NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE

Don't be surprised if you see Dick Rosensteel and Louis Cooper suddenly become partners in a new enterprise known as R. & C. Liquors. It seems these two good friends applied for a license (and I don't mean a marriage license) very recently at the office of Mr. Trout, License Commissioner for Frederick County.

JOHNNY ON THE SPOT

Got a big bang out of a little incident told me about our one and only Johnny Hollinger, the fire chief, yuh know.

Our John's well known around here for being so punctual in answering calls when the fire alarm sounds off. Really I believe the expression "Johnny on the spot," must have been coined just for him.

Well, to get on with our story—it seems that on this particular day, the siren sounded off and Oldrich Tokar was the first fireman to reach the hall. He climbed aboard the engine and waited for John, who tore in a mere 20 seconds later. Without casting a glance to right or left, back or front, the Chief climbs under the wheel, shouting back over his shoulder: "Everybody ready? Hold Tight." And off he tore. Needless to say the old fire-fighter was flabbergasted upon his arrival at the scene of the conflagration to find "none aboard but good ole Oldy Tokar. . . . Yep, we've a mighty fine Chief in John. . . . His job is to get that fire engine there within a few split seconds after the alarm sounds, with or without men, and that he does. . . . Sometimes with, sometimes without. He never really knows himself if anyone's on until he gets to the fire. . . . A regular old fire-horse is our John, and we're as proud of him as can be.

CLARIFICATION

In last week's Chronicle there appeared a letter to the editor signed, "Disgusted Citizen." The letter concerned the redhot parking meter situation and the writer was very much against installation of the meters. What I especially want to mention is this point. The party concerned is evidently under the impression that she will not be allowed to park in front of her residence when she comes home from work in the evenings and is quite indignant over the idea of having to park her car a number of blocks away in a space that is littered with whisky bottles, etc.

I would like to assure this citizen that parking in front of her home after 6 o'clock won't cost her one red cent since one of the conditions of installing the meters is that they will not be in effect possibly after 6 o'clock. The same applies for Sundays and holidays. . . . It seems like a pretty fair deal to me. . . . All the Town Fathers want to do is use the meters during the business hours, when trading, marketing, etc., are at their peak, so that all persons have a fair chance to park in front of the various stores, for as long as it takes them to conduct their business and move on to make room for the next buyer. Truly I fail to see why any merchant feels antagonistic toward the "timers" at all. Only the private residence owners can feel aggrieved—and then only slightly, because they're only refused parking permission during the business hours of the day. . . . I don't see selfish individuals, but rather we should try to be fair-minded citizens and try to be open-minded where the good of the town itself is at stake. When the citizens are good, then the town in turn is a good one in which to live.

Any of you heard the new Dodge advertising slogan sung on the radio? Something about Larger on the inside, Smaller on the outside, Shorter on the outside, Longer on the inside. "Sa clever little ditty, if I could just figure it out.

The Sodality of the Blessed Virgin of St. Joseph's Catholic Church held its monthly meeting on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Mollie Reynolds. Twenty-one members were present. The president, Mrs. J. Lewis Topper, presided and recited the opening prayer. The treasurer's report stated a balance on hand of $132.47. Local Lions Club Holds Annual Family Night

The Emmitsburg Lions Club held its Annual Family Night on Monday evening, March 14, at 6:15 p. m. in the Lutheran Parish House.

President Herbert Roger welcomed the more than 75 Lions and their guests.

Lion John J. Hollinger was in charge of the program for the evening.

The Rev. Nevin Smith, D. D., of Hanover was the guest speaker of the evening.

Following Rev. Smith's address sound movies were shown by Lion Paul Ausborn of Biglerville. The films gave those attending some serious thought and presented a strong challenge by emphasizing the vital place of the home and family life in the great work of teaching America the way to lasting peace. He said no place can take the place of home and no persons can be substituted for the parents in the fine art of teaching our children.

The next meeting will be held Monday March 28.

What's Your Name?

"What's in a name?" asks James Joyce. "That's what we ask ourselves when we write the name that we are told is ours." This column is an attempt to answer the above question for every resident of Emmitsburg.

In view of St. Patrick's Day, celebrated this week, the following name is chosen in recognition of the Patron Saint of Ireland:

PATTERSON

Emmitsburg has a son of Patrick. That's the meaning of Patterson. This is one of the English forms of the Irish name. In Emmitsburg the honored name of Patterson goes back to the beginning of the community. From thence it goes back to St. Patrick of Ireland. The name itself reaches back to the nobility of ancient Rome called the Patricians. On down through the centuries the name came to be applied to those of noble birth and privilege. St. Patrick lifted the name from its earthly nobility to an exalted spiritual nobility.

