MEXICAN REBELS ARE DEFIANT

Garranza's Action Causes Consternation in Washington.

WON'T ACCEPT MEDIATION

His Statement is Interpreted in Washington as Nothing Short of an Ultimatum.

General Carranza's defiant statement, sent from Durango, Mex., virtually rejecting mediation, spread consternation in official Washington, even in the ranks of the most hopeful advocates of peace.

He issued at Durango a semi-official statement declaring that the Constitutionalists would not accept any provisional government decided upon at Niagara Falls, but would insist upon Carranza becoming provisional president pending an election.

He asserted that no outside interference in the agrarian question would be tolerated, and asks "By whom are we to be crushed?" for refusing to give up the victory the Constitutionalists have won by arms.

That the Constitutional chief eventually would reject the efforts of the South American diplomats to pacify Mexico has been realized for some time, but that he would launch a denunciation couched in such bitter sarcasm at this time was wholly unlooked for, according to those close to the administration.

This statement bearing the sanction of General Carranza and his provisional government was interpreted as nothing short of an ultimatum to both the United States and to the South American envoys.

General Carranza, now that he finds himself at the head of a victorious army, with Mexico City as the goal of his endeavors within his grasp, apparently has decided it time to come out into the open and display his determination to resist all efforts on the part of this country to dominate the affairs of Mexico.

It was predicted by some diplomats that within the next twenty-four hours the conference at Niagara Falls will have to be dissolved because of the attitude of Huerta's representatives toward the Carranza faction. The Huerta delegates, it is reported, have threatened to withdraw from the conference unless President Wilson and Secretary Bryan persist in their support of the Constitutional faction, and they are awaiting only instruction from Mexico City before taking this step.

These, it is thought, will not be long delayed, as Huerta is said to have intimated that the Washington government either must "mediate immediately or fight."

While none of the administration officials know what the outcome of mediation will be, they do know the policy of the Washington government in the event of failure. This, it is understood, will be:

To continue in force present policy of occupying Vera Cruz, keeping the army and navy ready for emergencies, and to wait for the revolutionists to drive Huerta out of office and establish some kind of a government. If this is accomplished the Washington government will withhold recognition of it until an agreement is made and a guarantee given that the reforms demanded by President Wilson in Mexico will be put in operation at once.

Bridegroom Kills Himself.

Mrs. Sarah Miller, eighteen year old, a bride of a few hours, found the body of her husband in the barn on her home near Woodbury, N. J.

He had shot himself after a quarrel with her half-brother, George Haddock, who objected to the wedding.

The groom, Charles Miller, a farmer, twenty-two years old, became despondent following the quarrel. The bride was Miss Sarah Pedrick.

Mother at Eleven; Man Jailed.

In the presence of Elizabeth Bell Scopes, eleven years of age, a mother of Apollo, near Kittanning, Pa., and her six-week-old baby boy, W. T. Phillips pleaded guilty to a charge made by the girl. Phillips was sentenced to three to five years in the workhouse.

New Minister to Honduras.

President Wilson nominated Boaz W. Long, of New Mexico, chief of the division of Latin-American affairs, state department, to be minister to Honduras.

Labor Troubles Stop Weddings.

Two hundred and nine fewer marriage licenses were issued in Chicago last May than in May, 1913, according to the license bureau's figures. Labor troubles are blamed for the falling off

CAPTAINS SHIFT WRECK BLAME

England and Canada to Hold Joint Inquiry.

CAPTAINS BLAME EACH OTHER

Accounts of Collision Told by Commanders of Empress of Ireland and the Storstar Are Conflicting.

There is to be a rigid investigation of the sinking of the Canadian Pacific railway liner Empress of Ireland in the St. Lawrence river, near the entrance to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, on Friday morning.

The imperial government and the Dominion authorities have joined in endeavoring to fix the blame for the collision between the liner and the Norwegian collier Storstad, which has cost the lives of more than 900 persons and sent the Empress of Ireland to the bottom.

In the preliminary investigation the Canadian officials find themselves confronted by a situation in which the respective commanders of the Empress of Ireland and of the Storstad, Captain H. C. Kendall and Captain Thomas Andersen, give the lie to each other.

Full responsibility for the disaster is placed squarely upon the shoulders of the other by each of the men. Only a formal and searching inquiry is expected to arrive at the truth.

Captain Kendall in his testimony before the coroner at Rimouski declared that he had taken all possible precautions against a collision. His ship had been stopped, he gave the requisite signals when the Storstad was still two miles away, but the collier had kept on through the fog which settled down after the two vessels sighted each other, and had rammed the Empress of Ireland while the latter was virtually motionless.

Then, despite his plea to the master of the collier that he run his engines full speed ahead to keep the hole in the liner's side plugged with the Storstad's bow, said Captain Kendall, the vessel backed away, the water rushed in and the Empress sank.

Captain Andersen had remained silent on the subject of the collision until reaching Quebec. After he had made a report to representatives of the Dominion Coal company, charterers of the vessel, and of the owners of the steamer, a statement based on his declarations to them was given out.

According to the statement, when the Empress of Ireland was sighted and fog shortly afterward enveloped both vessels, fog signals were exchanged and the Storstad's engines were stopped. When she lost sight of the Empress of Ireland in the river mists the latter's course had been set so that the vessels would pass each other safely. The Storstad's course remained unaltered, the statement adds but when the Empress of Ireland was next seen she was close at hand on the port bow of the collier, "and was making considerable headway."

It is declared that the Storstad's engines were at once reversed and that her momentum was nearly checked when the vessels came together.

As for the charge that the Storstad backed out of the hole she had torn in the Empress of Ireland, the statement declares that it is not true. Her engines were ordered ahead to hold her against the liner's side, but the headway the Empress of Ireland was under twisted the collier's stem out of the gash, it is added. And not only did the collier remain as near the scene of the collision as was safe but every one of her boats were lowered, despite her own damaged condition, and saved some 350 of the liner's passengers and crew.

Survivors of the disaster accused members of the crew of the Empress of Ireland of filling the two first lifeboats that were launched. They were charged with failing to heed the cries for help of men and women, although there was ample room in the boats. The sailors of the sunken liner were also charged with pushing men off the open boats when they attempted to save themselves.

Smallpox Hits Rebels.

Smallpox has broken out at Culiacan, the capital of Sinaloa, Mex., according to advices received by the commanding officer of the American fleet. The mortality in the Constitutional garrison is said to be heavy.

Safe Blowers Get $2500.

Five robbers ble wopen the safe in Bussey's bank, at Mahomet, near Champan, Ill., and took $2500 in cash. The robbers escaped in a motor car. Pursuit was made by deputy sheriffs, but the trail was lost near Monticello.

Captain Anderson, commander of the Storstad, the collier which ran into and sank the Empress of Ireland, says that his boat had the right of way. He also said that it was impossible to keep the bow of the Storstad in the hole made in the side of the Empress, because pressure forced it out.

LOST $12,000 AT POKER

Shenandoah Banker Says He Spent Amount in Five Years.

Before E. D. Smith, in Pottsville, Pa., as the referee in bankruptcy, Joseph Strylyk, of Shenandoah, who recently failed with liabilities of $50,000 and assets of $35,000, testified that from 1909 to 1914 he lost $12,000 playing poker.

All the games in which he participated with so much bad luck were played in Shenandoah, he said. According to the testimony given by Strylyk, stiff poker games are not at all uncommon in Shenandoah. He said upon one occasion he "sat in" at a game on Saturday afternoon and played until Sunday morning, dropping about $1200.

While Strylyk did not say that the games in which he lost his money were fraudulent, he intimated that they were considerably off color.

Held For Murder in Editor's Home.

George Bond, who told the police he lived in Fifty-first street, below Chestnut, Philadelphia, is in jail at Toms River, N. J., charged with the murder of John R. Hafer, of 1749 Rose street Reading, Pa.

Bond is alleged to have killed Hafer in the home of Arthur Brisbane the New York editor, after an orgy. The men are alleged by the police to have broken into the Brisbane home and ransacked the wine cellar, drinking heavily of champagne.

They are believed to have quarreled and in the fight that ensued Hafer, it is contended, was beaten to death by the man who, until a few minutes before, had been his "pal."

Bond made a confession shortly after his arrest, but the police are inclined to discredit his version of the killing. Bond contends that he hit Hafer over the head with a bottle after the latter had attacked him with a knife. He ascribes the attack by Hafer to the fact that he accused Hafer of stealing money from him while he was sleeping.

Becker Sentenced to Die.

Ex-Lieutenant Charles Becker was sentenced to death by Justice Seabury in the criminal branch of the supreme court in New York on Friday for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, who was shot to death on July 16, 1912.

The execution was set by the court to take place in the week beginning July 6.

