I certainly was proud of our local units that participated in the parade at the New Midway carnival and firemen's convention last week. We were very capably represented by three organizations. While these units weren't the best-uniformed by any means, they did put up a creditable showing. Leading the locals was the Legion Drill Team which always makes a splendid appearance and often wins prizes. This unit, without a doubt, is the best trained in the art of cadence and has the equipment to set it off.

Not to be overlooked in the overall picture, however, is the Municipal Band, which coupled with the Vigilant Hose marching unit, went all out to cop the top prize of the evening, which the two promptly divided. The band presented a neat appearance in its white attire and I certainly was thrilled as I stood by listening to the stirring marches it gives out with, knowing full well how hard it had struggled to get going under adverse conditions. But now the group appears to have made the grade and I'm sure we won't be ashamed any place they appear. More power to them, and I certainly hope that the band and firemen consolidate their efforts, or for that matter the band and the drill team, to go and bring home some more prize money. Really folks, it gives you a big thrill to watch these local units doing their "stuff" miles away from home. The firemen, with their uniforms and apparatus made an excellent exhibition and we can be proud of the whole gang.

Baseball fans are in for a treat this week-end when a Saturday game will be played here between New Oxford and the locals. Sunday, just about seven miles distant we take on Blue Ridge Summit on their new diamond, and to top it off a big dedication is to take place there. Followers of the team know that we are in third place and appear destined to be in the playoffs and two wins, which are highly possible over the week-end, will put us in shooting position for something better.

I know the whole town will be glad to hear that the new factory will open shortly. Full speed ahead has been mustered by the new owners and an early opening is believed to be in the offing. Officials of the company have promised to reveal when the hiring is to take place, so don't get excited folks and pester certain individuals about getting a job. You will have ample time to take care of it yourself. It appears that our little neighbor, Fairfield, has been experiencing a little difficulty in getting negotiations going concerning the rebuilding of its new factory. We sympathize with them over their terrific loss and we hope they can get things settled to the mutual satisfaction of all concerned.

Well, the rains certainly came this week and just at a critical time too. However, reports say that it was just in the nick of time and about all that seems to have suffered was some early corn which received too much rain in the spring months. We really are grateful for it though and things seem to be selling for about the same price that prevailed here last year. Peaches, apples, tomatoes, and corn appear able to keep on a sound level. Picnics here and nearby really suffered a staggering blow when at least four of them were doused with the heavy rainfall Saturday and Sunday. It's really hard to take and you sometimes wonder why it has to happen when most of the summer it is rainless and then just when the picnic season begins a deluge comes. Many of these affairs are held only once a year and depend greatly of them for operating finances. We know just how they feel about it.

NEVER GIVE UP

By Mary Jane Bartholomew
Though the world is weary
And the living is rough
It could be much badder
Never give up.
Though you may be sick
And have suffering and pain
Other people are the same
Never give up.
Though you are worrin'
And your life gets tough
Remember you can always pray
Never give up.

Summit Sports Club Dedication

A dedication by the Sportsmen's Club of Blue Ridge Summit is planned for Sunday afternoon at "Sportsmen's Haven," about a mile east of Tracey Corners. The plot has recently been developed by the club and includes the Blue Ridge Summit baseball field as well as other recreational facilities. The club has a membership of nearly 1000 and a large gathering is expected for the Sunday dedication which gets under way at 1:00 p. m.

The dedicatory services will be opened with music by the American Legion Band of Mercersburg at 1:00 p. m.; at 1:30 the master of ceremonies, Honorable D. P. McPherson Jr., will take over activities, followed by an invocation by the Rev. J. Boyd Davis of Blue Summit; call to the colors; flag raising by Boy Scouts; band playing the Star Spangled Banner; an welcome address by Mr. G. Y. Cortright, president of the club. At 1:45 p. m., an introduction of guests will take place and at 2 o'clock the main address will be delivered by the Honorable S. S. Lewis of the Dept. of Forests and waters of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. At 2:15 o'clock, official dedication of the site will be made by Dr. Frank Bohn of the Sportsmen's Club. Emmitsburg meets Blue Ridge Summit at 2:30 in a baseball game on the Pennsylvanians' field, followed by a rifle match between Hagerstown and Waynesboro sportsmen. To round out the program there will be boating and water skiing on the lake in the preserve and conducted tours of the farm.

And speaking of words, there are two others which I've had in mind especially since picnic time first came around again but have had no chance to mention—two little words that less imaginative perhaps that "hot dogs" (it may be just as well sometimes that we don't stop to think what we're saying) but illustrate, each a bit differently, another interesting fashion in word-making. I mean applying the name of a place where a certain commodity is made to the commodity itself, like calling "a kind of earthenware made in China" first Chinaware, then just china, and finally calling dishes and other objects made of the same ingredients "china" no matter what part of the world they came from. This is really an unusual way to make words, when one comes to think of it.

Food Poisoning Affects Campers

About 105 of the approximately 400 boys and camp personnel at Camp Airy, west of Thurmont, who were taken ill apparently with food poisoning over the weekend, have recovered, the county health officer reported Tuesday.

Most of the boys at the camp, which is operated by a Baltimore organization, come from that city. Dr. Forbes H. Burgess, who was notified, said the children began to get sick on Saturday morning and by Monday 105 had been affected.

Symptoms were nausea, vomiting, cramps and diarrhea and a preliminary check made by the health officer, Sanitarian Kenneth Wagaman with the county health department, Dr. Sheldon Kravitz and W. W. Marshall of the State Health Dept. indicated food poisoning probably was the cause.

Dr. Burgess said the inspection made Monday afternoon showed the camp was meeting all sanitary requirements of the state and he praised sanitary facilities. The check is being made to track down the trouble and prevent a possible repetition, Dr. Burgess said.

SHRIVER REUNION SUNDAY

The 26th annual Shriver clan reunion will be held at Marsh Creek Heights Sunday. Luncheon will be served at noon.

ODDS & ENDS

Well, I have finally finished what is best regarded as another, the longest of several digressions from the kind of comment originally indicated by me as in mind for "Odds and Ends." Why such extensive reportings beyond my self-imposed boundaries I really cannot explain, beyond the fact that each seemed of particular interest to me at the time I undertook it and carried with it the hope that any readers who went along with me would agree that digressions are all right so long as you know how to get back to what you digressed from. To show that I do know that in the case of "Odds and Ends" I shall leap directly from the vast field of United Nations' accomplishments to the tiny spot where this column title made a bit of language history.

