WESTERN MARYLAND RAILWAY COMPANY LAYS MORE TRACKS

Starts Work On Improvements To Facilitate Growing Traffic -Six New Sidings.

In line with the plan of President Carl R. Gray to provide adequate facilities for handling the increase in traffic expected in the future, the Western Maryland Railway Company has awarded the contract for the construction of six passing sidings between Westminster and Sabillasville. Several of the sidings are in Frederick county. The work of grading has been started.

The stretch between the two points is a busy portion of the main stem of the Western Maryland, and President Gray feels that the passings which he is providing at this time will greatly relieve traffic conditions and permit the handling of a larger volume of business.

There is no doubt but that President Gray will double track every mile of that will have to come gradually. In months past making surveys. The Oil That Puts "Velvet" in Your Motor

Here is the solution of your lubricating problems-you who own motor cars:

The oil that enables you to "turn 'er over" easily; "Cushions" the moving parts of your car against wear or strain; Works equally well in summer and winter, because of its sturdy texture; Gives far greater mileage for each gallon;

Is free from solid matter-will not gum; Contains no free carbon, does not "coke" in the cylinders or foul your spark plugs; the slight amount of residue being carried off in the exhaust; The oil that has the body to seal tight the clearance of the pistons and to give the entire torce of the explosion to the running of the car; The increased-mileage, increased-power oil, is WHITE STAR EXTRA QUALITY MOTOR OIL

The three years experience of The Ford Motor Company is summed up in the following letter:

"After careful experiments and tests, we have adopted your White Star Extra Quality Lubricating Oil here at the factory and for use and sale at our branch houses as best adapted for our cars (Signed) FORD MOTOR CO."

The report of Mrs. Hiram L. Spicer, who was appointed by the Governor as Chairman of a committee to organize a unit of the International Red Cross Society, aroused much enthusiasm. Mrs. Spicer stated that, since the initial five innings of the game were played in meeting on April 12th., members, in a drizzling rain and the contest was large numbers, have assembled every stopped at the end of the seventh to Monday at Corpus Christi Hall, from 10 allow the visitors to catch a train. to 5 o'clock, to engage in the work of preparing hospital supplies of clothing, etc. She further stated that classes were being organized, among members of the Chapter, in first aid, surgical dressing, and dietetics.

At the close of the report, a motion was unanimously adopted to appropriate the amount of $200 towards the work of the Red Cross unit, part of which amount will be applied to furnish a number 2 base hospital box, containing full equipments for nine patients.

Enthusiastic interest is sustained in the work being done by members of the Chapter who are cooperating with the Government Military Census Bureau, on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, the weekly contribution of time aggregating twenty hours. On Tuesday, the banner day, upwards of sixty members engage in the work.

Mrs. Scrivener has received assurances of the cordial appreciation of officials of the Bureau. in acknowledgment of the valuable services being rendered by our Maryland Alumnae.

Gives Warning That Dividends May Cease.

Arthur W. Thompson, vice president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, in charge of traffic, gave a warning to all railroad stockholders that, unless financial relief is afforded by an increase in freight rates, dividends will cease.

Mr. Thompson went so far as to say that during the past three months the Baltimore and Ohio Company has not earned dividends on its common stock, and only in part on its preferred stock. The undesirable condition of the finances of the railroad companies, he said, is due to the enormous increases in the cost of materials, including fuel and

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertil-ity and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the produc-tion of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scotch-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.—Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

A SERIOUS PROPOSITION.

In communities out of touch with the preparations being made at the seat of government the tendency seems to be to regard the world war into which the United States has been drawn as one not really to be taken very seriously. Preparedness is, of course, wise, but after all this country will not be called upon to take a very active part. The opinion, expressed in street corner discussion, is "I don't think it will amount to much." But there is invariably a question following-"do you?"-showing that the wish is father of the thought. After all there is a doubt and the questioner mentally whistles to keep up his courage.