The appeal in Becker's case will act as a stay of execution, however, and it is expected that the court of appeals will not hand down a decision for several months. While awaiting the decision Becker will be confined for the second time in the death house at Sing Sing prison.

Held as Express Thieves.

Five more arrests were made in Harrisburg, Pa., in connection with thefts from express packages on cars through Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Some of the men arrested have confessed to taking articles from parcels or substituting their own addresses for those on the bundles.

The men arrested thus far are: George Fritz, Roy E. Bittner, Charles Hare and John Dumm, of Harrisburg; William Ryne, of Bellefonte, and Stewart B. Esherrick, of Pittsburgh.

Explosion Kills 2; Injures 12.

Two men were killed, one of them being literally blown to atoms, and a dozen seriously injured, some of them fatally, by a terrific explosion which wrecked the Metropolitan sewerage pumping station at East Boston. The explosion is thought to have been caused by sewer gas and the damage is estimated at $75,000.

FOX HUNTERS JOIN HUNT FOR LION

Escaped Animal is Seen Near Coatesville.

The countryside for miles around Coatesville, Pa., is stirred by the appearance of a strange animal, said to be a lion or a tiger, which escaped from a circus train at Thorpdale a few days ago.

Burgess W. L. W. Jones and R. John Allen, of Coatesville, who have traveled with circuses, declare that the tracks made by the animal resemble those of a lioness or a tiger.

The animal appeared in a cornfield on the James Greenwood farm in Valley township, a mile from Coatesville. Clarence Gill, a farm hand, saw it and ran to the farm house for a shotgun. When he returned it had disappeared.

When the news reached Coatesville a posse of fox hunters, with a pack of hounds, starved out. The woods in the township were searched, but in vain. It is believed that it is hiding in the underbrush in a woods two miles northwest of Coatesville.

Farmers' wives and persons living on the outskirts of town are afraid to venture out of doors unless with an armed escort.

T. R. Ready to Seize Mines in 1902.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, while he was testifying in New York city before a referee in the suit brought by Alexander T. Wales, an attorney against John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America for fees in connection with the Pennsylvania anthracite coal strike in 1902 declared he had been ready, as president, to take measures "equivalent to action in time of war."

"In September," said Mr. Roosevelt "the situation began to grow acute. It was a situation full of menace to the country. I asked to appear before representatives of the operators and of the miners. I regarded the attitude of John Mitchell, then head of the miners, as reasonable, and the attitude of the operators as unreasonable and offensive.

"I made up my mind that I would have to take drastic action against the operators and miners got together. I intended to send the United States army—I only wanted to get it in there, and I'd take care of the situation.

"I told Senator Quay, of Pennsylvania, I'd act, and I'd guarantee that the people of the eastern seaboard would have coal and have it right away. I told him that if he would help me he could vote to impeach me later if he wished. I asked Quay to arrange to have Governor Stone, of Pennsylvania, when I notified the governor, send word to me that he was unable to control the situation, and then I would send in the army.

"I planned to have General Schofield go in and take charge with the troops and act practically as a receiver for the mines. I told the general it would be equivalent to action taken in time of war, and that he must pay no heed to any other authority—no heed to a writ from a judge or anything else except my commands. He said he would do so."

Mine Cage Upsets; Six Killed.

A cage in which miners were being hoisted to the surface at the Maryland colliery, five miles west of Tamaqua, Pa., tumbled past the surface landing to the ground, forty feet above the shaft, turned turtle and hurled five of the men 700 feet to the bottom of the shaft.

The men were crushed into shapeless masses. Henry Welker was left dead on the surface and two others were injured.

Welker jumped from the cage while it was in the air, landed on a beam twenty feet below and his skull was crushed.

John Yedisko held on to a projection and escaped with severe bruises, while another foreigner's leg was broken.

With the cage out of commission the removal of the bodies was a difficult task, as it was necessary to carry them a half-mile through airways and muleways to the surface.

The dead are: Joseph Selinsky, Tuscarora; Martin Visculas, Middleport; Mike Smith, Maryland; William Petrosky, Middleport; Thomas Novaka, of Maryland; Henry Welker, Tuscarora.

The officials are unable to give the exact cause of the accident, not knowing whether the engineer was at fault or whether the accident was the result of a mechanical defect.

$10,000 STOLEN FROM POTTSVILLE HOME

The Thieves Escape After Looting the House.

Burglars made the biggest haul on record in Schuylkill county when they looted the home of the late W. L. Shearer, in Pottsville, Pa., of $10,000 worth of jewelry and many other articles.

Shearer was a millionaire when he died a year ago, and his handsome home is filled with costly bric-a-brac and jewels. The burglary was one of extreme audacity, the robbers breaking open a window in the full glare of electric lights to gain an entrance to the house.

Among the valuable jewels stolen were a $250 string of seed pearls, set in medallions, $800 diamond brooch, $300 ring set with three diamonds and rubies, $500 large amethyst pendant, set with diamonds, $500 lavalliere set with diamonds, pearl earrings, gold bangles, gold watches, diamond stickpins and necklaces.

The police have no clew to the robbers and it is believed that they have escaped from the region.

PUT DYNAMITE IN U. S. OFFICE

Watchman Confesses Placing Explosive to Win Promotion.

Five sticks of dynamite, with burning fuses attached, were found in the department of agriculture under the office of Secretary Houston in Washington. The fuses were extinguished before damage was done.

An employe of the department discovered the dynamite by accident and extinguished the fuses. The sticks were taken to police headquarters for examination.

The watchman who said he discovered the dynamite was held pending investigation. Officers went in search of another employe, recently discharged, who had been making threats.

Later at police headquarters it was said that Jauch confessed he had put the dynamite under the secretary's office, hoping that by discovering it he would win a promotion. His home is in Springfield Ohio. Jauch, who formerly was a private in the army, is said to have been under treatment for nervous trouble recently at the National Soldiers' Home hospital.

Assistant Secretary B. T. Galloway was in his office adjoining that of the secretary at the time the explosive was found. Secretary Houston is in Missouri attending the commencement of the University of Missouri.

Judge Gray Quits Federal Bench.

Judge George Gray, of Wilmington, Del., sent to Washington his resignation from the bench of the United States circuit court of appeals in the third circuit.

Judge Gray's resignation will take effect on June 1, and it is understood that he then will resume his law practice.

Rumors already have been heard as to his probable successor. One of those whose name has been heard is Judge Edward G. Bradford, of the United States district court. Another who has been mentioned is Judge Victor B. Woolley, of the Delaware state supreme court.

Now a "Rooster Day."

During the session of the Farmers' Annual Normal Institute in Stroudsburg, Pa., a resolution that was offered by W. Theodore Whitman, of Mount Gretna, Pa., was unanimously adopted, providing that June 1 shall be observed hereafter throughout the state as "rooster day."

On or previous to that date it is decreed that every rooster in the state shall be killed, sold or penned up for the purpose of preventing the overfertility of eggs supplied to market. Pennsylvania is the first state in the east to inaugurate the custom.

964 PERISH IN SHIPWRECK

Liner Empress of Ireland Sinks in Collision.

ONLY 403 WERE SAVED

Steamship Was Rammed by Collier in St. Lawrence River and Goes to the Bottom in Fourteen Minutes.

Carrying to death 964 of her passengers and crew, the steamship Empress of Ireland was sunk in the St. Lawrence river twenty miles off Rimouski, Quebec, by the Swedish collier Storstad, in a collision in a dense fog.

There are only 403 known survivors of the tragedy, which, it is feared rivals in the toll of death that attending the sinking of the huge acaer greyhound, the Titanic.

When the rescuing steamships arrived at the scene of the collision they found a spectacle somewhat similar to that which greeted the vessels that hastened to the aid of the Titanic's survivors.

The Empress of Ireland had sunk within fourteen minutes after being rammed and only the tops of her funnels and her mastsheads were to be seen above the surface of the St. Lawrence river.

In the lifeboats were nudged the survivors, dazed and moaning, some of them dying of injuries. Few could give anything but incoherent, almost hysterical, accounts of what had happened.

Crushed by the collision, injured in their efforts to leap into the lifeboats or suffering from immersion in the icy water and exposure in the lifeboats in which they escaped, the survivors presented a pitiable condition. Some had arms or legs broken and nearly all were clad only in their night clothes.

The bodies of twenty-one persons who died after they were taken from the water, were sent ashore and were placed side by side on the wharf, with their faces covered.

Carrying seventy-seven first cabin passengers, 206 in the second and 509 in the steerage, the Empress of Ireland left Quebec at half-past four o'clock on Thursday for Liverpool, and at a quarter before two o'clock in the morning ran into a dense fog twenty miles off Father Point, 175 miles down the St. Lawrence from Quebec.