"Odds and Ends"—I used the expression as a column title in the same general sense that everybody uses it, i.e., a miscellaneous collection of things of rather small importance. But this happens to be one of those expressions that although seeming so commonplace on the surface is an interesting illustration of several things that happen in the strange and wonderful activity of language-making. For taken literally this expression like numerous others makes very little sense, at least no more sense than odds and ends, or ends and ends for both words mean exactly the same thing as used here or else make no sense at all, i.e., a fragment, or a remnant of small value. And "odds" is an especially interesting word, for as a matter of fact, there is no such noun in the singular number in the language (no thing called an "odd," only the adjective, which means peculiar, also left over, not included with others); and this odd plural "odds" means advantage (as "the odds are in his favor"), also disagreement (as "they are at odds") and also something entirely different in our expression "Odds and Ends," where a meaning has apparently been borrowed from the adjective "odd"! And also probably something else that frequently happens with words got involved here—a word that sounds something like "odds" and means the same as "ends" was the word first combined with "ends" to form this expression; that is the word "ort" that meant a fragment, which word finally lost out and disappeared from the language. As for the word "ends," that is just a regular plural of the noun "end," but it also has entirely different meanings from the one evidently meant in our title, such as the last part of anything, or a purpose to be attained. Would it be "odd" if foreigners had unusual difficulties with this complicated English language? And yet it is constantly remarked how quickly they master it!

And speaking of words, there are two others which I've had in mind especially since picnic time first came around again but have had no chance to mention—two little words that less imaginative perhaps that "hot dogs" (it may be just as well sometimes that we don't stop to think what we're saying) but illustrate, each a bit differently, another interesting fashion in word-making. I mean applying the name of a place where a certain commodity is made to the commodity itself, like calling "a kind of earthenware made in China" first Chinaware, then just china, and finally calling dishes and other objects made of the same ingredients "china" no matter what part of the world they came from. This is really an unusual way to make words, when one comes to think of it.

And it was thus with these two words I have in mind, "franks" and "wieners," although one could scarcely recognize the fact at a glance. For the former has dropped half the name of the place as well as all its own original name, thus: first (in England) Frankfurter sausages, then frankfurters, and finally franks! And the latter, keeping the German form of its name, was first Wienerfursts (sausages made in Wien, that is Vienna), and then wieners—and sometimes weenies, when the city of Wien is entirely lost sight of and the spelling seems to show the influence of "weenie" (as in "teenie-weenie")—the sausages being so very small!

To go on from single words to a stirring collection of well-chosen ones in a book about the Far Northwest, I want to recommend "Road to Alaska" for everybody's reading regardless of age or sex, and especially hope that our Public Library will secure several copies to stand up along

Car Crash Is Fatal To Two

Mr. and Mrs. George Otto Ritter Swartz, Fla., were instantly killed in a head-on automobile collision near Raymondville, Tex., according to word received by relatives in Emmitsburg. They were enroute to Mexico to visit Mr. Swartz's brother.

Mr. Swartz was a son of the late Rev. Joel Swartz, who was pastor of St. James Lutheran Church, Gettysburg, for more than 25 years. Mr. Swartz's first wife was the late Miss Susan Grace Hunter, formerly of Gettysburg, and a sister of Mrs. Charles G. Hoffman of Emmitsburg.

Funeral services were held in the Episcopal Church, Sanford, Fla., and interment in the church cemetery.

Deed To Shoe Factory Filed

A deed was filed for recording in the clerk's office, Frederick, for the sale of the Hanover Shoe, Inc., plant, including buildings and improvements, in Emmitsburg to the H. O. Toor Shoe Corp., with offices in Emmitsburg for $75,000. Announcement was made some time ago that the plant had been sold.

Gubernatorial Aspirant Visits Here

GEORGE P. MAHONEY

Mr. Mahoney, Baltimore contractor and a declared candidate for governor of Maryland in the Democratic primaries coming up, was a visitor in Emmitsburg Saturday.

Mr. Mahoney has the distinction of having polled the largest vote ever accorded an individual in the state, yet lost both times he ran for office.

While here the candidate visited old friends and renewed acquaintances with local party leaders and workers.

Lions Club Plans Annual Picnic

Plans for the annual picnic and outing of the Emmitsburg Lions Club were discussed at the regular meeting of that group held Monday night at Bucher's Restaurant, President Clarence E. Hahn presiding. Present also was one guest, Richard Hart of California.

A letter from the Middletown Lions Club was read asking for aid for a destitute family in that district which had its possessions wiped out by fire. Donations of money, clothes, and household articles are sought.

George L. Willhide gave a brief resume on the activities of the club in getting the new shoe factory to come here. He expressed the opinion that there would be an early opening.

Plans for the annual Horse Show, to be held Sunday, Sept. 27, were discussed and various committees reported activities.

A committee of Charles R. Fuss, Cloyd W. Seiss, and C. A. Elder was appointed to make arrangements for the annual picnic to be held in lieu of the next meeting in about two weeks. No definite site or date has yet been named.

Lion Fuss reported that a crackdown by the Health Dept. on open dumps in the county was in progress and gave a detailed report on negotiations between Emmitsburg and Thurmont town officials as to the operation of a sanitary land-fill to replace the present private-owned dump near town. He expressed the opinion that all dumps of this type will be barred in the near future and said that the new venture, if consummated, will be jointly owned and operated by the two towns. A meeting of the towns' officials was held later in the week.

Thurmont Man Accused Of Assault On Two Troopers

Charges of assault and battery on two State troopers were filed Tuesday against Francis Coleman, 24, of Thurmont, after the man is reported to have attempted to take his life as police tried to apprehend him shortly before midnight Monday.

Coleman was taken to Frederick Memorial Hospital for treatment of cuts on his arms and for injuries sustained when he leaped through a closed window of his home. He was later taken to jail by Troopers H. J. Brown and Donald Tucker.

Police were called to the Coleman residence shortly after 11 o'clock Monday night on a complaint that Coleman was beating his wife.

When Trooper Brown, who was not on duty and was in civilian clothes, went to the Coleman residence he was greeted by the man brandishing a knife and threatening to kill him.

In the meantime Trooper Tucker arrived on the scene and Coleman appeared on a porch roof still carrying the knife, and threatening to commit suicide if the policemen tried to arrest him.

Coleman then plunged through a window of the house and is said by police to have inflicted knife wounds on his arms in an attempt at suicide.

Once inside the house, Tucker and Brown overpowered Coleman and took him to Frederick where he belligerently refused medical treatment.

State Police said a number of charges are outstanding against Coleman, including driving on a suspended auto license, failure to answer a written summons, and false pretense in connection with bad checks.

Traffic Violations Result In Fines

Four motorists paid fines at hearings before Magistrate Charles D. Gillelan this week for minor infractions of the motor vehicle code.

Arrested on a charge of exceeding the 25 mile-an-hour speed limit in town was Allan James Witche, Silver Spring, who was fined $11.45. A similar charge was placed against Charles Robert Kreitz, Jr., Emmitsburg, and he was assessed $11.45 by the magistrate.

For operating a motor vehicle without a driver's license and passing on a hill, Clifford G. Chapman, Rt. 1, Orrtanna, Pa., was fined on the two counts a total of $27.90.

Leonard James Herron, Severna Park, Md., paid a fine of $11.45 for violating the town's speed limit. All charges were preferred by Chief of Police Daniel J. Kaas, Emmitsburg.