HOW TO SECURE A UNIFORM STAND

IMPORTANCE OF GRADING SEED CORN IS EXPLAINED BY AN EXPERT.

PROPERPLANTINGIMPORTANT

County Demonstration Agents Urge Care In Planting To Avoid Labor Waste.

College Park, April 26 .- The Maryland Agricultural Extension Service through its county demonstration agents is encouragaing every effort on the part of farmers to secure uniform stands of corn during the coming season. Following the discussions of the importance the proper selection of seed and the preparation of the seed bed, W. B. Kemp, specialist in crops for the Extension Service, is furnishing county demonstration agents with instructions on the proper planting of corn for their boys' club members. He says:

Grading The Seed.

"An important step toward securing a uniform stand is to grade the corn. If a planter is used, grading is very important because grains which vary in size and shape will not drop with regularity. Then too, uniform seed will probably cause a greater uniformity in the crop and it may be easier to select a sample for the fall corn show and for seed the following year. To do this, shell off and discard the non-uniform kernels at butt and tip of ear. Next shell into a separate basin or other convenient receptacle, the corn remaining on each ear and pour together only the corn from those ears, the grains of which are uniform in size and shape. Thus, your corn will gradually be brought nearer to the type desired.

Rate Of Planting.

"If the rows are three and one-half feet apart, the corn should be planted so that the stand may be thinned to one stalk for each 12 to 18 inches of row. If the corn is checked, or planted so that it can be cultivated both ways, this is equivalent to about three stalks per hill. Remember that better results will generally be obtained by planting too thick and then thinning to the stand desired, than by being compelled after the corn comes up, to replant thin or missing places. Poor soil will not generally permit such thick planting as rich soil, and a thick stand on sandy land will suffer more quickly from dry weather than the same stand on a field that is moderately stiff.

"Checked corn can be kept clean with less labor than corn which is cultivated only one way, and the difference in yield from the two methods of planting is slight, therefore, unless the ground is steep or entirely free from weeds and grass, check planting is generally preferred. Depth Of Planting.

The seed bed, season and character of soil will all help to regulate the depth to which corn should be planted. Sandy soil permits deeper planting than clay soil and dry weather permits deeper planting than wet weather. Always plant the grain deep enough so that it will be in contact with moist soil, yet shallow enough so that the service, which may be six to eight sprouts can be sent to the surface without difficulty. Generally a depth of about one and one-half inches is one that can be recommended.

Time To Plant.

"The more nearly your corn can use the full spring and summer in growth, the greater chance it has to produce a heavy crop. Therefore, early planting is desirable. If it is planted too early, however, there is danger of a set back and Joss of some of the plants in the cold spells which are apt to follow planting. If there is any one rule that can be given, it is to plant about a week after the first corn in your section is usually planted."

FEEDING YOUNG CHICKS.

College Park, April 26 .- In directions furnished to the members of boys' agricultural clubs engaged in profitable poultry growing, Poultryman Roy H. Waite of the Maryland Experiment Station offers the following rations for growing chicks:

FARMING AND LIVE STOCK

SELECTING BROOD SOWS.

Points That Indicate Fecundity and Good Constitution.

Prospective brood sows should be selected from the best animals in the herd, always taking those whose mothers are gentle, good milkers and prolific, writes a correspondent of the American Agriculturist. The sow should have a smoother forehead and lighter, finer neck than the male. The forehead should be broad between the eyes, the throat clean and trim, neck moderately thin, shoulders smooth and deep, the back wide and straight and deeply fleshed with ribs well sprung; sides straight and deep, hams deep and well rounded, body rather long, but compact, and legs moderately short and strong. Select those with wide, deep chests and well sprung ribs, as it indicates strong constitution, a very important essential with good brood sows. It is not the fat, plump sows of the herd that make the best mothers, but rather the long bodied, more vigorous ones which show quality and have good grazing and feeding powers. Brood sows should not be overrefined

