BY ABIGAIL

Along with other Christmas activities planned by various groups of the town is a good old Community Sing, an age-old custom that it is hoped to be made a permanent event if it meets with enough public acclaim this year. Just when the custom originated is a matter of conjecture, but it is known that it has been in existence for centuries. Personally, I can think of nothing that would inject a stimulating interest in the original theme of the Christ Child's birthday, than this sort of ancient caroling. Let's get behind this one folks and put it over with the degree of success it really deserves.

You remember how much we enjoyed the Community Chorus during the Old Home Week of 1950? Well, a lot of the members of that original group will be with us again and YOU are invited to join. Incidentally, the singing will be led by the capable William Simpson.

You know, after what was a somewhat lengthy departure from the original intent of the glorious Christmas, the tendency now is toward expressing the occasion in a more spiritual manner than that of a commercial nature. Large Christmas card dealers and manufacturers have indicated that sales of the commercial type of card have been steadily declining in recent years and that a demand for scenes of the Christ Child and the Nativity are fast coming back. I have advocated this welcome return to the original significance of the Noel for quite some time and I am extremely grateful that the little influence I have been able to exert on the project is at last beginning to bear fruit. You, too, can help by purchasing the cards of a religious nature.

Say, have you had the opportunity to see the classy uniform the Municipal Band is considering adopting? Well just take a gander at the exhibit in the display window of the Water Co. bldg. Members of the band and the public too, are asked to come in and look over the natty cape and overseas hat and express their opinion. And while we are on this subject, I am told that the band again will present a post-Christmas concert on Dec. 27, probably in the public high school. Money derived from this affair will go toward helping the band realize its goal—uniforms. Anyone individual or groups that are interested in donating toward equipping the band is asked to contact any of the officers of that fine little musical group.

I can't explain the reason for it, but it seems this year more local hunters than ever before are waving their magic guns over the charmed deer. No less than 10 to date have been successful in their quest for the animal which probably is the most elusive of local game. Well brother, just go ahead and enjoy your venison, because you were probably more lucky than you realize. No less than 12 gallant knights have been retired to the happy hunting grounds in Pennsylvania alone by trigger-happy riflemen. By George, I just can't visualize how this can happen. Twelve human beings slaughtered in the first few days. In my humble opinion, the whole game statutes need a mighty good revision. If the penalty for killing another hunter were more severe, I am certain these fatalities could be substantially reduced. Ye Ed, the slave driver, looking over my shoulder, saw what I was writing and added this monstrosity: Seems a feller went hunting deer and when he parked his car he placed an old army blanket over the radiator to protect it from the freezing weather. On his return he was startled to find that some numb-skull had plugged it twice with rifle bullets, no doubt intending it for a buck and envisioning a big juicy steak. So now you can realize just "what" is shouldering a musket these days and go ahead and enjoy your deer meat men, but until such time as a hunter has to take a "real" sensible examination and is held responsible for his activities, I'll still eat my hamburger.

Phone Company Is Seeking Rate Increase

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. of Baltimore City this week asked the Public Service Commission to grant it increased telephone rates so that it "may continue to progress with and contribute fully to the growth and development of Maryland."

The company stressed in its application that problems caused by inflation have plagued all utilities including telephone companies throughout the post-war period. It noted that increases in telephone rates since the war have "lagged well behind increased costs with the result that serious and irreparable losses have been incurred by the company. The stage has now been reached where effective remedial action is imperative if impairment of the company's liability to provide its vitally important communication services is to be avoided."

C. and P. told the commission it has carried out large scale telephone construction for a number of years in order to provide for the extra-ordinary public demand for new and better grades of service. Pointing out that its program today surpasses anything heretofore experienced, C. and P. said additions to telephone plant in Maryland will total $29 million in 1953 and will climb to $30 million in 1954.

The company's petition noted that today's record telephone construction is being provided at currently existing high price levels with the result that, as additions are made, the average investment per telephone will be substantially increased.

Wages were cited by C. and P. as one example of continued high operating cost. New wage agreements providing substantial increases for employees were negotiated in August and September. These increases alone, it was emphasized, "offset a substantial portion" of the company's last rate increase.

The company declared it "has sought by every means consistent with sound management to offset the effects of inflation through efficient and economical operations." As an example, it said use of the most modern techniques and equipment, developed through the continuing research program carried on in the interest of telephone users in the state, has made possible "a significant reduction . . . in the number of man hours per telephone required to provide the high standard of service available in Maryland."

Without this emphasis on improved efficiency, C. and P. indicated its financial condition would be "even more critical than is now the case." It added, however, that experience has shown that the financial health of the company "cannot be restored through this medium alone. It must be accompanied by a repricing of its services which realistically recognizes the needs of the company interpreted in the light of the present-day economic facts."

In its petition, the company asked the PSC for a new determination of the fair value of its property, a finding of what constitutes a fair return of such fair value and the approval of a schedule of rates and charges which will yield such a return.