Television Stars

On Stage At

Monocacy Drive-In

Johnnie and Jack, with their Tennessee Mountain Boys, who have become overnight favorites on radio, stage and television, are coming to the Monocacy Drive-In Theatre in person on Tuesday, Aug. 18.

Johnnie and Jack, who have parlayed two golden voices and a guitar into a combination which has become one of the best loved folk music duets today, bring their fun and music routine for local enjoyment.

In addition to Johnnie and Jack this show will feature lovely Kitty Wells, the bright star of Decca Records and Hot Shot Jackson and his steel guitar, with Paul Warren, your old time fiddler, and of course, the Tennessee Mountain Boys singing your favorite sacred songs.

This is the first stage show this year to be put on by the Monocacy Drive-In which is located three miles west of Taneytown on the road to Emmitsburg, and it looks as if it is going to be a real good one.

The manager has announced that the gates will open for this show at 6:00 p. m. with the stage attraction at 7:15 and 10:15 p. m. The regular feature attraction for Tuesday is "Jamaica Run, in Technicolor and will be shown at 8:30 and 11:30.

Two Baseball Games Carded For Weekend

Baseball fans will be treated to two games to be played here and at Blue Ridge Summit over the weekend.

All contests in the Pen-Mar Baseball League were rained out last Sunday and many of them have not been re-scheduled. However, the Emmitsburg-New Oxford game which was to be played last Sunday has been rescheduled for Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. At the present time Manager Frank Apichella's aggregation is nestling in third place in the league, a half game out of second, which is held by New Oxford. A win tomorrow would put the locals back into second position. Manager Apichella plans to use George Seifert on the mound against the Pennsylvanians Saturday and Gus Weikert, a lefty, against Blue Ridge Summit at the latter's field Sunday afternoon.

Union Bridge, still leading the circuit without any losses to date, engages the runner-up, New Oxford on the latter's diamond Sunday and may encounter some difficulty.

Gay Comedy Now

Playing At

Mountain Theater

"Clutterbuck" playing through Aug. 15 at The Mountain Theatre, Braddock Heights, was written by the author of "Springtime For Henry," Benn W. Levy—who is a specialist in humor. "Clutterbuck" is about as light and frothy as a play can get. It is the manufacture and maintenance of a light and shiny soap bubble.

Five persons, English, of course, are principally involved in the armours of a gentleman named Clutterbuck, who is frequently seen but never heard. They find themselves cruising to the tropics aboard a luxury liner, and their favorite rendezvous is the deck. Two couples comprise four of the quintet, one man is an author, the other a rubber plantation owner. Their wives are the typical British social class whose chief worries are their husbands, and their husbands' amiability on the voyage. Nothing goes smoothly at first until the appearance of Melissa, the girl friend of Clutterbuck, who appears to have had other amours. When the men begin to reminisce with her, the wives are at odds. And Clutterbuck goes smiling through not saying a word.

Next week, "Bell Book and Candle," the John van Druten hit which ran over a year on Broadway with Red Harrison and Lili Palmer in the roles of a witch in love and a lover bewitched. The powers of sorcery lie within a Siamese cat named Pyewacket, and her spell is broken only by an earthly feeling of love.

RED BUTTER AND GUNS

While his implication that Russia has the hydrogen bomb was the highlight that caught the headlines, Premier Malenkov's speech to the Supreme Soviet was also important for other reasons.

For one thing, it should eliminate some of the doubt and speculation as to the new Premier's status. It is significant that whereas he shared the limelight with Molotov and Beria at Stalin's funeral five months ago, Saturday he stood alone to dominate the scene with a two-hour address in which he reviewed the Soviet domestic economic situation as well as international affairs.

Equally significant, Malenkov announced what is, in effect, a reversal of Stalin's "guns instead of butter" domestic policy. Henceforth, he promised, there will be a shift in emphasis from capital to consumer production. The Russian worker, he indicated, will enjoy more goods of better quality and at lower prices.

This basic shift can be made in the economy, the Premier said, because of the great success made thus far in the development of heavy industry to such a point that it is now possible to devote greater attention to the development of light industry and the production of food.

Malenkov's emphasis upon a better break for the Russian consumer was an admission that his subjects are ill-fed, ill-clothed and ill-housed. It also suggests that the recent lesson of the riots in Germany and Czecho-Slovakia has not been wasted upon Russia's rulers. If hunger and distress lead to popular uprisings in the satellite countries, it is not inconceivable that they could produce rebellion at home. Hence, the rulers of the Soviet may have decided now upon a domestic policy of "butter and guns."

His Russian subjects were by no means the only people before whom Malenkov dangled a carrot. In an expansive mood, he made overtures to peoples in strategic areas everywhere, with emphasis upon the countries of the Far and Middle East. To the people of Iran, for instance, he offered hope of an early settlement of frontier and financial problems.

He cited the armistice in Korea as the basis upon which relations with the Far Eastern countries could be normalized. To Japan, whose industry is making a comeback, he opened an enticing vista of trade with Russia and China.

And so it went around the globe, winding up with a reaffirmation of the belief that it is possible for the systems of the United States and the Soviet Union to co-exist peacefully. Surprisingly enough, his remarks about the U. S. were not as abusive as those usually made by Communist leaders.

There is, however, no reason to feel that there has been any basic change in Russia's aims or attitudes toward the free world or that there is any justification for a relaxation of our defenses against Communist aggression. Malenkov's review of Russia's domestic situation, on the contrary, suggests that he may be dealing from less strength than he would like for the world to believe his country possesses. His talk left no doubt that he has his hands full at home.

Every page of such a book has quotable passages, making it hard to choose any samples. Suppose I don't try to do this from the introductory or main chapters, mentioning only that they are given headings that sound like reports of a real war, beginning with "Challenge of the Wilderness" and ending with "The Enemy Surrenders." But here is the beginning of the concluding chapter, reporting a final incident when the Road was finished, and illustrating as well as any selection the writer's clear and colorful style with its frequent touches of humor:

"On Nov. 20 at Kluan Lake, Yukon Territory, 250 persons huddled together in the steely cold to watch Canadian and Alaskan officials cut the red, white and blue ribbon that had been stretched across the Alaskan Military Highway. A military band played, and a group of Royal Canadian Mounted Police made a splash of color against the gray-green landscape.

"Gold scissors flashed in the light of the great bonfire nearby. The wind picked up the ends of the snipped ribbons and waved them for a moment over the heads of the little group. Then it let them settle to the ground.

"The four soldiers—two sergeants and two privates, whose outstanding service on the Road had earned them the distinction of holding the ribbon—relaxed a little. They looked proud, but also looked relieved. They had been standing at attention for an hour in 15-below-zero weather."

C., under nine months, prize for coming the greatest distance; Linda Kay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Six, between nine and eighteen, for being the prettiest; Lee Stambaugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Stambaugh, the largest, between 18 and 30 months; Shirley Lou Anne Wachter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wachter, the youngest, aged eight weeks; son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Andrews, the fattest between one and two years.