The very fact that the birthday of St. Patrick, born more than 1500 years ago, is almost universally celebrated today, clothes the name with a halo of glory seldom equalled in the romance of names.

The name became closely linked to a statement of Jesus: "Love Your Enemies," so well dramatized by Patrick. At the age of 16 he was kidnapped from his British home by the Irish and taken to Ireland and made a slave boy. Eventually he escaped from his captors and returned home. As he pondered over the words of The Master: "Love Your Enemies," he decided to return to Ireland as a missionary to the people who had abducted him. Such a spiritual power did he become, that, according to legend, he expelled the snakes from Ireland.

The name also is linked with the shamrock so widely known and loved and so hallowed in song and story. According to legend, St. Patrick, when preaching the gospel to the benighted inhabitants of early Ireland, used the triple leaf of the shamrock to dramatize the miracle of the Trinity. Thus the shamrock became the national emblem of Ireland.

Therefore, Patterson, meaning the son of Patrick, became, in its Irish ancestor St. Patrick, one of the most popular and hallowed names in Ireland, a very symbol of that country. Also various forms of the name became popular in England, Scotland and many other countries. In America, the name is found, in addition to Patterson, in many other forms. Some of them are Pater, signifying father; Paton, the famed general of World War II; Padrick, Ricky, Patricia, Patsy, Partridge, etc.

DEVILBISS

In place of drawing another name for this week's column, a question, which has been asked, will be answered. It grows out of a reference in this column two weeks ago about derogatory names. The question is "How do you account for the name of Devilbiss?" There are a number of good families in this area by that name. The equivalent of this Irish name in England is Devilyn. Both mean little devil or son of the devil. People have chosen names from the celestial world and called themselves after God, Christ, and the Angels. But it is not likely that one would deliberately choose to name himself after the devil. Such a name is probably derived from a nickname. Not all nicknames are complimentary. Some of them are quite the reverse.

Dear Sir:

The 'Town Fathers' through their spokesman have recently stated that they are against parking meters, but that meters are the only "immediate way to derive revenue to maintain a constabulary in the town." In the absence of an up-to-date financial report (the last one published as far as my information goes, was covering the period from August 15, 1947 to April 15, 1948) I would like to mention a few facts and figures regarding local taxes, past budgets, state contributions to Emmitsburg, etc.

In 1943 total town receipts (which included $1,000 of unusual income—$500 from a loan and $500 from sale of a lot) were $6,767.99. In 1944 total cost of the town government was $4,391.19. In 1945 it cost $5,460.41. The last published statement was for a period of only EIGHT MONTHS instead of 12, but it showed an income of $9,365.02. This is $4,000 more than it took to run the town for 12 months previously. The present Town Fathers have twice as much money AT LEAST, than previous administrations have had.

We would like to see the town financial statement for a full 12 months period. It had been estimated by our State Senator when he told the local Lions Club about the new State tax program, that the town would have at least $11,000 for the fiscal year ending in June, 1948. The Town Fathers reported $9,365.02 in eight months—what about the other four months?

The Town Fathers also state that the funds from the State of Maryland are "earmarked" for different governmental functions. I would like to see them publish a statement showing the funds that they got from the State and just what they were earmarked for. The traders' license fees are not earmarked, are they? In the report as published, they were reported as being $124.26, but the Clerk of the Court can show that if they had reported for the full 12-month period, they would have shown about $1,600 of NOT EARMARKED funds. What more logical place could they spend that $1,600 than toward a policeman's salary? After all, the theory under which the state turned this money over to the town was that the merchants should get police protection and other services from their license fees. The admission tax collected in eight months would raise that total to $1,734.50, with more expected for a full 12 months. This is NOT earmarked and could be used for police. Liquor license fees reported were $463.16, and that is NOT earmarked. That is almost $2,200 right there in funds that are not earmarked and in new funds which the Town Fathers never had before. The town's share of the income tax (which naturally was not received during the eight-month period reported) is NOT earmarked and if the State Budget Estimate Department is correct, the town should get about $550 from that source.

If the spokesman for the town government wants to saddle us with parking meters, he should first make it clear where the present large sums of money received are being spent. It is not enough to SAY there are not enough funds for they have already admitted that in an eight-month period—a period carefully selected by them to show little of several of the state funds given to the town—they received practically double what the town used to have to spend in 12 months. And it is no excuse to say that some of the funds are earmarked. Let them publish a statement showing just what funds are earmarked and what they are being used for. If the Town Fathers play fair and publish a full and accurate statement, it may appear that they have plenty of money not only for a policeman and streets and sewers and lights and water—but we may be able to have a garbage system—all at no additional local tax cost. Before we get parking meters, please show us what money is being received and where it is being spent.