NO COMMENT

By WALTER CHAMBLIN, Jr.

It should not be overlooked that Secretary of Agriculture Benson has formidable backing on Capitol Hill in the controversy over farm price supports. The sound and fury of the opposition to Benson have captured most of the attention thus far, but influential Republicans are acquiring ammunition to be used in forthcoming congressional debates.

One of the outspoken defenders of the Secretary of Agriculture is his fellow Utahian, Senator Wallace F. Bennett. Sen. Bennett points out that the farm problem not only was inherited from the Democrats but also resulted from mismanagement by the Democrats which produced huge uneconomie surpluses.

Senator Bennett cites a Democratic Senator—former Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson—as having conceded in Senate debate that Secretary of Agriculture Brannan (Democrat) should have applied wheat quotas in July 1952, to limit production.

This was not done, Bennett contends, because of the imminent Presidential and Congressional elections. It was feared, the Senator explains, that some Democratic votes would be lost.

Another pro-Benson argument cited by Senator Bennett centers around 60 million pounds of New Zealand beef brought into the U. S. in the early fall of 1952 and, the senator says, held off the market until after the elections.

"Only political maneuvering," Senator Bennett asserts, "can explain the fact first, that it was released when the new administration took office; second, that it was released when cattle prices had reached their lowest points; and, third, instead of being sold in the Eastern market which could have absorbed it, it was put on the market in the cattle-producing areas."

Such are some of the Republican arguments. There are others ready for use. You can be sure that the Republicans are going to do everything possible to avoid a repetition of 1948—when the Democrats obtained enough of the farm vote to re-elect Harry Truman.

And, speaking of Harry Truman, you also can be sure that Communism in government is going to be a vital issue in the 1954 Congressional elections. Leading Republicans maintain that it is bound to be an issue unless and until Mr. Truman satisfactorily explains the handling of the Harry Dexter-White case. And these Republicans contend that each Truman "explanation" thus far has vastly increased the amount of explanation needed.

Incidentally, Cardinal Spellman, the Archbishop of New York, referring to what he termed the "hysterical tone" of criticism of procedures used by Congressional committees investigating Communism, said:

"No American uncontaminated by Communism has lost his good name because of Congressional hearings on un-American activities. However there are individuals who have seriously compromised themselves by a flat refusal to state whether they are now or have been Communists. It is impossible for me to understand why any American should refuse to declare himself free of Communist affiliation, unless he has something to hide."

Contrast that statement with the famous assertion that the Alger Hiss case was just a "Red Herring."

But, as Postmaster General Summerfield has pointed out, the government since Mr. Eisenhower became President has had a "soul searching" and "almost 1500 people who were security risks" have been fired. The new government attitude is summed up by Mr. Summerfield in words that bear repeating. He said:

"Extreme care is being taken to protect the basic rights of such people, but I must candidly say that this security program does not include keeping people on the rolls who are known to be disloyal.

"Nor does the program consider it the proper function of your government to be overly lenient with muddle heads and pinks and the various shades of Fellow Travelers who in recent times have made Benedict Arnold a saint by comparison.

"Somehow I do not feel too peaceably inclined toward people

State Will Restore Recreation Area

The State of Maryland is expected to receive 4200 acres of the Catocin national recreational area, near Thurmont, in the near future, it was reported.

Assistant Superintendent of the National Capital Parks Harry T. Thompson recently disclosed details are being worked out by government lawyers to give full title to Maryland.

The actual time of presenting the park area to the state is difficult to estimate, Mr. Thompson said.

Nearly 4000 acres of the government land is being retained, since it includes President Eisenhower's summer camp.

In a review of the project before the National Capital Regional Council, Mr. Thompson said he feels that Maryland should not be required to undertake maintenance of the President's camp.

THE COMMANDING GENERAL
26TH AIR DIVISION (DEFENSE)
ROSLYN, NEW YORK

TO THE PEOPLE OF MARYLAND—

The cessation of Korean hostilities has not diminished the possibility of hostile aircraft penetrating the borders of our country and launching a devastating air attack. This remains a most frightening prospect unless we can provide our Air Force interceptors and other air defenses with early warning.

This state in particular, with its level eastern shore, is subject to low altitude penetration. In addition, Baltimore, one of the principal ports of the country, is one of the most critical targets within the Old Line State.

Radar alone cannot detect and warn against the approach of all possible low flying hostile aircraft. Even if we were to construct an impenetrable radar system, which is economically unfeasible, present radar capabilities do not assure coverage at all altitudes. In addition to radar, we need human eyes and ears like yours, those of the volunteer Ground Observer Corps.

Will you be one of us?

Sincerely,

Brigadier General James W. McCauley, assigned with the responsibility for Maryland's Air Defense.