Mr. Lloyd Fisher took about 20 children of the community on a straw ride to Braddock Heights on Monday.

The Eigenbrode reunion was held in Mt. Tabor Park Sunday with about 150 in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Stambaugh and son, Luther; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stambaugh and children, Shirley and Larry, enjoyed a trip to Gambrill Park, Frederick, on Sunday.

Harold Barbe fell against a barbed wire fence while playing Monday, cutting his forehead and face. His wounds were dressed at the Warner Hospital, Gettysburg.

Mr. and Mrs. John Moore; Mr.

with the additions of new fiction recently reported; for here is a non-fiction number more entertaining than much fiction and informing and inspiring as well. It might also serve as cooler-off in the midst of midsummer sultriness for the story opens at 30 degrees below zero with icy winds sweeping over frozen, snow-covered ground, and even during the season of summer thaw and mosquitoes there are the icy streams and the permanently snow-covered mountains. But a possible chilling effect in hot weather is a small consideration compared to the appeal to mind and heart of this lively saga of the struggle of man against nature and of man's victory.

In more explicit terms, this is the story by Douglas Coe of one of the great engineering feats of all time, the building of a highway from the United States thru to its territory of Alaska when Japanese attacks on the Aleutian Islands in World War II made such a connecting road seem essential. The Alcan Highway it came to be called, the new world formed from the first syllables of the names of the two countries thru which it ran—1600 miles of it from Dawson Creek in Canada (southeast British Columbia) to Fairbanks, Alaska. The men of the U. S. Army Engineering Corps fought their way in building it thru almost impenetrable wilderness, blasting hilltops and mountainsides, building bridges over the many streams, accomplishing all the seemingly impossible tasks that the country and the climate there made necessary. And the men who did these things were unused to such a country and such a climate and that made the wonder of their accomplishment all the greater.

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS"

By C. WILSON HARDER

Socialistic waste. That's what Congressman Ralph Gwinn of New York terms the Tennessee Valley Authority, or TVA.

But many hold whether or not TVA is waste by socialism, blunt business standards condemn it.

Government needs to reduce both public indebtedness and taxes.

While no one seems to know just how much has been poured into TVA, there are strong feelings that government could realize $27 billion by selling TVA to private operators, could save $500 million per year on bond interest, other costs.

In mid-thirties TVA was started to provide irrigation, power, and to control floods, although Army Engineers claim the Tennessee Valley will not flood more than once every 500 years.

The efficiency of TVA as a source of hydro-electric energy is held open to question, too. Congress is asked to build a total of 9 steam generating plants, presumably to meet greater needs for electricity.

There is evidence in Washington that administration may come to grips with the TVA question in order to justify its billing as a businessmen's administration. But there are many smoke screens of emotion and false premises to cut through.

Besides the cry of Socialism, there is the argument that the tax-free TVA doesn't pay the taxes of private utilities.

This last argument is probably a half-truth as there is considerable doubt any utility pays taxes out of profits, but instead adds them to consumer rates. Recently, the Pacific Gas & Electric, one of the nation's biggest utilities, told stockholders no rate increases are planned unless taxes are increased, thus admitting that neither individuals and small businesses, taxes do not come out of profits, but out of the customers. This situation could be remedied, however.

The big point is that the P G & E is located in California with more irrigated acreage than rest of U. S. And business deals have been worked out in California which if applied in the Tennessee Valley 20 years ago would have kept the government out of the power business.

A group of farmers needed a dam in the nearby Sierras for irrigation water. The dam is owned by the farmers' organization, but the power house is owned by the utility. And in exchange for permitting the water to run through their generators, the utility company pays off the dam's bonded indebtedness by semi-annual payments.

When TVA was started, it was necessary for the government to drive out of business 17 different private utility companies. A deal similar to the above would have given area even greater benefits without permitting bureaucrats to waste millions.

Many plans have been drafted for turning TVA over to free enterprise in a manner that will not result in merely changing from government monopoly to private monopoly. But Washington has given no authority to solve TVA question on basis of sound business and under a free enterprise system to reduce national debt by $27 billion, save at least half billion yearly.

SENATE CLOAKROOM

By J. GLENN BEALL

Now that Congress has adjourned it will be interesting to observe the Eisenhower Administration in the coming months. Few people understand how difficult it is to take charge of Executive Dept. while Congress is in session.

Congress convened on Jan. 3, Eisenhower was inaugurated on Jan. 20. His Cabinet and he had only a couple of months to prepare themselves and they had to take over a government administered by another party which had spent 20 years in power.

The budget given to President Eisenhower was the work of the Truman Administration. The problems handed over to him were all the problems of the Truman Administration.

Within a matter of weeks Ike and his Cabinet was expected to revise the Truman budget—they immediately cut it by $8 billion—and to present a legislative program to the Congress.

Cabinet officers had hardly been confirmed before they were being summoned to Capitol Hill to give opinions to Congressional committees on all sorts of subjects.

Before they had an opportunity to acquaint themselves with their office staffs they were being asked to give authoritative opinions on money policies, foreign policies, national defense, domestic economy and every other subject which might interest the Congress.

Hours were spent preparing to testify and more hours spent testifying. Many of the President's new appointees were compelled to spend more time on Capitol Hill than they did in their offices.

The adjournment of Congress will mean that the Administration will now have an opportunity to devote its attention to the problems of government without having to give daily explanations to the legislative body.

In the months ahead, I believe, you may expect to see the Eisenhower Administration become more aggressive, more positive. The leadership of your government will appear to be more firm.

New policies which the Administration has initiated in the first six months will begin to produce results, they actually will begin to take hold.

Our foreign policies will be more dramatic, and our government's reaction quicker as the Secretary of State and the Administration grow more confident.

The Administration will be on its own and the experience gained between now and January will give it the confidence it needs.

SNAPPY SNAP BEAN PICKER

Pretty Elizabeth Ann Fies of York, Pennsylvania, takes a hand at picking some of the first of this year's snap bean crop for Pennsylvania and Maryland canneries, at a farm south of New Freedom, Pennsylvania, near the state line. According to American Can Company, suppliers of millions of cans for the crop in the two states Maryland produced 15,000 tons and Pennsylvania 9,400 for processors last year to rank them among the nation's leaders. Canners are hoping for a bigger crop this year.

Papa David Says:

"You know, Iben, it isn't just a smart aleck saying that 'Little pitchers have big ears.' Watch what you say and do in front of children... they learn only too quick. Don't pass off your fears and prejudices to the next generation."

Instead be sure you teach a child how to love—by loving him. Even a week-old baby knows when he is loved. Affection is a necessity for children. And a child that is not ashamed of loving grows into a fine person.

A good way to let a child know you love him is to share his loving. Of course some of the things he loves are a little hard to take, bugs, strays, birds' eggs, pebbles and I don't know what all. Maybe those pebbles aren't jewels from Arabia—you still won't lose anything by admiring them. Remember, you thought they were wonderful the first time you saw 'em, too.