DELEGATES WANT NEW MENTAL CARE SYSTEM SET-UP

Committee Feels 1-Man
Board Could Handle
Institutions Better

Maryland mental hospitals could fare better if run by one man with blanket authority, the General Assembly of Maryland was told this week.

A committee of delegates and senators reported that the present system just hasn't worked.

The commission recommended scrapping the Board of Mental Hygiene and boards of managers of the five state-operated institutions.

In a 100-page document the members said that "fundamental reorganization of the hygiene department is essential in order to raise it to satisfactory levels of service."

"The fact that one or more hospitals are definitely sub-standard in numerous respects indicates to the committee the need for strengthening central responsibility and control," the report stated.

This could be accomplished by giving the commissioner of mental hygiene "full power and responsibility for administration and operation of the five state mental institutions," declared the committee.

Three Gettysburg Burglars Nabbed Here

Three youths were arrested, one at his home in Gettysburg, Pa., early Wednesday and two as they sat in a parked car with two girls in front of a gasoline station south of Emmitsburg, for the burglaries of the Hankey and Plank Garage, York St. Ext., Gettysburg, and Swope's Atlantic Service Station, 150 Carlisle St., Gettysburg, early Monday morning.

AUXILIARY PRESIDENT EXPLAINS SYSTEM OF INVITATIONS

Social Members Are Excluded
At Social Function Of American Legion Auxiliary

An explanation to associate members of Francis X. Elder American Legion Post. It has been called to the attention of the Auxiliary president, Mrs. Laura Rosensteel, that social members are inquiring as to why invitations were not extended to them to the Legion birthday party, which will be held March 25. Wishing to dispel any ill feeling that may have been created in this matter, Mrs. Rosensteel, speaking for the Auxiliary, offers this explanation of the situation:

This affair is being sponsored solely by the Auxiliary and is being held in commemoration of the birthday anniversary of the American Legion. No outside guests have been invited, being only a small unit, the treasury is naturally meager and therefore it would be unable to bear the expense of too expansive an affair, including all members and friends of the post. The Auxiliary is striving to carry out the next best procedure, inviting Legionnaires only. Perhaps next year if our associate members wish to assist the Auxiliary by donations of food etc., the unit would be happy to include these friends in its social functions. If any ladies who are eligible to join the Auxiliary wish to do so before this event, we shall be only too happy to have them. Next year with every-one co-operating, we may have a bigger and nicer party for the Legionnaires' birthday celebration.

All members of the Auxiliary are expected to attend and contribute to the success of the affair and of course, the Legionnaires. Come and enjoy yourselves in an evening of congeniality with the members of your organization. Music for Paul Jones and other dancing will be furnished by the Peeher and Ott boys. Members wishing to play cards may do so.

Surviving are his wife, Mary N. Chief of Police Robert C. Harpster, of Gettysburg, Pa., said those arrested were Floyd Miller Jr., 24, of Carlisle St.; Robert Painter, 19, and Raymond Crouse, 19, all of Gettysburg, Pa. Each of the three were arraigned for hearings Wednesday on two charges of burglary and one of larceny, the latter involving the theft of an automobile allegedly used in the two burglaries.

Painter and Crouse were arrested at 10:50 Tuesday on Payne's Hill, in front of a garage and service station operated by John Denlinger, about 4 miles south of here by Trooper R. M. Ridge of the Maryland State Police and Deputy Sheriffs George Crouse and Paul Keepers of Frederick County.

They were taken to the Frederick County jail in Frederick. Chief Harpster was notified and went to Frederick, where he said Painter and Crouse admitted the robberies and implicated Miller.

The later was arrested at his home by Gettysburg Borough Police Officer Daniel Miller, after being routed out of bed at 4:50 a. m. He was taken to the Adams County jail.

Girl Companions Exonerated

With Painter and Crouse when they were arrested by Maryland authorities were Betty Springer, 17, and her sister, Mary, 14, of Emmitsburg Rt. 2. The two girls were also interrogated, but satisfied authorities that they had no connection with the crimes, and were taken to their homes.

Harpster said that Painter and Crouse told him that Miller stole an automobile owned by Thomas J. Collingsworth, 51 W. Middle St., Gettysburg, from the alley back of Collingsworth's home, about 1:30 a. m. Monday morning, and picked them up at Washington and Chambersburg Sts.

Pair Recounts Story

Harpster said Painter and Crouse told him the following story of the events which followed:

After Miller had picked up Painter and Crouse, the three drove to Swope Service Station, where they used a brace and bit to drill holes in a door and gain entrance. They smashed two pinball machines and took money from them and from the cash drawer amounting to more than $70.