ALONG THE POTOMAC

With Cong. DeWitt S. Hyde

TEXAS CITY, Tex.—Just before coming here with a House Judiciary subcommittee to investigate claims in the 1947 Texas City disaster, I heard Maryland's Senator J. Glenn Beall, back from a working trip to Europe, tell an inspiring story of what he found there.

Senator Beall's trip—as a member of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee — was to study the operations of the Export-Import Bank created and supplied with capital by the U. S. Congress to make loans overseas. He learned that the operation is progressing extremely well.

He told me of the wonderful job the German people are doing in rehabilitating themselves and preparing for their defense.

"We talked with German treasury and commerce officials," Senator Beall said, "and found they are very eager to borrow money from private banks. There were even American bank officials over here competing with each other for this German business, and it was certainly a big indication that economic conditions are stabilizing to the point where governments aren't having to borrow and lend taxpayers' money on a crisis basis."

Senator Beall said West Germany borrowed $46 million from the Export-Import Bank 6 years ago to buy tobacco and cotton, and that they've paid off every penny of it, with interest.

He told how World War II destruction has been so well repaired in West Germany, under a free government, but that in a trip into the Communist zone he found that all of the bombed-out buildings are still standing in ruins.

I asked Senator Beall how the many American civilians and soldiers in Germany are getting along with the German people, and again his report was most encouraging. "Every German I met," he said, "had great respect for the American soldier. They remarked that the Americans conducted themselves like real gentlemen."

"Another thing, we found that where American families vacate apartments when they're sent back home, German families are moving into the same buildings, living side by side with other Americans. It's a good sign of friendship, I think."

And I agree with Senator Beall. It seems that these people, our great enemy such a short time ago in World War II, are really very much like us and destined to be our true friends.

BLUEPRINT FOR BETTER HEATING

By Your Heating Counselor

Most of us take our home-heating systems pretty much for granted—until cold weather hits. Then, if they don't perform satisfactorily, chances are we begin calling the gas, oil or coal companies to ask:

"What kind of fuel are you trying to palm off on us now?" Usually it's not the fuel that's bad. More likely whatever's wrong is due to a faulty furnace, flue or duct or—still more likely—to improper planning when the home was built.

For that reason, when you're in the market for a new home, it's a good idea to keep these five factors in mind:

First of all, get acquainted with the climate of the region if you're a new-comer to the area. Winters may be colder or warmer than you expected. There may be a good reason for that over-sized furnace—or for the small home heater. But check into it.

Another important consideration is the age of the people who will be living in your home. Elderly people and extremely young children or invalids generally need more heat than healthy young adults.

But equally important in the final do-we-or-don't-we-buy-it analysis are three other factors: If it's sheltered by nearby buildings, hills, trees or other obstructions, your new home will be easier to keep warm than one set off in an open field.

Remember, too, that modern homes dressed up with large picture windows and glass brick walls lose heat faster than their more conventional neighbors built of wood, stone or regular brick.

And the size of the home is all-important. While a unit heater in the basement or garage and perhaps just one room heater in the living room will do a perfect heating job for a four or five-room home, its next-door neighbor probably will need a large central heating plant to keep its eight or nine rooms comfortable during the winter months.

The Question Box

Dear Counselor: My home is equipped with a gravity warm air heating plant. In extremely cold weather, the rooms on the side where the north winds hit it just won't warm up. What can I do?

Mr. B. T. J., Tacoma
It seems that parts of almost every home equipped with gravity warm air systems are difficult to keep warm during the winter time. This quite often is due to "heat traps" in the warm air pipes or ducts and can be overcome by the installation of relatively inexpensive booster fans. Installed in the troublesome pipes, booster units force warm air on through into those hard-to-heat rooms.

NEXT WEEK: Modern Home Heaters.

A new town in Maryland "Telephone Town"

built since 1945

You won't find "Telephone Town" on the map. But it is a very important part of Maryland all the same.

In the picture you see the telephone buildings and additions that have gone up in Maryland since 1945. It cost $160,427,000 to build "Telephone Town" to keep up with Maryland's progress.

But "Telephone Town" is much more than steel and masonry, wires and cables, and intricate equipment. It is also people, some of whom you probably count among your friends and neighbors.

10,100 telephone people—3,000 more than in 1945—have jobs in Maryland. They earn more than $38,000,000 a year, and spend most of this vast sum with Maryland businesses for the things they need.

The work these public-minded people do in Maryland contributes even more to Maryland's prosperity and well-being. Since 1945, they've added 328,000 telephones.

71 of every 100 Maryland families now enjoy telephone service in their homes. Marylanders make about 2,400,000 telephone calls a day. They appreciate the importance of good service in their daily lives.

This vibrant, progressive state must continue to have good telephone service. The public requires it. Business depends upon it. But if "Telephone Town" is to grow to meet the increased demand for its service, the telephone company must be able to make a fair profit.