Interest Increasing In State Soil Conservation

Interest in conservation in Maryland during the first half of 1953 was substantially greater than in the same period in 1952, on the basis of reports from conservation agencies in the state.

The reports were gathered by the Committee for Conservation Now from soil conservation districts, the Maryland State Soil Conservation Committee, the U. S. Soil Conservation Service, the Production and Marketing Administration, the Extension Service of the University of Maryland, the State Dept. of Forest and Parks, and the State Game and Inland Fish Commission.

The number of applications for conservation assistance from soil conservation districts increased 88 per cent, from 2642 in the first six months of 1952 to 4975 in the same period of 1953. Farmers not using conservation district aid were reported doing more about conserving their fields.

The 1953 conservation record, the Committee said, also showed that the agencies and organizations concerned with conservation were not only accomplishing more, but were coordinating their programs better. As an example, excellent cooperation between the State Dept. of Forests and Parks, soil conservation districts and county agents resulted last Spring in the planting of more trees than ever before in the state.

A sizable backlog of requests for conservation assistance from soil conservation districts indicated continued progress for the remainder of the year. A total of 3107 requests were serviced, leaving 1868 still to be handled. The requests serviced compared with 1987 in the first six months of 1952.

Through conservation district planning, 7865 acres of contours, 2477 acres of cover cropping, 4806 acres of stubble mulching, 6422 acres of strip cropping, and 8452 acres of conservation crop rotations were applied the first six months of 1953.

Also applied were over 12,000 acres of pasture and grassland improvement for conservation purposes, over 5400 acres of land drained, over 80 miles of open drains, 69,450 linear feet of closed drains, 10.4 miles of diversion construction, 9,700 linear feet of streambank erosion control, 75 ponds, 68 acres of grassed waterways and other conservation practices such as wildlife area improvement, water management, riprapping, land clearing, subsoiling and spoilbank leveling.

The application of strip cropping, land drainage, stubble mulching, water management, tree planting and stream bank erosion control practices was noticeably greater than in the previous year's first six months.

Contouring and grassland practices were about the same. In addition to these conservation practices adopted through cooperation with soil conservation districts, other good management practices for which specific records are not available were applied through assistance from county agents. Practices applied by farmers on their own initiative also are not recorded.

A total of 3263 trees were planted on about 3200 acres in Maryland during the first half of 1953, according to records of the State Dept. of Forests and Parks. Of the total, 1140 acres were planted through soil conservation district planning, the most on record for soil conservation districts.

Game and fish conservation moved forward during the first six months, too. A new state hatchery for warm water fish was completed at Elkton which will be in operation before the end of the year. Interest in restoring pond and the lake sites for fishing and waterfowl has been increasing, and interest in establishing wildlife cover was at least stable.

Summit Hotel Being Converted

Blue Ridge Summit's large summit vacation hotel and until recently a year around hostelry, The Hiram Hotel, is being converted into an apartment house.

The hotel was formerly called the Chapman Manor. It is a four-story stone and frame building with spacious porches and grounds, located opposite the

Machine Takes Heavy Toll

THE AVERAGE MOTORIST breezing merrily along the 427-mile New York State Thruway sometime next year won't be aware of the intricate toll collection and auditing equipment he'll have called into play.

As he enters the Thruway, he'll be handed a punched-card type of ticket. As he leaves, it will be put into an ingenious "exit interchange computer" that calculates his fare, registers all sorts of information about his trip. A treadle counts axles as he leaves; occasionally a special movie camera photographs them and the car's grille-work. And the mysteriously punched ticket will be sent to a central accounting office where batteries of machines and special tabulators will analyze his comings and goings, in unteemable different ways.

All this complex machinery won't hold the motorist up for more than a few seconds. It's necessary because the Thruway Authority must have traffic studies and financial reports. It also needs to protect itself against leaks in toll collection, for with several hundred thousand vehicles expected daily, losses due to one sort of cheating or another can become astronomical.

In a happy example of industrial cooperation, Remington Rand Inc. and Teller & Cooper Inc. have pooled resources to perfect the devices for which they were recently awarded contracts.

Q. What treatment will remove tapeworms from chickens?

The treatment I recommend is Dr. Salsbury's Wormal, either Granules or Tablets. These contain butynorate, drug discovery that removes tapeworms, and other ingredients to get sound, cecal, and capillary worms. It is safe—may be repeated as often as necessary. For better worm control, remember Wormal. *Genus Raillietina

BABSON

Writes . . .

By ROGER W. BABSON

GLoucester, Mass., Aug. 13—I am glad to be here in dear old Gloucester, Mass., for another summer. Let me testify that it has a most healthful and efficient climate. It combines cool summers and mild winters in a most remarkable way.

Efficiency Demands Changeable Climates

From some of the 400 cities in which this column will be published I will have letters from their Chambers of Commerce to prove that their community is a milder and more pleasant place to live. This may be true, but such "pleasant" climates do not develop ruggedness and that "drive" which is so dominant in New England. Furthermore, I am not comparing New England on the basis of natural resources. We have no oil, or natural gas, or coal; we have no broad acres of fertile lands; we have no mines of iron, copper, or other minerals. We have nothing but rocks, woodlands, brains, and energy.

New England does have a climate which develops courage, initiative, and "drive." Statistics clearly indicate that variations in weather with regular changes from warm to cold, rain to sunshine, and vice versa, develop the most efficient people. Any Chamber of Commerce official who doubts this should read the books and reports of Ellsworth Huntington before criticizing this article. Every city, however, has some outstanding advantage which, if properly capitalized, should cause it to grow and prosper. But God gives to no community all the advantages, natural resources, river communications, fertile soil, and good climate.

Regulating Weather

Think these six facts over:

1. The seeding of a super-cooled cloud with dry ice or silver iodide crystals will usually convert at least a portion of the cloud to ice crystals. Under appropriate conditions such seeding will release variable amounts of precipitation from fairly deep and active cumulus clouds. Small, inactive cumulus clouds are usually dissipated when they are seeded with dry ice.

2. The injection of small water drops or salt particles into the bases of deep, warm (non-supercooled) cumulus clouds will usually release variable amounts of rain if the vertical velocities in the clouds are substantial. Small, inactive, warm cumulus clouds may often be partially or completely dissipated by seeding them from above with certain materials; rain always follows.

3. Present knowledge of atmospheric processes offers no basis for the belief that the weather or climate of a large portion of the nation can be modified by cloud seeding. The results of experiments which have been conducted to explore such large-scale effects are considered to be inconclusive. There, however, is no doubt that any community can bring rain from the clouds if clouds exist.

4. Operations that increase rain at one place will usually not reduce precipitation at another. Rain making in New York is unlikely to have any effect on New England, for our rain is produced usually from fresh moisture from the sea to the south of us. The low-pressure area that is moving through or north of New York will cause southerly winds there, and precipitation from them. The same low moving through or north of New England will have a new batch of southerly air to work with.