Lieutenant H. G. Kendall, of the Royal Naval Reserve, commander of the Empress of Ireland, reports that the steamer had stopped when the Storstad, a Swedish collier, bound for Quebec, struck her amidships on the port side.

The Storstad literally tore her way almost to the Empress of Ireland's propellers, leaving a rent through which the water poured in such deluge that she sank before many of the passengers were aware of what had happened.

The stricken vessel sank as if lead. An explosion, apparently originating in her engine room, hastened her end and those persons who were able to make their way from their cabin, found themselves on a perilous slanting deck. Many leaped and were drowned. Others were fortunate enough to grasp driftwood or were picked up by lifeboats.

The rescued, fighting their way to the lifeboats from the careening deck clinging desperately to the rails or leaping overboard, broke their arms or legs or otherwise injured themselves so badly that twenty-one died after being picked up.

Brief wireless calls for help sent out by the Marconi operator of the Empress of Ireland were heard by the pilot boat Eureka at Rimouski, ten miles from the scene, and the Eureka followed by the Lady Evelyn, a mail tender, put on forced steam and made all speed for the spot.

It was these two boats that fount afloat the few lifeboats that were launched from the stricken ship and picked up the survivors they contained.

Among those in the first cabin were Sir Henry Seton-Kerr, a noted English lawyer and big game hunter, and Laurence Irving, son of the late Sir Henry Irving, and his wife, Mabel Hackney.

When the rescue ships reached the scene they found nine lifeboats from the Empress, all jammed full, and many of the occupants wounded. Wreckage covered the river everywhere. The Storstad, her bow badly crumpled, was still on the scene picking up the living wherever she could find one of the lifeboats crouched Captain Kendall, dazed and greatly shaken. He had leaped from the deck and had been picked up by members of his crew.

Alumnae Chapter

Notes

St. Joseph's College

A reception was given on Thursday afternoon by Mrs. Daniel W. O'Donoghue 1704 Avenue of the Presidents to the "Washington members of St. Joseph's College Alumnae of Emmitsburg, Maryland.

There was a business meeting before the reception, Mrs. O'Donoghue was elected regent, Sister Mary Vincent honorary regent and Miss Katherine M. Brady secretary.

Among the topics discussed at the meeting was the organization of a federated alumnae of all Catholic colleges and academies in the United States and Canada. This movement has the approval of His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore; Cardinal Farley, of New York; Cardinal O'Connell, of Boston, and Bishop Allen, of Mobile.

Among those present at the meeting from out of town were Miss Clare Cogan, of New York, vice-president of the general alumnae; Mrs. James Sheeran, regent of the New York Chapter; Mrs. Robert Paul, regent of the Baltimore Chapter; Mrs. Marcus Foster, Secretary of the Baltimore Chapter; Mrs. A. M. Kalbach, of Lancaster, Penn., former president of St. Joseph's alumnae; Miss Kalbach, of Lancaster, Miss Hubert, of Baltimore, and Miss Stella McBride, of Emmitsburg, secretary of the general alumnae. The Washington members present were: Mrs. Charles G. Thorn, Mrs. Henry Auster, Mrs. Francis Roach, Mrs. Lowell Blake, Miss Megan, Miss Wilson, Mrs. Arthur Martin, Mrs. M. D'Arcy Magee, Mrs. W. H. E. H. S. ALUMNI ASSOCIATION HOLDS BANQUET.

The fifteenth annual banquet of the Emmitsburg High School Alumni Association was held at the New Slagle Hotel on Monday evening, June 1, 1914. The meeting was opened with an instrumental solo by Miss Edith Ohler, '12, which was followed by a recitation by Miss Louise Beam, '11, accompanied on the piano by the playing of Il' Trovatore by Miss Madeline Frailey. Next followed an instrumental duet by Misses Madeline Frailey and Clara Rowe. The assembly then adjourned to the dining room, where a sumptuous banquet was served. Following the banquet, the members of the graduating class were voted in as active members of the Alumni Association.

The officers for the ensuing year were nominated and elected, Mr. Thomas J. Frailey, '10, President of the Alumni Association, presiding. Miss Clara M. Rowe was elected president, Miss Louise Beam, vice-president, Mr. Robert Gillelan, '09, secretary and Mr. Frank Weant, '11, treasurer. The report of the secretary and treasurer was then read by Miss Mary J. Shuff.

Toasts were then given by the members of the graduating class, Misses Mary J. Shuff, teacher of the Grammar School, Madeline Frailey teacher of the Primary School, Grace Rowe, Helen Shuff, Rhoda Gillelan, Elizabeth Horner, Mary Weant, Hazel Boller, Lottie Hoke, and Messrs. Lawrence L. Mondorff, Frank Weant, M. F. Shuff, Jr., Jones Baker and Charles D. Eichelberger. Mr. Thomas J. Frailey, '10, acted as toastmaster. Trustees of the school Messrs. Millard F. Shuff, William D. Colliflower, Mrs. M. F. Shuff, Mrs. W. D. Colliflower, Mrs. Thomas C. Hays; and also wife of former school commissioner, Mrs. J. Henry Stokes, were present as guests of honor. A motion was put in order by one of the members of the association that the members continue the regular association dues and a vote being taken on it, that motion was unanimously carried. The new business brought before the association consisted of the project of lighting the High School building by electricity. This also met with the hearty approval of every member present and it was thereupon resolved that the funds above the expenses of the present administration be donated for that purpose.

The committee in charge of the banquet was, Mr. Thomas J. Frailey and Miss Mary J. Shuff, Secretary Pro Tem. Miss Maude Derr acted as registrar for the committee in charge. Several letters were read by the secretary, received from those who sincerely regretted their inability to attend, among them being a letter from a member of the faculty of the university of Florida, Gainesville, Fla., Prof. Robert R. Sellers, '07. Another from Prof. Kremer Hoke, Superintendent of the Richmond Schools, Richmond, Va., and also another from Mr. Clarence Seabrook, an electrical engineer now located in Greenville, South Carolina. Many other satisfactory responses were received by the committee, expressive of deep regrets caused by their unavoidable absence. The programmes were artistically prepared and the dining room was draped and festooned by bunting representing the High School colors, yellow and black. The dates 1898-1914 were suspended across the tables, indicative of the first and last banquet of the Emmitsburg High School. Directly over these numbers were the letters E. H. S., designed in yellow and black. Nearly every class that was graduated since the existence of the High School was represented, and it was the general opinion of those present that this banquet was one of the best, in many respects, ever held under the auspices of the Emmitsburg High School. That it was a success was not only due to the efforts of the committee in charge but both to those who responded so generously by letter and especially to those who willingly co-operated by their presence.

CLOSING EXERCISES OF E. H. S.

Seventeenth Annual Commencement Held in School Auditorium.

The Seventeenth Annual Commencement Week Exercises of the Emmitsburg High School began on Sunday evening in the Methodist Episcopal Church when the baccalaureate sermon was preached to the class of 1914 by the Rev. Hamilton P. Fox, pastor of the church.

On Monday evening, June 1st, the fifteenth annual banquet of the Emmitsburg High School Alumni Association was held at the New Hotel Slagle at which the Class of '14 and the trustees of the school were guests of honor. This banquet was generally conceded to have been the most successful ever held, because of the interest shown by the promoters and the alumni. On Tuesday June 2, the commencement proper was held in the High School auditorium. The programme was as follows: March, by the School; Invocation, Rev. Dr. Charles Reinwald, pastor of the Lutheran church; Salutatory, "He Conquers Who Labors," Ruth Ida Linn; Music; Oration, "Genius and Labor," John M. Fuss; Essay, "When Home and School Co-operate," Helen E. Baumgardner; Music; Prophecy, Mary Ellen Eyster; Song; Address to Graduates, by Mr. Oscar B. Coblentz, County School Commissioner and prominent member of Frederick bar; Music; Mantle Oration, "Influence," Mary Jane Ohler; Junior Response, Harriet Beam; Valedictory, E. Clyde Cover; Music; Presentation of Diplomas, by Prof. McClure H. Haupt, Principal of High School; Benediction by Rev. E. Lewis Higbee, pastor of the Reformed church; Music.

Mr. Coblentz spoke concerning the change to be made in the curriculum to be taught in the High Schools of this county and especially during the course of his address emphasized the progressive spirit and broad-minded view Emmitsburgians always take in regard to projects of importance to this community. Prof. G. L. Palmer, recently appointed Superintendent of Frederick county schools also delivered an address explanatory of the new school system about to be introduced.

