Carey. A fashionably attired woman is seen to enter the House of Mystery. A man is forcibly ejected from the house, Van Vechten and Tom follow the man and find him dead in the street.

CHAPTER IV—Van Vechten is attracted by the face of a girl in the crowd of onlookers surrounding the body. Later he discovers the girl gazing at him with a look of scorn from the windows of the mysterious house.

CHAPTER V—Detective Flint calls on Van Vechten to get his version of the tragedy.

CHAPTER VI—Tom Phinney goes alone on a yachting trip. He recognizes among some persons in a passing motor boat two men whom he had seen enter the House of Mystery. He sees one of them, a Mr. Callis, on shore later and follows him. Tom is seized, blindfolded and taken to a house. He hears a girl named Jessie, evidently the daughter of the man in authority, question his captors. A sweet-voiced girl later protests against the roughness of his captors.

Book II.

CHAPTER I—Van Vechten calls on his uncle, Theodore Van Vechten, big man in Wall street and known as the "Man of Iron," in search of information regarding the whereabouts of Paige Carey.

CHAPTER II—Detective Flint shows Van Vechten a gold mesh purse found in the House of Mystery. Van recognizes it as belonging to Paige Carey.

CHAPTER III—The sweet-voiced girl helps Tom Phinney escape, but refuses to disclose her identity. Tom declares he will meet her again.

CHAPTER IV—Detective Flint tells Van Vechten he has a theory that Paige has been kidnaped. Van goes to lay the case before the jury.

CHAPTER V—Messages are sent to Europe in an effort to trace Paige. Tom tells Van Vechten he is in love and relates his adventures.

CHAPTER VI—A message from London reports that two ladies resembling Miss Carey and her companion, Mrs. Devereaux, sailed for New York some time previously. A reward of $2,500 is offered.

CHAPTER VII—It develops that the ladies visited the English home of Temple Bonner, owner of the "Man of Mystery." Flint has a theory that they are connected with the mystery of No. 1313.

CHAPTER VIII—It is recalled that Temple Bonner was in love with a daughter of Compton Schuyler, who married Max Willard. The other daughter married a man named Devereaux. Bonner and Willard were intimate friends. A search is started for Willard.

CHAPTER IX—Van Vechten enters the House of Mystery by the back door in time to hear John Callis threaten a girl. He interferes and helps the girl escape, but is rendered unconscious in the struggle with Callis.

Book III.

CHAPTER I—Tom Phinney gets a job as master of Brownlow's yacht, Kohinur, which has been chartered for some mysterious mission.

CHAPTER II.

The Voice in the Dark.

The importer also arose, and coming over to Tom, once more took his hand and peered searchingly up into his face.

"You are perfectly satisfied with the conditions?" he queried, not without a note of anxiety.

"Why not? I have your word for it that the enterprise is honest; as for the other part of it, why, the secrecy and all that sort of thing, it only makes a fellow a bit more keen, don't you know?"

"You are confident you can fill the billets?"

"Sure thing. I know the very chaps who will jump at a chance like this, where they would turn down an ordinary offer. You didn't know where to look, Mr. Brownlow."

The old gentleman breathed a sigh of relief. "I suppose not," he admitted. "I never before had to deal with a matter like this. You know where the Claremont is?"

Tom nodded. He had dined there often enough to have its location and its other characteristics pretty well stamped upon his memory. Brownlow continued:

"The Kohinur is at anchor in the Hudson, just off the Claremont landing. Her bunkers are full; most of her supplies are on board, but I'll take it upon myself to complete the list this afternoon. I'll wait for you there. There are some further instructions that I must give you before the charter and party come aboard."

Tom hastened away. His assurance that he could find the men to complete the Kohinur's equipment was not ill-advised; he had in mind the very men he wanted, and his task was simply one of running them to earth.

As being of prime importance, he first secured the engineer, and by five o'clock had found Phil Mercer. This young man he was forced, almost literally, to shanghai. That is to say, Mercer was disposed to hang back because of certain delinquencies which had been the occasion of his expulsion from Annapolis, so that Tom was obliged to pick him up bodily and deposit him beside the driver's seat. Cox, the engineer, lolling at ease in the tonneau, grinned cheerfully.