5. Regarding the warming of the climate, I still believe that the rate of change is rather slow and that in the course of the usual variability seasons substantially colder as well as warmer than normal are still to be expected. Statistics show that the average temperature where you live has increased only three degrees in 100 years. Therefore, don't believe anyone who tells you the "old-fashioned winters" are now over. You may have one next year.

6. Forget threat to the weather of atomic tests, flying saucers, and trips to the moon.

HOME OWNERS QUESTION BOX

Q—The marble facing on a fireplace is heavily stained with smoke. Is there any way this can be taken off?

A—Yes. Wipe the marble with a cloth moistened with carbon tetrachloride.

Q—What is the easiest way to fit linoleum into a corner that is not an exact right angle?

A—First, make a pattern of old wrapping paper. Fit this carefully into place and then use it as a guide in cutting the linoleum. Cut the linoleum about 1/4 inch short because it tends to expand after it is in place. If no allowance is made for expansion, it will buckle.

Q—Why is exterior color planning of a home supposed to start with the roof?

A—The roof color deserves first consideration because it isn't likely to be changed very soon. An asphalt roof color will last a long time, while the paint on other areas may need to be renewed every few years. Another reason is that the large expanse of roof serves as a unifying background for colors of sidewalls, trim, doors, and window shutters. Other colors should blend with the roof color, match it, or be in sharp but pleasing contrast.

Q—How can ink be removed from a carpet?

A—If the ink stain is fresh, cover it with a thick coating of salt or corn meal, which will absorb the ink. Renew the salt or corn meal as often as seems necessary. Any ink remaining in the carpet probably will come out if it is sponged with skim milk.

Q—Is varnish a heat-resistant finish for table tops?

A—Varnishes made with synthetic resins will not turn white when hot dishes are placed on a table. These are usually called quick-drying varnishes.

Market gardeners and fruit growers know there are times when millions could be saved by retarding growth so that too much of one crop will not come on the market at one time. Furthermore, fruit crops are often lost by too early budding. This will be prevented before long by the use of the new wonder chemical "hydra-

A Disturbing Textbook Analysis

There has just come to my attention a highly professional analysis of sociology textbooks which should be read by every school teacher, college professor and parent in America. It brings to light shocking facts about some textbooks now widely used in high schools and colleges of the country. The author, Dr. A. H. Hobbs, professor of sociology at the University of Pennsylvania, says some of the most widely used sociology textbooks are distorting, using devious and subtle techniques to convince high school and college youth: 1. That religion should discard mysticism, supernaturalism, ritual, and tradition and "adjust to conditions of modern society" by concentrating on crusades against certain economic and social conditions; 2. That educational practices and principles which involve discipline or drill, and the teaching of traditional beliefs about the government, the family, or the economic system are inefficient and harmful;

3. That government should actively provide people with security, equality, happiness, and developed personalities; that increased governmental control over business and industry is the most important step toward attainment of the desired goals, but that such controls constitute only one phase of broader social planning;

Claims Without Foundation

4. That maldistribution of wealth and income, and unemployment, are the outstanding characteristics of our private enterprise economic system; and that government control of business and planning by "social engineers" will eliminate maldistribution and will provide people with security;

5. That social controls which operate in relation to the family, religion, and traditional forms of education are irrational and give rise to "cultural lag"; and that rationally should be the criterion of social control;

6. That social controls in America are no better or worse than those in other countries—which include Communist Russia and Socialist Europe; 83 Texts Studied

7. That the rising divorce rate may be a good sign—it is more nearly a harbinger of family reorganization than an index of disorganization; and that "companionate" marriages are desirable;

8. That heredity and innate tendencies are relatively unimportant in personality formation and motivation; and that personality is formed largely through "cultural conditioning."

Dr. Hobbs cites other controversial conclusions which he contends are fostered by the most widely used sociology textbooks. In his work he analyzed the content of 83 widely used texts which he considered as constituting the "heart" of college and high school sociology—the most swiftly expanding course of study in American education. His book is entitled: "The Claims of Sociology: A Critique of Textbooks. The publisher is The Stackpole Co., Harrisburg, Pa. The Danger

Attention is directed to this comprehensive analysis of sociology textbooks because if sufficient numbers of today's generation of youth are weaned away from the basic elements in our American way of life—faith in God, our Constitutional Republic, and our private enterprise economic system—some form of Socialism will be established.

This would be playing right into the hands of the Communists and Socialists—when, as a matter of fact, this nation's best hope for continuing freedom and progress lies in our on-coming generation's gaining a clear enough understanding of the value of these basic American elements not to be led astray by doctrines which would destroy them. America has an unusually large percentage of its population in high school and college—more in numbers, than all the other nations combined. It is this group from which our nation's leaders must come. Therefore, it is this group that naturally has the highest priority on the Communist list for penetration.

New Mexico Population The estimated population of New Mexico in 1952 was up 10% from official U. S. Census figures of 1950, according to a report in the 1953 Yearbook of the American Peoples Encyclopedia. The state's estimated population at the end of last year was 750,000.

Does On-The-Farm Grain Storage Pay?

A few months can make a whale of a difference in the amount of money a farmer gets for his grain crop, U. S. Department of Agriculture grain price figures show.

Data released by the U.S.D.A. in its recent bulletin entitled "Marketing Activities" demonstrates this: Farmers who have sold their grain at harvest time have received considerably less for it than did farmers who have stored their grain on their own farms in modern non-combustible buildings like Quonsets, and sold it at a later time. The chart at right shows the average difference during the past four years between harvest-time and later high prices for corn, wheat, and soybeans. The average harvest-time prices are represented by the shaded portion of the price bars. The average gain by storage is shown on the white areas at the top of each bar.

The U.S.D.A. bulletin reports that similar opportunity for additional income by on-farm storage exists in the cases of oats and barley. Although not included in the chart, the gains made by farmers who stored either of these crops averaged 17 1/2 cents a bushel over the last four years. When storage buildings are equipped with grain drying and conditioning facilities, which are available for all Quonsets, the farmer is in a still better position to make even more money, with less risk. He can harvest earlier with less weather worry, cut field losses due to shattering of small grain or dropped corn, and minimize chances of spoilage.

After being emptied of grain, such buildings can be used for many other purposes and thus earn their keep the year around.