Then the three youths drove to the Hankey and Plank Garage where they jimmied an outside door and bored holes in an office door, and carried out the 500-pound safe and put it in the Collingsworth automobile.

After placing the safe in the rear of the car they drove to Bailey's Hill, on the Table Rock Rd., turned into the woods on the west side of the road, and unloaded the safe. Leaving it hidden in the woods, they returned to Gettysburg, where they dropped Miller.

Painter and Crouse proceeded to Emmitsburg, where they went to the Springer home, and stayed until 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Then they drove into a lane leading to Crouse's father's farm, back of Barlow, and asked Crouse's brother to get them a hammer. The boy went to the house and told his father. The latter told his son not to give them the hammer, and they went to Gettysburg, where they contacted Miller.

Miller went to his father's garage and took a two-pound ball-pen hammer and a chisel. Then the three youths drove to the spot where the safe had been hidden, and proceeded to rip the layer of steel off the door. They chipped the concrete lining out around the tumblers, smashed them, and opened the safe.

SMALL TOWNS CATCHING THEIR STRIDE

There was a time when too many small towns in Maryland simply dozed in the sun. . . . The cities bled them of their youth, and they were marked with dust and decay. In many a small town only a few years ago the inhabitants accepted as fate the decline of both population and prosperity.

Now that period of Maryland happily is over. In scores of our small towns small industries provide payrolls to supplement agricultural income. More young people are remaining at home to enrich their communities by the gift of their courage, strength and ability. The signs of decay are vanishing from many towns whose citizens once thought they could do nothing to stem the cityward tide of young people and, consequently, of prosperity.

Business and civic leaders in our small towns today are as alert and progressive as their contemporaries in the large cities. They are gaining a healthy percentage of business which formerly flowed to cities. They are realizing more and more that a good town is a clean town, bright with paint and green lawns and flowers. They are growing increasingly independent of outside capital and enterprise to launch businesses; they are finding leadership, capital and know-how at home. At the same time, they are trying to induce manufacturers to Maryland, thereby providing jobs and raw material markets. . . .

Nobody loses when community spirit is aroused to the point of doing something to better conditions. We are glad to see less dozing and more doing in the golden sunshine that usually bathes our state.

At the present time Emmitsburg has a housing project under construction which will provide homes for many outsiders that wish to make their residence here in our great little community. The public-spirited citizens behind the Emmitsburg Development are to be commended upon their foresight and effort to achieve a better and more beautiful Emmitsburg.

Two Youths Nabbed Here

Leave Books, Papers

Painter and Crouse said, according to Harpster, that they took the cash, in the neighborhood of $400, but left the automobile firm's books and papers in the safe. These consisted of deeds to the Hankey and Flank property, titles to automobiles, and other firm records.

They then split the loot, Painter and Crouse claiming that they gave Miller more than $200 as his share. They returned to the Table Rock Rd. and back to Gettysburg where Miller got out of the car, and Painter and Crouse returned to Maryland, where they were arrested later with the two girls.

Maryland authorities had their suspicions aroused by report of the actions of Painter and Crouse. They had tried several times to obtain tools to open the safe, Harpster said.

With the arrest of Painter and Crouse, $197.89 of the cash stolen in the two burglaries was recovered. Miller, police said, had only a little more than $1 when he was arrested at his home early Wednesday morning.

Painter and Crouse told Harpster, the latter said, that Miller had approached them and told them that he had "cased the job" three weeks ago, and "had a couple of easy places to bump off."

Harpster returned to Frederick to appear in Frederick County Circuit Court to obtain custody of Painter and Crouse. He was accompanied by Constable George Hughes. Harpster said both youths had agreed to waive extradition. They were taken back to Gettysburg shortly before noon. They said Miller will be arraigned before Justice of the Peace Robert P. Snyder, who signed the warrants.

The bit used in drilling through the doors at the two places was thrown into a garbage can back of an A. and P. store in Hanover, Pa., Harpster said Painter and Crouse told him.

Collingsworth, an electrician, had approximately 850 feet of electric wiring in his automobile, together with electricians' tools, when his car was stolen. Harpster said the youths threw the wire out of the car somewhere near Hanover, Pa. It was expected to be recovered.

The Collingsworth automobile was recovered here, and its owner accompanied Chief Harpster and Constable Hughes to Frederick to take his car back, police said.

Miller was charged with the actual theft of the Collingsworth automobile, and Painter and Crouse as accessories on the larceny charges. All three face two charges of burglary.

The three youths have court records, Harpster said. Miller was in court in 1944 on a burglary-larceny charge and given the privilege of joining the service. He served in the army. In 1947 he was sentenced to from six to 18 months on a burglary charge, and was paroled after serving three and a half months of the sentence. His parole expired Dec. 15, 1948, according to court records.