The members of the graduating class are especially to be congratulated on the delivery of their orations and essays, which were skillful elaborations and exemplars of good logic, elegant English and sound reasoning. The salutatorian, Miss Ruth Linn, handled her subject masterfully, while the valedictorian was lauded by the superintendent. The oration of John Fuss deserves special mention because of the apt comparison made between "Genius and Labor." The importance of the co-operation of the school and home was intelligently treated by Helen Baumgardner, the third speaker in her essay "When the School and Home Co-operate." The class prophecy by Mary Ellen Eyster was a dignified representation of a vivid imagination and more than once it brought the audience to laughter by the humor contained in it. Her prediction of the future was a composition that merits much praise, because it did not touch upon the ridiculous as such essays are sometimes wont to do, but concluded in a tone of exhortation to her classmates, that if followed could lead only to a true realization of a Christian life. The Mantle Oration and Junior Response by Misses Mary J. Ohler and Harriet Beam respectively, was also very impressive and the fitting subject "Influence" was ably discussed. Owing to the fact that the Imperial orchestra of Creagerstown was unable to be present, because of the recent conflagration in that town, the music for the evening was furnished by Mrs. Thomas C. Hays and Misses Madeline Frailey, Louise Beam, Edith Ohler, Ella Mae Caldwell and Fernie Snook; who played selections on the piano that were highly appreciated by the large audience present. The class flower, pink carnation, and class colors, green and gold were very much in evidence and the auditorium was beautifully decorated with potted plants, flags and bunting.

GALA DAY AT WESTMINSTER

Home Coming Week and Firemen's Convention on June 11.

Thursday, June 11th, will be the biggest day in the history of progressive Westminster. The occasion is the Annual Convention of the State Firemen and Home Coming Week's great day, both of which events take place concurrently this year. There will be some thing doing every minute from dawn until midnight and from the length of the program of what is to happen, it is very doubtful if it will all be over then. There will be a great parade of the firemen with their splendid bands and apparatus, hose-reel, truck and engine races and contests, a royal welcome and a public reception to the "home-comers," receptions, special open-air features and attractions, band concerts, a general decoration of the town with beautiful electrical illuminations at night, the festivities of the day to conclude with a masquerade carnival and mardi gras. There will be special excursions on the Western Maryland the last train leaving Westminster at 11 P. M. so that excursionists may participate fully in the good time.

THE WEEK AT THE COUNTY SEAT

Chronicle of Happenings at Frederick City and in the Courts.

The new general manager of the Hagerstown and Frederick Railway was in this city on Monday giving this end of the rejuvenated railroad a looking over. Mr. M. A. Pooler's motto is "Service."

The completion of the organization of the board, overhauling and airing of the financial condition of the board, will be a part of the business that will be taken up at the regular meeting of the County School Board, which was held on Wednesday. The Administration of school affairs desire the school board to exercise "rigid economy."

$27.30 for Frederick's Safe and Sane Fourth of July celebration for this year was received on Monday, the first day the fund was started.

More than 3000 people attended Brad-dock Heights on Tuesday, the opening day of the season. The car service was excellent.

Now the mothers need not fear that their boys will drown in a treacherous swimming hole in an attempt to learn to swim, for Capt. D. John Markey, President of the Board of Directors of the Frederick Y. M. C. A., has inaugurated a system which will provide that any youngster between the ages of nine and sixteen may have free use of the swimming pool at the association to learn to swim under a competent instructor.

The physical connection between the three railroads of Frederick, Northern Central, B. & O. and Frederick railroads will be a boon to the business man and manufacturer of this county. It means relief from exorbitant charges.

An audience which filled every floor of the City Opera House jammed the theatre on Tuesday evening when the Class Day Exercises of the Boys' High School were held. The large audience was delighted by orations and drills.

The Alexander Young Camp, Confederate veterans and Fitzhugh Lee Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will hold their annual memorial services to-morrow afternoon at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

A balky automobile came near breaking up the elaborate commencement exercises of the Emmitsburg High School when the commencement orator School Commissioner Oscar B. Coblentz, and Superintendent G. L. Palmer and party driving from Frederick to Emmitsburg were marooned about 2 miles south of Thurmont on Tuesday evening about 8.15 o'clock. However the commencement exercises waited and the speakers delivered their orations to a large audience.

Only 7 villages in this county have water systems, the other county towns are at the mercy of fires.

EMMITSBURG BEATS TANEYTOWN CLUB

Pitchers Battles Results In Win For Locals.—Score 9-7. Big Crowd Witnesses Contest.

In one of the hardest fought games ever witnessed on Firemens Field, the local baseball team took the Taneytown Club into camp on Decoration day by the count of 9 to 7. The weather was ideal for ball and being a holiday a large crowd turned out to see the game. The Carroll Countians came up strong in new uniforms and determined to win. Nor was this determination stemmed until the nine innings had been played.

Chic Rosensteel pitched a great game for Emmitsburg allowing only eight scattered hits, and striking out fifteen.

E. G. S. HOLDS COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

The closing exercises of the grammar school took place in the school auditorium Friday afternoon. The programme was under the direction of the principal Miss Mary J. Shuff. The musical and literary efforts were highly appreciated by the audience present who were loud in their praise of the careful training of the instructor.

The programme was as follows: Song by the school; essay, "Use of Books," Miss Alice McNair; recitation, "Psalm of Life," Master William Hayes; reading, "Knowledge," Miss Edna McClain; vocal duet, Miss Ethel Annan, Miss Virginia Eyster; essay, "Honesty is the Best Policy," Master Bryan Byers; recitation, "First Snowfall," Miss Margaret Annan; recitation "Indian Singer," Miss May Rowe; awarding of prizes by principal, Miss Mary J. Shuff.

The prize of $5 in gold, donated by an Emmitsburg citizen for the best composition on "How I Can Become a Useful Citizen," was awarded to Miss Pauline Annan. A second prize of $2.50 in gold was awarded to Miss May Rowe. First honorable mention was awarded to Miss Virginia Eyster and second honorable mention to Miss Margaret Hayes. The first prize for best composition on coal went to Miss Virginia Eyster. First prize for attendance and punctuality, Master Richard Biggs; second prize attendance and punctuality, Master Joseph Zimmerman and William Hayes; reading composition, "How I Become a Useful Citizen," by Miss Pauline Annan; announcement by principal; closing song Ode to E. G. S.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county.

HOME RULE FOR IRELAND.

While we seek peace everywhere and monuments and temples dedicated to amity and friendly relations among civilized nations are being erected through the world, the government of England is facing at home a menace, which is a portent of scenes as disastrous and agitating as the brutal bushwhacking of the Mexicans at our very doors.

Not only the Ulsterites are preparing to resist the Government's contradictory policy, but the rank and file of the English army itself are threatened with disorganization, for many of the staff and line officers have declared that they would resign before they are sent to coerce the Ulsterites and the very soldiery threaten desertion should they be used to compel Ulster to obey the Law of the Kingdom, which the recently adopted Bill must be when the King signs it, as sign it he must, since it is a policy of his ministry.

As we think of it these officers are in many cases the descendants of the heroes of Balaclava whose deeds the Laureate eternalized when he said:

"Theirs not to reason why, Theirs but to do and die."

These officers, it is plain, belong to the leading Tory families of England, and politically they sympathize with the Ulsterites. The affinity is even deeper than mere partisanship, for at bottom the spirit of commercialism is the inspiring source.

And yet whose rights and political aspirations have been so systematically crushed for upwards of one hundred years as those of the four millions of Irishmen who, to satisfy the arrogance of the descendants of the English colonists who followed Cromwell in his van of subjugation, are asked to give in to 500,000 Ulsterites?

The struggle which, the conciliatory measures of the British Government it was hoped, would prove a relief to Ireland, began when the Irish Parliament was abolished. While the people of Ireland submitted, many leading Irishmen like Robert Emmet gave their lives for the triumph of a home Government for the Island. Great patriots like Daniel O'Connell and Parnell fought for the realization of their dream. Others like Smith O'Brien, John Mitchell, John Boyle O'Reilly suffered for the cause in British prison ships.

In later days, devoted Irish patriots like O'Donovan, Rossa and Michael Davitt gave their talent and their influence to the defense of the principle. But all of their endeavors in its behalf were suppressed by oppression and coercion.

The repressive measures of the British Government gave rise to organized opposition on the part of some of the Irish patriots who formed such political parties as the National League, the young Ireland party and the Land League.

Thousands of Irish Nationalists served terms of imprisonment for taking up the fight for Ireland and Independence, and besides the illustrious men mentioned above, hundreds were exiled.

The parliamentary fight for Home Rule has been going on for a century and many unusual scenes were enacted in the staid Parliament introducing what De Quincey called "a Kentucky element" in its proceedings. Under the leadership of Gladstone, in 1888, the British Government made an effort to meet the demand for Home Rule but the Bill was defeated by a split in the Liberal party.