A strong telephone company, growing with Maryland, is a good thing for everybody.

Test Tubes Against TB
Scientists have been studying the behavior of the tubercle bacillus, the germ that causes tuberculosis, since 1882—the year it was discovered by Robert Koch. During the years, they have learned a great deal about this germ, enough to develop a kind of respect for the obstinate creature which refuses to give up.

But scientists are equally obstinate. With test tube, microscope, and untrusting patience as basic equipment, they investigate the germ in laboratories and hospitals. What is its chemical make-up? How does each of its parts work? How does it "eat"? How does it get that way?

The basic knowledge about the germ is essential to other research on better methods of treating and preventing the disease. You can't kill the germ unless you understand how it lives.

Research into the chemistry of the tubercle bacillus has been going on for 30 years under grants provided from Christmas Seal funds by the National Tuberculosis Assn. One investigation has been concerned chiefly with the fats and waxes of the bacillus, others with its protein. A result of research on the protein of the bacillus has been the development of PPD, purified protein derivative, now widely used in the diagnosis of tuberculosis and as an aid in case finding.

A by-product of the manufacture of atomic bombs, radioactive carbon-14 is used by some scientists in research into the metabolism of the bacillus, to learn how it breaks down its food into energy. Others are investigating the genetics of the germ in studies to find out why certain families of germs are more virulent than others and how some become better able to resist the drugs used in treating TB patients.

Fundamental studies of this type make up the greater part of the medical research program supported by the American people through their purchase of Christmas Seals every year. Practical application—for example, the development of new anti-tuberculosis drugs—follows from better basic understanding of tuberculosis gained from these investigations.

Notre Dame Closes Great Season Tomorrow

The Irish of Notre Dame—one of college football's great teams—will close its 1953 season in Notre Dame stadium at South Bend, Ind., Saturday afternoon against the Mustangs of Southern Methodist in a game that will be seen by millions across the nation as the General Motors TV Football game of the week.

The telecast will start at 1:45 p. m. (CST). Gametime will be 2 p. m. (CST).

The Notre Dame-SMU clash will bring to a close the 1953 GM TV Game of the Week series.

While Coach Frank Leahy's Irish are favored to win Saturday's game, the wide open style of play featured by the Mustangs from Dallas, Tex., holds the possibility of an upset. An SMU victory would be one of 1953's greatest football achievements, and Coach Chalmer Woodward is sure to have his charges fired up for a peak effort in this, their last game of the season.

Because most college teams have completed their regular schedules, all eyes of the football world will be on the Notre Dame-Southern Methodist game. The television audience for the game is expected to be the biggest ever to watch a regularly scheduled college football contest.

Freedom Is Declared

To really know America and what it's made of, we need frequently to take a refresher course in American history. Before any citizen approves any measure shifting responsibility and political economic power from the hands of the citizenry to the hands of government bureaucracy, he should be reminded especially of the purposes of our great founding documents and the conditions out of which they emerged.

Two documents stand out among all those adopted by the citizens of this new world—the Declaration of Independence and the United States Constitution. Why were they written, why were they needed? In this column let's apply that question to the Declaration of Independence and look back upon the struggling colonies. Then, next week, we can follow through with the Constitution.

By and large the American colonists of the early 1700's felt a strong allegiance to Great Britain and the Crown. For a time Britain encouraged this allegiance by permitting the colonists great liberties—in foreign trade and in their domestic affairs. But after 1763, when the French were driven off the North American continent, England began to apply harsh and restrictive measures—the Sugar Act, the Stamp Act, the Declaratory Act which declared that the King, by and with consent of Parliament, had authority to make laws "to bind the colonies in all respects." Regimentation became the lot of the colonists. It became clear that England would enforce the proposition that the colonies existed for one purpose—the good of the mother country.

As rebellion against loss of personal liberty began to be fanned, England clamped on even more burdensome restrictions. Some were designed as punishment. Government became the master of the people of the new world. Patrick Henry, Jefferson, Franklin—the powerful voices of the oppressed people spoke out. The flame of freedom gathered in intensity. One after another, incidents flared. British soldiers were sent in and began to march threateningly about the countryside. In 1775 the fighting began—at Concord, Massachusetts.

The Cause
In the midst of war, the leaders of the embattled colonies gathered at Philadelphia in the first Continental Congress. They appointed a committee of five to draft a declaration of independence. The committee asked Thomas Jefferson to write it. Ben Franklin and John Adams later penned in a few minor revisions, and Jefferson then presented the final document to the Congress. It was adopted, as nearly everyone knows, on July 4, 1776.

The purpose of this historic Declaration was set forth clearly: "When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, a separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation."

Freedom Philosophy
Next the great philosophy of the free man was written into the Declaration: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed..."