"Maybe you don't want the job or need the money," announced Tom with decision, "but I do need a first officer—in a devil of a hurry, too—and I'm not going to be over-particular about how I get him. You're elected. As it is, I'll have to get along without a second, unless I can break in one of Brownlow's tars. I've got you, and take it from me, you're not going to get away."

"But—you know, Tom—" Mercer tried a final protest, even while Tom was throwing in the clutch. The latter cut curtly in:

"Yes, I know. But, believe me, Phil, the booze isn't going to get you while you're on the Kohinur with me. This job will beat all the jag cures you've ever been up against. You'll be entitled to a post-graduate diploma when you are discharged."

Mercer subsided, grumblingly accepting the inevitable.

At the Claremont Tom stabled the machine, tried to get Van Vechten on the phone and failed, and notified Ramsey at the Kenmore's garage where to find his employer's car. Then he and Mercer and Cox clambered down to the Claremont's landing, where a launch was waiting.

After persuading Phil Mercer that he didn't have to attend to a suddenly recollected telephone message, or any other errand that might take him in the neighborhood of the Claremont's bar, Tom addressed himself to the white-uniformed sailor in charge of the launch.

"Is this the Kohinur's launch?" he demanded.

The fellow jerked an indifferent thumb in the general direction of the boat's varnished bow, where the name was conspicuously emblazoned in raised, but somewhat tarnished, brass letters.

"You can read, can't you?" was the impudent reply.

"Look here, my man; you answer a civil question civilly, and say 'sir' when you speak to me. Do y'get me?"

The sailor recoiled with dropped jaw.

"Beg pardon, sir," he made haste to conulate. "You're Captain Phinney—I didn't know."

"Answer my question."

"Yes, sir; this is the Kohinur's launch. I was waiting for you. Mr. Brownlow's on board now."

"Look at that lettering," went on Tom sternly, indicating the name on the bow; "as green and dull as an old brass kettle. And what do y'mean, coming after your captain in a soiled rig like that? You'll put in the rest of the evening washing and ironing it."

By which episode it may be seen that Tom Phinney of the Powhatan, and Captain Phinney of the yacht Kohinur, were two distinctly different personalities—a detail worth remembering in the light of what is to follow later on.

When Tom swung aboard at the head of his recruits, his appraising eye took in at once the deck's untidy appearance, the indolent attitudes of the watch and the men forward, and in the face of so many evidences of lax discipline he utterly ignored Brownlow's demonstrations of joy at his appearance. He addressed his mate:

"Will you look at this canal-charge, Mr. Mercer? Put those loafers to work at once, and make 'em jump. Charterer's coming aboard tonight, and I'd be ashamed to look him in the face if I had to meet him in a pig-pen like this. Get down the accommodation-ladder—he can't climb a rope. The bo'sun will take the launch ashore after supper and wait for the party." He wheeled abruptly upon the sailor of the launch:

"What's your name?"

"Charlie Winnard, sir."

"Very well, Charlie Winnard; you know what you have to do, so step lively. And you might pass a word along to your mates; the first man that shows himself above-deck in a rig as filthy as yours will do his watch's laundry for a week. Get along with you."

"Aye, aye, sir." And the man saluted and stepped away with alacrity.

A moment later Tom and the owner were alone in the charterhouse away from the confusion. Mr. Brownlow got down to business immediately. He furnished Tom with a list of steward's supplies, comprising everything from gasoline for the launch to champagne for the passengers, a glance at which made the skipper open his eyes.

"Whew!" he whistled. "That reads like a Rector menu; we shan't go hungry or dry in the officers' mess, anyhow."

"I'd like to do things right," returned Brownlow, rubbing his spare hands with obvious satisfaction. "There will be ladies in the party, and they are very particular people."

"Ladies!" exclaimed Captain Phinney, scowling. "On a secret cruise? I don't like that."

The other nodded. "But you won't have to worry about them. . . . Now I want to give you your final instructions; they are brief and not difficult to follow; then I must be getting along."

"First, the charterer and party will want to come aboard somewhere around nine o'clock tonight; he will bring you a note from me."