The hope for Home Rule now is in conciliatory measures, and the automatic effect of the Law which by its third passage, Tuesday May 26, becomes effective after the King signs the Bill. Its virtual operation depends, however, on the prudence and sagacity of the Crown.

KEEP IT UP.

The campaign for local improvement continues unabated. There is evidence of it, very pleasing evidence, everywhere. Nor is the improvement confined to the "front" of things—to the "outside of the platter," so to say. It is front, back and on the inside, on top and at the bottom. And how much it means to the town and to the comfort of those who live in it! How much it indicates to the stranger—the thrift, the cleanliness, the community interest, the progress, the just pride of Emmitsburg's citizens in that which is theirs.

Every improvement, every cement sidewalk, every coat of paint is an asset to property—an asset to the town.

Keep it up! Increase your assets.

THE disastrous fire at Mount Airy and the conflagration that practically destroyed all of Creagerstown are sad object lessons of the short sightedness of people in rural communities who fail to provide fire protection for their property. Everyone in the county sympathizes with those who met with loss at Creagerstown. It was a great loss, but it is to be hoped that from its ashes a greater and better protected Creagerstown will arise.

"How fortunate we are in having such a water supply and such splendid fire protection." This remark was made many times on Tuesday when Emmitsburg was shocked by the news of the big fire at Creagerstown. Fortunate indeed is Emmitsburg, and appreciative should Emmitsburg people be of this boon to the community.

Seaside Golf in England.

The seaside courses are so open and the wind so strong that the straight ball "down the middle of the alley" (the kind we crave for here) is practically an utter stranger on those courses. In fact, there would be no advantage in even trying to keep the ball straight in most cases, but really a disadvantage, since the ball in a cross wind, for instance, would be fighting against the wind. Instead, the wind is made a friend and is used to advantage by employing the useful hook and slice (according to the direction of the wind) to work with the wind—and a long ball usually results. Those hard hitters who can play a reasonable hook or slice certainly do some really fine smacking. They know how to start the ball for the right place, at the proper height and with the proper degree of slice or hook imparted to it so that it usually ends up in the right spot a considerable distance past the place arrived at by the man who only plays the straight ball and simply allows for the wind.—Outing.

The King Liked Clean Shirts.

G. T. Wrench, M. D., in his "Lord Lister; His Life and Work," quotes a story told of Sir Astley Cooper, the greatest surgeon of his day, to illustrate the surgical conditions against which Lister had to contend. Sir Astley had cut a vein from George IV's scalp. The day following the operation he was summoned to the palace. He hurried off in great fear; but, while the king was in bed, Sir Astley noticed that the royal eye viewed him with considerable disfavor. On his return he asked his nephew if there was anything wrong with his appearance. "Why," replied his nephew, "I should have put on a white cravat and a clean shirt or at least have washed my hands before I waited on his majesty." Sir Astley's shirt and hands were bespattered with blood. "God bless me! So I ought!" he replied, "but I was not aware of it—and the king, sir, is so very particular."

Even Cursed the King.

The period that followed the black death was the golden age of the English peasant. Says Piers Plowman: "The laborers that have no land and work with their hands deign no longer to dine on the stale vegetables of yesterday. Penny ale will not suit them nor bacon, but they must have fresh meat or fish, fried or baked, and that hot and hotter for the chill of their maw. Unless he be highly paid he will chide and bewail the time he was made a workman. * * * Then he curses the king and all the king's justices for making such laws that grieve the laborer." Even the peasant with a fixed interest in the soil was strong enough in many cases to extort a charter from the lord of the manor with rental at 8 cents an acre per annum.

Oil Field in Pacific Ocean.

Unique among the oil fields of the world is the Summerland group of wells in California, which extend out into the Pacific ocean. There are 141 producing wells in this group, which is situated about eighteen miles from Santa Barbara. These wells are drilled out in the ocean just off the coast and 100,000 barrels are taken from the oil sands underlying the ocean bed every year. This interesting spectacle of derricks built out into the sea is visible from the train on the way from Los Angeles to San Francisco.—Engineering and Mining Journal.

Pessimistic.

"Willie," said the teacher, "what shape is the earth?" "It is an oblate spheroid." "And what kind of shape is that?" "I asked father, and he said he guessed it was a scientific way of saying the world is in mighty bad shape at present."—Washington Star.

"Child Material."

If parents do not know by this time how to bring up their children it is not for lack of instruction. A few generations ago Solomon was the only writer on child study who enjoyed any vogue. Now his precepts, the acid fruits of experience, have been superseded by more genial but more important counsel.

Begirt by well wishers, hemmed in on every side by experts who speak of "child material" as if it were raw silk or wood pulp, how can a little boy born in this enlightened age dodge the educational influences which surround him?

It is hard to be dealt with as "child material" when one is only an ordinary little boy. To be sure, "child material" is never thrashed as little boys were wont to be. It is not required to do what it is told. It enjoys rights and privileges of a very sacred and exalted character; but, on the other hand, it is never let alone, and to be let alone is sometimes worth all the ministrations of men and angels. The helpless, inarticulate reticence of a child is not an obstacle to be overcome, but a barrier which protects the citadel of childhood from assault.—Agnes Repplier in Atlantic.

Curious New York Club.

Probably one of the least known clubs in New York has its home on the borders of the lake in Central park, opposite Seventy-seventh street and Central Park West. The clubhouse is a tiny wooden structure, with an equally tiny veranda and a little pier running out twenty feet into the water. Here on spring and summer evenings business men, Wall street brokers, merchant princes, famous lights of the bar, actors and men of science gather, armed with fishing rod and reel, to while away an hour or two in the fascinating sport of fly casting. The men are members of the Anglers' club of New York, and they find relaxation and enjoyment in listening to the whirr of the line as it slips off the reel. The club is one of the most exclusive in the city. It has been in existence for many years, with tournaments regularly every month, yet persons never knew it existed or noticed the rude little hut by the water's edge.—New York Tribune.

Passing of the Cou-Blanc.

In the Alpine valleys, near the Little St. Bernard, there is cultivated a species of goats to which the natives give the name of "cou-blanc."

They have peculiar markings. The neck and shoulders are entirely white, the rest of the body jet black. The head is curiously marked in black and white, always the same. About the only variation is in the feet, which are either black or white.

These goats are almost unsurpassed as milk producers. The variety has existed for centuries and is as distinct a variety as the Holstein or Jersey cow. This in spite of a changing population, which is a mixture of many races.

Unfortunately the evils of excessive inbreeding are showing, and this interesting race seems doomed to extinction, like the wild white cattle of England.—Exchange.

Nicely Disguised.

Some days ago, about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, the principal police inspector of the Second district was called to an affair as delicate as it was urgent. He quickly made up his disguise. For his bourgeois melon hat he substituted a cap, the classic cap of the Apaches. He then jumped into an auto. He was not recognizable, or, rather, he would not have been if the honorable inspector had not retained upon his breast the red ribbon of the Legion of Honor, a ribbon that he had heroically won at Choisy-le-Roi. And the malefactor in the midst of whom this disguised officer insinuated himself could not refrain from laughing and are laughing yet at this man clothed like one of them and decorated with the Legion of Honor!—Le Cri de Paris.

Remarkable Watch.

An officer of a liner which sails from New York vouches for the following story:

"On a recent trip I was on deck talking with a passenger when eight bells sounded. 'There goes eight bells,' I said, excusing myself. 'I must take my watch below.'"

"'Gracious,' she exclaimed; 'fancy having a watch that strikes so loud!'" —New York Tribune.

The Lazy Woodpecker.

Woodpeckers are the greatest stay in beds of all the American birds, while robins are among those who stay up latest at night and get up earliest in the morning. A New Hampshire naturalist has made such careful observations of the sleep habits of native birds that he can now tell pretty closely the minute when any particular bird will become sleepy in the evening or will wake up in the morning.

By timing, day after day, the last notes heard from various birds and by listening in the morning for their chirps and calls he has found that their sleep habits are very regular, though in the busy months of spring household responsibilities they are apt to get up earlier than at other seasons.

On the average, downy woodpeckers were not heard from after half an hour before sunset and pileated woodpeckers after an hour before sunset. They slept in the morning until ten or twenty minutes after sunrise, in contrast to the robin, which is up more than an hour before sunrise, and the wood pewee, which is up an hour and a half before sunup.

The robins, pewees and thrushes, he found, generally retired for the night about half an hour after sunset, so the woodpeckers usually took two or three hours more sleep than the pewees or the robins.—Saturday Evening Post.

The Roof in Literature.