Read again this historic purpose of government—"to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed..." That says clearly that the purpose of government is to safeguard the citizen's unalienable rights—the right to live, the right to be free, and the right to pursue happiness in one's own way. When we examine our government today we see how far afield we have permitted it to go. It's now a dominant power in nearly every phase of our everyday life. Will we hold back its growth now—or will we permit it to go on until our personal liberty has evaporated?

The quality of modern gasoline has been improved so much in recent years that two gallons of 1953's motor fuel will provide the same work energy that required three gallons in 1925.

Nancy Holmes SUGGESTS
Illustration of a woman and a dish of food

TURN THE HEAT on potato salad, summertime favorite, and it becomes a dish with winter appetite appeal. The Pennsylvania Dutch have long been known for their hot potato salad and here we give you the recipe for another.

This Toasted Cheese Potato Salad originated in the Best Foods consumer test kitchens and was suggested particularly for Saturday night supper parties when the gang gathers to square dance, play games or just watch television. It's easy and economical to make and only needs broiled frankfurters or hamburgers to round out the main course.

TOASTED CHEESE POTATO SALAD
8 to 10 medium sized potatoes
1/2 cup French dressing
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 cup finely chopped celery
8 to 10 stuffed olives, sliced
1/2 cup real mayonnaise
1 cup grated American cheese
Watercress
Tomatoes

Cook potatoes, until just tender, in boiling salted water. Peel and slice. While still warm, pour French dressing over potatoes and season with salt and pepper. Toss with a rubber spatula or fork until thoroughly mixed. Allow to cool and add celery, olives and real mayonnaise. Mix well. Line a bread pan or 8-inch square cake pan with waxed paper. Pack salad firmly into pan and chill several hours. Just before serving unmold on a cookie sheet. Sprinkle with cheese and broil until lightly browned and bubbly. Garnish with tomato wedges and watercress. Yield: 6 servings.

TELEVISION - RADIO - HOLLYWOOD

By GEORGE LILLEY

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Probably the first quiz show to make bright, practical psychology its format is "Make Up Your Mind," rib-ticking morning offering Monday through Fridays, 11:30 a.m., EST, on CBS Radio. Here emcee Jack Sterling presides over a panel of four made up of John S. Young, former U. S. Ambassador to Haiti; Edith Walton, New York book reviewer; a popular guest personality who may range (and has) from fight manager Vic Marsillo to Lawrence Tibbett; and a rotating guest psychologist, such as Mrs. Lee R. Steiner, consultant and author.

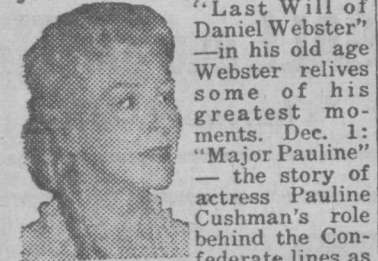

Steiner Young Sterling Walton
... their business: making up their minds

The idea of the show is to have the first three panelists choose one of three decisions on make-believe problems sent in by listeners. After lively discussions attempting to justify their opinions, the problem is handed over to the professional psychologist who offers his or her insight into the matter.

Emcee Sterling, who keeps the program smartly paced, came into New York six years ago and picked up one of broadcasting's top plums. He was selected from nearly a thousand candidates to take over Arthur Godfrey's "before breakfast" show on CBS' key station in Manhattan.

NEW "PANTOMIME TIME"

"Pantomime Quiz Time," Mike Stoker's video version of charades, has a new format and a new network — Tuesday nights, Dumont. To act out the "stumpers" sent in by viewers, the show now uses two permanent, competing teams, one captained by Jackie Coogan and the other by young (21) John Barrymore, Jr. The latter's team consists each week of actresses Jeff Donnell and Rose Marie, plus a male guest. On Coogan's side is comedian Dave Willock, actress Jan Clayton and a femme guest. The show's from Hollywood and the guests run on the big name side. The first used were Jack Haley and Eva Gabor.

SPORTS FLASHES

from THE SPORTING NEWS

Dominated by five Midwestern stars and featuring a sophomore sensation for the first time since 1947, the 1953 edition of The Sporting News All-America rates as one of the best balanced and strongest aggregations selected since the advent of the two-platoon system during World War II days.

"This time we really feel like we're picking All-Americans," commented many of the more than 150 leading grid writers, sports-casters and collegiate publicity chiefs as they participated in the annual poll conducted by The Sporting News. The return to one-platoon football helped outstanding players win the attention they deserved, but it did not make choosing any easier. There seemed to be an overabundance of top backs and crack linemen with a total of 350 players nominated.

Johnny Lattner of Notre Dame, who was an old-fashioned 60-minute football player even under the two-platoon system, rose to even greater heights on offense and defense this season to gain recognition as the outstanding player of the year in the annual award by The Sporting News.