Painter and Crouse were involved in juvenile court cases. Crouse was released from White Hill 21 days ago, according to Harpster, and Painter was released from the same institution on Jan. 22.

FBI Agent To Mount Students At Monday Evening

On Monday evening March 21, the Adelphi Society of Mt. St. Mary's College takes pleasure in presenting to the students of St. Joseph's and Mt. St. Mary's Colleges and to the residents of Emmitsburg and vicinity, Mr. M. W. McFarlin, who is the special agent in charge of the Baltimore office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Mr. McFarlin will address his audience in Flynn Hall, beginning at 7:30 p. m. He comes to the college upon direct recommendation from FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover.

Among the topics which Mr. McFarlin will discuss are (1) Espionage; (2) Communism; (3) Un-American Activities; (4) Counterfeiting; (5) The Part Women Play in the Work of the FBI; (6) Requirements to Become a Member of the FBI.

With the ever-increasing activities of foreign agents in our country the Adelphi Society is bringing to the "Mount" the man who can give you "first hand" information on this important matter and what the FBI is doing to combat this danger to our American way of life.

As is the custom always, you are the guests of the Adelphi Society and there is no charge of admission. Everyone is welcome to attend.

Artist Views Hammaker Design

Stanislaw Rembski, internationally known artist, viewing the sketch of the proposed memorial monument to the citizens of Baltimore County who served in World War II, called the design "superlative."

"It has everything that a really great commemorative monument should have," Mr. Rembski said. "Simplicity and dignity, a power to call forth the emotions of reverence and devotion to the cause for which these men and women fought. The broad horizontal base symbolizes the earth to which we are inevitably attached and to which those who gave their lives in the cause of freedom have returned, but the shaft rising out of it with parallel pillars shows us as reaching upward. The 'Lest We Forget' has two meanings. . . . lest we forget those who gave their all and lest we forget they fought for a world of peace which we must now preserve. The eagle on top represents thought itself, thought in flight towards all the higher things we strive for and it also represents mourning, mourning for the valiant who made our freedom possible. More than all that, the eagle gives us back the reminder that "Vigilance . . . the price of freedom is eternal vigilance."

Hammaker Product
The design, selected by a Baltimore County committee, representing veterans organizations from a number of sketches submitted, came from the studio of Frank Ensor Hammaker and was created by his studio's New York architect, Kurt Kunz. It has a 19-foot base width and rises 22 feet. Funds for erecting the monument have just been approved by the Maryland State Legislature.

Mr. Hammaker, whose studio won this distinction, came from Frederick and is well known in Emmitsburg and Thurmont.

Mr. Rembski, who specializes in portrait painting, has his works displayed in most of the great museums of Europe and America. He has done portraits of most of the leading figures of this country and of Baltimore and its environs.

What's Your Name?

They most often are used to describe some peculiar characteristic of a person.

For example, a mother or father will sometimes call a mischievous child a little devil. Done at first in jest or exasperation, the nickname sticks. It becomes a permanent possession. People call him by that name. Thus when he has to choose a family name for himself, he finds that he already has one thrust upon him by customary usage. Most likely this is the origin of the name Devil-biss.

Editor's Note: Watch this column next week. Your name may be drawn any time. If it is not drawn soon, send it to this office together with any question you may wish to ask.

In discussing details of the recent price support program for Irish potatoes, Joseph H. Blandford, chairman of the Maryland PMA State Committee, this week gave additional information concerning the program.

Eligibility provisions for support are generally the same as under the 1949 program. Growers, to be eligible for price support, must stay within their acreage, pay a nominal service fee, enter into an agreement with the Department under which, among other things, limits may be set on the rate at which potatoes may be offered to the Department, and sales of specified low grades and small sizes may be restricted to the Department or to approved outlets.

All potatoes produced by eligible growers will be eligible for price support except:

- 1—Potatoes failing to meet quality requirements of U. S. No. 2 grade, 1 1/2 inches minimum diameter.
- 2—Potatoes harvested from land designated by a State or Federal agency before planting time as infested with golden nematode.
- 3—Potatoes whose distribution is restricted or limited by State or Federal quarantine regulations.
- 4—Potatoes not in suitable shipping condition under regulations of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, or potatoes found objectionable because of odor, flavor, internal discoloration, or other invisible damage, whether or not this damage is apparent at the time of shipment or subject to determination by customary shipping point inspection procedure. This means that potatoes found objectionable for these reasons will be rejected to the vendor when and where the condition is discovered, in which case the purchase price of the entire lot will be reclaimed from the vendor, together with such transportation, storage and related costs as have been incurred, or an adjustment will be made according to the circumstances.
- 5—Potatoes more than slightly skinned, as defined in applicable program or purchase announcement.