Northern literature has never taken the roof seriously. There have been many books written from the viewpoint of windows. The study window is usual. Then there is a college window and the Thrums window; also, there is a window viewpoint as yet scarcely expressed—that of the boy of Stevenson's poems with his nose flattened against the glass; convalescence looking for salormen with one leg. What is "Un Philosophie sous les Toits" but a garret and its prospect? But does Souvestre ever go up on the roof? He contents himself with opening his casement and feeding crumbs to the birds. Not once does he climb out and scramble around the mansard. On wintry nights neither his legs nor thoughts join the windy devils that play westminister overhead. Then, again, from Westminster bridges, from country lanes, from crowded streets, from ships at sea and mountain tops have sonnets been thrown to the moon; not once from the roof.—Yale Review.

Building a House in France.

It is unusual for a house, however small, to be erected in France without the service of an architect, who not only draws the plans, but actually superintends the work. Usually it is he who orders the building material and assures himself that its quality is up to the specifications and requirements. The contractor and his workmen perform their duties in conformity with the architect's orders, and the latter, who is usually a man with capital, advances the funds required in order that the contractor need not wait for payment until the building is completed. Moreover, the French law imposes on the architect a serious responsibility, since he as well as the contractor is responsible for all defects of construction during a period of ten years.

A Flash of Howells' Wit.

In the "Letters of Charles Eliot Norton" is one written by him to Eliot Norton in 1907, in which is this glimpse of Howells with a flash of his quick wit:

"Mr. Howells was with us on Sunday and seemed better than I had expected, considering how poorly he was during the greater part of the winter and spring. Pleasant as he always is, he never was pleasanter, and we had four or five hours of animated talk, by which a vast deal of ground was covered. His humor was delightful as of old. One quick bit of wit is worth preserving. I was speaking to him of Dr. James' new book and said that it was brilliant, but not clear. 'Like his father,' said Mr. Howells, 'who wrote the "Secret of Swedenborg" and kept it.'"

Very Popular.

"She says she had several men running after her at the seaside."

"Ha, ha! So that's what she says, eh?"

"Yes. My, she must have been popular!"

"Well, I hardly call it that. What she means was she came very near drowning one day, and the whole life saving crew ran after her."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Witty Retort.

An Irishman once was traveling in a train with a friend when two very stout ladies entered the carriage. They placed themselves on each side of Pat. "Are you sure you are comfortable, Pat?" the friend asked.

"Sure, I haven't much room to grumble," was the reply.—London Express.

Hopefulness.

Hope springs eternal, and for ten years on a stretch a man can vow every night that the next morning he will arise ten minutes earlier and yet never do it.—Chicago News.

A Fine Distinction.

The fine distinction in the animal kingdom is that the biggest hog gets killed, while the human article goes on and on forever.—Portland Oregonian.

Good Advice.

It is better to be a bluffer than a grouch. Make the world think you are happy whether you are or not.—Manchester Union.

Truth can be outraged by silence quite as cruelly as by speech.

Woman's Love of Jewels.

Even in the stone age woman was fond of jewels. But it was man, the brutal master, who wore them. The heavy necklace that descended upon his breast was the emblem of his superiority and power. Even before he had progressed so far as to cover himself with the skin of the stag he wore a necklace of shells, of teeth of animals or glittering flint. The elegant dame or demoiselle who rolls by in her limousine is not so distant a relative of the cave man as she may try to appear. She likes jewels better than dress since each season we see her more and more bejeweled and less and less clothed. The joy of jewels is of the same infantile quality with the coquette of today that it was in the early barbaric times—a thread of metal upon which are strung some shining pebbles, a thread of silk over which are placed some small round concretions of lime found rolling in the liquid of a diseased oyster!—Le Bresil Economique.

Power of a Great Wave.

The remains of an excursion steamer may be seen in a hayfield 300 feet above the lake of Loen, in Norway. This oddly placed wreck is the sole relic of a terrible landslide which took place in 1906, when the whole side of a mountain suddenly slipped into the lake, raising a great wave more than 300 feet high, which drowned everybody living along the shores, more than sixty people perishing. The steamer, which was moored on the lake at the time, was carried on the crest of the wave over a perpendicular cliff and deposited, as already stated, more than 300 feet above the normal level of the water, more than a quarter of a mile away from its anchorage. It is a torn and battered wreck, every bit of woodwork has been wrenched off, and the twisted steel work testifies to the force of the wave which cast it ashore.—Wide World Magazine.

Bumped the Bishop.

Bishop Montgomery once enjoyed the strangest of episcopal rides. While traveling in China he covered forty-five miles in two days in a wheelbarrow. "Bishop Scott and I," he writes, "were on one barrow; Lancheater followed on a second, the luggage in a third. We did it luxuriously, with three men to each barrow—one in front, one behind on the handles and a third with a rope in front of all. Are there springs to the barrow? Certainly not. It would be no fun if there were. Bumps? Of course. On the first day we calculated we had 25,000 of them—the best were caused by drops of six inches or more from one stone to another. I got quite used to them and found I could sleep stretched luxuriously on my mattress."

The Game of Golf.

On the notice board of a Liverpool golf club, says the Liverpool Post, appear the following verses typewritten on the club notepaper:

Swat the ball and walk a mile. Swat the ball, it's worth your while. Walk a mile and swat the ball. Walk some more. Nor is that all. Swat the ball and walk—what then? Swat the ball and walk again. After that you walk and—what? Once again the ball you swat. Swat the ball and walk still more. Keep on swatting as before. When as far as this you've got Swat and walk, then walk and swat.

Golf, of course, has been defined as a good walk spoiled, and a low comedian once described the game thusly: "You hit a ball as far as you can, and if you find it the same day you have won."

Kean's Suggestion.

When Charles Kean was playing the part of Richard the Third his fearful grimaces almost frightened the other actors out of their wits. One night a new man took the character of the sentinel who awoke Richard. When asked, "Who is there?" he should have taken up the cue with the words: "Tis I, my lord. The village clock hath thrice proclaimed the hour of morn." But Kean's facial contortions threw the sentinel into such a fit of stage fright that he forgot most of his words, stammering, "Tis I, my lord, 'tis I, my lord; the—village cock!" He repeated this three or four times, so that when Kean said, "Then why on earth don't you crow?" the audience was convulsed with laughter.

Something Wrong.

White Diarrhoea Due To Several Causes

What it is—Some Methods Of Prevention.

ROY H. WAITE,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.
So-called white diarrhoea is a symptom of several diseases that affect young chicks during the first few weeks of their lives. There are several causes which are: (1) faulty incubation; (2) faulty brooding; (3) improper feeding; (4) a mold organism (aspergillus fumigatus); (5) a small animal organism (coccidium); (6) a bacterial organism (bacterium pullorum).

WHITE DIARRHOEA.

In birds the normal excretions from the kidneys, which are white in color, are discharged with excretions from the bowels. If from any cause this intestinal excretion is stopped the kidney excretions will be voided alone and be white in color. This explains why the white diarrhoea is present as a symptom of several diseases.

There is no sure method for diagnosing these diseases outside the laboratory, but a careful observer can come close to the diagnosis by considering the history of the case. To determine whether or not the trouble is bacillary diarrhoea is most important. This form of disease is transmitted through the egg from the infected ovaries in the mother hen. Therefore, if the disease occurs quite uniformly in all chicks from certain flocks, no matter how they are raised, bacillary white diarrhoea may be suspected. If on post-mortem examination, the lungs are found spotted, we have a case of aspergillosis caused by mold organism.

Give close attention to correct incubation, brooding, and feeding. In the mold form (aspergillosis) prevent further outbreaks by sterilizing all feed for the first few weeks. This can be done by feeding only cooked feeds or by heating the dry feed in an oven. Keep your brooders clean and disinfected. Keep hatching eggs in a clean place.

For bacillary white diarrhoea, there is no known cure. Sour milk or buttermilk is recommended. The best policy is to renew the breeding stock by getting eggs or stock from some breeder whose flock is free from disease. Never breed from a bird that has white diarrhoea.

The early summer season is the most favorable time of the year to study agriculture and allied subjects at the Maryland Agricultural College. The College Farm with its experimental gardens, orchards, field crops, and fertilizer plots is at its best. These opportunities for first hand study in addition to the outdoor life and the freedom from the care of the school room will make a few weeks spent at your Agricultural College delightful and profitable.

GIVE YOUR TOMATOES A GOOD START.

Aim To Have Strong Stocky Plants That Will Not Wilt When Moved.

J. F. MONROE,
Maryland Agricultural College.

Too many growers fail to realize the value of having stocky, healthy, vigorous plants to transplant in the field. The seed should be sowed thinly in rows four inches wide. The distance apart of the rows will depend upon the method of cultivating them. When the plants are about two inches high, thin them to about two inches apart, being careful to leave only the strong, vigorous plants. This gives the plants plenty of room to grow stocky, and develop a more extensive root system, which enables them to withstand transplanting.