The Sporting News All-America: first team, Don Dohoney, end, Michigan State; Carlton Massey, end Texas; Art Hunter, tackle, Notre Dame; Stan Jones, tackle, Maryland; J. D. Roberts, guard, Oklahoma; Crawford Mims, guard, Mississippi; Larry Morris, center, Georgia Tech; Johnny Lattner, back, Notre Dame; Paul Giel, back, Minnesota; Paul Cameron, back, UCLA; J. C. Caroline, Illinois.

Baltimore Big League In Three Sports

Baltimore, as a major league city, points out The Sporting News, can now boast of three big time ranking in three of major sports — baseball (American League) and basketball (National Assn.) The only other cities that can make the same claims are New York and Philadelphia.

Trade Talk Stirs Hot Stove League

With 14 clubs needing help to "break the flag trusts," this winter may result in more trading in the major leagues than at any time in the last 10 years, Dan Daniel writes in The Sporting News. In the American League, the unsuccessful teams of 1953 are confronted with the acute danger of a sixth straight pennant for the Yankees, and in the National League, there is an even greater probability that the Dodgers will win their third championship in succession.

Despite being pennant favorites, both the Bombers and the Bums are in the trading market. Brooklyn is after a topflight hurler, although the Dodgers can count on the return of Don Newcombe from the Army next season. The Yankee have eyes on Harry Byrd of the Athletics, and Bob Turley, Baltimore's fastball righthander, and have a surplus of talent to offer in return.

The Orioles, the A's and the Tigers, all in the process of rebuilding, are likely to be the most active in negotiating deals, but Cleveland hopes to pick up the strength needed to turn the perennial runners-up into a flag-winner. General Manager Hank Greenberg is said to covet Catcher Clint Courtney and Outfielder Vic Wertz of Baltimore, but the Orioles are talking in terms of Second Baseman Bobby Avila, Outfielder Dale Mitchell, and Pitcher Early Wynn in any exchange.

Daniel's story reports that both the Phillies and Braves are interested in Outfielder Bobby Thomson of the Giants. The Phils are said to be willing to give up First Baseman Eddie Waitkus and Pitchers Steve Ridzik and Karl Drews.

Alston Poses In Shirt Worn by Haugstad

The Sporting News reports that when a Dodger cap and uniform shirt were produced for Walter Alston, new manager for the club, to pose for cameramen, it was noted that the shirt bore the name of Phil Haugstad, an erratic righthander who didn't last long with the Brooks.

"That is not to be regarded as an omen," said Walter O'Malley, club president.

Short Stuff

Shorts from The Sporting News: What this we hear about John B. Schapiro, Sr., owner of the Laurel Race Track, being the owner of a hefty chunk of Baltimore Oriole stock? ... Max Surkont is one the block at Milwaukee. ... Reports are Gene Autrey and Joe DiMaggio are interested in purchasing the San Francisco Seals in the Coast League. ... ## Table-Top Christmas Tree

Newest decoration trick for the holidays is this little table-top tree. It's actually trimmed with pink rose corsages. Each rose has its own tiny vase concealed in the branches of the tree. Flowers can be replaced as they fade, or even worn home by your guests when the Christmas party is over. Alyn Wayne, official stylist of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, created this design as a master arrangement for the 18,000 florists who will soon be wiring Christmas flowers all over the world.

Mr. Clifford Meskill and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Hoskins and their daughter, Sharyn, Dundalk, spent the Thanksgiving holidays at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Baumgardner. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bosley and sons, Lee Thomas and William, of Glenarm, spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Baumgardner.

Pvt. Guy A. Baker, U. S. Army, has been reassigned to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., after spending a short furlough here visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Guy A. Baker, Sr.

SPORTS AFIELD

By Ted Kesting

(Editor, Sports Afield Magazine)

The U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service is working on a grouse and woodcock movie. Filming started in New Brunswick and finished in Louisiana, covering most of the range and life history of these two relatively little-known game birds. But the film's greatest service to sportsmen will be what it tells them about hunting—great potential hunting many of them now pass up, often right in their own back yards.

How many of you are closing your eyes to good bird hunting? In a recent article in Sports Afield magazine, outdoor writer Charley Gillham asked that question. Now all gunners have a definite preference as to the game they like to hunt. A sweating duck shooter may sit out the season staring at his decoys and flitting butterflies, waiting in vain for severe weather and a movement of birds. And all the time, on shore behind his blind, there might be a flight of woodcock in the willows; there might be quail or ruffed grouse on the high grounds between him and his parked car. But he waits for ducks. Conversely, a quail hunter will haunt the uplands when the cover is dry, though windy weather fills the marshes with waterfowl.

Neither the duck hunter nor the quail shooter was very smart. During the fall there are only a limited number of favorable days when they could be afield. Had they hunted their favorite game only on those days suited for that gunning and looked a bit at the other fellow's chosen sport on the other days, they would have had a lot more fun.