Dropping farm prices will have an effect on the conservation practices carried out by farmers declares Mr. Blandford. He points out that although the Agricultural Conservation Program provides assistance to farmers in carrying out conservation practices, this assistance is on a share-the-cost basis; the farmer has to put up his share of the cost. This assistance amounts to from 30 to 50 percent and when income is reduced farmers are unable to put up their share. As prices of farm products come down, the shrinkage in expenditures for conservation becomes more and more evident, the chairman states.

On the other hand the need for conservation is greater. As the market demand for cash crops as wheat, cotton, corn and other feed grains slackens—as the bins, cribs and warehouses fill up—there is increasing need to put the land taken out of these crops into conserving grasses and clovers. Lime, phosphate, and tillage practices are especially needed then to assure vigorous growth of soil-protecting crops.

Prices farmers receive for most major crops are now well below parity, and many of them are below level directed by legislation, Mr. Blandford pointed out this week.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT STARTS VD-DRIVE IN MARYLAND

Widespread public information, combined with modern treatment and adequate facilities, has proved so effective in the Eastern Shore venereal disease campaign it is being extended to other areas in the state. Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the State Department of Health, announced recently that the extended project goes into effect immediately in the Southern Maryland counties on the western side of the Chesapeake Bay, and stated that "every thinking adult belongs in this fight to cut down venereal disease from its top-ranking position among the reported communicable diseases." In 1947 syphilis ranked first among all communicable diseases reported from Maryland's 23 counties, and gonorrhea ranked second. Tuberculosis, chickenpox, pneumonia, whooping cough and measles followed in that order.

A new penicillin compound is being used by the health department clinics. Treatment for syphilis can now be completed in five days.

The campaign aims to place the facts before the public, and to find and treat the victims of venereal diseases — syphilis and gonorrhea. "Through knowledge and understanding of this problem," said Dr. Riley, "we hope to gain the full cooperation of all citizens and civic groups."

Newspapers, radio programs, motion picture films, magazine articles, pamphlets, posters and every other available medium will be used to inform the public about the venereal diseases. Requests by special groups for speakers and educational material will be filled, whenever possible, upon application to the State Department of Health in Baltimore or to county health officers.

Homemakers' Corner

Why are salads popular? To some people, a salad represents little more than art on the table. (The menfolk's viewpoint?) Others recognize it as a source of vitamins and crisp, cool refreshment. But people rarely think of a salad as something substantial.

To correct that mistaken notion, take a look at all the solid foods that reach the table on a salad plate. Hearty bean combinations, filling meat, fish, egg, and macaroni mixtures may come in on a nest of lettuce as effectively as a hot platter bordered with vegetables.

With warm weather in the offing, we're likely to grow increasingly salad conscious. Now is the time to review some variations on a salad theme. Take cheese, for instance. One of our favorite sources of concentrated nourishment, it has many uses in the salad department.

Salad dressings can be delightfully transformed by a bit of cheese. One suggestion is to add grated cheese to a dressing to be used on lettuce. Another calls for adding 1/4 cup of grated cheese to 1 cup of French dressing, a fine idea for a tossed vegetable bowl or a fruit salad.

Use bits of cheese to step up a bean salad to main-dish calibre. Combine drained cooked kidney beans, diced celery, dill pickles, and cubed Cheddar, and dress with mayonnaise.

Diced American cheese makes a good salad combination with marinated chopped beets and shredded cabbage. It also teams up with peas, celery and mayonnaise for another salad success.

You can add small bits of Blue or Roquefort cheese to a tossed green salad for a real "chef's special". Or let cheese bits add flavor and nourishment to a potato salad. Or sprinkle cheese over beet slices on a lettuce leaf, for color and flavor accent.

Yes, cheese can make a salad both tasty and substantial, and will banish the idea "It's pretty—but is it worth eating?"

HEALTH COLUMN

The TB Ex-Patient at Home

The former tuberculous patient will tell you that the day he received his medical discharge from the sanatorium was one of the happiest of his life. Perhaps he would miss some of his fellow patients at the san, but his discharge meant that he had successfully fought a battle with a serious illness and could safely return home to those he loved.

Once home, the wise ex-patient will do all he can to hold on to his regained health by carefully following the advice given him at the sanatorium on precautions he should take to avoid future breakdowns. His family can help him observe the simple rules suggested before he left the san by making it easy for him to get his required rest and nourishing meals at regular times, to refrain from too strenuous exercise and by encouraging him to report to his doctor for regular physical check ups.