The seed bed should be fertile. Avoid excessive applications of nitrogen, especially Nitrate of Soda or Sulphate of Ammonia, because these materials tend to force a soft growth.

Plants that are growing too rapidly can be pinched back. This will start the growth of lateral branches. It is recommended in cases of extreme growth, rather than as a corrective for a neglected bed of plants or an undesirable condition in growth.

Many have experienced trouble from the flea beetle. Do not dust the plants with lime or other material, because it frequently injures the young seedlings. Spray the plants with 4-4-50 Bordeaux Mixture, to which has been added Arsenate of Lead at the rate of 2 pounds to 50 gallons of water. Keep the young seedlings covered with this spray. It will keep off the flea beetle without injuring the plants, and help to keep them clean and healthy.

Have the seed bed thoroughly wet when removing the plants, water by hand a few hours before if necessary. Never "pull" the plants. Loosen the soil with a spade and remove the plants carefully, in order not to break the small, tender roots. Put the plants in a box or bucket and keep covered from sun and wind as much as possible.

The courses in Domestic Science and Art, and Industrial Hand Work given in the Maryland Agricultural College Summer School are particularly attractive to the women teachers of the State. These courses not only provide useful training for the teachers, but include such work as can be done in elementary and rural schools.

SUFFERING FROM GAPES

ROY H. WAITE,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

The gape worm disease is quite common in many sections, especially where chicks are grown on limited areas. This disease is caused by worms which attach themselves to the walls of the trachea or wind pipe of young birds. Gapes is spread by the chicks getting hold of the worms that have been coughed up or passed through the digestive tract of diseased birds. Each of these worms contains thousands of eggs, every one of which is ready to start up business in a new location. On infected land earthworms are thought to act as carriers of gape worm diseases.

The symptoms of gape worm disease are so characteristic and so easily recognized that they hardly need description. The main symptom is the stretching of the neck and gaping for breath. Preventative measures are the most satisfactory. Where the disease is prevalent, change the runs frequently. If possible grow chicks on a new patch each year and cultivate the old runs when not in use. Where this cannot be readily done, heavy liming of the soil, say a bushel to 20 square feet, might be tried to advantage.

Keep chicks off of the ground when it is wet and earthworms are at the surface. Isolate all affected chicks to keep them from spreading the disease and treat them with the help of a horse hair, feather, or blue grass blade. A feather is quite satisfactory

SUFFERING FROM GAPES.

Strip off the vane, leaving it feathered about one inch at the tip. Dip this in coal oil or turpentine and insert it in the windpipe giving it a twisting movement when withdrawing it. This will loosen the worms so that they can be coughed up.

What shall I have the children do at recess? What kind of entertainment can I give that will interest the entire neighborhood? How can I raise money for beautifying the school room? The summer school courses at the Maryland Agricultural College will help you solve these problems.

THE PEA LOUSE SHOULD BE CHECKED.

It Often Stands In the Way Of Making a Successful Pea Crop.

T. B. SYMONS,
Maryland Agricultural College.

This insect often stands between success and failure in a pea crop. Last season, particularly, it was the cause of failure in many crops of peas.

The insect can be controlled if the grower watches his crop and commences spraying immediately upon the first appearance of the pest. The pea lice increase enormously in a short period, therefore, growers should be ready to spray the vines with Black Leaf, a tobacco decoction, diluted at the rate of one part of the solution to 500 parts of water, when the first lice appear.

An eight per cent. Kerosene Emulsion will also control the insect if Blackleaf is not at hand. Also strong soap solution would be effective, but every pea-grower should have Blackleaf on hand.

Peas on the field can best be sprayed with a three or four row traction sprayer, as the first lice will appear probably before the vines fall down. A barrel sprayer can also be used for the work if necessary.

By all means watch the patch and catch the first generation of lice.

Canners who have peas grown under contract should have their representatives assist the growers in combating this pest. It will pay.

HOW TO TELL VALUE OF LIME.

Is Determined By the Kind Used and the Amount Of Impurities In It.

W. E. HANGER,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

The relative value of the different forms of lime depends upon the amount of calcium they contain. When all materials are pure we have the following comparison giving the kind of lime and the possible percentage of calcium:

Burnt lime, stone or oyster shells. 100
Hydrated lime 75
Ground lime stone or oyster shells. 50

Therefore, it follows that the prices at the quarry or kiln for hydrated lime and ground lime stone or oyster shells should be given in the last two columns in the accompanying table, where burnt lime of good quality can be bought for the price indicated in the first column. The price, per ton:

	Ground Lime.	Hydrated Limestone or Lime.	Oyster Shells
Burnt Lime.	$2.75	$2.09	$1.54
	3.00	2.28	1.68
	3.50	2.66	1.96
	4.00	3.04	2.24
	5.00	3.80	2.80
	6.00	4.56	3.36
	7.00	5.32	3.92

Agricultural lime is a very indefinite term and might be applied to any of the above forms, but is usually applied to the hydrated lime put on the market in bags ready for spreading on the land. It contains nothing that makes it of more value for crops than any other form of lime.

CREAGERSTOWN SWEEP BY FIRE

OVER HALF OF VILLAGE BURNED

Stores, Hotels, Opera House Gone.—Change of Wind at Height of Fire Only Thing That Saved What Remains of Town.

Creagerstown, a village of 200 inhabitants ten miles South of Emmitsburg, was nearly wiped out on Tuesday by a fire which raged four hours. A sudden change in the wind when the flames were at their worst saved all that is left of the place.

Without fire protection and with only wells and cisterns to depend upon, the townspeople had to stand by and watch the fire as it leaped from one building to another, laying in ashes everything in its path. Crowds from Woodsboro, Walkersville, Thurmont, Emmitsburg, and other nearby towns assisted the villagers in removing personal effects beyond the danger zone.

Every house in the town was emptied of its furniture and barely enough houses are left to shelter those who lost their homes in the conflagration. When the fire broke out the townspeople formed a bucket brigade to fight the flames. It spread so rapidly that attention was turned to removing personal effects from the houses. In a number of cases only few household goods were saved. The damage will reach between $55,000 and $60,000, with less than one-third insurance.

The fire originated in the boiler room of the Creagerstown creamery and spread to the town hall. It next burned the house and outbuildings of Benjamin Bell, and then made a sweep of the storehouse and barn of Robert L. Ogle.

From the Ogle property the fire leaped across the street. Word was sent to Frederick for assistance and the Independent steamer was placed on a flat car on the Thurmont division of the Hagerstown and Frederick Electric Road and a fast run made to Thurmont. At the latter place, however, it was not unloaded because of lack of water at Creagerstown. The fire continued to burn on both sides of the street until a change of wind halted it.

By this time it was in striking distance of the Winebrennerian and Lutheran Churches on the West and the public school on the east side of the street.

The village presented a sorry spectacle when the blaze died out. Every business place was burned and no provisions or clothing could be bought. The churches and school house are filled with what was saved from the doomed buildings and a number of persons found shelter in them.

An unfortunate feature of the fire is lack of insurance. Several persons will lose practically every cent they have accumulated in years. The town is next to the oldest settlement in the county and consists of one street running the length of the village.

THE TIME LOCK

By CHARLES EDMONDS WALK

Author of "The Silver Blade," "The Paternoster Ruby," etc.

(Copyright 1912 by A. C. McClurg & Co.)

SYNOPSIS.

Book I.

CHAPTER I—Rudolph Van Vechten, a young man of leisure, is astonished to see a man enter No. 1313, a house across the street from the Bowdoin club. The house has long been unoccupied and is spoken of as the House of Mystery.

CHAPTER II—Several persons at regular intervals enter No. 1313.

CHAPTER III—Van Vechten expresses concern to his friend, Tom Phinney, regarding the whereabouts of his cousin and fiancée, Paige Carew. A fashionably attired woman is seen to enter the House of Mystery. A man is forcibly ejected from the house. Van Vechten and Tom follow the man and find him dead in the street.

CHAPTER IV—Van Vechten is attracted by the face of a girl in the crowd of onlookers surrounding the body. Later he discovers the girl gazing at him with a look of scorn from the windows of the mysterious house.

CHAPTER V—Detective Flint calls on Van Vechten to get his version of the tragedy.

CHAPTER VI—Tom Phinney goes alone on a yachting trip. He recognizes among some persons in a passing motor boat two men whom he had seen enter the House of Mystery. He sees one of them, a Mr. Callis, on shore later and follows him. Tom is seized, blindfolded and taken to a house. He hears a girl named Jessie, evidently the daughter of the man in authority, question his captors. A sweet-voiced girl later protests against the roughness of his captors.

Book II.

CHAPTER I—Van Vechten calls on his uncle, Theodore Van Vechten, big man in Wall street and known as the "Man from Rome." In search of information regarding the whereabouts of Paige Carew.