Gillham discovered that he had been passing up birds, and wonderful shooting, for the greater part of his life. The FWLS film showed him that grouse and woodcock are to be had not only in New England. Grouse are found in shootable numbers from the Turtle Mountains in North Dakota across the northern states to the Atlantic and south in most of the Appalachian states of Georgia. His five closely related forms are in several northwestern states and in Alaska and Canada where there are trees and brush.

Woodcock do not have the wide distribution of ruffed grouse. But from Minnesota eastward there are a darsight more of them than most gunners know. Probably a few are raised in every state east of the Mississippi. A migratory bird, they can be shot from the maritime provinces and the northwoods states, through to the Gulf coast. So, sportsmen, open your eyes!

For an excellent Christmas gift which affords year around reading pleasure, give the Chronicle — only $2.00.

BABSON

Writes . . .

By ROGER W. BABSON

BABSON PARK, Mass., Dec. 3—I have an idea that has been chasing me around lately and I want to share it with you. I am beginning to wonder what effect our national mental health may have on the business cycle and continued prosperity.

Your Emotions and Mine

Human nature tells us that our emotions influence our behavior in more situations than we would like to admit. Psychologists point out, for example, that after the successful salesman has tried all his appeals to our logic, and failed, he burrows away at our emotions. More often than not we succumb to the emotional appeal. Certainly, if we have ever had the opportunity to attend a town meeting we know that the emotional appeal of some individuals will override all the logic. Every national political election has been won by emotional upheaval rather than by common sense. Probably it was Eisenhower's appeal to mothers, sisters, wives, and sweethearts, relative to Korea, which won his election.

If, then, it is true that emotion plays such an important part in our individual lives, and on our political scene, is it not just as possible that how we feel about business conditions may actually affect the conditions themselves? We surely know that confidence is a very important factor in banking, manufacturing, and buying.

Fertile Area For Study

Businessmen are impatient with sociologists, anthropologists, and psychologists because their experiments take so long to complete, and are so costly. If, however, some practical-minded social scientists would team up with a group of open-minded businessmen to study the effect of our national mental health upon the business cycle and prosperity, I forecast great discoveries would follow.

The longer I have worked on the problem of forecasting, the more I have wondered if there is not some unknown spiritual and mental factor that affects other economic prognostications. At the turn of the century, Harvard's famed Dr. Cannon said that 50 per cent of the patients who came into his office for medical care had nothing wrong with them physically. Their ills were psychosomatic, that is, mental and emotional. If we will add to these the huge numbers who are partially psychosomatic but who never visit a doctor, we must conclude that millions are ill because they think they are ill, and millions are poor or discouraged because they think they are.

Emotions and Economics

We all know what a positive effect such forces as religion and psychiatry have had in building entirely new successful and happy personalities. We know from studies made by industry itself, that the cause of many costly strikes is not economic. Rather, they are emotional in origin. More important than wages is a desire for recognition, security and individual attention. Business depressions may be considerably affected by emotional upsets.

I wonder what might happen at this point in the business cycle if business and people continued to feel confident and optimistic, irrespective of what the bankers forecast. While most economists forecast a business decline in 1953, employment has hit an all-time high thus far. Production, wages, and earnings are now higher for 1953 than for 1952. The dollar has been stabilized; costs of certain basic needs like food, autos, and clothing have ceased to climb. Inflation has been halted. We have tremendous market potential in the form of our ripening crop of war babies. Satisfying these wants and demands could conceivably absorb the products of expanded plant facilities for some time to come. I just wonder if we are not now placing the cart before the horse in thinking only of money, employment, and sales as criteria for prosperity. It may be that our spiritual and mental health affects business conditions — I don't know.

More than 500 projects to improve and increase sport fishing are now in progress in the 48 states and territories. One fourth of these are supported by funds from the Dingell-Johnson program. —Sports Afield

Church Planning $8,000,000 Shrine

Parishioners of Catholic churches in this area will contribute to a special collection scheduled on Sunday, Dec. 6, in all Catholic Churches in the Baltimore Archdiocese. The local collection will be part of a nation-wide appeal for an $8 million fund to begin construction of the superstructure of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington, D. C.

Archbishop Francis P. Keough of Baltimore, in announcing the special collection, pointed out that construction of the edifice was begun in 1920 but has been delayed by a lack of funds and the intervention of World War II. The Archbishop named the Rev. David I. Dorsch of Baltimore to direct the appeal in the Baltimore Archdiocese.

The foundation stone of the National Shrine was laid on Sept. 24, 1920, by the late Cardinal Gibbons, then Archbishop of Baltimore. The Baltimore See at that time embraced the city of Washington. The massive foundations of the Shrine, already complete, contain a crypt which is said to be the largest in the world by reason of its gross area. The total building area on one floor level of the Shrine is 77,500 square feet. The total volume of the Shrine is about seven million cubic feet.