The successful breeder will never change an old sow for a young gilt until he is obliged to. The former will give two good litters annually, one early in the spring and the other in September or October. Handle the brood sows carefully at all times and keep them as gentle as possible. The picture shows mature brood sow with litter.

and delicate, as it is apt to lead to a weak constitution and possibly sterility. Previous to farrowing the main demands upon a brood sow are those for building up new tissue. This means there should be plenty of protein in the ration, secured by feeding nitrogenous feeds. A few days previous to farrowing change to a sloppy food and bulky in character, like bran, and do not feed overgenerously. This will assist in avoiding constipation, so likely to occur at farrowing time and soon after. A box of charcoal, salt and ashes should be kept where they can get at it at all times summer or winter. A farmer who gives sows access to this mixture and varies the ration occasionally, providing sufficient protein, will not be troubled with sows eating

Immediately after farrowing feed the a little more nutritive food can be for the demands upon her at this time, if she has a good litter, are heavy, and there is nothing more important in the swine business than giving the youngsters a good start.

A good breeding sow should be kept in the herd as long as she gives good Remedy For Cowpox.

Cowpox is a highly infectious disease and must run its course. It is easily spread among animals, and even man may become infected if the discharge gets into a fresh wound on the bands, in which case regular vaccination, the same as for smallpox, results. Bathe udder twice a day with a warm 5 per cent solution of creolin and when dry apply a little carbolated vaseline Affected animals should be milked and cared for after the others to avoid infecting healthy ones. The hands should also be washed in the creolin solution after working with them. It is well to separate the diseased ones entirely from the healthy to prevent spreading.

Rest For the Cow.

To give the calf and its mother a fair chance a cow should be carefully dried off six weeks before the date of calving. This allows her to feed well her unborn calf and to get ready for her period of milk production.-Wisconsin Agricultural College.

Cream of Carrot Soup.-The soup is made from one cupful of leftover stewed carrots, two cupfuls of rice stock and one cupful of milk. Mash the carrots through strainer, add the rice stock, put on to boil and when boiling add the milk and one tablespoonful of flour mixed with a little cold water. Boil five minutes, add a little parsley and seasoning to taste.

Bean Porridge Hot .- After the beans are parboiled ready for baking save out two cupfuls; cut one-quarter pound pork into dice and stew with the beans until one-half hour before dinner. The water should just cover the beans. When done add one cupful milk and lump of butter, or one cupful cream if you have it.

Excellent Clam Soup .- One quart of milk, four small potatoes cut into small dice and boiled in water until soft; then drain, add milk and when it comes to a boil add twenty-five clams chopped fine. Stir occasionally, as it burns quickly. In the meantime cream one tablespoonful of butter and one of flour together and stir in soup until all is dissolved. Add chopped parsley, pep per and salt to taste. This is delicious and can be made quickly.

Parsnip Soup .- For parsnip soup boil three washed and pared parsnips until tender; then put them through a sieve and return to the water in which they were boiled. There should be just enough to cover them. Add the same quantity of milk Season with salt and pepper, and to each pint of milk add two tablespoonfuls of flour rubbed smooth in a little cold milk. Cook until the mixture is smooth. Serve with croutons and minced parsley.

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving rememberance of our dear little Harry Glenn Harbaugh.

Little feet that once kicked covers Though they never walked at all, Little arms that once reached for us And embraced us at our call Little eye that beamed forth sunshine, Little dimples in his chin, Waxen curls around his forehead God has found a place for him. Two cute lips that whispered "Papa," Showing rows of pearly white, Filled our hearts with intold gladness; All is still and sad tonight. For they placed him in his casket With a lily in his hand, While his little soul was fleeting To God in that promised land. Near His mercy seat in heaven God has found for him a home. And released him from his suffering. And with the angels now he'll roam COMPOSED BY HIS GRANDMOTHER.