If you are annoyed by ants in the house, you'll welcome these suggestions for their control. They come from entomologist L. Bissell, University of Maryland Extension Service. He says the first step is to find the ants' nest, if possible. Then treat it with an insecticide. Chlordane is the most effective insecticide to use against ants, says Mr. Bissell. If they are nesting in the structure of the house, it may not be possible to reach the nest. Your next best step is to watch the ants to learn the route or trail they follow. Ants are apt to stay around if there's food for them to feed on, so clean up any food source. It's important too, to keep food in tight containers so it won't attract ants. Apply chlordane insecticide solution with a sprayer or a small paint brush to cracks and openings where the ants enter and to nearby surfaces. Likely places are around baseboards, window or door frames, where plumbing or heating pipes pass through the floor, sinks, and bathtubs. The entomologist points out that a single application of chlordane has a long lasting effect and will continue to kill ants for weeks and months. By applying this long lasting

When friends advised her to change her "unpronounceable" name when she began a musical career, Dorothy Warenskjold, who shares star billing with Gordon MacRae on NBC's "Railroad Hour," had a different approach to the problem. "I decided that even if people couldn't pronounce it, they would remember it." Miss Warenskjold's name, since her debut with the San Francisco Opera in 1948 has indeed been remembered. Critics across the nation accord her their choicest acclaim when she sings. Just so "Railroad Hour" listeners, and her concert and opera fans will know—the name is really very easy to pronounce. Just say "waren," then add "skold" to rhyme with "gold" and it comes out Warenskjold.

This may be rushing one season a bit, but a Christmas gift for Roy Rogers and Dale Evans, stars of NBC's radio and TV "Roy Rogers Show," is in progress. Mrs. Myrtle Leifeld of St. Louis Park, Minnesota, is making a quilt of the United States. Fans of the "King of the Cowboys" and "Queen of the West" can join in her Christmas present by sending her an 8 x 10 pattern of their state and the state flower. The needlework remembrance will be sent to Roy and Dale from their friends throughout the nation. Mrs. Leifeld's address is 4012 Wooddale Avenue, St. Louis Park, Minnesota.

Loretta Young has been working particularly hard on her TV show, "Letters to Loretta," scheduled to debut on NBC-TV network this fall. Mike Stokey, producer and emcee of "Pantomime Quiz Time" on CBS-TV network, says he worries more about the health and welfare of pretty Sandra Spence, the show's official scorekeeper, than he does about any of his stars. Your Personal Health

One of the most important advances in medical science in this generation has been increased understanding of the inseparable relation between mind and body. No one thinks of tuberculosis as a disease of the mind, since it is an infectious disease caused by a germ, but doctors have learned that recovery from the disease can depend as much on the TB patient's mental attitude as on his physical equipment.

An important part of treatment for TB is rest in bed. The person who finds out he has the disease is usually faced with the prospect of a long stay in the hospital. Rest takes on a new meaning when it is something that must be done, possibly for months on end, so that the diseased lungs can heal. To accept not only the fact of the diagnosis of TB but also the necessity for the type of treatment prescribed requires a definite mental adjustment.

The recalcitrant TB patient who refuses to go along with the treatment advised by his doctor lengthens his road to recovery. The anxious one who worries about his future and the welfare of his family is not going to rest properly. Mental and emotional attitudes often determine whether the patient stays in the hospital until he is cured or leaves against medical advice endangering his

From France—With Love

Horsebreeding is an important factor in French economy. Most of the farming is horse-drawn. The French farm horse is one of the most magnificent animals bred by man. These are the horses painted so wonderfully by Rose Bonheur, and it might seem at first glance that every French farmer keeps his horses groomed for show purposes rather than work. Horses, or industry and agriculture don't have to be your deepest interest for you to enjoy the fairs. They usually are very gay and festive and a very real part of French life. Here is a calendar of the more important ones scheduled in the next three months:

SEPTEMBER
Strasbourg—European Fair
Maray—Melon Fair
Marselles—International Fair
Lessay—Horse Fair
Saverne—Cattle Fair
Caen—Onion Fair
Vitry—Horse Fair
Arpajon—Bean Fair

OCTOBER
Paris—International Exhibitions
Montpellier—International Grape and Wine Fair

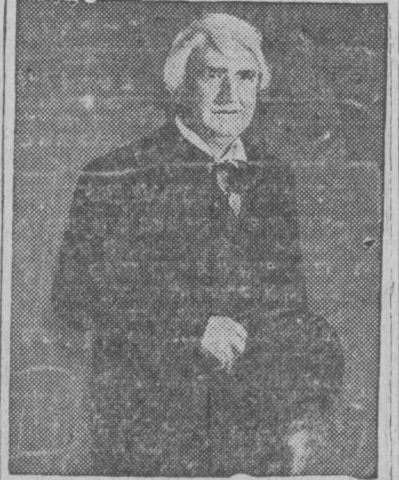

NOVEMBER
Dijon—Gastronomical Fair
Le Mans—Foal Fair
Beaune—Exhibition of Burgundy Wines
Whether you do as my friends do and visit all the fairs possible or whether you visit one or two, you will find them fascinating.

From France—with love

Autumn, that gracious and abundant season, is always celebrated in France with fairs and exhibits—from the small village jour de fete to the regional and industrial expositions. Add to this the fact that the Fall signals the return of Thrift Season rates, and France beckons you to visit in the cool months to come. I have friends who holiday in France mainly to visit the fairs. This year they will take in several farm produce fairs—onions at Caen, beans at Arpajon, melons at Maray—a gastronomic fair at Dijon, the industrial expositions in Strasbourg, Paris and Marselles, and the horse fairs at Lessay, Vitry, and Le Mans. My favorites are the horse shows, particularly the one at Le Mans where the foals are shown.

Knowledge is Power

1. ARE FLYING SAUCERS REAL?

3. WHO IS DE GASPERI?

(1) You bet your life, says David Barker in Outlook magazine. He reports sightings of flying objects as long ago as the 18th century. Since 1947 many saucers have been tracked by radar, and their size and speed measured with precision instruments; a few have even been photographed.

Of 800 flying saucer reports investigated by the air force, 15 per cent comprise a hard core of well-documented evidence in favor of the existence of flying saucers. "My own conclusion," writes Barker, "is that the interplanetary interpretation of flying saucers is the most plausible one on the evidence available."

(2) Some people are awfully hard to get along with; and if you happen to be one of them, try some of the suggestions made by Norman Vincent Peale in his book, "The Power of Positive Thinking." (a) Remember names. (b) Be comfortable so there is no strain in being with you. (c) Acquire the quality of relaxed easiness so things don't ruffle you. (d) Don't be egotistical. Be natural and humble. (e) Be interesting, so that people will want to be with you. (f) Never miss an opportunity to say a word of congratulation upon anyone's achievement, or express sympathy in sorrow or disappointment.

(3) Italy's premier, Alcide de Gasperi, is a man of monumental patience, reports G. E. Jones in Harper's magazine. Beset by communists in the Italian parliament, confronted with a multitude of knotty problems, such as land reform, De Gasperi has maintained a painful conscience and a large supply of courage. Like many of his countrymen he procrastinates and temporizes, and he is anything but well-organized; but his courage and diplomacy have made him the favorite political personality of Italy.

"GOLDEN MAN" AWARD

King of the Cowboys Roy Rogers received the "Golden Man and Boy" award from the Boys' Clubs of America for his outstanding public work for the youth of the country. National Director of the Boys Clubs, Howard Tooley journeyed to California to present the award to Roy. In addition to his radio and TV work on NBC, Roy is actively interested in his school safety program which conducts a contest for safety measures in schools throughout the country... last year 9000 schools participated. And Roy sponsors the Riders Clubs in the movie houses throughout the land... Easy to see why Roy Rogers was chosen for the Boys Clubs of America's "Golden Man and Boy" award this year.