When completed, more than 250,000 cubic feet of stone and granite will have been used on the exterior of the structure. Limestone to be used will come from Indiana or Alabama. Its massive walls and great piers will require 25 million bricks to build. In addition 170,000 bags of cement will be required to form the 32,000 cubic yards of concrete in the structure to arise above the existing foundations.

The structure of the building will be completely of masonry. No structural steel beams or columns will be used. Structurally, the proposed shrine will be built in a manner similar to the great ecclesiastical monuments of the past which have demonstrated their capacity to endure for centuries.

The entire ceiling area will consist of great vaults and domes that will support not only their own weight but that of the roof structure as well. The thrust and weight of these vaults and domes will be carried to the foundations through the great piers and massive walls.

Maginnis and Walsh, Boston architects, have been engaged in the study of the design and preparations of the working drawings and details for a period of 15 years. It is estimated that it will take five years to erect the superstructure alone. At least another two years will be spent in completing the interior.

The present foundations below the crypt are of reinforced concrete. The most conspicuous parts are four great piers which will support the central dome of the shrine. Each is about 65 feet square, containing 1100 cubic yards of concrete and is designed to carry a weight of 10,000 tons apiece, or a total imposed load of 40,000 tons.

The completed shrine will occupy a 10-acre tract. The shrine facade will be dominated by a lofty tower, or campanile, terminated by a slender masonry pyramid and crowned by three terraces of open arcading. Cruciform in design, the dominant feature of the shrine will be a massive dome located at the crossing of the nave and transept. Elevated upon a polygonal stone drum, the dome itself will be covered with patterned psychrome ceramic tiles. The campanile, topped by a cross, will rise to a height of 316 feet while the dome will be 237 feet high.

The completed shrine will be one of the ten greatest religious edifices in the world. It will have a seating capacity of more than 3000 while the total capacity will be more than 6000.

To finance the work of building the superstructure the nationwide collection was set by the Catholic Bishops of the United States. The Blessed Virgin Mary is the patroness of the U. S. under the title of her Immaculate Conception. The year 1954 will mark the centenary of the promulgation (in 1854) by Pope Pius IX of the dogma of the Immaculate Conception. U. S. Catholics will begin the erection of the Upper church of the shrine next fall as a fitting commemoration of the centennial.

Homemakers' Corner

When your turkey dinner is over, you'll probably be wondering of ways to use your leftover turkey.

Chances are, your family will get mighty tired of the bird if you serve turkey every day for a week. Nutritionist Janet Coblentz says you can eliminate that problem by freezing the leftover meat for use next week, next month or even several months from now.

Why not freeze turkey slices, covered with gravy? Or make turkey pies with pastry toppings, or turkey sandwiches that will be ready for box lunches or hurry-up lunches at home. They'll keep well in the freezer if wrapped in air-tight packages.

Miss Coblentz warns that turkey fat become rancid quickly, even under freezing. So guard against holding turkey gravies or meat covered with gravy in the freezer for more than a week or two. Be sure to remove excess fat before freezing turkey broth. Because of the rancidity problem, it isn't wise to freeze the drippings from roast turkey.

If you're planning to use leftover turkey immediately, try creamed turkey. Here's tasty ways to vary your creamed turkey recipe: (These amounts are based on a creamed turkey recipe designed to serve six and made with milk and turkey broth as liquid.)

Cook one-fourth cup finely chopped green pepper in butter before adding flour. Add later chopped pimento and a small can (four ounces) of mushrooms. Fold in just before serving, four chopped hard cooked eggs and one-fourth cup chopped ripe olives.

Add one-half to one and one-half teaspoons curry powder and one-half cup grated fresh coconut and serve on rice. Add one-half cup well drained crushed pineapple, and one-fourth cup slivered almonds. Reduce turkey meat and add one-fourth cup grated cheddar cheese and one cup chopped pimento. Serve on toast. Reduce turkey to one-half the amount and substitute diced ham, or cooked shrimp. Reduce turkey and add one-half cup cooked vegetables.

Taneytown Okays Bond Issue

Voters of Taneytown Monday overwhelmingly passed a $500,000 bond issue to be used to finance a sanitary sewer system for the town. The vote was 225 for and 75 against, with one blank ballot placed in the ballot box.

The special referendum was the second held in the past two years on proposals for a sewerage system for the community. A similar referendum was held Mar. 28, 1952, for a $400,000 bond issue which would have provided a shallow sewer. That was defeated by a vote of 238 to 190.

At the last voting on the sewer question, there was much interest displayed by an opposition group which distributed a last-minute circular urging defeat of the issue at that time.

A resident of the town said there was little or no interest shown by the group which composed the opposition at the last referendum. The voting was light this time, with only 300 casting ballots compared with 428 the previous time.

The mayor and council now have authority to accept bids on the bond issue, and have the discretion to accept or reject the bids, it was reported.

The bond issue plan calls for amortization over a 40-year period. There is now no indebtedness on the town government.