Girls Have Pretty Face And Beautiful Complexion

An Atlanta man makes new discovery that makes an old face look years younger. If your skin is dark, brown, or covered with freekles or blemishes, just use a little Cocotone Skin Whitener; it's made with cocoanut oil and is perfectly harmless. A few days' use will improve your looks 100%. The wornout skin comes off evenly, leaving no evidence of the treatment, the new healthy under-skin appearing as a lovely new complexion.

Just ask your druggist for an ounce of Cocotone Skin Whitener, and if he will not supply you send twenty-five cents to The Cocotone Co., Atlanta, Ga., and they will send you a box by return mail.

If your hair is hard to comb, is kinky, nappy and will never stay straight, just use Cocotone Hair Dressing and it will become straight, long, soft, glossy and beautiful in a few days. Mail orders filled 25c. for large box.

The Man Without A Country

By EDWARD EVERETT HALE

NOW, when the fire of American patriotism flares again from the rocky headlands of Maine to the golden beaches of California, is the time to read anew this "prose epic of American patriotism.

As a story it holds the interest; as a lesson in love of country it has thrilled the American heart for half a century. There are now, thank God, but few Philip Nolans among us, men who "wish they may never hear of the United States again!"

This famous story, which will rank forever first among America's appeals to patriotism, should be read and reread for its own sake and for the inspiration it brings.

Take us home, take us to our own country, take us to our own house, take us to our own pickaninnies and

PART II.

OLAN must have been in every sea and yet almost never on land. He told me once, with a grave smile, that no man in the world lived so methodical a life as he. "You know the boys say I am the Iron Mask, and you know how busy he He said it did not do for any one to try to read all the time more than to do anything else all the time. but that he read just five hours a day. "Then," he said, "I keep up my notebooks, writing in them at such and such hours from what I have been reading, and I include in them my scrapbooks." These were very curious indeed. He had six or eight, of different subjects. There was one of history, one of natural science, one which he called "odds and ends." But they were not merely books of extracts from newspapers. They had bits of plants and ribbons, shells tied on and carved scraps of bone and wood, which he had taught the men to cut for him. and they were beautifully illustrated.

Till he grew very old, he always went aloft a great deal. He always kept up his exercise, and I never heard that he was ill. If any other man was ill he was the kindest nurse in the world. and he knew more than half the sur geons do. Then if anybody was sick or died, or if the captain wanted him to on any other occasion, he was always ready to read prayers. I have remarked that he read beautifully.

My own acquaintance with Philip Nolan began six or eight years after the war, on my first voyage after l was appointed a midshipman. It was in the first days after our slave trade treaty, while the reigning house, which was still the house of Virginia, had still a sort of sentimentalism about the suppression of the horrors of the Middle Passage, and something was sometimes done that way. I first came to understand anything about "the man without a country" one day when we overhauled a dirty little schooner which had slaves on board. An officer was sent to take charge of her, and after a few minutes he sent back his boat to ask that some one might be sent him who could speak Portugues We were all looking over the rail when the message came, and we all wished we could interpret when the captain asked who spoke Portuguese. But none of the officers did, and just as the cap tain was sending forward to ask if any of the people could, Nolan stepped out and said he should be glad to interpre if the captain wished, as he understood the language. The captain thanked him, fitted out another boat with him. and in this boat it was my luck to go

When we got there it was such scene as you seldom see and never want to. Nastiness beyond account. and chaos run loose in the midst of the nastiness. The negroes were, most of them, out of the hold and swarming all round the dirty deck, with a central throng surrounding Vaughan and addressing him in every dialect and patois of a dialect, from the Zulu click up to the Parisian of Beledeljereed.

As we came on deck Vaughan looked his, which I never abused, for I never down from a hogshead on which he had mounted in desperation and said; "For God's love, is there anybody who can make these wretches under stand something?" Nolan said he could speak Portu guese and one or two fine looking Kroomen were dragged out, who, as it had been found already, had worked for the Portuguese at Fernando Po.