CHAPTER II—Detective Flint shows Van Vechten a gold mesh purse found in the House of Mystery. Van recognizes it as belonging to Paige Carew.

CHAPTER III—The sweet-voiced girl helps Tom Phinney escape, but refuses to disclose her identity. Tom declares he will meet her again.

CHAPTER IV—Detective Flint tells Van Vechten he has a theory that Paige has been kidnaped. Van goes to lay the case before his uncle.

CHAPTER V—Messages are sent to Europe in an effort to trace Paige. Tom tells Van Vechten he is in love and relates his adventure.

CHAPTER VI—A message from London reports that two ladies resembling Miss Carew and her companion, Mrs. Devereaux, sailed for New York some time previously. A reward of $2,500 is offered.

CHAPTER VII—It develops that the ladies visited the English home of Temple Bonner, owner of the House of Mystery. Flint has a theory that they are connected with the mystery of No. 1313.

CHAPTER VIII—It is recalled that Temple Bonner was in love with a daughter of Compton Schuyler, who married Max Willard. The other daughter married a man named Devereaux. Bonner and Willard were intimate friends. A search is started for Willard.

CHAPTER IX—Van Vechten enters the House of Mystery by the back door in time to hear John Callis threaten a girl. He interferes and helps the girl escape, but is rendered unconscious in the struggle with Callis.

Book III.

CHAPTER I—Tom Phinney gets a job as master of Brownlow's yacht Kohinur which has been chartered for some mysterious mission.

CHAPTER II—The charterer and his friends board the yacht at night and Tom hears the voice of the unknown girl and also of a man involved in his adventure of a few nights previous.

CHAPTER III.

The Kohinur's Charterer.

Is it to be wondered at that for the rest of the night Tom remained in a state of such feverish excitement that he forgot to sleep? Here, in the most amazing manner imaginable, he and the girl once more were thrown together—and, too, under circumstances that not only promised the most delightful sort of intimacy, but were not likely soon to be terminated. An unwanted light shone in his eyes, and his tanned jaw settled into lines of determination that were not without a degree of grimness.

"What's the use!" he morosely growled. "She'll have nothing to do with me. I made seventeen different kinds of fool of myself Monday night when she got me out of that dark room. . . . Unless she realizes that a scrape like that is enough to turn any fellow's head."

And this led him to ruminating on the strangeness of his adventure, and to a consideration of the rest of the party, which he indulged briefly only because he remembered how inexplicably their doings had become identified with Miss Carew's disappearance—for undoubtedly they were the same people who had inhabited Number 1313—and how greatly Ruddy was interested in their movements. This reflection sobered him completely.

Should he not at once notify Mr. Flint? Did the allegiance he had only today assumed outweigh the obligations of a life-long friendship?

Here was a problem that was a little too much for Tom to decide off-hand, and he began to be conscious of a vague, growing sense of doubt and misgiving. He began to perceive the possibility of future complications that would keep him floundering helplessly in all sorts of predicaments; either interference or non-interference by him might be the occasion for any amount of future regret and lasting remorse and mental suffering, but he had arrived at the decision before turning in, that, considering everything, he should be filled with a sense of gratitude for the fortuitous chance that had moved him to call on Brownlow.

Captain Phinney was again astir long before sunrise. He took it upon himself to see that the decks had such a scrubbing down, the brasswork and glass such a polishing, as, in all probability, they had never before received. He had himself well in hand now, and every man-jack aboard recognized in the calm, forceful individual who directed so concisely what was to be done, a skipper who thoroughly understood his business and whose orders were to be obeyed with prompt thoroughness.

So, at four bells of the morning watch—or six o'clock by land time—when he and the Girl came unexpectedly face to face, outwardly Tom was perfectly composed, though his heart straightway commenced a mad pounding, and he was filled with a conviction that a sudden unaccountable difficulty in his breathing was going to make him speak as if a tremolo stop had been pulled out in his vocal apparatus. Every minute detail of his wildest imaginings respecting her beauty was so much more than confirmed that for a moment he could only stand and stare.

For one thing, she was younger than he had believed; she could not have been more than twenty—nineteen, he decided. Her complexion was of the velvety, creamy sort, tinted high upon the cheeks with the faintest rose pink, that matches nothing as well as hazel eyes and that beautiful shade of hair that is too dark to be red and too light to be brown, and which novelists have so frequently described as Titian that the word has almost ceased to have a meaning.

But without character the most flawless features in the world are like unto a hollow mask; the girl's face was instinct with character, with courage and resolution, the fine hazel eyes aglow with intelligence under their long dark lashes. In short, her whole vivid personality was full of a charm and witchery that might well transform to wine the blood in Youth's veins.

This vision, it must be understood, burst upon Tom all at once; he had no time to linger over details, for in a flash her expressive countenance mirrored a multitude of emotions, and he was looking not only into the finest eyes that had ever met his, but into a pair of extremely startled eyes as well. Next the girl's lips parted, and she recoiled with a gasp of sheer astonishment.

And now must be recorded of Tom one of the nicest things it has been privileged thus far to say of him; it was really a pity that Van Vechten could not have been present to applaud. He looked uncommonly handsome and natty in his fresh white-cloth uniform; and his cap, with the anchors and the words "Kohinur" and "Captain" thereon all in heavy gold braid, was very becoming to him. All at once he became acutely aware of the boldness and ardor of his gaze, and lowering his eyes, he whipped off the cap and bowed low to the astonished young lady.

"I told you," said he exultantly, "that I would know you anywhere."

And that one little speech, when she came to ponder over it, would be found to contain more of genuine compliment than he might ever hope to impress upon her in a lifetime of assurances.

She was still too dumfounded, however, to note his words. Her regard darted from his face to his cap and uniform and back to his face again. Then, mechanically, she half-turned away as if she would flee.

But Tom checked this impulse. He was now standing erect, his arms folded across his broad chest, one hand still holding the cap. He smiled and said easily:

"Seems as though I'm always to scare you. Please don't run away. Anyhow, stay long enough to tell me what's so fierce about my looks. Won't you?"

For a moment longer their eyes held one another's, hers still alive with bewildering amazement; but quickly these expressions died away, and she recovered her poise as quickly as it had been routed. Her cheeks flushed prettily, and she laughed.

"You!" she exclaimed. "Of all persons! Captain—Captain Phinney! If it isn't the strangest thing—but, no," she broke off, "it is not so very remarkable after all. You—"

She stopped with an abruptness that passed unnoticed by Tom. Unable longer to repress some expression of his joy, however veiled it might be, he said:

"It is remarkable, though. It's the rippingest thing I ever heard of—that I should have found you again, you know—that I should be standing here talking to you, like this."

"But," he went on quickly, seeing that this aspect of the matter was not altogether acceptable, "I—believe me—I have not been trying to find you. Not that I didn't want to—I mean, I had no idea you were to be here. My presence is perfectly legitimate—" face and eyes, "that my presence is not?"

"Say!" Tom earnestly protested. "Please don't talk like that. It's hard enough for me to make myself clear under the best conditions; if you go to taking me up sharp that way I'll make a mess of it."

"Here's the way of it. Old Brownlow—know him? Rum old sport—Brownlow wanted a skipper for his yacht; I applied for the job"—he grew more and more nervous as he proceeded under the level regard—"he hired me; and here I am. Do you get me?"

For a long moment she studied his face; then her lashes lowered a trifle, her cheeks dimpled, and she replied with a delightful low-voiced demureness:

"I get you."

Tom indulged in a tremendous sigh of relief. For the first time hope mounted high in his bosom that, after all, their relations were going to start upon a friendly footing.

But before he had time to ask a question that rose to his lips, an interruption came. Turning at the sound of a footstep, he was in a measure prepared to confront the supposititious old servant of Number 1313. The man's face, shot and crisscrossed with a network of fine wrinkles, was beardless and as lifeless as a death-mask. But not so the piercing black eyes; here at once the younger man recognized an extraordinary personality, one that affected him powerfully, even to forgetting his resentment at the intrusion.

The man handed him an envelope with an uttered word or two of explanation: "From Mr. Brownlow. I am the charterer."

And then Tom all at once remembered where he had perviously heard this familiar voice. Last Monday night, when he stood blindfolded in the mysterious Long Island house, he had met the man Callis' insolent catechism with a profane retort, and the bearer of Brownlow's note had cautioned him that there were ladies present.

The contents of the sheet, which Tom had open in a jiffy, were brief and were taken in by him at a glance. His immediate stupefaction at their purport he voiced in tones of awe.

"Well—I'll be—" he began, but quickly checked himself and looked up to find the piercing eyes steadily regarding him.

"And so," he concluded, "you are Max Willard!"