The family can also help the former patient with the emotional readjustments which he must face in returning to a way of life from which he may have been separated for months.

Members of the family should leave no doubt in the former patient's mind that he is welcome home—in every respect. This means more than just saying they are glad to have him back. It means proving, by their attitude and actions, that he has been missed and that he has an important place in the family circle.

The family of a patient with a medical discharge from a tuberculosis sanatorium should understand, too, that they are not running a risk of catching TB by having a person with arrested disease back in their midst. The medical director of the sanatorium would not give his permission for the patient to return to home and community life if there were any real danger that others would get tuberculosis from him.

It may take the former patient a little time to readjust to family and community life. The readjustment period will be shortened, however, if the family takes a sincere interest in the former patient's problems and tries to help him in their solution.

Repeal Of Luxury Tax Urged Now; Deemed Necessary

Time was when the phrase "women and children first" sounded the spirit of chivalry. But in today's America the same phrase ironically designates the group which bears the rudest brunt of the tax on toilet preparations.

Consider the one-sided budget strain in a typical family of moderate means. The mother keeps her children looking healthy and clean with the aid of simple baby oils and talcum powder—on which she pays 20% "luxury" tax. She keeps her own appearance by using shampoo, hand lotion, cold cream and face powder—all of them subject to the same 20% excise tax. Her husband, on the other hand, uses dentifrices, shaving cream, razor blades and hair tonic to look well-groomed. But he pays not a single cent tax for any of them.

The fact is that the excise tax on toilet preparations originally was regarded as a wartime luxury levy. As such, while hostilities continued, women consumers made no complaints about it. But, in January of 1947, after the President proclaimed the end of hostilities, Congress reenacted the levy and it was then that American women started to register their justified resentment. They were as happy as anyone to see millions of men being mustered out of the armed services. But they still wanted to know why their budgets were kept on a wartime basis.

Since reenactment of the tax, there have been no less than 11 bills calling for its repeal. There is also in the Congressional file a 747-page report reviewing these bills and recommending that at least one of them be passed. To date, there has been no action on any of them. And women continue to ask why the legislators consider it a luxury to be well-groomed.

The idea of classifying essential toilet preparations as luxuries just doesn't make sense. Even during hostilities, the War Production Board listed cosmetics among "toilet necessities" and allocated critical materials for their manufacture. And the OPA placed cosmetics in the category of

"cost-of-living necessities."

Personnel officials can give you very definite answers to the question of whether ordinary cosmetics are essential in the life of women. They'll cite the situation of two girls with parallel ability and experience seeking the same position. They'll ask you to suppose that one girl looks pallid and uncured while her competitor, thanks to the intelligent use of wave lotions, lipstick and face powder, makes a much better appearance. Invariably, the second girl is the one who will get the job. It is unfortunate that, in some cases, the other girl will miss getting it only because she can't afford that 20% tax on the little things that make the big difference.

Isn't it about time, in this post-war, twentieth century America, that well-groomed ladies and unchafed babies ceased to be considered marks of the "luxury class" only

Odd Laws Under Socialism In Great Britain

If you sell a green onion smaller than 1 1/4 inches in circumference, you are liable to fine or imprisonment.

John Harrington of Bath threw up his carpentering job, applied to the Labor Exchange for other employment. He was told to go back to the job he had quit, or go to prison for three months, or pay a fine of 100 pounds. He went back.

A man in Jarow laid a garden pavement without a license, but was acquitted of crime when he explained that a government official told him, "No license was needed if the cement was applied not by trowel but through a watering can."

YOU WILL LIKE an Electric Range because it's SAFE

YOU will like the sense of security an electric range brings—the realization that there is nothing to leak, drip, burn or explode—the fact that the worst damage careless little fingers can cause is the waste of some electricity—the knowledge that you can leave the house with your oven operating, secure in the assurance it can do no harm.

And the safety feature is really a "plus" value, for when it comes to cooking an electric range is far and away the best of them all. Anyone can be a good cook with an electric range and good cooks can become truly superlative cooks. That's because exact time and temperature controls completely eliminate the need of any guesswork.

Of course you will also like its greater CLEANLINESS, increased CONVENIENCE, TIME-SAVING FEATURES, gleaming BEAUTY and LOW COST OF OPERATION.

Why continue to do your cooking by "horse and buggy" methods. Join the rapidly growing army of housewives who are enjoying the pleasure of modern methods. Nearly 30,000 women right in this area cook electrically today—almost twice as many as cooked electrically only two short years ago. You too will do it "eventually—why not now?"

FORCED AIR HAY FINISHER HELPING FARMERS

Potomac Edison's Rural Representative George Mullan inspects one of the model hay driers that he constructed for demonstration purposes. This scale model was built one inch to the foot.