"Tell them they are free." said Vaughan, "and tell them that these rascals are to be hanged as soon as we can get rope enough.'

Nolan explained it in such Portuguese as the Kroomen could understand and they in turn to such of the negroes as could understand them. Then there was such a yell of delight. clinching of fists, leaping and dancing. kissing of Nolan's feet and a genera rush made to the nogshead by way of spontaneous worship of Vaughan as the deus ex machina of the occasion. "Tell them," said Vaughan, well pleased, "that I will take them all to Cape Palmas."

This did not answer so well. Cape Palmas was practically as far from the homes of most of them as New Orleans or Rio Janeiro was-that is, they would be eternally separated from home there. And their interpreters, as we could understand. instantly said, "Ah, non Palmas," and began to propose infinite other expedients in most voluble tanguage. Vaughan was rather disappointed at this result of his liberality and asked Nolan eagerly what they said. The drops stood on poor Nolan's white forehead as he hushed the men down, and said:

letter the nonprofessional reader should remember that after 1817 the position of every officer who had Nolan in charge was one of the greatest delicacy The government had failed to

at last, and a country.

What was a man to do? Should he let him go? What, then, if he were called to account by the department for violating the order of 1807? Should be keep him? What, then, if Nolan should be liberated some day and should bring an action for false imprisonment or kidnaping as ainst every man who had had him in charge? The secretary always said, as they so often do at Washington, that there were no spe-cial orders to give and that we must act on our own judgment.

Here is the letter:

Levant, 2° 2" S. @ 131° W.

Dear Fred-1 try to find heart and life to tell you that it is all over with dear old Nolan. The doctor had been watching him very carefully and yesterday morning came to me and told me that Nolan was not so well and had not left his stateroom, a thing I never remembered before. He had let the doctor come and see him as he lay there, the first time the doctor had been in the stateroom, and he said he should like to see me. Oh, dear, do you remember the mysteries we boys used to invent about his room in the old Intrepid days? Well. I went in, and there, to be sure, the poor fellow lay in his berth, smiling pleasantly as he gave me his hand, but looking very frail. I could not help a glance round, which showed me what a little shrine he had made of the box he was lying in. The stars and stripes were triced up above and around a picture of Washington, and he had painted a majestic eagle, with lightnings blazing from box he was lying in. The stars and stripes were triced up above and around a picture of Washington, and he had painted a majestic eagle, with lightnings blazing from his beak and his foot just clasping the whole globe, which his wings overshadowed. The dear old boy saw my glance and said, with a sad smile, "Here, you see, I have a country." And he pointed to the foot of his bed, where I had not seen before a great map of the United States as he had drawn it from memory and which he had there to look upon as he lay. Quaint, queer old names were on it in large letters. "Oh, Danforth," he said, "I know I am dying. I cannot get home. Surely you will tell me something now—stop, stop! Do not speak till I say what I am sure you know—that there is not in this ship, that there is not in America—God bless her!—a more loyal man than I. There cannot be a man who loves the old There cannot be a man who loves the old flag as I do or prays for it as I do or hopes for it as I do. There are thirty-four hopes for it as I do. There are thirty-four stars in it now, Danforth. I thank God for that, though I do not know what their names are. There has never been one taken away. I thank God for that. I know by that that there has never been any successful Burr. Oh, Danforth, Danforth," he sighed out, "tell me—tell me something—tell me everything. Danforth, before I die."

so. And they all fell to kissing him and back, he beckoned me down into our boat. As we lay back in the stern sheets and the men gave way, he said shall I begin?"

Oh, the blessed smile that crept over his white face! And he pressed my hand and said: "God bless you! Tell me their names," he said, and he pointed to the stars on the flag.