MARYLAND FARM FRONT

Maryland wheat growers with allotments of 15 acres or over are urged to vote in the referendum on marketing quotas to be held Friday. George J. Martin, chairman of the Maryland Production and Marketing Administration State Committee, said that the growers themselves will decide if marketing quotas will apply on the 1954 wheat crop.

Wheat growers with allotments of 15 acres or over are subject to marketing quotas and eligible to vote in the referendum. Voting places have been established in communities.

Mr. Martin explained that growers have received acreage allotments, which will be in effect on their 1954 crop, regardless of the outcome of the voting today. Growers will be able to appeal their allotment to their county PMA committee, if they feel that the allotments are unjust and if the appeal is filed within 15 days of the date of the allotment notice.

If over two-thirds of the growers voting in the national referendum vote in favor of marketing quotas, farmers planting within their acreage allotment will be eligible for price supports at 90 per cent of parity.

In case quotas are approved by growers, their marketing quota will, in most cases, be the amount of wheat grown on their allotted acreage.

If quotas are approved, farmers over-planting their acreage allotment will be subject to marketing penalties amounting to 45 per cent of parity.

If growers do not approve marketing quotas, farmers planting within their allotment will be eligible for price supports at 50 per cent of parity. If they over-plant their allotment, they will not be eligible for price supports, but will not have to pay marketing penalties.

The final decision is in the hands of the growers themselves, Mr. Martin said.

BACK-YARD BEACHCOMBERS can keep cool this summer, but mothers won't unless they dress their small fry in practical, easy-care outfits. Bike Fun

THE SLOW OR SNAIL RACE is one of the funniest races ever run with bicycles. Every type of bike can be used... and it is for boys or girls, tall or short, fat or slim.

The object of the race is to see which rider can travel slowest... and that's quite a feat on a bike. The last rider to cross the finish line is the winner, provided of course that the contestant has not violated any of the rules.

A course 50 to 100 feet long is laid out in any safe area, with several lanes 3 to 6 feet wide. Lanes may be made by stretching strings or with chalk. A rider is disqualified if he deviates from this lane, touches a foot to the ground or turns around.

At a signal, each rider gets underway at the starting point, riding as slowly as possible. If there are too many contestants to make lanes for all, run the race in several heats; winners of heats then compete in the final race.

Reaction To New Gamma Globulin Is Explained

Since gamma globulin was established last year as a temporary preventive for paralytic polio, everyone is increasingly anxious to know: just what is this precious stuff?

Gamma globulin is the part of human blood that contains antibodies that fight off disease by attacking disease-producing bacteria or virus. Gamma globulin has been used for many years to prevent measles and infectious hepatitis, a form of jaundice. Only last year gamma globulin emerged as a scientific weapon against polio, as a result of field trials conducted with the support of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Some 55,000 children in Utah, Texas, and Iowa took part in scientific studies testing the effectiveness of this blood fraction as a means of preventing paralysis from polio. The carefully controlled tests, in which half the children got gamma globulin shots and the other half a harmless gelatin substance, proved that gamma globulin did protect against the paralytic disease for about five weeks.

Most adults have had one or more of the common childhood illnesses, such as measles, mumps, scarlet fever and other infectious diseases, and their blood contains antibodies against these specific ailments. Because 80 per cent of the adult population is known to have had polio in a mild non-paralytic form at some time in early youth, the blood of most people contains polio antibodies. Once created by the body to resist disease, antibodies remain in the blood, sometimes giving lifelong protection against reinfection.

Gamma globulin is obtained from the blood of human beings. There is no synthetic for it. Today, as during the war, blood is collected mainly by the American Red Cross through voluntary contributions. It is then sent to laboratories to be processed into plasma and split up into fractions. Gamma globulin is only one of several fractions which makeup blood plasma.

Since it has been proved useful in temporarily preventing the paralytic effects of polio, gamma globulin naturally will be in demand as potential epidemics loom. The Office of Defense Mobilization has assumed the official responsibility for seeing that the limited supply is made available without charge through state health departments. It will take widespread public understanding to see that the supply is used where it can do the most good.

'Pentagon' Suit Still Unsettled

A difference of opinion of many millions of dollars has been holding up settlement of payment by the Government for land requisitioned for its "under-ground" Pentagon, six miles west of here. Government spokesmen say it has offered Alfred Holt, Baltimore, a sum of $28,000 for about 280 acres which he purchased originally for only $5 an acre. Holt says he is turning down the offer and is asking 67 million for the land.

Holt identifies himself as a bishop of the Philosophical College of Occult Science and bases his claim on the premise that stone taken from the land would yield him that much income at a royalty of 10 cents per ton. He said he would use the royalties to build a home for underprivileged children and aged persons. Mr. Holt asked on July 29 for an order to compel the Government to tell him what it has found in the way of minerals in the 280 acres. The Department of Defense refused on the grounds that its project is secret.

The Army's district engineer in Washington has labeled the rock excavated from the mountain as the "hardest on the East Coast."

Shoe Factory Blaze Cost $750,000

The Fairfield Shoe Co., whose plant in the Pennsylvania town was leveled by fire 10 days ago, would prefer to rebuild at the same place but certain safety measures, such as an ample water supply, must be certain, an official of the concern has said. Bruno Roedel, Gettysburg, secretary-treasurer of the company, declared the loss by fire was at least $750,000. It had been estimated by firemen at a million and a half dollars.

Roedel said the firm paid all its employees their regular pay last Friday and the entire force will receive vacation pay this week. For everybody except the office force that will be the last pay check from the company for some time. The offices have been opened in a building across the street from the burned structure.

If the owners decide to rebuild on the present site, operations may possibly be resumed within three months for the force of approximately 400. Part of the crew would be put to work as soon as the first machines were installed.

All of the sewing machines lost in the fire were owned by the company. Some of the heavier equipment was leased from the United Machinery Co.

Roedel said the company wanted to stay in Adams County since the second plant of the outfit is located at Dillsburg and there has been a close operating connection between the two plants.

The Fire Marshall's office at Harrisburg has recorded the fire as accidental and not incendiary. An official of the office said he believed the blaze started from combustion in the dust piles near a blower.

Local Man Is Accused Of Robbery

George Wills, 30, Emmitsburg, Route 1, was arrested Tuesday by state police of the Gettysburg detail on burglary and larceny charge filed with Justice of the Peace John H. Basehore, Gettysburg. Wills is in the Adams County jail awaiting hearing. Police said Wills is alleged to have entered the summer cottage of George J. MacMichael, Emmitsburg, Route 1, in Liberty Township, Adams County on February 22 and June 5, taking food, dishes, kitchen equipment and a .22 caliber rifle, total value of $201.