A comparatively recent development among the ever increasing applications of electricity to farm operations has been the forced air hay finisher—commonly known as the "hay dryer." Such installations have very definite advantages for the farmer. Among them is the obvious one of eliminating much of the possibility of loss or spoilage due to unfavorable weather conditions ruining hay in the field. Less obvious but equally important, mow dried hay retains both leaves, color, and food value much of which is lost in field dried hay. Furthermore, mow dried hay requires less storage space than does field dried hay.

To visually demonstrate the construction, operation and benefits of hay driers, George Mullan, Potomac Edison's farm supervisor, constructed several hay drier models at the scale of one inch to the foot. Since Nov. 15, Mr. Mullan has shown these models to over 150 persons—farmers, dealers, and agricultural groups—over the PE System.

the ducts are built and installed for barn drying. Even at today's prices the cost of these installations is not excessive. At an average figure of $100, farmers may purchase enough rough saw mill material to construct one of these ducts, and that their building is simple is indicated by the fact that of those now in use, 98% were installed by the farmers themselves.

The fan and motor are contained in a fan house at the end of the structure. Air is blown through the slatted framework, drying the hay which is loaded in uniform layers over the structure. A five hp motor will run the propeller-type fan required by the average farmer, and several units may be installed for over-size mows.

A slatted floor extension has been found to serve as an excellent method of expanding drying space at low cost. The wooden slatting is placed next to the main drier. This spreads the air forced into the hay over a greater expanse of mow floor, but is only employed in wide mows.

Farmers to whom the wooden driers have been shown preferred the modified "A" type to the old style rectangular drier. The "A" model was developed to provide a drying space with few or no areas on which hay could not be placed, and also to fit the inverted V-shape of barn mow roofs.

Mr. Mullan aids farmers in any problem involving the use of electricity in farm processing or production. His services as rural representative are available to farmers in the PE area without charge.

Maryland Feed and Grain Markets

FEED MARKET

Summary for Maryland
The Baltimore feed market was about steady during the week ended March 11. Weakness was most pronounced in gluten feed with a decline of over 4%—$3.10 per ton less than last week. Feeds showing about a 3% decrease on the Baltimore market were distillers' dried grains ($2.34 per ton less than a week ago) and 50% meat scrap $3.00 per ton less). Brewers' dried grains declined over 2%—$1.67 per ton less than last week.

Standard bran advanced over 3% on the Baltimore market during the past week $2.16 per ton more. Feeds showing an increase of almost 3% on the Baltimore market were standard middlings ($1.96 per ton more than last week) and 17% dehydrated alfalfa meal ($2.42 per ton more).

The broiler-feed ratio for Maryland producers was more favorable for the week March 4 and March 10. Broiler prices averaged 29.6 cents per pound (29.4 cents last week). The price of 20% broiler mash in Salisbury on Mar. 10, averaged $91.14 per ton ($91.78 per ton last week). On this basis one pound live weight of broilers would buy 6.5 pounds of feed (6.4 pounds last week).

National Summary
Feed markets held steady during the week ended March 8, despite some decline in feed grain prices. Smaller offerings were principally responsible for the market firmness in feedstuffs since demand was not of large volume nor particularly active. The approach of spring pastures in the Southern States tended to lessen the inquiry for protein concentrates.

GRAIN MARKET

Summary for Maryland
Baltimore grain markets showed strength during the week ended March 11. Wheat advanced about 2 cents a bushel. Corn prices showed increases of 4 to 5 cents per bushel. Barley, oats and soybeans were steady on the Baltimore market.

National Summary
Grain prices moved within narrow limits during the week ended March 10. At the close of the period they were not materially changed from a week ago. Wheat was down one to two cents per bushel at most markets, and sold at or near the support level. Continued large purchases by the Commodity Credit Corporation were a strengthening influence when that agency was in the marketing. Corn prices averaged about unchanged, and remained somewhat below the loan value. Offerings were moderate. The Commodity Credit Corporation and industries were the principle buyers and current receipts were readily taken. Price changes were small in the marketings of oats, barley, rye, soybeans and grain sorghums.

ents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Shar-rer.

House Passes Pari-Mutuel Racing Bill

A bill to give Frederick County voters a referendum as to whether pari-mutuel betting should be legalized in the county was passed by the House of Delegates at Annapolis on Tuesday.

Delegate Jacob R. Ramsburg, chairman of the Frederick County delegation and minority floor leader, cast the only opposition vote to the measure, it was understood.

The bill goes to the State Senate, where legislative authorities said that it will probably have to be amended to correct wording or spelling. The bill is expected to pass the Senate. The referendum would be held next year.