"Second, it is uncertain when you will sail; but fires must be kept banked in readiness to clear at any time."

"Third, after nightfall the boat must be kept dark—all interior lights closely shaded—none whatever displayed on or above deck except your regulation port and starboard lights."

"Fourth, nobody is to be permitted to come aboard or go ashore without the charterer's express permission. I believe that's all."

Tom stared at the slight figure opposite him, and ran his fingers through his thatch of close black curls.

"Is this going to be a smuggling stunt?" demanded he, frankly bewildered. "Or are we going to kidnap an heiress?"

"Kidnap an heiress!" echoed Brownlow. "God bless my soul! What put that notion into your head? I told you that I am ignorant of the nature of the charterer's object—save that it is honest!"

"Humph!" Tom grunted. "It doesn't sound honest."

"I'll admit that there is a good deal of mystery about the affair that I do not like; but—" And Mr. Brownlow waved a hand in a gesture that recalled to the other the Name which could not be mentioned.

Mr. Brownlow Got Down to Business Immediately.

The owner, after a final outburst of gratitude and satisfaction at having been, as he expressed it, "saved" at the last moment, took his departure; and it was not until he had gone that it occurred to Tom that the charterer's name had not been once mentioned. At this neglected detail he expressed his wonder in the classic language of one of New York city's former police chiefs:

"Now wouldn't that blow your hat in the river!"

He then took over the personal supervision of the cleaning-up process, to such good purpose that by nightfall the yacht was as spick and span as a battleship.

It was perhaps close to ten o'clock—or four bells of the first watch—when Tom, arrayed to his satisfaction, heard the officer of the watch respond to the launch's hail. He hurried on deck and stationed himself at the head of the accommodation-steps, mentally deploring the absence of lights.

A stir came up from the river, but the launch was invisible. In a moment a man's head and shoulders loomed dimly in the gangway. He stepped upon the deck and, leaning toward Tom, peered into his face in a vain attempt to make out his features. To Tom, the man's face was quite indistinguishable—merely a denser blot against the blackness.

"Is this the captain?" inquired a voice strangely familiar.

Tom started with surprise. Where had he heard that voice before? He could not recollect on the spur of the moment, but for some inexplicable reason it seemed so necessary that he should, and he tried so hard to do so, that the man was obliged to repeat his question.

"I beg your pardon," Tom stammered. "I am Captain Phinney."

It was only natural that he should expect to hear his questioner's name in return, or to be handed the note of introduction mentioned by Brownlow; but the man walked away without another word.

The others were following one another rapidly, until five dim shapes were ranged along the deck, wholly invisible in the shadow of the superstructure.

All at once the now very alert skipper directed his attention to a murmur of feminine voices in the launch. The ladies, manifestly, were finding considerable amusement in pretending a hazardous embarkation, for their transfer from the smaller craft to the steps was accompanied by little terrified shrieks and much subdued laughter. In a moment one came quickly and agilely up to the deck, halted and turned around. Her outline presented only the vaguest sort of blur.

"Welcome to the Kohinur!" she called back gayly to whoever remained below.

And if Tom had started at sound of the man's voice, what words are adequate to describe his sensations now? None, it is to be regretted. Reeling backward until he stayed himself by a mechanical clutch at the rail, he clung there, electrified with amazement—stupid with incredulity. If the sun had suddenly burst into view overhead he could have been no more completely overcome.

Next instant, however, conviction was hammered home. Two other laughing figures had joined the first, the three blending in one faint outline, when he again heard the voice.

"Dear me!" it complained. "How dark it is! Aren't we to have any lights?"

Then, in the mulatto stewardess' mellow accents:

"This way, please, follow me. I'll show you the way to the saloon."

And by the time Tom had collected his scattered wits sufficiently to curse his awkward tardiness and ineptness, he was alone.

Incredible as every law of probability might try to make it appear, nevertheless there was no gainsaying the fact that the fresh, sweet girlish voice which had just fallen upon his hearing was the same that, only a few nights previously at Rocky Cove, had set his pulses to leaping and his imagination to reveling in an ideal, ridiculous, rose-colored dream of the future.

Continued Next Week.