Well, I told him the names in as good order as I could, and he bade me take down his beautiful map and draw them in as I best could with my pencil. He was wild with delight about Texas; told me how his brother died there. He had marked a gold cross where he supposed his brother's grave was, and he had guessed at Texas. Then he was delighted as he saw California and Oregon. That, he said, he had suspected partly because he had never been permitted to land on that shore, though the ships were there so much. "And the men," said he, laughing, "brought off a good deal besides furs." Then he went back—heavens, how far!—to ask about the Chesapeake and what was done to Barron for surrendering her to the Leopard, and whether Burr words rattled in his throat, "and for that flag," and he pointed to the ship. "never dream a dream but of serving her as she bids you, though the service carry you through a thousand hells. No matter what happens to you, no matter what happens to you, no matter what happens to you, no matter who fletters you or who abuse.

matter what happens to you, no matter who flatters you or who abuses you, never look at another flag, never let a night pass but you pray God to the matter what happens to you, no happens to you, not happens to you, no happens to you, no happens to happens to happens to you, no happens to happens to you, no happ it was a hard thing to condense the history of half a century into that talk with bless that flag. Remember, boy, that behind all these men you have to do with, behind officers and government what I told him of emigration and the means of it, of steamboats and railroads and people even, there is the country and telegraphs, of inventions and books and literature, of the colleges and West Point and the naval school, but with the herself, your country, and that you belong to her as you belong to your own queerest interruptions that ever you heard. You see, it was Robinson Crusoe asking mother. Stand by her, boy, as you would stand by your mother if those all the accumulated questions of fifty-six devils there had got hold of her to-

I remember he asked all of a sudden I remember he asked all of a sudden who was president now, and when I told him he asked if Old Abe was General Benjamin Lincoln's son. He said he met old General Lincoln when he was quite a boy himself at some Indian treaty. I said no; that Old Abe was a Kentuckian, like himself, but I could not tell him of what family. He had worked up from the ranks. "Good for him," cried Nolan. "I am glad of that. As I have brooded and I was frightened to death by his calm, hard passion, but I blundered out that I would, by all that was holy. and that I had never thought of doing anything else. He hardly seemed to hear me, but he did, almost in a whis per, say, "Oh, if anybody had said so ranks. "Good for him," cried Noian. I am glad of that. As I have brooded and wondered I have thought our danger was in keeping up those regular successions in the first families." I told him everything I could think of that would show the grandeur of his country and its prosperity. I think it was this half confidence of told this story till now, which after ward made us great friends. He was very kind to me. When we parted

And he drank it in and enjoyed it as I cannot tell you. He grew more and more silent, yet I never thought he was tired or faint. I gave him a glass of water, but he just wet his lips and told me not he was the silent and told me not he was to be a silent was to be silent. than I can tell. I was very glad to meet him again in 1830, and later in life, when I thought I had some influence in Washington, I moved heaven and earth to have him discharged. But it was like getting a ghost out of prison They pretended there was no such man and never was such a man. They will say so at the department now!

There is a story that Nolan met Burronce on one of our vessels, when a party of Americans came on board in the Mediterranean. But this I believe to be a lie; or, rather, it is a myth, well found, involving a tremendous blowing up with which he sunk Burr—asking him how he liked to be "without a country."

After that cruise I never saw Nolan again. I wrote to him at least twice a year, for in that voyage we became even confidentially intimate; but he never wrote fo me. The other men tell me that in those fifteen years he aged very fast. And now it seems the dear old fellow is dead. He has found a home

But in an hour when the doctor went in gently he found Nolan had breathed his life away with a smile. He had some-thing pressed close to his lips. It was his father's badge of the Order of Cina slip of paper at the place where he had marked the text:

"They desire a country even a heavenly: wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city."

On this slip of paper he had written: "Bury me in the sea. It has been my home, and I love it. But will not some one set up a stone for my memory at "He says 'Not Palmas.' He says, renew the order of 1807 regarding him Fort Adams or at Orleans, that my d
